ALSO, if there bee lord and tenant, and the tenant maketh a lease to a man for terme of his life, saving the reversion to himselfe, if the lord grant the seigniorie to tenant for life in fee; in this case it behoveth that he in the reversion

* le tenant a terme de vie, not in L. and M. nor Roh.
§ aucun added L. and M. and Roh.

† for not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.
|| &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

*ent que celuy en le reversion attorna al tenant a terme de vie per force de cel grant, ou auterment le grant
est voide, pur ceo que celuy en le reversion
est tenant al seignior,
&c.*

 Et uncore il ne tiendra del tenant a terme de vie durant sa
vie. Causa patet.*

fion must attorne to the tenant for life by force of this grant, or otherwise the grant is voide, for that hee in the reversion is tenant to the lord, &c.

* Yet hee shall not hold of the tenant for life during his life. Causa patet, &c.

fit of it; therefore during that time he shall have no rent, service, wardship, releefe, harriot, or the like, because these belong to the possession: but if the tenant dieth without heire, the tenancie shall escheat unto the grantee, for that is in the right; and yet when the feig-norie is revived by the death of the tenant, there shall be wardship: as if the tenant marry with the seignioresse and dieth, his heire within age, the wife shall have the wardship of the heire. Also in the case that Linleton here putteth, albeit the seignorie be suspended but for life, yet some hold that he cannot grant it over, because the grantee tooke it suspended, and it was never in esse in him. But if the tenant make a lease for yeares or for life to the lord, there the lord may grant it over, because the seignorie was in esse in him, and the fee simple of the seignorie is not suspended. But if the lord disseise the tenant, or the tenant enfeoffe the lord upon condition, there the whole estate in the seignorie is suspended, and therefore he cannot during the suspension take benefit of any escheat, or grant over his seignorie.

tient, &c. This is added, and not in the originall, and is against law, and therefore to be rejected.

Tenant al seignior,

&c. Here is to bee understood a diversify when the whole estate in the seignory is suspended, and when but part of the estate in the feignory is suspended. And in this case the seignorie is suspended but for terme of life; [a] and therefore as to all things concerning the right it hath his being; but as to the possession during the particular estate the grantee shall take no bene-

[a] 34. Aff. p. 15.

16. E. 3. tit. Voucher 88.

5. E. 3. Twong's case.
(Ant. 298. b.)

Sect. 563.

*ITEM, si soient seig-nior et tenant, et le tenant tient del seignior per xx. ma-ners des services, et le seignior granta son seignory a un auter; si le tenant paya en fait ascun parcel d'ascun de les services al graun-tee, ceo est bone attornment, de et pur tous les services, coment que l'entent de le tenant fuit d'attourner forsque de cel parcel, pur ceo que le seignory est + entier,
coment que ils sont di-*

ALSO, if there bee
lord and tenant, and the tenant holdeth
of the lord by xx. manner of services, and the lord grant his seignio-ry to another; if the tenant pay in deed any parcell of any of the services to the grantee,
this is a good attorne-ment, of and for all the services, albeit the intent of the tenant was to attorne but for this par-cell, for that the feig-norie is intire, although there bee divers man-

HERE it appear-eth that an at-tornement being made for parcell, is good for the whole; for seeing hee hath attorned for part, it cannot bee void for that, and good it cannot be unlesse it be for the whole: but of this sufficient hath beene said before in this chapter.

Paya ascun par-cell des services.

Here is the fourth example of an attornement in law; for payment of any parcell of the services is an agreement in law to the grant.

*Coment que l'entent del tenant
fuit d'attourner, &c, Quia*

4. E. 3. 55. Malman's case.
29. E. 3. 23. 5. E. 4. 2.
22. Aff. 66. 7. H. 4. 10.
35. H. 6. 8. per Prisott.
(Ant. 309. b.)

40. E. 3. 34.
(4. Rep. 8.)

* This paragraph not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ forsque un et added L. and M. and Roh.

Lib. 3. Cap. 10. Of Attornement. Sect. 564, 565.

(Siderf. 283. 4. Rep. 85. a.)

20. H. 6.
(1. Rep. 101. b. 104. a.
Doct. and Student 52. a.
1. Roll. Abr. 419.
Cro. Car. 1. 401. Dyer 4. a.
Post. 367. a.
Ant. 20. 47. b. 48. b.
2. Rep. 23. 4. Rep. 81. a.
Ant. 42. 213. a. 217. b. 222. b.
229. a. 1. Roll. Abr. 303.)

Quia intentio inferuire debet legibus, non leges intentioni. And yet as farre as it may stand with the rule of law, it is honourable for all judges to judge according to the intention of the parties, and so they ought to doe. And of this somewhat in this chapter hath beene said before.

vers maners des services que le tenant doit faire, &c.

ner of services which the tenant ought to doe, &c.

Sect. 564.

48. E. 3. 24. 3. E. 3. quod juris clamat.
4. E. 3. 28. 29.
37. H. 6. 14. per Moyle.
17. E. 3. 29.
(Ant. 248. b. 6. Rep. 64. b.)

HERE is to be observed, that this judgment in the scire facias (which is no more but that the demandant shall have execution, &c.) is a good attornement, albeit it is presumed that judicium redditur in invitum, and that an attornement in law of any part is good for the whole. And this is the fifth example that Littleton putteth of an attornement in law.

Note, that in case of a deede nothing passeth before attornement, as hath beene said. In the case of the fine, the thing granted passeth as to the state, but not to distraine, &c. without attornement. In the case of the king the thing granted doth passe both in estate and in privitie to distraine, &c. without attornement, unlesse it be of lands or tenements that are parcell of the dutchy of Lancaster, and lie out of the county palatine. (1)

*ITEM, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant tient del seignior per plusors maners des services, et le seignior granta les services a un autre per fine; si le grantee sue a facias hors del mesme le fine pur ascun parcel de les services, et ad judgement de recover, cel judgement est bone attornement en ley pur tous les services.

ALSO, if there bee lord and tenant, and the tenant holdeth of the lord by many kinde of services, and the lord grant the services to another by fine; if the grantee sue a scire facias out of the same fine for any parcell of the services, and hath judgment to recover, this judgment is a good attornement in law for all the services.

(3. Rep. 123. Sect. 551.
Cro. Car. 284.
2. Rep. 67. b. Sect. 579.
(1. Roll. Abr. 294. Ant. 309. a.)

(1. Sid. 139. 1. Lev. 28.)

Sect. 565.

ITEM, si le seignior d'un rent service granta les services un autre, et le tenant attorna per un denier, et puis le grantee distraine pur le rent arere, et le tenant a luy fait rescous; en ceo cas le grantee n'aura assise del rent, forsque briefe de rescous, pur ceo que le done del denier per le tenant † ne fuit forsque per voy d'attornement, &c. Mes si le tenant avoit done a le grantee le dit denier come parcel de le rent, ou un maille ou un farthing per voy de

ALSO, if the lord of a rent service grant the services to another, and the tenant attorne by a penny, and after the grantee distraine for the rent behinde, and the tenant make rescous; in this case the grantee shall not have an assise for the rent, but a writ of rescouse, because the giving of the penny by the tenant was not but by way of attornement, &c. But if the tenant had given to the grantee the said penny as parcell of the rent, or a halfe penny or a farthing by way of seisin of the rent, then this

* &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

† ne not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) See Pl. Com. 221. 4. Inst. 209.

seisin del rent, dunque ceo est bone attornement, et auxy est bon seisin al grauntee del rent; et donques sur tiel rescous le grauntee avera assise, &c.

is a good attornement, and also it is a good seisin to the grantee of the rent; and then upon such rescous the grantee shall have an assise, &c.

(Ant. 159 b. 160. a.)

HEREUPON is to be observed a diversitie betwene money given by way of attornement, and where it is given as parcell of the rent by way of seisin of the rent. For albeit the rent be not due before the day, yet a payment of parcell of the rent before-hand is an actuall seisin of the rent to have an assise. And so it is if he give an ox, a horse, a sheepe, a knife, or any other valuable thing in name of seisin of the rent before-hand, this is good. And therefore a payment in name of seisin is more beneficiall for the grantee, because that is both an actuall seisin and an attornement in law; and yet being given before the day in which the rent is due, it shall not be abated out of the rent. So as to give seisin of the rent, it is taken for part of the rent; but as to the payment of the rent, it is accounted as no part of the rent; and the reason of the diversitie is, for that remedies to come to rights or duties are ever taken favourably. Here also appeareth that there is an actuall seisin, or a seisin in deed of a rent, whereof (as Littleton here speaketh) an assise doth lie; and a seisin in law which the grantee hath by attornement before actuall possession. (1)

39. H. 6. 3. 26. 5. E. 4. 2.
Vide Sect. 235.
25. E. 3. 44. 49. E. 3. 15.
37. H. 6. 39. 49. All. p. 6.
34. H. 6. 42.
15. E. 3. Execution 63.
40. E. 3. 22. 28. H. 6. 6. b.
7. H. 4. 2. tit. Attorney Br. 97.
(6. Rep. 59.)
(Ant. 281. a.)

Sect. 566.

ITEM, *si sont plusieurs jointenants * que teignent per certaine services, et le seignior graunta a un auter les services, et un de les jointenants attorna al grauntee, ceo est auxy bon, sicome tous fussent attorne, pur ceo que le seignior est entier, &c.*

ALSO, if there bee many jointenants which hold by certaine services, and the lord grant to another the services, and one of the joyntenants attorne to the grantee, this is as good as if all had attorned, for that the seignior is entire, &c.

HERE is to be observed what manner of tenants shall attorne to the grant. And first, [b] if there be two or more jointenants, and one of them attorne, it is sufficient: for, as it hath beene often said, there cannot be an attornement in part. And albeit there is great authoritie against Littleton, yet the law hath beene adjudged according to Littleton's opinion, as it hath beene in other of his cases when they have come in question: and as it is of an attornement, so it is of a seisin; a seisin of a rent by

(1. Roll. Abr. 302.)
(2. Rep. 67.)

[b] 39. H. 6. 3. 26.
See Tooker's case ubi supra, and the authorities there cited.

the hands of one joyntenant is good for all, and a seisin of part of the rent is a good seisin of the whole.

[c] If either the grantor or the grantee die, the attornement is countermanded; but if the tenant die, he that hath his estate may attorne at any time. If the tenant grant over his estate, his assignee may attorne.

[d] If an infant hath lands by purchase or by descent, he shall be compelled to attorne in a per que servitia, and no mischief to the infant; for when he cometh to full age, he may disclaim to hold of him, or he may say that he holds by lesser services: but there should be a greater mischief for the lord if the attornement of an infant should not be good, for he should lose his services in the meane time.

If an infant be a lessee, he shall be compelled to attorne in a quid juris clamat. The attornement of an infant to a grant by deed is good, and shall binde him, because it is a lawfull act, albeit he be not upon that grant by deed compeilable to attorne. Of baron and fem Littleton putteth many cases in this chapter.

[e] A man that is deafe and dumbe, and yet hath understanding, may attorne by signes: [f] but one that is not compos mentis cannot attorne, for he that hath no understanding cannot agree to the grant.

What conveyances shall be good without attornements more shall be said in this chapter in his proper place.

(a. Roll. Abr. 424. Ant. 297. b.)
[c] Vid. Eib. 4. fol. 8. Lib. 6.
fol. 57. Lib. 9. fol. 34.
Vid. 4. H. 6. 29. 18. E. 4. 10.

[d] 42. E. 3. Age 33.
26. E. 3. 62. 37. H. 8. tit. Attornee. Br. 26. E. 3. 63.
26. Aff. 27. 32. E. 3. tit. per que servit. o.
2. E. 2. Attorn. 78.
2. E. 2. ibid. 77. 13. H. 6. 2.
Lib. 9. f. 84. 85. Conye's case.
4. Mar. Dier 137.
21. E. 3. Age 85.
7. E. 2. Age 140.
[e] 26. E. 3. 63.
[f] 18. E. 3. 53.

Sect.

* que — et, L. and M. and Roh.

† ussent attorne — attornement, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) This is only to be understood of a rent at common law: but if the rent is limited, as an use under the statute; — as if lands are conveyed by lease and release to A. and his heirs, to the use that B. may receive out of them an annual rent; — the statute immediately executes the use of the rent in B.

Sect. 567.

ITEM, si home lessa tenements a terme d'ans, per force de quel lease * le lessee est seise, et puis le lessor per son fait grant la reversion a auter pur terme de vie, ou en taile, ou en fee; il covient en tiel case que le tenant a terme d'ans attorna, ou auterment rien passera a tiel grauntee per tiel fait. Et si en cest case le tenant a terme d'ans attorna al grauntee, donque maintenant passera le franketenement al grauntee per tiel attornement sauns ascun liverie de seisin, &c. pur ceo que si ascun liverie de seisin, † &c. sera ou besoigne d'estre fait en cel case, donque le tenant a terme d'ans serroit al temps de liverie de seisin ouste de son possession, ‡ le quel serroit encounter reason, &c.

ALSO, if a man letteth tenements for terme of yeares, by force of which lease the lessee is seised, and after the lessor by his deed grant the reversion to another for terme of life, or in taile, or in fee; it behoveth in such case that the tenant for yeares attorne, or otherwise nothing shall passe to such grantee by such deed. And if in this case the tenant for yeares attorne to the grantee, then the freehold shall presently passe to the grantee by such attornement without any liverie of seisin, &c. because if any liverie of seisin, &c. should be or were needfull to bee made, then the tenant for yeares should be at the time of the livery of seisin ousted of his possession, which should bee against reason, &c.

HERE Littleton having spoken of grants of seigniories and rent charges, and rents secke issuing out of land, here treateth of a grant of a reversion of land upon an estate for yeares; seeing this grant of the reversion must be by deed, and the agreement of the lessee for yeares requisite thereunto, the freehold and inheritance doe passe thereby, as well as by liverie of seisin, if it were in possession: and the grant of the reversion by deed with the attornement of the lessee, doe countervaille in law a feoffment by liverie, as to the passing of the freehold and inheritance.

[g] 6. E. 3. 53. 25. E. 3. 53. Brook. tit. Attorn. 48. 32. E. 3. Scir. fac. 101. Dy. 1. 2.

(Ante 113. a. 181. b.)

A terme d'ans [g] And yet a tenant by statute merchant, or tenant by statute staple, or by elegit, must also attorne; for the grantee may have a venire facias ad compendendum, or tender the money, &c. and discharge the land; and if the reversion be granted by fine, they shall be compelled to attorne in a quid juris clamor.

And so the executors that have the land until the debts bee paid must attorne upon the grant of the reversion, although they have not any certaine terme for yeares.

Sect. 568.

HERE Littleton speaketh of a reversion expectant upon an estate for life, or a gift in taile.

Il covient que le tenant de la terre at-

ITEM, si tenements soient lesses a un home pur terme de vie, ou done en le taile, savant

ALSO, if tenements be letten to a man for terme of life, or given in taile, saving the reversion, &c. if hee in

* le lessee not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ le quel—que, L. and M. and Roh.

*Le reversion, &c. si celuy en le reversion en tel case granta le reversion a un auter per son fait, il covient que le ternaunt de la terre attourna al grantee en la vie le grantor, ou auterment legraunt
est voyd. **

the reversion in such case grant the reversion to another by his deed, it behooveth that the tenant of the land attorne to the grantee in the life of the grantor, or otherwise the grant is voyd.

torne al grauntee, &c.

Let us therefore speake first of tenant for life: and yet in some case albeit tenant for life hath granted over his estate, yet he shall attorne. [a]
As if tenant in dower or by the curtesie grant over his or her estate, and the heire grant over the reversion, the tenant in dower or by the curtesie may attorne, because at the time of the grant made they were attendant to the heire in reversion, and the grantee

[a] 10. H. 4. tit. Attorn. 16.
11. H. 4. 18. 30. E. 3. 16.
38. E. 3. 23. 18. E. 3. 3.
10. E. 3. quid juris clam. 41.
41. E. 3. 18. Temps E. 1. tit.
Wast. 122.

(Ant. 54. a.)
F. N. B. 55. E. Regit. f. 72.
4. E. 3. 26.

(3. Rep. 23. b.)

[b] Regit. 724

18. E. 4. 10. b. 26. E. 3. 62.

5. H. 5. 100

cannot be tenant in dower, or tenant by the curtesie. And if the reversion be granted by fine, the fine must suppose that the tenant in dower or by the curtesie did hold the land, albeit they had formerly granted over their estate, and albeit the reversion doth passe by the fine; yet the quid juris clamat must be brought against him that was tenant at the time of the note levied. But yet after the reversion is granted over, the grantee shall not have any action of waste against the tenant in dower or by the curtesie, but the action of waste must be brought against their assignee, and not against themselves; for tenant by the curtesie or tenant in dower cannot hold of any but of the heire: and therefore in respect of the privitie, they shall attorne and be subject to an action of waste, as long as the reversion remaineth in the heire, albeit they have granted over their whole estate. And it is worthy of the observation, that if the grantee of the reversion doth bring an action of waste against the assignee of the tenant by the curtesie, [b] the pl. must rehearse the stat. which proveth that no prohibition of waste in that case lay at the common law, as it did if the heire had brought it against the tenant by the curtesie itselfe: and therefore some doe hold, that if the heire doe grant over the reversion, that the attornment of the assignee of the tenant by the curtesie, or of tenant in dower is sufficient, because they afterward must be attendant and subject to the action of waste.

If the reversion of lessee for life be granted, and lessee for life assigne over his estate, the lessee cannot attorne; but the attornment of the assignee is good, because (as Lisleton here saith) it behooveth that the tenant of the land doe attorne, and after the assignement there is no tenure or attendance, &c. betweene the lessee and him in reversion.

If lessee for life assigneth over his estate upon condition, he having nothing in him but a condition shall not attorne; but the assignee may attorne, because he is tenant of the land.

Sect. 569.

*EN mesme le maner est, si terre soit † done en taile, ou lesse a un home pur terme de vie, le remainder a un auter ‡ en fee, si celuy en le remainder voile granter cest remainder a un auter, &c. si le tenant de la terre atturna en la vie le grantor, donques le grant
de tel remainder est bon, ou auterment nemy.*

IN the same manner
is it, if land be granted in taile, or let to a man for terme of life, the remainder to another in fee, if he in the remainder will graunt this remainder to another, &c. if the tenant of the land attorne in the life of the grantor, then the grant of such a remainder is good, or otherwise not.

Lisleton also speaketh here of an attornment by tenant in taile; and true it is that he may attorne; but where the reversion is granted by fine, hee is not compellable to attorn, because he hath an estate of inheritance which may continue for ever.
And so it is of a tenant in taile after possibilitie of issue extinct, he shall not be compelled to attorne for the inheritance which was once in him. [c] But if tenant in taile after possibilitie of issue extinct grant over his estate, his assignee shall be compelled to attorn, because he never had but a bare state for life.
But

12. E. 4. 3. 4. 3. E. 4. 11.
43. E. 3. 1. 46 E. 3. 13.
(9. Rep. 85. b.)

(Ant. 27. b.)

5. H. 5.
(11. Rep. 79.)

20. E. 3. quid juris clam. 50.

[c] See the chap. of tenant in taile after possibilitie of issue extinct; and Ewin's case there cited to be adjudged.

* &c. added L. and M. and Rob.

† done en taile ou, not in L. and M. nor Rob.

‡ en fee, — &c. L. and M.

But as to tenant in taile, note a diversitie betweene a quid juris clamat, and a quem redditum reddit, or a per quæ servicia; for against a tenant in taile, no quid juris clamat lieth, as is aforesaid. But if a man make a gift in taile, the remainder in fee, and the seigniorie or rent charge issuing out of the land be granted by fine, the conusee shall maintaine a per quæ servicia, or a quem redditum, and compell him to attorne; for herein his estate of inheritance is no privilege to him, for that a tenant in fee simple (as his estate was at the common law) is also compellable in these cases to attorne.

Sect. 570.

* P. 12. E. 4. Et la est tenus per tout le court, que tenant en taile ne serra arēt d'attourner, mes s'il attorna gratis, c'est assēs bone.

(41. Rep. 79.)

22. E. 4. 3, 4.

P. 12. Edw. 4. It is there holden by the whole court, that tenant in taile shall not be compelled to attorne, but if he will attorne gratis, it is good enough.

THIS is added to Littleton, and therefore though it be good law, and the booke truly cited, yet I passe it over.

Sect. 571.

IT E M, si terre soit lessē a un bome pur terme d'ans, le remainder a un auter pur terme de vie, reservant al lessour un certaine rent per an, et liverie de seisin sur ceo est fait al tenant pur terme d'ans; si cestuy en le reversion en cest casē granta le reversion a un auter, † &c. et le tenant que est en le remainder apres le terme d'ans ‡ soy attourna; ceo est bone attournement, et celuy a que cest reversion est graunt, per force de tiel attournement distreynera le tenant a terme d'ans pur le rent due apres tiel attournement, coment que le tenant a terme d'ans ne unques attournaist a luy. Et la cause est, pur ceo que lou le reversion est dependant sur l'estate del franktenement, suffist que le tenant del franktenement attourna sur tiel grant del reversion, &c.

AL S O, if land bee let to a man for years, the remainder to another for life, reserving to the lessor a certaine rent by the yeare, and liverie of seisin upon this is made to the tenant for yeares; if hee in the reversion in this case grant the reversion to another, &c. and the tenant which is in the remainder after the terme of yeares attorne, this is a good attournement, and hee to whom this reversion is granted, by force of such attournement shall distreine the tenant for yeares for the rent due after such attournement, albeit that the tenant for yeares did never attorne unto him. And the cause is, for that where the reversion is depending upon an estate of freehold, it sufficeth that the tenant of the freehold doe attorne upon such a grant of the reversion, &c.

Suffist que le tenant del franktenement attorna (1). Note, Littleton saith not here, that the tenant of the franktenement ought in this case to attorne, but that it

* This paragraph not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ soy not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Two reasons are given for this. One is, that the possession of the tenant for years, is the possession of the immediate freeholder. See Brediman's case, 6. Rep. 26. b. The other reason is, that as the termor for years holds of the reversioner, and pays the services to him, so the tenant for life holds also of him.—Thus, as both hold estates of the reversioner, either of them may attorn.

it sufficeth that he doth attorne. And I heard sir James Dier chiefe justice of the common pleas hold, that in this case if the tenant for yeares did attorne, it would vest the reversion; for seeing the estate for yeares is able to support the estate for life, he shall binde him in the remainder by his attornement in respect of his estate and privitie.

Pasch. 15. Eliz. in Brasbrite's case, in Communi Banco.

Sect. 572.

ET est asavoir, que lou un leas a terme d'ans ou a terme de vie, ou done en taile, est fait a ascun home, reservant a tiel lessor ou donor un certaine rent, &c. si tiel lessor ou donor graunta son reversion a un auter, et le tenant del terre attourna, le rent passa al grauntee, coment que en le fait del grant de reversion nul mention soit fait de le rent, pur ceo que le rent est incident al reversion en tiel case, et nemy è converso, &c. Car si home voile graunter le rent en tiel case a un auter, reservant a luy le reversion del terre, coment que le tenant attorna a le grauntee, ceo serra forsque un rent sec ke, &c.

AND it is to be understood, that where a lease for yeares or for life, or a gift in taile, is made to any man, reserving to such lessor or donor a certaine rent, &c. if such lessor or donor grant his reversion to another, and the tenant of the land attorne, the rent passeth to the grantee, although that in the deed of the grant of the reversion no mention be made of the rent, for that the rent is incident to the reversion in such case, and not è converso, &c. For if a man will grant the rent in such case to another, reserving to him the reversion of the land, albeit the tenant attorne to the grantee, this shall bee but a rent sec ke, &c.

(Ant. 143. a. 150. b. 247. 2, 308. a.)
(a. Roll. Abr. 60. 424.)

Of this Littleton hath spoken before in the chapter of Rents.

Sect. 573.

*ITEM, si home lessa terre a un auter pur terme de sa vie, et puis il confirma per son fait l'estate del tenant a terme de vie, le remainder a un auter en fee, et le tenant a terme de vie accepta le fait, donques est le remainder en fait en celuy a que le remainder est done ou limite per mesme le fait. * Car per l'acceptance del tenant a terme de vie † de le fait, ceo est un agreement de luy, et issint un attornement en ley. Mes uncore celuy en le remainder n'avera ascun ac-*

ALSO, if a man let land to another for his life, and after hee confirme by his deed the estate of the tenant for life, the remaynder to another in fee, and the tenant for life accepteth the deed, then is the remaynder in fait in him to whom the remaynder is given or limited by the same deed. For by the acceptance of the tenant for life of the deed, this is an agreement of him, and so an attornement in law. But yet hee in the remaynder shall not have any action

(Plowd. 25. b.)

* Car not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† de le fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.

*tion de waste ne auter benefit per tiel remainder, si non que il avoit le dit fait en poigne, per que le remainder fuit taile ou graunt a luy. Et pur ceo que en tiel cas le tenant a terme de vie voile per cas reteigner le fait a luy, a cel entent, que celui en le remainder n'averroit ascun action de waste envers luy, pur ceo que il ne poit vener d'aver le fait en sa possession, † il serra bone ‡ et sure chose en tiel cas pur celui en le remainder, que un fait endent soit fait per celui que voile faire tiel confirmation, et le remaynder ouster, &c. et que celui que fait tiel confirmation delivra un part del indenture al tenant a terme de vie, et le auter part a celui que avera le remainder. Et donque il per monstrance de le part del indenture poit aver action de waste envers le tenant a terme de vie, et tous autres advantages que celui en le remainder poit aver en tiel case, &c.

of waste nor other benefit by such remaynder, unlesse that hee hath the said deed in hand, whereby the remaynder was entayled or granted to him. And because that in such case the tenant for life peradventure will retaine the deed to him, to this intent, that he in the remaynder should not have any action of waste against him, for that hee cannot come to have the deed in his possession, it will be a good and sure thing in such case for him in the remaynder, that a deed indented bee made by him which will make such confirmation, and the remaynder over, &c. and that hee which maketh such confirmation deliver one part of the indenture to the tenant for life, and the other part to him that shall have the remaynder. And then he by shewing of that part of the indenture may have an action of waste against the tenant for life, and all other advantages that he in the remainder may have in such a case, &c.

(1. Roll. Abr. 301.)

Vid. Sect. 325. 575.

Vide Pl. Com. in Colthirst's case.

Doct. and Stud. cap. 20. fol. 93. 94. 8 R. 2. in waste, in livre elecite.

17. E. 3. Confirmat. 4.

35. H. 6. fol. 8. 14. H. 8.

Pl. Com. 149. in Throckmorton's case.

45. E. 3. 14. 15. 11. H. 4. 39.

14. H. 4. 31.

(Ant. 10. 2.)

HERE Littleton putteth a case of a remainder whereunto an attornement is requisite. And this is the sixth example of an attornement in law.

Remaynder a un auter, &c. Of this sufficient hath beene said in the chapter of Confirmation, Sect. 525.

Si non que il avoit le fait en poigne. And albeit he hath no remedy to come to the deed during the life of tenant for life, yet because he is privie in estate, he shall not maintaine an action of waste without shewing the deed; but when the remainder is once executed, he shall not need to shew the deed.

Il serra bone et sure chose, &c. Hereby it appeareth how necessary it is to use learned advice in a man's conveyance, for thereby shall be prevented many questions, and not to follow the advice of him that is experimented only. For as in phyicke, Nullum medicamentum est idem omnibus, so in law one forme or president of conveyance will not fit all cases.

Sect.

* reteigner—receiver, L. and M. and Roh.

† et pur ceo added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ et sure chose not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Sect. 574.

ITEM, si deux joyntenants sont, les queux lessont leur terre a un auter pur terme de vie, rendant a eux et a leur heires certaine rent per an; en cest case si un des joyntenants en le reversion releffa a l'auter joyntenant en mesme le reversion; cest releas est bone, et ce-luy a que le releas est fait avera solement le rent del tenant a terme de vie, et avera solement un brieve de waste envers luy, comment que il ne unques attorneroit per force de tiel releas, &c. Et la cause est, pur le privy que un foits fuit perenter le tenant a terme de vie et eux en le reversion.*

for life shall not be compelled to attorne in a quid juris clamat upon a grant of a reversion by fine holden of the king in chiefe without licence; but the reason hereof is not because the tenant for life might be charged with the fine, for his estate was more ancient than the fine levied, but because the court will not suffer a prejudice to the king, and the king may seise the reversion and rent, and so the tenant shall be attendant to another. Also it is a generall rule, that when the grant by fine is defeasible, there the tenant shall not be compelled to attorne.

As if an infant levie a fine, this is defeasible by writ of error during his minoritie, and therefore the tenant shall not be compelled to attorne.

So if the land be holden in ancient demesne, and he in the reversion levie a fine of the reversion at the common law, the tenant shall not be compellable to attorne, because the estate that passed is reverfible in a writ of deceit.

So if tenant in taile had levied a fine, the tenant should not be compelled to attorne, because it was defeasible by the issue in taile.

But now the statutes of 4. H. 7. and 32. H. 8. having given a further strength to fines to barre the issue in taile, the reason of the common law being taken away, the tenant in this case shall be compelled to attorne, as it was adjudged (*) in justice Windham's case.

If an alienation be in mortmaine, the tenant shall not be compelled to attorne, because the lord paramount may defeat it.

DEUX jointenants.

And so it is (as it is here to be understood) albeit there be three or more joyntenants, and one of them releaseth to one of the other.

It is true, that there is a difference betweene these releases; for the release in the one case maketh no degree, but hee to whom the release is made is supposed in from the first feoffor; and in the other it worketh a degree, and hee to whom the release is made is in the per by him; yet in neither of these cases there is requisite any attornement, for both of them are within Littleton's reason (for the privitie, &c.)

Pur le privitie, &c.

For if one joyntenant make a lease for yeares, reserving a rent, and dieth, the survivor shall not have the rent; and therefore Littleton here addeth materially, for the privitie that was betweene the tenant for life and them in the reversion.

And here it is good to be seene what grantors or others that make conveyances, &c. are such as their grants or conveyances are either good without attornement, or where the tenant is no way compellable to attorn. Tenant

(6. Rep. 78. 2. Roll. Abr. 403. Ant. 193. a.)

(Ant. 238.)

2. Eliz. Dier. 176. (Ant. 185. a.)

45. E. 3. 6. b. 13. Eliz. Dier. 188. Lib. 3. fol. 86. justice Windham's case.

36. H. 6. 24. (1. Roll. Abr. 297.)

5. E. 3. 25. 31. E. 3. ancient demesne 16.

24. E. 3. 25. b. 37. H. 6. 33. 48. E. 3. 23.

(*) Lib. 3. fol. 86. justice Windham's case. 17. E. 3. 7. 22. E. 3. 18.

Sect.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Lib. 3. Cap. 10. Of Attornement. Sect. 575, 576.

Sect. 575.

(1. Roll. Abr. 301.)

*EN mesme le maner, et pur mesme la cause, est, lou home lessa terre a un auter pur terme de vie, le remainder a un auter pur terme de vie, reservant le reversion al * lessour; en cest cas si celuy en le reversion releffa a celuy en le remainder et a ses heires tout son droit, &c. donques celuy en le remainder ad un fee, &c. et il avera un brieve de wast envers le tenant a terme de vie sans aucun attornement de luy, &c.*

IN the same manner, and for the same cause, is it, where a man letteth land to another for life, the remainder to another for life, reserving the reversion to the lessor; in this case if hee in the reversion releaseth to him in the remainder and to his heires all his right, &c. then he in the remainder hath a fee, &c. and hee shall have a writ of wast against the tenant for life without any attornement of him, &c.

Vide Sect. 549. 553. 556.

This needeth no explication.

Sect. 576.

(6. Rep. 69. a.)

THERE have been now in all seven examples, that Littleton putteth of an attornement in law, and here he putteth two cases also of a notice in law. And the reason of both these are here rendred by Littleton. First for the notice, Littleton saith that the lessee shall not by law be misconusant of the feoffments that were made of and upon the same land. And the reason of the attornement is, because the whole fee simple passeth by the feoffment, and the lessee by his regresse leaveth the reversion in the feoffee, which (saith Littleton) is a good attornement. The same law it is of a tenant by statute merchant or staple, or elegit. And so it is of a lease for life, as Littleton here saith; and so it was resolved [e] in Brasbrite's case, and after in the deane of Paul's his case in the ITEM, si home lessa terres ou tenements a un auter pur terme des ans, et puis il ousta son termour, et ent enfeoffa un auter en fee, et puis le tenant a terme d'ans enter sur le feoffee, en claimant son terme, &c. et puis fait wast; en cest case le feoffee avera per la ley un brieve de wast envers luy, et uncore il n'attornast pas † a luy. Et la cause est, come jeo suppose, pur ceo que celuy que ad droit de aver terres ou tenements pur terme d'ans, ‡ ou auterment, ne seroit per la ley misconusant de les feoffments que fueront faits

ALSO, if a man lett lands or tenements to another for terme of yeares, and after he oust his termor, and thereof enfeoffe another in fee, and after the tenant for yeares enter upon the feoffee, clayming his term, &c. and after doth waste; in this case the feoffee shall have by law a writ of waste against him, and yet hee did not attorne unto him. And the cause is, as I suppose, for that he which hath right to have lands or tenements for yeares, or otherwise, should not by law bee misconusant of the feoffments which were made of and upon the same 46. E. 3. 30. b. 2. H. 5. 4.

5. H. 5. 12. 34. H. 6. 6.
18. E. 3. 47. 9. H. 6. 10.

(5. Rep. 113. b.)

[e] Brasbrite's case.
P. 15. Eliz. deane of Paul's case, 20. Eliz.

* lessour—luy, L. and M. and Roh.

† a luy not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ ou auterment not in L. and M. nor Roh.

*de et sur mesmes les terres, &c. Et entant que per tiel feoffment le tenant a terme d'ans fuit * mis hors de son possession, et per son entree il causast le reversion d'estre a celui a que le feoffment fuit fait, ceo est bon attornement; car celui a que le feoffment fuit fait, avoit nul reversion devaunt que le tenant a terme d'ans avoit enter sur luy, pur ceo que il fuit † en possession en son demesne come de fee, et pur l'entree del tenant a terme d'ans il y ad forsque un reversion, que est per le fait le tenant a terme d'ans, scilicet, per son entree, &c.*

Sect. 577.

MESME la ley est, come il semble, lou un leas est fait pur terme de vie, savant le reversion al lessour, si le lessour disseist le lessee, et fait feoffment en fee, si le tenant a terme de vie enter et fait wast, le feoffee a vera brieve de waste sans ascun auter attournement, causâ quâ supra, &c.

If a man make a lease for life, and then grant the reversion for life, and the lessee attorne, and after the lessor disseise the lessee for life, and make a feoffment in fee, and the lessee re-enter, this shall leave a reversion in the grantee for life, and another reversion in the feoffee, and yet this is no attornment in law of the grantee for life, because he doth no act, nor assent to any which might amount to an attornment in law. Et res inter alios acta alteri nocere non debet. Neither hath the grantee for life the land in possession, so as he may well be misconstrued of the feoffment made upon the land, and so out of the reason of Littleton. But yet the reversion in fee doth passe to the feoffee.

common place. But (34. H. 6. 7.) shall the lessee in this case whether hee will or no doe an act that amounts to an attornment, viz. by his regresse, or esse lose the profit of his land? And some doe hold, that in that case if the lessee for life doe recover in an assise, this is no attornment, because hee comes to it by course of law, and not by his voluntary act. And yet in that case, as in the case of the fine, the state of the reversion is in the feoffee. [f] But others doe hold it all one in case of a recovery, and a regresse.

[g] If the lessor disseise tenant for life or ouste tenant for yeares, and maketh a feoffment in fee, by this the rent reserved upon the lease for life or yeares is not extinguished, but by the regresse of the lessee the rent is revived, because it is incident to the reversion: and so hath it beene adjudged. But if a man be seised of a rent in fee, and disseise the tenant of the land, and make a feoffment in fee, the tenant re-enteth, this rent is not revived. And so note a diversitie between a rent incident to a reversion, and a rent not incident to a reversion.

If two joynt lessees for yeares or for life be ousted or disseised by the lessor, and he enfeoffe another, if one of the lessees re-enter, this is a good attornment, and shall binde both; for an attornment in law is as strong as an attornment in deed.

[f] 18. E. 3. 48. b. Lib. 6. fol. 60. b. Sir Moyle Finche's case.

[g] 9. H. 6. 16. Deane of Paul's case, ubi supra. (Post. 321. b.)

(Ant. 297. b. 2. Rep. 67. 2.)

(6. Rep. 69. Mo. 99. Ant. 266. a.)

(2. Rep. 671.)

Sect.

* Mis hors de son possession, et per son entree il causa le reversion d'estre a celui a que le feoffment fuit, not in L. and M. nor Roh.
† en possession—seise, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In these cases, the tenant for life enters only for a partial estate; he therefore only partially defeats the operation of the feoffment; so much of the fee as he does not defeat, necessarily remains in the feoffee.

Sect. 578.

HERE it appeareth, that where the ancestor taketh an estate of freehold, and after a remainder is limited to his right heires, that the fee simple vesteth in himselfe, as well as if it had beene limited to him and his heires; for his right heires are in this case words of limitation of estate, and not of purchase. Otherwise it is where the ancestor taketh but an estate for yeares: as if a lease for yeares be made to A. the remainder to B. in tayle, the remainder to the right heires of A. there the remainder vesteth not in A. but the right heires shall take by purchase if A. die during the estate tayle: for as the ancestor and the heire are correlativa of inheritances, so are the testator and executor, or the intestate and administrator of chattels. And so it is if A. make a feoffment in fee to the use of B. for life, and after to the use of C. for life or in tayle, and after to the use of the right heires of B. B. hath the fee simple in him, as well when it is by way of limitation of use, as when it is by act executed. (1)

En vaine serroit, &c. Quod vanum et inutile est lex non requirit. Lex est ratio summa, quæ jubet quæ sunt utilia et necessaria, et contraria prohibet; and arguments drawn from hence are forcible in law.

ITEM, si leas soit fait pur terme de vie, le remainder a un autre en le taile, le remainder ouster a les droit beires le tenant a terme de vie; en cest case, si le tenant a terme de vie granta son remainder en fee a autre per son fait, cel remainder main-tenant passa per le fait sans ascun attournement, * &c. car si ascun doit attorne en cest case, ceo serroit le tenant a terme de vie, et en vain serroit que il atturneroit sur son grant demesne, &c.

ALSO, if a lease be made for life, the remainder to another in tayle, the remainder over to the right heires of the tenant for life; in this case, if the tenant for life grant his remainder in fee to another by his deede, this remainder main-tenant passeth by the deede without any attornement, &c. for that if any ought to attorne in this case, it should be the tenant for life, and in vaine it were that he should attorne upon his owne grant, &c.

Sect. 579.

ITEM, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant tient del seignior per certaine rent, et service de chivaler, si le seignior granta les services de son tenant per fine, les services sont maintenant en le grantee per force del fine; mes uncore le seignior ne poet pas distreine per ascun parcel de les services sans attournement: mes si le tenant devia (son heire deins age) le seignior avera le gard del

ALSO, if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant holdeth of the lord by certaine rent, and knights service, if the lord grant the services of his tenant by fine, the services are presently in the grantee by force of the fine; but yet the lord may not distreine for any parcell of the services, without attornement: but if the tenant dieth, his heire within age, the lord shall have the wardship corps

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Rich.

(1) The observation of Mr. Douglas upon this point (note to page 506 of his Reports) deserves the reader's most serious attention.

corps del heire, et de ses terres, &c. coment que il ne unque atturnast, pur ceo que le seignorie fuit en le grantee maintenant per force del fine. Et auxy en tiel cas, si le tenant morust sans heire, le seignior avera les tenements per voy d'escheat.

of the bodie of the heire, and of his lands, &c. albeit he never attorned, because that the seignorie was in the grantee presently by force of the fine. And also in such case, if the tenant die without heire, the lord shall have the te-nancie by way of escheat.

HERE Littleton beginneth to shew what advantages the conusee of a fine may take before attornment, and what not.

[b] First, he cannot distreyne, because an avowrie is in lieu of an action; and thereupon privitie is requisite. So likewise, and for the same cause, he can have no action of waste, nor writ of entrie, ad communem legem, or in consimili casu, or in casu proviso, writ of customs and services, nor writ of ward, &c. (1)

But if a man make a lease for yeares, and grant the reversion by fine, if the lessee be ousted, and the conusee disseised, the conusee, without attornment, shall maintaine an assise; for this writ is maintained against a stranger, where there needeth no privitie. And such things as the lord may seise, or enter into without suing any action, there the conusee, before any attornment, may take benefit thereof; as to seise a ward or heriot; or to enter into the lands or tenements of a ward; or escheated to him; or to enter for an alienation of tenant for life or yeares; or of tenant by statute merchant, staple, or elegit, to his disherison.

[4] 8. E. 3. 44. 26. E. 3. 63.
10. H. 6. 16. 34. H. 6. 7.
12. E. 4. 4. 40. E. 3. 7.
5. H. 5. 12. 48. E. 3. 15. b.
3. E. 2. droit. 33.
(F. N. B. 60. Sect. 564.
4. Inst. 209, 210.)

Sect. 580, 581, 582.

*EN mesme le manner est, si home granta le reversion de son tenant a terme de vie a un auter per fine, le reversion passa maintenant al
grantee per force del fine, mes le grantee jammes n'avera action de wast sans attornment, &c.*

IN the same manner
it is, if a man graunt
the reversion of his tenant for life to another by fine, the reversion maintenant passeth to the grantee by force of the fine, but the grantee shall never have an action of wast without attornment, &c.

Sect. 581.

*MES uncore si le tenant a terme
de vie alienast en fee,
le grantee poet enter,
* &c. pur ceo que le reversion fuit en luy per force del fine, et tiel alienation fuit a son disheritance.*

BUT yet if the tenant for life alieneth in fee, the grantee may enter, &c. because the reversion was in him by force of the fine, and such alienation was to his dishe-ritance.

IT is said in our books,
that if ternaunt for life have a privilege not to be impeachable of waste, or any other privilege, if he doth attorne without saving his privilege, that hee hath lost it; which is so to be understood, where he attornes in a quid juris clamat brought by the conusee of a fine, that if he claimeth not his privilege, but attorne generally, his privilege is lost, for that the writ supposeth him to be but a bare tenant for life;
and by his generall attorne-ment, according to the writ, he is barred for ever to claime any privilege but a bare estate for life. But if upon a grant of the reversion by deed, the tenant for life doth at-torne, he loseth no privilege;
for there can be no conclusion or barre by the attornment in pais: and so it is of an attornment in law. As if the lessor disseise the lessee for life, and make a feoffment in fee, and the lessee re-enter;
this is an attornment in law, which shall not prejudice him of

40. E. 2. 7. 43. E. 3. 5.
48. E. 3. 32. 45. E. 3. 6.
21. E. 3. 48. 24. E. 3. 32.
39. H. 6. 25. F. N. B. 136. b.
(3. Rep. 86. 11. Rep. 79.
1. Roll. Abr. 412. 296.
Ant. 274. b.)

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) The distinction in these cases seems to be, that the grantee is intitled, before attornment, to what the lord may seise; but not to any thing which lies in action.

of any privilege: so it is if the lessor levie a fine of the reversion, and the conusee die without heire, whereby the reversion escheateth, in this case the law doth supply an attornement, and therefore the lessee shall lose no privilege. But in the quid juris clamat, if the lessee shew his estate and his privilege, and is ready, saving to him his privilege, &c. to attorne, hereby either his privilege shall be allowed and entred of record, or he shall not be compelled to attorne: [b] and if the plaintiff be within age, so as hee cannot acknowledge the privilege, the tenant shall not be compelled to attorne untill his full age, when he may acknowledge it. But otherwise it is (as some hold) if a quid juris clamat be brought by baron and feme, the privilege shall be entred into the rolle, notwithstanding shee is a feme covert. And in a per quæ servicia brought by the conusee of the mesne; the tenant may shew that he held by homage auncestrell, and saving to him his warrantie and acquitall, he is ready to attorne. In the same manner, if the tenant hath any other acquitall, and the mesne levie a fine to one for life, the remainder to another in fee, the tenant for life bringeth a per quæ servicia, and the tenant is ready to attorne, saving his acquitall, and the plaintiff acknowledgeth it, and thereupon the tenant attorne, tenant for life dieth; in this case albeit regularly the attornement to the tenant for life is an attornement to him in the remainder, yet in this case hee in the remainder shall not distreine, till he hath acknowledged the acquitall, which must be in a per quæ servicia, brought by him against the tenant.

(5. Rep. 39. b.)

(Ant. 157. b.)

[2] 43. E. 3. 5.

(6. Rep. 4. a. 9. Rep. 85. b.)

45. E. 3. 11. a. Vet. N. B. in per quæ servicia. 5. E. 3. Mesne 56. & per quæ servicia 16. 37. H. 6. 33. 39. H. 6. 25. 18. E. 4. 7. (7. Rep. 4. b.)

Vid. Sect. 557.

Sect. 582.

*MES en * ceo cas lou le seignior granta les services de son tenant per fine, si tenant devie (son heire esteant de plein age) le grantee per le fine n'avera reliefe, ne unques distreynera pur reliefe, sinon que il + avoit l'attornement del tenaunt que morust: ‡ car de tiel chose que gist en distresse, sur que le breve de replevin est sue, &c. home doit et covient d'avouer le prisel bone et droiturel, &c. et la covient estre attornement del tenant, comment que le graunt de tiel chose soit per fine: mes d'aver le gard de les terres ou tenements issint tenus durant le nonage le heire, ou de eux aver per voy d'escheat, la ne besoigne ascun distresse, &c. mes un entrie en la terre per force de le droit del seigniorie que le grantee ad per force del fine, &c. Sic vide diversitatem §.*

BUT in this case where the lord granteth the services of his tenant by fine, if the tenant die (his heire being of full age) the grantee by the fine shall not have reliefe, nor shal ever distreine for reliefe, unlesse that hee hath the attornement of the tenant that dieth: for of such a thing which lieth in distresse, whereupon the writ of replevin is sued, &c. a man must and ought to avow the taking good and rightful, &c. and there there ought to be an attornement of the tenant, although the graunt of such a thing be by fine: but to have the wardship of the lands or tenements so holden during the nonage of the heire, or to have them by way of escheat, there needs no distresse, &c. but an entrie into the land by force of the right of the seigniorie, which the graantee hath by force of the fine, &c. Sic vide diversitatem, &c.

Alien en fee, &c. Of this sufficient hath beene said in the next precedent Section.

N'avera reliefe, &c. Of this sufficient hath beene said in the next precedent Section.

Sect.

* ceo not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ avoit l'attornement—faisoit attournement, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and

M. and Roh.

§ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

Sect. 583.

ITEM, si soit seignior, mesne et tenant, et le mesne graunta per fine les services de son tenant a un autre en fee, et puis le grantee morust sans heire, ore les services del mesnaltie deviendront et escheate al seignior paramont per voy d'escheat; * et si apres les services del mesnaltie sont aderere, en cest cas celui que fuit seignior paramont poit distreiner le tenant, nient obstant que le tenant ne unques attur-nast: et le cause est, pur ceo que le mesnaltie fuit en fait en le grantee per force de le † dit fine, et le seignior paramont pouvoit avouer sur le grantee, pur ceo que il fuit son tenant en fait, comment que il ne serroit a ceo compelle, &c. Mes si le grantor en cest case devias sans heire en la vie le grantee, donque il serroit compelle d'avouer sur le grantee; et auxy entant que le seignior paramont ne claime le mesnaltie per force del graunt fait per fine levie per le mesne, ‡ mes per vertue de son seigniorie paramont, † scilicet, per voy d'escheat, il avoua sur le tenant pur les services que le mesne avoit, &c. comment que le tenant ne unques attur-na pas.

ALSO, if there be lord, mesne and tenant, and the mesne grant by fine the services of his tenant to another in fee, and after the grantee die without heire, now the services of the mesnaltie shall come and escheate to the lord paramont by way of escheat; and if afterwards the services of the mesnaltie bee behind, in this case hee which was lord paramont may distreine the tenant, notwithstanding that the tenant did never attorne: and the cause is, for that the mesnaltie was in deed in the grantee by force of the said fine, and the lord paramont may avow upon the grantee, because in deed hee was his tenant, albeit hee shall not be compelled to this, &c. But if the grantor in this case had died without heire in the life of the grantee, then he should bee compelled to avow upon the grantee; and also in as much the lord paramont doth not claime the mesnaltie by force of the grant made by fine levied by the mesne, but by vertue of his seigniorie paramont, viz. by way of escheat, he shall avow upon the tenant for the services which the mesne had, &c. albeit that the tenant did never attorne.

HERE Littleton putteth the case where one that claimeth under a conusee by fine may distraine or maintaine any action, albeit there was never any attornment made to the conusee, or to him that hath his estate.

And here is a diversitie betweene an act in law that giveth one inheritance in lieu of another, and an act in law that conveyeth the estate of the conusee only. Of the former Littleton here putteth an example of the escheat of the mesnaltie which drowneth the seigniorie paramont; and therefore reason would that the lord by this act in law should have as much benefit of the mesnaltie escheated, as he had of the seigniorie that is drowned; and the rather for that the law casteth it upon him, and hee hath no remedy to compell the tenant to attorne.

45. E. 3. 2. 34. H. 6. 7.
37. H. 6. 38. 39. H. 6. 31.
5. H. 7. 18. per Curiam.

Lib. 6. fol. 68. Sir Moyle
Finche's case.

* et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† scilicet, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† dit not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

[c] Temps E. 2. Attorn. 18.
39. H. 6. 38. per Priot.

(Ant. 104. b. 309 b.)

(5. Rep. 113.)

Sir Moyle Finche's case, ubi supra.

attorne. Another reason hereof Littleton here yeeldeth, because the lord commeth to the mesnaltie by a feignorie paramount, and therefore there needeth no attornment. [c] As if lessee for life be of a mannor, and he surrender his estate to the lessor, there needeth no attorne-ment of the tenant's, because the lessor is in by a title paramount. But if the conusee dieth, and the law casteth his feignorie upon his heire by descent, he shall not be in any better estate than his ancestor was, because he claimeth as heire meere by the conusee.

So it is (as hath beene said) if the conusee of a fine before attornment bargaineth and selleth the feignorie by deed indented and inrolled, the bargainee shall not distraine, because the bargainor, from whom the feignorie moveth, had never actuall possession.

So and for the same reason if a reversion be granted by fine, and the conusee before attornment disseise the tenant for life and make a feoffment in fee, and the lessee re-enter, the feoffee shall not distraine.

Sect. 584.

(Ant. 104. b.)

[d] 45. E. 3. 2. 34. H. 6. 7.
5. H. 7. 18. per curiam.
13. H. 4. avowrie 227.

(4. Rep. 64.
1. Roll. Abr. 293.
Ant. 153. a.)

Lib. 6. fol. 68. in Sir Moyle
Finche's case.
(Mo. 92. 68.)

27. H. 8. cap. 10.

(Ant. 309. 2. Cro. 193.
5. Rep. 113. a.
6. Rep. 68. b.
10. Rep. 45.)

HERE Littleton expresseth two diversities. First, betweene an act in law, and the grant of the party. This case is put of an [d] escheat, which is a meere act in law, but so it is when it is partly by act in law, and partly by the act of the party; as if the co-nusee of a statute merchant extendeth a feig-norie or rent, hee shall distraine without any attornment. If a man make a lease for life or yeares, and after levie a fine to A. to the use of B. and his heires, B. shall distraine and have an action of waste, albeit the conusee never had any attornment, because the reversion is vested in him by force of the statute, and hath no remedy to compell
the lessee to attorne.

And so it is of a bargain and sale by deed indented and inrolled, but this is by force of a statute since Littleton wrote.

Secondly, where he that commeth in by act in law is in the per, as the heire of the co-nusee, who setteth in his ancestor's seat, tanquam pars antecessoris de sanguine, and the lord by escheat, which is an estranger, and commeth in meere in the post.

EN mesme le ma-
ner est, lou le reversion d'un tenant a terme de vie soit grant per fine a un autre en fee, et le grantee apres morust sans heire, ore le seignior ad le reversion per voy d'escheat;
et si apres le tenant fait wast, le seignior avera brieve de wast envers luy, nient contristeant que il ne un*ques atturna, * causâ* quâ supra. Mes lou un home claime per force del graunt fait per le fine † scilicet, come heire, ou come assignee, &c. la il ne distrenera ‡ ne avovera, ne avera action de wast, &c. sans attor-nement.

IN the same manner it is, where the reversion of a tenant for life is granted by fine to another in fee, and the grantee afterwards dieth without heire, now the lord hath the reversion by way of escheat; and if after the tenant ma-keth wast, the lord shall have a writ of waste against him, notwithstanding that he never attorned, causâ quâ supra. But where a man claimeth by force of the grant made by the fine, scil. as heire, or as assign-nee, &c. there hee shall not distraine nor avowe, nor have an action of waste, &c. without attornment.

Sect. 585.

ITEM, en ancient boroughs ALSO, in ancient boroughs and et cities, lou terres et tene- cities, where lands and te-ments

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ ne avovera not in L. and M. nor Roh. nor in MSS.

ments deins mesme les boroughes et cities sont devisable per testament per custome et use, &c. si en tiel borough ou citie home soit seise de rent service, ou de rent charge, et devisa cel rent ou service a un autre per son testament et morust; en cest cas celui a que tiel devise est fait, peut distraire le tenant pur le rent ou service adere, coment que le tenant n'attorna pas.

tenements within the same boroughes and cities are devisable by testament by custome and use, &c. if in such borough or citie a man be seised of a rent service, or of a rent charge, and deviseth such rent or service to another by his testament and dieth; in this case, he to whom such devise is made, may distrain the tenant for the rent or service arere, although the tenant did never attorne.

(F. N. B. 121. n.)

HERE doth Littleton put a case where a man may have a seignory, rent, reversion, or remainder merely by the act of the party, and may distrain, and have any action without any attornement, and that is by devise of lands devisable by custome when Littleton wrote, by the last will and testament of the owner.

34. H. 6. 6. 5. H. 7. 18.
19. H. 6. 24. 21. H. 5. 38.
F. N. B. 121. n.

Sect. 586.

EN mesme le maner est, lou home lessa tiels tenements devisables a un autre pur terme de vie, ou pur terme d'ans, et devisa le reversion per son testament a un autre en fee, ou en fee taile, et morust, et puis le tenant fait waste, celui a que le devise fut fait avera briefe de waste, coment que le tenant ne unque attorna. Et la cause est, pur ceo que la volunt le devisour fait per son testament serra performe selonque l'intent del devisour; et si l'effect de ceo girroit sur l'attournement del tenant, † donques per case le tenant ne voyle unques attourner, et donques le volunt del devisour ne serroit unque performe, ‡ &c. et pur ceo le devisee distraira, &c. ou avera action de waste, &c. sans attournement. Car si home devisa tiels tenements a un autre per son testament, habendum sibi imperpetuum, et morust, et le devisee enter, il ad fee simple,

IN the same manner is it, where a man letteth such tenements devisable to another for life, or for yeares, and deviseth the reversion by his testament to another in fee, or in fee taile, and dyeth, and after the tenant commits waste, he to whom the devise was made shall have a writ of waste, although the tenant doth never attorne. And the reason is, for that the will of the devisor made by his testament shall be performed according to the intent of the devisor; and if the effect of this should ly upon the attornement of the tenant, then perchance the tenant would never attorne, and then the will of the devisor should never be performed, &c. and for this the devisee shall distrain, &c. or he shall have an action of waste, &c. without attornement. For if a man deviseth such tenements to another by his testament, habendum sibi imperpetuum, and dieth, and the

(6. Rep. 93.)

(5. Rep. 68.)

(1. Rep. 120. 3. Rep. 199.
6. Rep. 16. 81.)

(2. Rep. 94.)

(10. Rep. 46. 87.)

(4. Rep. 66.)

causa

§ cas added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

causâ quâ supra; * uncore † fi fait de feoffment ust este ‡ fait a luy per le devisor en sa vie de mesmes les tenements, habendum sibi imperpetuum, et livery de seisin sur ceo fuit fait, il n'averait estate forsque pur terme de sa vie.

devisee enter, hee hath a fee simple, causâ quâ supra; yet if a deed of feoffment had beene made to him by the devisor of the same tenements, habendum sibi imperpetuum, and livery of seisin were made upon this, hee should have an estate but for terme of his life.

BOTH this and the precedent case stand upon one and the same reason, which Littleton here yeeldeth, viz. because that the will of the devisor expressed by his testament shall be performed according to the intent of the devisor; and it shall not lie in the power of the tenant or lessee to frustrate the will of the devisor by denying his attornement. Here Littleton mentioneth a maxime of the common law, viz. Quod ultima voluntas testatoris est perimplenda secundum veram intentionem suam; and, Reipublicæ interest suprema hominum testamenta rata haberi.

Testament, Testamentum, i. e. testatio mentis, which is made nullo præsentis metu periculi, sed solâ cogitatione mortalitatis. Omne testamentum morte consummatum.

Car si home devisa tiels tenements a un auter, &c. Here Littleton putteth a case where the intent of the testator shall be taken, viz. where a man by devise shall have a fee simple without these words (heires); and here Littleton putteth the diversitie betweene a will and a feoffment.

Now by the statutes of 32. and 34. H. 8. (as hath beene said in the chapter of Burgage) lands, tenements, and hereditaments are devisable, as by the said acts doe appere.

Sect. 587.

IT E M, si home seisie d'un mannor quel est parcel en demesne et parcel en service, et ent soit disseisie, mes les tenants que teignent del mannor ne unque attournant § a le disseisor; en cest cas, coment que le disseisor morust seisie, et son heire soit eins per discent, &c. uncore poit le disseisee distreine pur le rent arere, et aver les services, &c. Mes si les tenants viendront al disseisor, et dient, Nous deveignomus vostre tenants, &c. cu auter attournement a luy fesoient, &c. et puis le disseisor morust seisie, donque le disseisee ne poit distreine pur le rent, &c. pur ceo que tout le manor discent dist al heire le disseisor, &c.

AL SO, if a man bee seised of a mannor which is parcell in demesne and parcell in service, and is thereof disseised, but the tenants which hold of the mannor doe never attorne to the disseisor; in this case, albeit the disseisor dieth seised, and his heire is in by discent, &c. yet may the disseisee distreine for the rent behinde, and have the services, &c. But if the tenants come to the disseisor and say, We become your tenants, &c. or make to him some other attornement, &c. and after the disseisor dieth seised, then the disseisee cannot distreine for the rent, &c. for that all the mannor descendeth to the heire of the disseisor, &c.

LITTLETON having spoken of estates gained by lawful conveyances, doth now speake of estates gained by wrong; and here putteth a case of a disseisin of a mannor, where it appeareth, that the disseisor cannot disseise the lord of the rents or services without the

(1. Roll. Abr. 293.)

Vide Sect. 167.

Bracton li. 1. f. 11. & f. 60.

Fleta lib. 2. cap. 15.

Button fol. 78. & f. 212. b.

(6. Rep. 23. Ant. 9. b.)

22. E. 3. 16. 34. H. 6. 7.

15. H. 7. 12. 19. H. 8. 4.

Vide Sect. 187.

(6. Rep. 69. a.)

* us added L. and M. and Roh. † fi—le, L. and M. and Roh. ‡ ust este—fait, L. and M. § a le—de le, L. and M. and Roh.

the attornment of the tenants to the disseisor: for seeing an attornment is requisite to a feoffment and other lawfull conveyances, à fortiori, a disseisor or other wrong doer shall not gaine them without attornment. The like law is of an abator and an intruder. But albeit the disseisor hath once gotten the attornment of the tenants and payment of their rents, yet may they refuse afterwards for avoiding of their double charge. And here the attornment of the tenant of a mannor to a disseisor of the demeanes shall dispossesse the lord of the rents and services parcell of the mannor, because both demeanes, rents and services make but one entire mannor, and the demeanes are the principall: but otherwise it is of rents and services in grosse, as in this next Section our author teacheth us.

6. H. 7. 14. 11. H. 7. 28.
11. H. 4. 14. a. b.
(Cro. Car. 303. Ant. 180.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 662.)

Sect. 588.

*MES si un tient de moy per rent service, le quel est un service engrosse, * et nient per reason de mon mannor, et un auter que nul droit ad, † clama le rent, ‡ et receive et prent mesme le rent de mon tenant per cobercion de distres, ou per auter forme, et disseisist moy per tiel prendre de rent; coment que tiel disseisor mourust issint seisie en pernant de rent, uncore apres sa mort jeo puissoy bien distreiner le tenant pur le rent que fuit aderere devant le || decease del disseisor, et auxy apres son decease. Et la cause est, pur ceo que tiel disseisor n'est pas mon disseisor forsque a ma election et ma volunt. Car coment que il prent le rent de mon tenant, &c. uncore jeo puissoy a tous foits distreiner mon tenant pur le rent arere §, issint que il est a moy forsque sicome jeo voile suffer le tenant estre per tant de temps arere † pur paier a moy meme le rent, &c.*

BUT if one holdeth of mee by rent service, which is a service in grosse, and not by reason of my mannor, and another that hath no right, claimeth the rent, and receives and taketh the same rent of my tenant by coercion of distresse, or by other forme, and disseiseth mee by such taking of the rent; albeit such disseisor dieth so seised in taking of the rent, yet after his death I may well distreine the tenant for the rent which was behinde before the decease of the disseisor, and also after his decease. And the cause is, for that such disseisor is not my disseisor but at my election and will. For albeit he taketh the rent of my tenant, &c. yet I may at a'l times distreine my tenant for the rent behinde, so as it is to mee but as if I will suffer the tenant to bee so long time behinde in payment of the same rent unto me, &c.

(Cro. Car. 303.
Roll. Abr. 658.
F. N. B. 179. k.)

(Ant. 180. b.
a. Siderf. 75.)

Sect. 589.

CAR le payment de mon tenant a un auter a que il ne doit pas payer, n'est pas disseisin a moy, ne ousta moy pas de mon rent sans ma volunt ¶ et ma election, &c. Car coment que jeo puissoy aver assise envers tiel per-

FOR the payment of my tenant to another to whom hee ought not to pay, is no disseisin to me, nor shall oust me of my rent without my will and election, &c. For although I may have an assise against such pernor, yet this is at my election,

(3. Rep. 77.)

* et nient per reason de mon mannor, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† et receive—a receiver, L. and M. and Roh.

and Roh. † per—de, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ clama—claimant mesme, L. and M. and Roh.

|| decease—distress, L. and M. and Roh.

§ &c. added L. and M.

¶ et—on sans, L. and M. and Roh.

nor, uncore ceo est a mon election, si jeo voile prendre luy come mon disseisor, ou non. Issint tiels discents de rents en gros ne ousteront pas le seignior de distreyner, mes a chescun temps ils poyent bien distreiner pur le rent arere, &c. Et en cest case si apres le distresse de luy que issint torciouement prist le rent, jeo graunt per mon fait le service a un auter, et le tenant attourna, ceo est assés bone, et les services per tiel grant et attournement maintenant sont en le grantee, &c. Mes auterment est lou le rent est parcel del manor, et le disseisor morust seisie del manor entier, come en le case procheine avant est dit, &c.

tion, whether I will take him as my disseisor, or no. So such discents of rents in grosse shall not oust the lord of his distresse, but at any time he may well distreyne for the rent behinde, &c. And in this case if after the distresse of him which so wrongfully tooke the rent, I grant by my deed the service to another, and the tenaunt attorne, this is good enough, and the services by such grant and attornement are presently in the grantee, &c. But otherwise it is where the rent is parcell of a manor, and the disseisor dieth seised of the whole manor, as in the case next before is sayd, &c.

(1. Rep. 37.
9. Rep. 51.
Hob. 322.)

* Vid. Sect. 237, 238, 239, 240.
(Cro. Car. 303.)

24. E. 3. 4. 1. E. 5. 5.
See the authorities there following in the next parolle.
5. E. 4. 1. 23. H. 3. tit. Ass. 439.
24. E. 3. 40. 31. 16. Ass. p. 15.
16. E. 3. Release 56. 1. E. 5. 5.
F. N. B. 179. E. 15. E. 4. 8.
Flet. li. 4. ca. 12.

(Ant. Sect. 541.)

HERE Littleton putteth a diversitie betweene a rent service parcell of a manor, whereof he had spoken before, and a rent service in grosse. For a man cannot be disseised of a rent service in grosse, rent charge, or rent secke, by attornement or payment of the rent to a stranger, but at his election; for the rule of law is, Nemo redditum alterius invito domino percipere aut possidere potest; and our author hath before * taught us what be disseisins of rents services, rents charges, and rent secks, and payment to a stranger is none of them, but at the lord's election, as our author here saith.

Pernor, i. e. the taker of my rent. But if the disseisee bring an assise against such a pernor, then he doth admit himselfe out of possession.

Discents. A discent of a rent in grosse bindeth not the right owner but that he may distreyne, albeit he admitted himselfe out of possession, and determined his election, as by bringing of an assise, &c.

If the tenant of the land pay the rent to a stranger which hath no right thereunto, and the right owner release to him, this release is good because he thereby admitted himselfe to bee out of possession. But if the tenant had given him any thing in name of attornement, and the right owner had released to him, this release had beene void, because an attornement only can be no disseisin of the rent.

Jeo grant per mon fait, &c. This also proveth, that the right owner is not out of possession, and that this grant over is a demonstration of his election that hee is in possession.

Sect. 590.

I T E M, si jeo sue seisie d'un manor, parcel en demesne, et parcel en service; et jeo done certaine acres del terre, parcel de demesne de mesme le manor, a un

A L S O, if I be seised of a manor, parcell in demesne, and parcell in service, and I give certaine acres of the land, parcell of the demesne of the same manor, to

auter

*auter en le taile, rendant a moy et a mes heires un certaine rent, &c. si en cest case jeo sue disseisie de la manor, et tous les tenants attournont et payont leur rents al disseisor, et auxy le dit tenant en le taile paya le rent per moy reserve, al disseisor, et puis le disseisor morust seisie, * &c. et son heire entra, et est eins per discent, uncore en cest case jeo puisse bien distreigner le tenant en le taile, et ses heires, pur le rent per moy reserve sur le done, scilicet, auxy-bien pur le rent esteant aderer devant le descent al heire le disseisor, et auxy pur le rent que happa d'estre aderer apres mesme le discent, nient obstant tiel morant seisie del disseisor, &c. Et la cause est, pur ceo que quant home dona tenements † en le taile, savant le reversion a luy, et il sur le dit done reserva a luy un rent ou auters services, tout le rent et les services sont incidents a la reversion; et quant un home ad un reversion, il ne pouvoit estre ouste de son reversion per le fait d'un estrange home, sinon que le tenant soit ouste de son estate et possession, &c. Car si longement ‡ que le tenant en le taile et ses heires continuont leur possession per force de mon done, cy longement est le reversion en moy et en mes heires: et entant que le rent et les services reserves sur tiel done sont incidents et dependants al reversion, quecunque que ad le reversion, avera mesme le rent et services, &c.*

another in taile, yeelding to mee and to my heires a certaine rent, &c. if in this case I be disseised of the mannor, and all the tenants attorne and pay their rents to the disseisor, and also the sayd tenant in taile pay the rent by me reserved, to the disseisor, and after the disseisor dieth seised, &c. and his heire enter, and is in by discent, yet in this case I may wel distreyn the tenant in taile, and his heires, for the rent by me reserved upon the gift, scilicet, as well for the rent being behinde before the discent to the heire of the disseisor, as also for the rent which happeth to be behind after the same discent, notwithstanding such dying seised of the disseisor, &c. And the reason is, for that when a man giveth lands in taile, saving the reversion to himselfe, and hee upon the sayd gift reserveth to himselfe a rent or other services, all the rent and services are incident to the reversion; and when a man hath a reversion he cannot be ousted of his reversion by the act of a stranger, unlessse that the tenaunt be ousted of his estate and possession, &c. For as long as the tenant in taile and his heires continue their possession by force of my gift, so long is the reversion in me and in my heires: and in as much as the rent and services reserved upon such gift be incident and depending upon the reversion, whosoever hath the reversion, shall have the same rent and services, &c.

(Dyer 94. b.)

(Cro. Car. 303.)

(8. Rep. 89.)

Sect.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† a un auter added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ en ceo cas added L. and M. and Roh.

Sect. 591.

EN mesme le maner est, lou jeo lessa parcel del demesne del manor a un auter pur terme de vie, ou pur terme d'ans, rendant a moy certaine rent, &c. coment que jeo soy disseisie del manor, &c. et le disseisor morust seisie, * &c. et son heire † esteant eins per discent, uncore jeo distreiner pur le rent arere ut supra, nient obstant tiel discent; car quant home ad fait tiel done en taile, ou tiel leas pur terme de vie, ou pur terme d'ans, del parcel de le demesne de un manor, &c. savant le reversion a tiel donour ou lessour, &c. et puis il soit disseisie de le manor, &c. tiel reversion apres tiel disseisin est sever del manor en fait, coment que ne soit sever en droit. ‡ Et isint poyes veier (mon fits) diversitie, lou il y ad un manor parcel en demesne et parcel en services, les queux services sont parcel de mesme le manor nient incidents a ascun reversion, &c. et lou ils sont incidents al reversion, &c.

IN the same manner is it, where I let parcell of the demesnes of the mannor to another for terme of life, or for terme of yeares, rendering to mee a certaine rent, &c. albeit I be disseised of the mannor, &c. and the disseisor die seised, &c. and his heire bee in by discent, yet I may distreine for the rent arere ut supra, notwithstanding such discent; for when a man hath made such a gift in taile, or such a lease for life, or for yeares, of parcell of the demesnes of a mannor, &c. saving the reversion to such donor or lessor, &c. and after he is disseised of the mannor, &c. such reversion after such disseisin is severed from the mannor in deed, though it be not severed in right. And so thou mayst see (my sonne) a diversitie, where there is a mannor parcell in demesne and parcell in services, which services are parcell of the same mannor not incident to any reversion, &c. and where they are incident to the reversion, &c.

(Cro. Car. 303.
1. Roll. Abr. 658.
11. Rep. 47, 48. Plowd. 197. b.)

HERE Littleton putteth a diversitie betweene rents and services parcell of a mannor (whereof he had spoken before) and rents and services incident to a reversion parcell of a mannor.

And the reason of this diversitie is, for that as long as the donee in taile, lessee for life, or lessee for yeares, are in possession, they preserve the reversion in the donor or lessor; and so long as the reversion continue in the donor or lessor, so long do the rents and services which are incident to the reversion belong to the donor or lessor. Neither can the donor or lessor be put out of his reversion, unlesse the donee or lessee be put out of their possession; and if the donee or lessee be put out of their possession, then consequently is the donor or lessor put out of their reversion. But if the donee or lessee make a regresse, and regaine their estate and possession, thereby doe they ipso facto reveist the reversion in the donor or lessor.

[a] 18. Aff. p. 2. 38. H. 6. 33.
Pl. Com. Fulmerstone's case 1. 3.
Lib. 5. fol. 11, 12. 25. 19. E. 2.
Briefe 845. 4. E. 3. Briefe 713.
(Post. 349. 11. Rep. 50. b.)

And here is to be observed, that when a man is seised of a mannor, and maketh a gift in taile, or lease for life, &c. of parcell of the demesne of the mannor, [a] the reversion is part of the mannor, and by the grant of the mannor the reversion shall passe with the attornement of the donee or lessee. But if the lord make a gift in taile, or a lease for life of the whole mannor, excepting Blacke-Acre, parcell of the demesnes of the mannor, and after he granteth away his mannor; Blacke-Acre shall not passe; because during the estate taile, or lease for life,

* &c. not in L. and M.

† esteant not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

life it is severed from the mannor. And so note a diversitie, that a reversion of part may be parcell of a mannor in possession, but a part in possession cannot be parcell of the reversion of a mannor expectant upon any estate of freehold. But if a man make a lease for yeares of a mannor, excepting Blacke Acre, and after granterh away the mannor, Blacke Acre shall passe, because the freehold being entire, it remaineth parcell of the mannor, and one præcipe of the whole mannor shall serve. But otherwise it is in case of the gift in taile or lease for life excepting any part, there must be severall writs of præcipe, because the freehold is severall.

CHAP. II. Of Discontinuance. Sect. 592.

Discontinuance est un ancien pa-rol en la ley, et ad divers significations, &c. Mes quant a un entent il ad tiel signification, scilicet, lou un home ad alien a un auter certaine terres ou tenements et morust, et un auter ad droit de aver mesmes les terres ou tenements, mes il ne poit entrer en eux per cause de tiel alienation, &c.

Discontinuance is an ancient word in the law, and hath divers significations, &c. But as to one intent it hath this signification, viz. where a man hath aliened to another certaine lands or tenements and dieth, and another hath right to have the same lands or tenements, but hee may not enter into them because of such an alienation, &c.

Discontinuance is a Vide Sect. 637.

word compounded of de and continuo, for continuo is to continue without intermission. Now by addition of de (euphonia gratia dis to it), which is privative, it signifieth an intermission. Discontinuo nihil aliud significat quam intermittere, desu- scere, interrompere. And as our author saith, [a] it is a very ancient word in law (1).

A discontinuance of estates in lands or tenements is properly (in legall understanding) an alienation made or suffered by tenant in taile, or by any that is seised in auter droit, whereby the issue in taile, or the heire or successor, or those in reversion or remainder, are driven to their action, and cannot enter. (10. Rep. 97.)

All which is implied by the description of our author, and by the (&c.) in the end of this Section.

I have added (properly) by good warrant of our author himselfe, for Section 470. he useth discontinuance for a devesing or displacing of a reversion, though the entrie be not taken away.

This discontinuance consisteth in doing or suffering an act to be done, as hereafter shall appeare. And where our author saith, that it hath divers significations, there is also a discontinuance of proesse consisting in not doing, where the proesse is not continued, concerning which there is an excellent statute made in furtherance of justice in [b] 1. E. 6. and is well expounded in my Reports, and therefore need not here to be inserted. (1. Roll. Abr. 130. 485.)

There is another erroneous proceeding, and that consisteth in misdoing; as when one proesse is awarded instead of another, or when a day is given which is not legall, this is called a miscontinuance, and if the tenant or defendant make default, it is error; but if he appeare, then the miscontinuance is salved, otherwise it is of a discontinuance. But let us returne to the discontinuance of estates in lands, whereof Littleton doth treat in this Chapter.

[b] Vide the Statutes of 1. E. 6. ca. 7. & 31. Eliz. c. 1. lib. 7. f. 30. 31. &c. le case de discontinuance de proces. (1. Sid. 173. 2. Cro. 284.) 39. E. 3. 7. a. 46. E. 3. 30. 37. H. 6. 25. 26. 9. E. 4. 18. 12. E. 4.

Significations. Here (as in many other places) it appeareth how necessary it is to know the signification of words. Vide Sect. 74. 174. 194. 441. 520.

And in this Chapter it appeareth, that when Littleton wrote, the estate in lands and tenements might have bene discontinued five manner of wayes, viz. by feoffment, by fine, by release with warrantie, confirmation with warrantie, and by suffering of a recovery in a præcipe

(1) I. As to discontinuances in general: — In note 1. p. 239. a. it was observed, that in the case of a disseisin, while the possession remains in the disseisor, it is a mere naked possession, unsupported by any right; and that the disseisee may restore his possession, and put a total end to the possession of the disseisor, by an entry on the land, without any previous action; but that, if the disseisor dies, the heir comes to the possession of the estate by a lawful title. It is the same if the disseisor aliens; the alienee comes in by a lawful title. By reason of this lawful title, the heir, in the first instance, and the alienee, in the second, acquires a presumptive right of possession which is so far good even against the person disseised, that he loses by it his right to recover the possession by entry, and can only recover it by an action at law. When the right of entry is thus lost, and the party can only recover by action, the possession is said to be discontinued. This is the general import of the word discontinuance; but, in its usual acceptation, it signifies the effect of alienations made by husbands seised jure uxoris; by ecclesiastics seised jure ecclesie; or by tenants in tail; those being the three instances adduced by Littleton of a discontinuance. But other cases, where the party having the right could not restore his possession by entry, and was therefore left to his remedy by action were also, in Littleton's time, termed discontinuances. Thus, before the statute of the 11. H. 7. c. 20. the alienations of a woman seised of an estate in dower, or of any estate of the gift of her husband, or of any of his ancestors, were said to be a discontinuance; and before the statutes of 32. H. 8. c. 31. and 14. El. c. 8. recoveries suffered by tenants for life, or tenants by the courtsey, or tenants in tail, after possibility of issue extinct, or even by the feoffee of tenant for years, worked a discontinuance. See Sir William Pelham's case, 1. Rep. 14. It is to be observed, that there is a material difference between the situation or title of the alienee of any person whose alienation makes a discontinuance, and the situation or title of the heir or alienee of a disseisor; for the heir and alienee of a disseisor immediately claim under a person coming in by a wrongful title, and their estates, though not defeasible by entry, are immediately defeasible by action. But the alienee of every person, whose alienation is said to be a discontinuance, claims by a person having a lawful estate, and the estate of the alienee is unimpeachable during the life of the discontinuor. It should also be observed, that a discontinuance extends to those cases only, where a person is dispossessed of an estate of freehold; and where, though he has lost his right of entry, he can still recover the possession by action. At the common law, if there was a term for years, and the tenant of the freehold suffered a common recovery by covin, it was a good bar to the termor; for, not having the freehold, he could not falsify the recovery, so that all his term and interest in the land was lost, and his only remedy was an action of covenant against the lessor. His possession, therefore, or rather his interest, was absolutely lost, not merely interrupted. Even after the statutes of Gloucester, and the 21. H. 8. c. 15. which preserved the interest of the termor for years, against a common recovery, as the possession of the termor for years is considered in the law as the possession of him who has the next estate of freehold, the recovery is never said to discontinue the estate of the termor for years; the expression discontinuance being applied solely to those cases where the freehold is divested. The peculiar import of the word discontinuance, where applied to the cases mentioned by Littleton, is shortly, but forcibly expressed by Mont. Houard, who explains the word discontinuance "Interruption du droit, qu'on a sur un fonds, par la præcipe quod reddat. And this was to the prejudice of five kinds of persons, viz. of wives, of heires, of successors, of those in reversion, and of those in remainder. But for wives, and their heires, and for successors, the law is altered by acts of parliament since Littleton wrote, as in this Chapter in their proper places shall appeare.

Sect. 593.

HERE Littleton putteth an example of a discontinuance made by one seised in auter droit, as by an abbot who had a fee simple in the right of his monastery, and therefore his alienation without the assent of his convent had beene a discontinuance at the common law, and had driven his successor to a writ de ingressu sine assensu capituli.

De ingressu sine assensu capituli, &c.

It is called so because the alienation was sine assensu capituli; for if it had beene cum assensu capituli, it should have beene a barre to the successor. And because the successor could not enter, the common law gave him this writ, and is so called of these words contained in the writ, which writ you may read in the Register and Fitzherbert's N. B.

And here is to be noted, that in law the convent, albeit they be regular and dead persons in law, yet are they said in law to be capitulum to the abbot, as well as the deane and chapter, that be secular to the bishop. But it is to be observed and implied in this (&c.) that, a sole body politike that hath the absolute right in them, as an abbot, bishop, and the like, may make a discontinuance; but a corporation aggregate of many, as deane and chapter, warden and chaplaines, master and fellowes, maior and comminaltie, &c. cannot make any discontinuance; for if they joyne, the grant is good; and if the deane, warden, master, or maior make it alone where the body is aggregate of many, it is void, and worketh a disseisin. But now (as hath beene said) by the statute of 27. H. 8. and 31. H. 8. all the abbots, priors, and other religious persons are so dissolved, as there be none remaining this day, and by the statutes of 1. Eliz. and 13. Eliz. cap. 10. and 1. Jac. cap. 3. bishops and all other ecclesiasticall persons are disabled to alien or discontinue any of their ecclesiasticall livings, as by the same acts doth appeare (1).

SICOME un abbe seise de certaine terres ou tenements en fee, et alienast mesmes les terres ou tenements a un auter en fee, ou en fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, et puis l'abbe morust, son successeur ne poit enter en les dits terres ou tenements, coment que il ad droit eux aver come en droit de son meason, mes il est mis a son action de recoverer mesmes les terres ou tenements, quel est appelle, breve de ingressu sine assensu capituli, &c. †

AS if an abbot be seised of certaine lands or tenements in fee, and alieneth the same lands or tenements to another in fee, or in fee taile, or for terme of life, and after the abbot dieth, his successor cannot enter into the said lands or tenements, albeit he hath right to have them as in right of his house, but he is put to his action to recover the same lands or tenements, which is called a writ, breve de ingressu sine assensu capituli, &c.

Registr. Orig. fol. 230.
F. N. B. 195. Bracton li. 4. fol.
323. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 34.

21. E. 4. 86.
(Flo. 536.)
(Ant. 85. a.)
(Post. 341. b.)
(11. Rep. Magdalen College's case.)

See more of this matter hereafter in this chapter Sect. 648. and before Sect. 528.

Sect. 594.

EN droit sa feme, &c. (2) That is to say, in fee simple, fee taile,

ITEM, si home seise de terre come en droit

ALSO, if a man be seised of land as in right of his de

* puis not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

vente qu'un autre chargé de conserver ce droit, en a faite. See Anciennes Loix des Francois, 2 vol. 435. Our doctrine of discontinuance bears some analogy to the doctrine of interruption in the civil law.—There, interruption, when applied to the real property, signifies the ousting of a person from the possession of his land. From that time, he ceases to be the possessor of it; and if he does not renew his possession, but permits the dispossessor to retain it, he absolutely loses his right to it, and the disseisor is said to acquire it by prescription. It is observable, that by the laws of the Twelve Tables, possession during two years formed a prescription for land; one year, for personal estate. Dio. Sic. 20. In 3. Rep. fol. 8. b. 9. a. Lord Coke observes, that the reason why the law will not permit a person who is in by judgment of law, to have his possession disturbed by the disseisor, is, "to take away the multiplicity and infiniteness of suits, trials, recoveries, and judgments in one and the same case; and therefore in the judgment and policy of the law, it was thought more profitable to the commonwealth, and more for the honour of the law, to leave some without remedy, and to put others to their writ of right, without any respect of coverture, &c. than that there should not be any end of actions and suits."

(1) II. As to discontinuances by ecclesiastical persons:—It is generally supposed that ecclesiastical persons were permitted to acquire real estates, as early as the reign of the emperor Constantine. The tenth century is commonly considered as the period when donations to them were most frequent and considerable. Very soon after they were permitted to acquire, they were restrained from alienating their property. See Dec. Gra. Caf. 12. Q. 2. c. 3. Long leases made by ecclesiastical persons, are declared to be null by the Council of Trent, Sess. 25. de Ref. ch. 11. For the learning relating to the leases made by ecclesiastical persons, the editor begs to refer to the much-admired collections on this subject in Bacon's Abr. vol. 3. tit. Leases, supposed to be extracted from a manuscript of Sir Geoffrey Gilbert. It is to be observed, that bishops and abbots were supposed to have the possession in fee, and might therefore alien in fee; but parsons were considered to have no more than a life estate. See Gilb. Ten. 108.

(2) III. As to discontinuances by persons seised jure uxoris:—It is generally supposed that women, by reason of their incapacity to perform military duty, were not originally admitted to succeed to proper fiefs: so that if the fief, by its original constitution, were descendible to the females, it was, upon that very account, ranked among improper fiefs. See Craig. de Jure Feud. 48. 50. 236. Stry. Ex. Jur. Feud. cap. 4. 2. cap. 15. 2. 3. By the Salic law, the females were excluded from succeeding to estates, either lineally or collaterally.—It may not be improper to mention here, that there are two different codes of this law. One of them is supposed to have been collected before christianity was received into France.—The other is of a later date; and appears to be a republication of the former, with considerable alterations, both in substance and phraseology; and with several new regulations supposed to have been made by the princes who filled the throne of that kingdom, after the introduction of christianity.—The former code contains the following clause: "De terra vero Salica in mulierem nulla portio hereditatis transit; sed hoc virilis sexus acquirit; hoc est, filii in hereditate succedunt." In the latter, it is expressed in this manner: "De terra autem Salica, nulla portio hereditatis mu-"

lieri

de sa feme, &c. et wife, &c. and thereof ent enfeoffa un auter, infeoffe another, &c. &c.† et morust, la feme and dieth, the wife ne puit enter, mes est may not enter, but is mis a son action, le- put to her action, the quel est appel, cui in which is called, cui vitâ, &c.*

or for life. Here Littleton putteth another case where a man is seised in auter droit, and may make a discontinuance, as the husband seised in the right of his wife, and therefore the common law gave her a cui in vitâ, and her heire a sur cui in vitâ, because they could not enter. But this is altered since our author wrote, by the statute of 32. H. 8. by the purview of which statute, the wife of her husband may enter into the lands or tenements of the wife, notwithstanding the alienation of her husband.

Bracton lib. 4. f. 202. & 22. & 324. Fleta lib. 5. ca. 34. & 36. F. N. B. 193. Regill. 3a. H. 8. cap. 28.

And here is one of the alienations to make a discontinuance, viz. a feoffment; and where our author speaketh of a husband seised in the right of his wife, so it is where the husband and wife are jointly seised to them and their heires of an estate made during the coverture, and the husband make a feoffment in fee, and dieth, the wife now may enter within that statute, although it was the inheritance of them both. And so it is if the feoffment be made by the husband and wife, (albeit the words of the statute be by the husband only) for in substance this is the act of the husband only. (1)

(1. Roll. Abr. 634. Ant. 187. b.)

If the husband cause a præcipe quod reddat upon a faint title to be brought against him and his wife, and suffereth a recovery without any voucher, and execution to be had against him and his wife, yet this is holpen by the statute; for this by like construction is the act of the husband, and the words of the statute be, made, suffered, or done.

Dier. 4. & 5. Ph. & Marie 146. 3. Eliz. Dier. 191. Lib. 8. fol. 71, 72. Greveleye's case. (9. Rep. 140. a.)

Greveleye's case ubi supra. (2. Inst. 343.)

If the husband make a feoffment in fee of the lands which he holdeth in the right of his wife, and after they are divorced causâ præcontractûs, yet the woman may enter within the purview of that statute, and is not driven to her writ of cui ante divortium, as she was at the common law, albeit the entrie be by the statute given to the wife, and now upon the matter she was never his lawfull wife. But it sufficeth that she was his wife de facto at the time of the alienation, and where her husband dieth she cannot be his wife at the time of the entrie.

(F. N. B. 205. f. 7. Rep. 42. 4. Rep. 29.)

If the husband levie a fine with proclamations, and dieth, the wife must enter or avoid the estate of the confinee within five yeares, or else she is barred for ever by the statute of 4. H. 7. for the statute of 32. H. 8. doth helpe the discontinuance but not the barre; and the statute speaketh of a fine, and not of a fine with proclamations.

6. E. 6. Dier. 72. b.

4. H. 7. c. 24.

If lands be given to the husband and wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, and the husband maketh a feoffment in fee and dieth, the wife is holpen by the said statute, as hath beene said, and so is the issue of both their bodies. Feme tenant in taile taketh husband, the husband maketh a feoffment in fee, the wife before entrie dieth without issue, he in the reversion or remainder may enter. For, first, the reversion or remainder cannot be discontinued in this case, because the estate taile is not discontinued. Secondly, the words of the statute be, shall not be prejudiciall or hurtfull to the wife or her beires, or such as shall have right title or interest by the death of such wife, but that the same wife and her beires, and such other to whom such right shall appertain after her decease, shall or lawfully may enter into all such mannors, lands, &c. according to their rights and titles therein: by which words the entrie of him in the reversion or remainder in that case is preserved. The husband is tenant in taile, the remainder to the wife in taile, the husband make a feoffment in fee; by this the husband by the common law did not only discontinue his owne estate taile, but his wife's remainder: but at this day after the death of the husband without issue, the wife may enter by the said act of 32. H. 8. If the husband hath issue, and maketh a feoffment in fee of his wife's land, and the wife dieth, the heire of the wife shall not enter during the husband's life, neither by the common law nor by the statute.

Greveleye's case ubi supra. Pasch. 7. Jac. (Hob. 261. 9. Rep. 140. Dyer. 224. a. 3. Inst. 216.)

8. E. 2. tit. cui in vitâ 26. 34. E. 1. ibidem 30. 10. E. 3. 12. Dier. 21. Eliz. 363.

Cui in vitâ, &c. Here is also implied a sur cui in vitâ also for the heire. This writ here mentioned in our author is so called of those words contained in the writ, which you may reade in the Register and Fitzherbert's N. B.

Sect.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) But a fine levied both by husband and wife of her lands, is not within the statute; and it operates as a bar to her and her heirs, of all her estate and interest in the land. See 2. Rep. 57. b. 77. b.

"lieri veniat, sed ad virilem sexum tota hæreditas perveniat." But in the course of time, women were admitted, generally, to succeed to all fiefs; and even the Salic law lost all its force, except as to the succession to the crown, in which respect it has been invariably observed from the earliest period of the French monarchy to the present time. This exclusion of females and their descendants from the crown, is now universally agreed to be a fundamental law of that monarchy.—Even in the dispute between Philip Valois and Edward the Third, the validity of the law as to the daughters themselves, was never questioned: the only dispute was, whether it extended to the male descendants of the daughters. Edward the Third contended it did not; but the decision of the assembly, which was held upon this affair, at Paris, and which was composed of the chief nobility, prelates, and burghers of the kingdom, being against him; and the wars which were undertaken in support of his right, proving unfavourable to the English; it is now settled beyond all controversy, that the descendants of the daughters are excluded from the throne of France, as much as the daughters themselves. In consequence of this doctrine, Henry the IVth succeeded to the throne at the distance of twenty-one degrees from his immediate predecessor. See Rapin's Dissertation on the Salic Law, and Le Brun Traité des Successions, l. 2. c. 2. §. 2.—This exclusion from the throne of France did not prevent women succeeding there to every other dignity, so as even to become peers of France. Many instances are upon record of their personally presiding in their own courts, even over judicial combats; of their being summoned to, and sitting in, the court of peers; and, what is considered as the highest of honours, of their assisting as peers at the consecration of the king. Thus Mahaut, the countess of Artois, assisted not only at the trial of Robert of Flanders, but at the ceremony of the coronation of Philip the Long, and with the other peers supported his crown. So, in England the celebrated Ann countess of Pembroke Dorset and Montgomery had the office of hereditary sheriff of Westmoreland, and exercised it in person. At the assizes at Appleby, she sat with the judges on the bench. The reader will find the revolutions in the laws and usages of France, in this respect, stated with the most consummate learning and perspicuity by the Chancellor D'Aguesseau (then Attorney-General) in his pleading in the great cause of the Duke of Luxemburg, tom. 3. p. 643. and in his Requête sur la Mouvance du Comté de Soissons, tom. 6. p. 1. & Observations sur les Pairies, tom. 7. p. 598. Procès verbal de ce que s'est passé au Parlement de Paris en 1716, au sujet d'un accusation de duel, intentée par le Procureur-général du Roi contre un Pair de France, qui n'avoit pas encore été reçu en Parlement. lb. 616. and see also Droit Public de la France, par Monsr. Bouquet, p. 332. The cause of the Duke of Luxemburg gave rise to the edict of 1711. By that edict it was declared, that in the letters for the erection of peerages, whether granted before that time, or to be granted afterwards, the words heirs and successors should only comprise male children, descended from him in whose favour the peerage was first erected, and males descended from males, without the intervention of a female: That those clauses, which expressly comprised females, should be considered as having a condition annexed to them, that the female becoming entitled under them, should marry no person without the consent of the king, signified by letters patent addressed to the parliament of Paris: That in these letters patent the peerage should be confirmed to the husband, and his male descendants; and that the peer in whose favour the peerage of his wife

Sect. 595.

ENFEOFFA un auter, &c.

Here is implied, or make a gift in taile or an estate for life. Here Littleton putteth a third example of a discontinuance made by tenant in taile so as his issue is put to his formedon in the descender, which is given to the issue in taile by the statute of 13. E. 1. cap. 1. because he cannot enter.

Tenant en taile.

This extendeth as well to a woman tenant in taile as to a man, and was generally good law when Littleton wrote; but now by the statute of

ITEM, si tenant en taile de certaine

terre ent enfeoffa un auter, &c. et ad issue et morust, son issue ne poit pas enter en la terre, coment que il ad title et droit a ceo, mes est mis a son action, que est appellee formedon en le descender, &c.

ALSO, if tenant in taile of certaine land thereof enfeoffe another, &c. and hath issue and dieth, his issue may not enter into the land, albeit he hath title and right to this, but is put to his action, which is called a formedon in le descender, &c. (1)

Fleta lib. 5. cap. 34.
F. N. B. 211, 212. Regist.
(4. Rep. 3. b.
Poll. 363. b.)

[d] 11. H. 7. ca. 20.
Vide Sect. 697.
(3. Cro. 244.
1. Rep. 102. b.
3. Rep. Lin. Coll. Case.
10. Rep. 39. b. 6. Rep. 9. b.
Bend. 40. Hob. 332. Jo. 31.
Cro. El. 2.)

[e] Lib. 3. fol. 50, 51. Sir George Browne's case eodem lib. fol. 60, &c. Linc. Coll. case. Lib. 1.
fol. 176. Mldemay's case.
Dier. 3. & 4. Ph. & Mar. 146.
Idem, 8 Eliz. 248. 17. Eliz.
340. Idem 19. Eliz. 354.
Idem 20. Eliz. 362. 27. H. 8. 23.
Lib. 5. fol. 79. Fitzh. case.
Lib. 8. fol. 71, 72. Greveley's
case.
(F. N. B. 211. 217.
8. Rep. 88.)

[a] 4. E. 3. 38. 43. E. 3. 25.
4. E. 4. 25. F. N. B. 124.
[b] 2. E. 2. Droit. 28.
[c] F. N. B. 123.
[d] 21. E. 3. 11. 5. E. 3. 23.
11. H. 4. 49.
[e] 2. E. 3. Droit. 28. 13. H. 7.
24. 5. E. 4. 2. 20. E. 3. Avow-rie 131. F. N. B. 10. 46. E. 3.
tit. Cui in vita, 33.

[d] 11. H. 7. if the woman hath any estate in taile joyntly with her husband, or only to her selfe or to her use in any lands or hereditaments of the inheritance or purchase of her husband, or given to the husband and wife in taile by any of the ancestors of the husband, or by any other person seised to the use of the husband or his ancestors, and shall hereafter being sole or with any other after taken husband discontinue, &c. the same; every such discontinuance shall be void; and that it shall be lawfull for every person to whom the interest, title, or inheritance, after the decease of the said woman should appertain, to enter, &c. So as if such a feme tenant in taile doe make any discontinuance in fee, in taile, or for life, although it be without warrantie, yet this doth not take away the entry after her death, either of the issue or of him in reversion or remainder. This statute hath bene excellently expounded by divers resolutions and judgements [e] which I have quoted in the margin, and are worthy of due observation.

If lands were entailed to a man and to his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies, and the husband had made a feoffment in fee and died, and then the wife died, this had bene a discontinuance at the common law: for the title of the issue is as heire of both their bodies, and not as heire to any one of them, and his entrie must ensue his title or action.

De formedon, De forma donationis. so called because the writ doth comprehend the forme of the gift. And there be three kinde of writs of formedon, viz. The first in the descender to be brought by the issue in taile, which claime by descent per formam doni. The second is in the reverter, which lieth for him in the reversion or his heires or assignes after the state taile be spent. The third is the remainder, which the law giveth to him in the remainder, his heires or assignes, after the determination of the estate taile; of all which you may read in the Register and F. N. B.

Here Littleton sheweth that the issue in taile shall have a formedon in the descender. What other actions tenant in taile may have, and not have, is good to be seene.

[a] Tenant in taile shall have a quod permittat.

[b] Tenant in taile shall have a writ of customs and services in le debet, et solet, but shall not have it in the debet only.

[c] In like manner he shall have a sesta ad molendinum in le debet et solet, but not in the debet tantum.

[d] Tenant in taile shall have a writ of entre in consimili casu and an admesurement, and a nativo habendo, cessavit, ischeat, waste, and the like.

[e] But tenant in taile shall not have a writ of right sur disclaymer, nor a quo jure, nor a ne injuste vexes, nor a nuper obiit, or rationabile parte, nor a mordancester, nor a sur cui in vita; for these and the like, none but tenant in fee shall have: and the highest writ that a tenant in taile can have is a formedon.

Sect.

wife was thus confirmed, should take his rank only from the day of his reception in parliament, under the letters patent. In the same manner the duchy and peerage of Aubigny was granted in 1684, to the duchess of Portsmouth, the duke of Richmond her son, and his heirs male; but the letters patent by which this grant was made, were not registered; for want of which, though the title of duke of Aubigny had always been admitted by the court of France, and the dukes and duchesses of Richmond had always been allowed at Versailles the honours attached to that dignity, the peerage was not admitted by the parliament. In 1779, his grace the present duke of Richmond obtained letters patent, confirming those of 1684, but with a clause, that neither his grace, nor any of the heirs male of his grandfather, the first duke of Richmond, should be received in parliament, until the possessor should be of the religion, and reside in the kingdom of France; and that the rank of the peerage should take place from the date of the reception. These last letters patent have been duly registered; but his grace's rank and precedence will not begin till his reception. In the mean time, the registry of the peerage in parliament is a recognition of it, and entitles his grace to all the other advantages, honours, and privileges annexed to the dignity. These, when the estate is considerable, are of very great importance. There are in France other peers, whose ancestors have neglected to be received in parliament, and who, being unwilling to take a rank lower than that which the date of their peerage would give them, decline to be received there now. It is said the duc de Bouillon, the duc d'Elbeuf, the duc de Montbazou, and the duc de Valentinois, are in this predicament. Some of them claim to be older than the duc de Uzer, who, by his ancestors having been first received, is now, in fact, the first duke in France. — Both in England and in France, females originally communicated their titles and dignities to their husbands. Many instances of this are to be found in the arguments on the claim of Mr. Bertie to the barony of Willoughby. But this has long since ceased; and we may apply to this circumstance the remark contained in the former part of this work, respecting courtesy in titles of honour, that from the late creations by which women have been made peeresses in order that the issue of their husbands might have titles, yet the husbands themselves continue commoners, it seems that this right in women to communicate peerages to their husbands is considered as extinct. See ant. 296. not. 1. — But though, by our law, a woman does not now communicate her rank or titles of honour to her husband, yet the freehold, or the right of possession, of all her lands of inheritance, vests in him immediately upon the marriage, the right of property still being preserved to her. 1 Inst. 351. a. 273. b. And see Pothier Traité des Fiefs, vol. 1. p. 123. This estate he may convey to another. An incorrect statement in the book called Cases in Equity, during the time of lord Talbot, fol. 167. of what was delivered by his lordship in the case of Robinson v. Cummins, seems to have given rise to a notion that the husband could not make a tenant to the praepice of his wife's estate, for the purpose of suffering a common recovery of it, without the wife's previously joining in a fine; but it now seems to be a settled point that he can. Mr. Cruise, in his Essay upon Recoveries, p. 38. has given an accurate state of lord Talbot's observations upon this subject, which, in substance and almost in words, is agreeable to a manuscript report of the same case, in the possession of the editor. The same must be concluded from general reasoning. — For the interest which the husband takes in his wife's chattels, real and personal, see ant. 300. a.

(1) IV. As to discontinuances by tenants in tail with respect to their issue: — It is to be observed, that though the estate of the tenant in tail, as to his right of possession, or rather as to his beneficial property in the lands, has only a duration for the term of his

Sect. 596.

*ITEM, si soit tenant en le taile, le reversion esleant al doner et a ses beires, si le tenant fait feoffment, * &c. et morust sans issue, ce-luy en le reversion ne poit enter, mes est mis a son action de formedon en le reverter †.*

ALSO, if there bee tenant in taile, the reversion being to the doner and his heires, if the tenant make a feoffment, &c. and die without issue, hee in the reversion cannot enter, but is put to his action of formedon in le reverter (1).

FAIT feoffment, (F. N. B. 215.)

&c. Here is implied fee simple, fee taile, or estate for life; and in this and the next Section Littleton putteth two cases, where if the issues in taile faile, they in the reversion and remainder are driven to their formedon in reversion or remainder; and this remaineth as it was when Littleton wrote, not altered by any statute. And the reason whereof these alienations in the severall cases in this and the next Section doe make a discontinuance, and put him in the reversion or remainder that right had to his action, and tooke away his entry, was, for that he was privy in estate, and for the benefit of the purchaser, and for the safeguard of his warrantie, so as every man's right might be preserved, viz. to the demandant for his ancient right, and to the feoffee for the benefit of his warrantie, which was founded upon great reason and equitie: which benefit of the warrantie should be prevented and avoided if the entrie of him that right had were lawfull, and thereby also the danger that many times happeneth by taking of possessions was warily prevented by law. But then it may be demanded, seeing that there was no reversion or remainder expectant upon any estate taile at the common law, nor the issue in taile had any remedy by the common law, if the tenant in taile had aliened, then by what law is the alienation of tenant in taile a discontinuance at this day to the issue in taile, or to him in reversion or remainder? Whereunto it is thus answered,

Vide Sect. 592. 597. 601. 637, 638.

(F. N. B. 217. b.)
(5. Rep. 3.)

30. E. 1. Formedon 65. 19. E. 2. Formedon 61. 18. E. 3. 46.
12. E. 4. 3.
(Cro. Car. 405.)
(1. Roll. Abr. 632.)
(Post. 356. a.)
(Sid. 83.)
(Ant. 301.)

Sect. 597.

EN mesme le manner est, lou tenant en le taile ‡ seise de certaine terre dont le remainder est a un autre en le taile, ou a un autre en fee. Si le tenant en le taile alienast en fee, ou en fee taile, || et puis deviait sans issue, ceux en le remainder ne poient enter, mes sont mis a leur briefe de formedon en le remainder, &c. et pur ceo que per force de tielx feoffments et alyenations en les cases avant-dits, et en semblables § cases, ceux queux ont title et droit apres la mort de tiel feoffour ou alienour ne poient pas enter, mes sont mises a leur actions, ut supra; et pur ceo cause tiels feoffments et alienations sont appels discontinuances.

IN the same manner is it, where tenant in taile is seised of certain land whereof the remainder is to another in taile, or to another in fee. If the tenant in taile alien in fee, or in fee taile, and after die without issue, they in the remainder may not enter, but are put to their writ of formedon in the remainder, &c. (2) and for that that by force of such feoffments and alienations in the cases aforesaid, and the like cases, they that have title and right after the death of such a feoffor or alienor may not enter, but are put to their actions, ut supra; and for this cause such feoffments and alienations are called discontinuances.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ seise not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

§ auters added L. and M. and Roh.

his life, only; yet, in the eye of the law, he is considered as seised of an estate of inheritance. To understand this, it should be remembered, that, in the case of a fee simple conditional at common law, the condition, from which that estate took its appellation, did not suspend the fee from vesting in the donee, immediately by the gift. Thus, we find, that, if he aliened before he had issue, it not only was no forfeiture, but, if afterwards he had issue, it was a bar to them. See Plo. 239. 2. Inst. 333. But the condition, though it did not prevent the fee from vesting in the donee, suspended his power of alienation. To that power it was considered to be a condition precedent, that the donee should have issue born. The statute extinguished the power; but did not affect the estate of the feodatory, in any other respect: so that a tenant in tail was as much seised of the inheritance, after the statute de donis, as a tenant in fee simple conditional was, before it. Hence, if he made a feoffment, it did not, during his life, affect or prejudice the issue. Thus his alienation was, primarily, a lawful transfer of the freehold; the alienee came in by right; and his estate could not be impeached, during the life of the donee. In conformity to the established rule of the common law, that whenever any person acquired a presumptive right of possession, his possession was not to be defeated by entry, however slender or unlawful the title of the grantor himself might be, the statute de donis did not absolutely nullify the alienations of the donee in tail, but enabled the issue to defeat them by the formedon in the descender.—It is generally said that the writ of mortd'ancestor was the only remedy, at the common law, for the issue, against the alienations of his ancestor, and that the formedon did not lie, till the statute de donis. This must be understood with the two following qualifications. 1st, A writ of mortd'ancestor could certainly be maintained against an abator; but, as one of the three points in that writ, to be enquired of by a jury, was, si pater vel mater fuit seifistus, or seifista, in dominico suo ut de fado, die quo obiit, it could not be maintained against a disseisor. See Booth 207. 2d. In one case, a formedon was certainly admitted at the common law; that was, when a man had issue a son, and his wife died, and he afterwards took another wife, and land was given to him and his second wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and there was issue of that marriage, and both the wife and the father died, and a stranger abated; there, the issue of the second marriage could not maintain a writ of mortd'ancestor; for one part of the writ is to enquire, si petens sit propinquior heres, to which description no issue of the second venter could answer, while there was a son of the first venter. See Plo. 239. Ant. 196.

(1) V. As to alienations by tenants in tail, with respect to the reversioner:—Upon the death of tenant in fee simple conditional, if the estate was withheld from the reversioner, either by the alienee of the tenant in tail, or by an abator, the reversioner was entitled, at the common law, to a formedon in the reverter. It has been observed before, that if tenant in fee-simple conditional at the common law aliened before he had issue, and afterwards had issue, the issue was barred by the alienation; but it does not seem clear whether the alienation in that case barred the reversioner. See Plo. 235. Ant. 19.—In general, when the issue in tail aliened, it was with warranty; in that case, the warranty descended upon the issue in tail, and therefore prevented his claiming against the alienation of his ancestor. But nothing of this nature could be opposed to the reversioner.

(2) VI. As to discontinuances by tenants in tail, with respect to those in remainder:—It has been observed before, that all estates of inheritance were, at common law, either fees simple absolute, or fees simple conditional; and that tenants in fee simple conditional were, swered, that it is provided by the statute of W. 2. ca. 1. De donis conditionalibus, quod non habeant illi quibus tenementum sic fuerit datum potestatem alienandi, &c. Upon these words the fages of the law have construed the said Act according to the rule and reason of the common law, and that in divers and sundry variable manners. For some alienations of tenant in taile, they have adjudged voydable by the issue in taile by action only: some at the election of the issue in taile to avoid it by action, entry, or claime: some are meere void by the death of the tenant in taile: which severall constructions were made upon the selfe-same words aforesaid.

18. E. 3. 12. 19. E. 3. Bre. 468.
24. E. 3. 28. 36. Aff. 8. 12. R. 2.
Discon. 50. 5. E. 4. 3. 4. H. 7. 17.
33. E. 3. Formdon, 47. & 13. H. 7.
Pl. Com. 426. Smith & Staple-
ton's case.

(3. Rep. 85.)

(1. Leo. 66.)

(Plo. 437.)

As for example, If tenant in taile make a feoffment in fee, this drives the issue in taile to his action, which is called in law a Discontinuance; and this construction was made, for that at the common law the feoffment of an abbot or bishop, or of the husband seised in the right of his wife, did worke a discontinuance, and did drive the successor and the wife to their action, and foreclosed them of their entrie: and as the entrie of the issue was taken away, so consequently of them in reversion and remainder. Also if an abbot, bishop, or husband in the right of his wife, seised of a rent, or of any other inheritance that lieth in grant, had aliened, it was in the election of the successor or wife after the death of her husband to claime the rent, &c. or to bring an action, for that alienation did not worke a discontinuance; and so it is by construction in case of tenant in taile. Lastly, if the abbot, bishop, or husband, had granted a rent newly created out of the land, &c. to another in fee, this had utterly ceased by their death; and so it is also by construction in case of tenant in taile. So as these words (non habent potestatem alienandi) doe worke these effects, viz. as to lands, that a feoffment barreth not the issue, &c. of his action, but worketh a discontinuance to barre him of his entrie: as to rents or any thing in esse, that lie in grant, that the said words doe take away his power to make any discontinuance: as to rents, &c. newly created, that they take away his power to make them to continue longer than during his life.

But there is a diversitie betweene an alienation working a discontinuance of an estate which taketh away an entrie, and an alienation working, divesting or displacing of estates which taketh away no entrie. As if there be tenant for life, the remainder to A. in taile, the remainder to B. in fee, if tenant for life doth alien in fee, this doth divest and displace the remainders, but worketh no discontinuance. And therein it is to be observed, that to everie discontinuance there is necessary a divesting, or displacing of the estate, and turning the same to a right: for if it be not turned to a right, they that have the estate cannot be driven to an action. And that is the reason that such inheritances as lie in grant, cannot by grant be discontinued, because such a grant divesteth no estate, but passeth onely that which he may lawfully grant, and so the estate itselfe doth descend, revert, or remaine, as shall be said hereafter in this Chapter.

A. maketh a gift in taile to B. who maketh a gift in taile to C. C. maketh a feoffment in fee and dieth without issue, B. hath issue and dieth, the issue of B. shall enter; for albeit the feoffment of C. did discontinue the reversion of the fee simple which B. hath gained upon the estate taile made to C. yet could it not discontinue the right of intaile which B. had, which was discontinued before: and therefore when C. died without issue, then did the discontinuance of the estate taile of B. which passed by his liverie, cease, and consequently the entrie of the issue of B. lawfull; which case may open the reason of many other cases.

Also note, that a discontinuance made by the husband, did take away the entrie only of the wife and her heires by the common law, and not of any other which claimed by title paramount above the discontinuance. As if lands had beene given to the husband and wife, and to a third person, and to their heires, and the husband had made a feoffment in fee, this had beene a discontinuance of the one moitie, and a disseisin of the other moitie: if the husband had died, and then the wife had died, the survivor should have entred into the whole, for hee claimed not under the discontinuance, but by title paramount from the first feoffor; and seeing the right by law doth survive, the law doth give him a remedie to take advantage thereof by entry, for other remedie for that moitie he could not have.

Fee, ou fee taile. And so it is of an estate for life.

Sect. 598.

I T E M, si tenant en taile ALSO, if tenant in taile be dis-soit disseisie, et il releffa per feised, and he release by his son

were, after the birth of issue, permitted to alien the fee, upon a supposition, that, by the birth of issue, the condition was performed. The statute de donis declares this to be manifestly contrary to the form and intent of the gift, and therefore requires, that from thenceforth the will and intent of the donor should be observed, and the fee revert to him, for want of issue. This statute did not create any new estate, but, by disaffirming the supposed performance of the condition, preserved the fee to the issue, while there were issue to take it, and the reversion to the donor, when the issue failed. An estate of inheritance therefore remained in the donee; but only a particular description of heirs being intitled to take under it, it received the appellation of an estate tail, that is, an estate docked, cut off, or abridged, in contradistinction from the estate of fee simple absolute, which remained in the donor. Wright's Tenures, 186. Plo. 251. The expression estate tail does not occur in the statute de donis; but it is to be found in a statute of the same year. See Stat. West. cap. 4. The statute de donis, by thus securing the reversion to the donor, produced another material alteration in the law. For, by the common law, no remainder could be limited upon, or after, an estate in fee simple absolute or conditional; but when estates in fee simple conditional were reduced to estates tail, remainders after them were permitted: and by analogy to what was done for the issue and the reversioner, a formdon in the remainder was given to the remainder-man;—not, however, expressly, but by inference.—For the remainder-man after an estate tail being by the discontinuance in the same mischief with the issue or the reversioner in tail, an equitable construction of the statute brought him within the like remedy.—Five years after the enacting of the statute de donis, the statute quia emptores terrarum was passed; by which all persons were enabled to dispose of their lands; but the feoffees were to hold them immediately of the chief lord. Upon this statute, the courts took the following distinction, with respect to estates tail, and other particular estates; that, where a person seised in fee granted for life, or in tail, reserving the reversion to himself, the grantees of the particular estates held of the reversioner, and he of the chief lord: but, where a person granted for life, or in tail, with the remainder over in fee, both the tenants of the particular estates, and the remainder-man, held of the chief lord. 2. Inst. 505.—Care must be taken to distinguish between a remainder limited after an estate tail, and a conditional, or contingent use, limited upon, or after such an estate. See page 203. b. note 1. and page 274. a. continuation of note 1. 271. b.—There are few occasions where greater nicety, or skill, is required, in limiting uses of this kind, than in the two following cases.—The first is, when a person, being seised of two estates, wishes to raise two families; and with this view intends that one of the estates (which shall be called here, the family estate) shall be settled on his eldest son and his issue; and for want of such issue, on his younger sons, successively, and their respective issue; and, that the other estate (which shall be called here the second estate) shall be settled on his second son, and his issue; and for want of such issue, on his other subsequent sons, successively, and their respective issue. In this case, by the death of the eldest son without issue, the family estate would descend on the second son, or his issue. This union of the two estates would effectually defeat the settlor's intention. To guard against it, therefore, it is necessary to provide, that, if by the death of the first son, and failure of issue of his body, the family estate descends upon the second son, or any other younger son, or any issue of their bodies; the second estate shall, in that case, shift from the person upon whom the family estate descends, to the person next in remainder.—The other case is, when a person limits his estate in strict settlement, with an injunction that the several persons taking under the settlement shall use his name and bear his arms. These being cases of difficulty; the rules of law respecting them not having been settled till lately; and the forms for carrying them into execution being in general very imperfect; the following observations, it is imagined, may be properly introduced here.—1st, As to clauses for shifting the second estate, on the accession of the family estate. From what has been said before, it is clear, that the provisos and injunctions, in these cases, are shifting or secondary son fait a le disseisor et a ses beires tout le droit lequel il ad en mesme les tenements, ceo n'est pas discontinuance, pur ceo que rien de droit passa al disseisor forsque pur terme de vie del tenant en le taile que fist le release, &c.

deed to the disseisor and to his heires all the right which he hath in the same tenements, this is no discontinuance, for that nothing of the right passeth to the disseisor, but for terme of the life of tenant in taile which made the release, &c.

Sect. 599.

MES per feoffment del tenant en le taile, fee simple passa per mesme le feoffement per force de liverie de seisin, &c.

BUT by the feoffment of tenant in taile, fee simple passeth by the same feoffment by force of the liverie of seisin, &c. (2. Rep. 31.)

Sect. 600.

MES per force d'un release rien passera forsque le droit que il poet loyalment et droituralement releffer, sans leyde ou damage as auters persons queux ent averont droit apres son decease, &c. Issint il est graund diversity perenter un feoffement d'un tenant en le taile, et un release fait per tenant en le taile.

BUT by force of a release nothing shall passe but the right which he may lawfully and rightfully release, without hurt or damage to other persons who shall have right therein after his decease, &c. So there is great diversity betweene a feoffment of tenant in taile, and a release made by tenant in taile.

OUR author having put examples of estates passing by transmutation of an estate and possession, doth in this and the two Sections following put a diversity betweene a feoffment and a release or confirmation of a bare right: for it is a rule in law, that the disseisee or any other that hath a right only by his release or confirmation, cannot make any discontinuance, because nothing can passe thereby but that which may lawfully passe: But otherwise it is of a feoffment in respect of the liverie of seisin, for that it is the most solemn and common assurance in the country, and to be maintained for the common quiet of the realme: and by the feoffment the freehold (which is so much esteemed in law) doth passe by open liverie to the feoffee, and by the release a bare right.

Sect. 601.

MES il est dit, que si le tenant en taile en cest cas releffa a son disseisor, et oblige luy et ses beires

BUT it is said, that if the tenant in taile in this case release to his disseisor, and bind him and his heires to warrant

THE reason why the addition of the warrantie in this case maketh a discontinuance, is that which hath been said, viz. If the issue in taile should enter, the warrantie (which is so much favoured in law) should

3. H. 4. 9. 22. R. 2. Discon. 50. 12. E. 4. 11. 21. H. 7. 9. 43. E. 3. 8. 15. E. 4. tit. Discon. 30. Vi. Sect. 596. 602. 637. 658. (3. Rep. 85.) (Post. 632, 633.)

secondary uses; and the point now before us presents us with a curious and striking view of the gradual progress of the doctrines of our courts respecting them.—One of the most remarkable adjudications on this subject is the duke of Norfolk's case; 3d. Ca. in Cha. The case there was, that Henry earl of Arundel conveyed his estates to the use of himself for his life; and, after his decease, to the use of trustees for 200 years; and, after the expiration of that term, to the use of Henry Howard, his second son, in tail male; remainder to Charles Howard, and his other subsequent sons, successively, in tail male; with a declaration that the term of 200 years was limited in trust to attend the inheritance, so long as Thomas Howard, the settlor's eldest son, or any issue male of his body, should live; but with a proviso, that if by his death without issue male living at his decease, or by a subsequent failure of that issue male, the earldom of Arundel should descend on the second son, then the trust should cease as to the second son, and the heirs male of his body; and the trust should then be, for the benefit of the third son, and the heirs male of his body. The eldest son died without issue, in the life-time of the second son; upon this, the difficulty arose. The question was, whether the executory trust for the benefit of the third son was not too remote? It is clear, that the event upon which the trust was to take effect for the benefit of the third son, must, if it took place at all, necessarily take place within the compass of one life; it being, that by event of the death and failure of issue of the first son in the second son's life-time, the second son should become intitled to the earldom of Arundel. The law upon this head is, now, so clearly settled, that if a settlement were to be made now to this effect, all the parties interested would immediately acquiesce in it. But it was then a point so much questioned, that few cases have been heard in the courts, either of law or equity, in which there has been a greater difference of opinion. Lord Nottingham, before whom it was heard, was assisted by the three chief justices. His lordship held the trust to be good. But the three chief justices differed from his lordship; and his lordship's decree was afterwards reversed by lord keeper North: but the House of Lords, on appeal, reversed the reversal; and affirmed lord Nottingham's decree. Thus, by this case, it was solemnly adjudged, that an executory trust of a term of years was good, if so framed as to take effect within the compass of one life in being. This reasoning extended by analogy, to executory devises of legal estates; and to all shifting and secondary uses, whether created by deed, or will.—The next advance in limitations of this nature was to extend them to a period within the compass of one or more life or lives in being, and twenty-one years after. Upon this principle was determined the case of Lloyd v. Carew, Prec. in Cha. 72. Show. Cases in Par. 137. In most cases, till within these thirty years, the clauses in deeds or wills by which these purposes were intended to be effected were framed upon this plan; so that the event upon which the estate limited to the second son was to shift from him and his issue to the subsequent sons and their issue, viz. the accession of the family estate, was confined to the contingency of its happening within the above period of one or more life or lives in being, and twenty-one years. Afterwards, as it was observed that a common recovery suffered by tenant in tail barred all limitations subsequent or collateral to his estate, it was concluded, that there was no necessity to confine the event, upon which the estate was to shift, to any particular period of time; and therefore it is now usual to express it generally, that if any of the younger sons, or of the heirs male of their bodies, shall come into possession of the should be destroyed: and therefore to the end that if assets in fee simple doe descend, he to whom the release is made, may plead the same, and barre the demandant: by which meanes all rights and advantages are saved. And that I may note it once for all, an (il est dit) agarrantie, et morust, et cest garrantie descendist a son issue, † ceo est discontinuance per cause de le garrantie ‡.*

tie, and dieth, and this warrantie descend to his issue, this is a discontinuance, by reason of the warrantie.

with Littleton, is as good as a concessum in a booke case.

Sect. 602.

MES si un home ad issue fits per sa feme, et sa feme morust, et puis il prent auter feme, et tenements sont dones a luy et a sa second feme, et a les heires de leur deux corps engendres, et ils ont issue un auter fits, et le second feme morust, et puis le tenant en le taile est disseisie, et il releffa al disseisor tout son droit, &c. et oblige luy et ses heires a le garrantie, &c. et devia, ceo n'est pas discontinuance al issue en le taile per le second feme, mes il poit bien enter, § pur ceo que le garrantie descendist a son eigne frere que son pier avoit per le primer feme ||, &c.

BUT if a man hath issue a sonne by his wife, and his wife dieth, and after hee taketh another wife, and tenements are given to him and to his second wife, and to the heires of their two bodies engendred, and they have issue another sonne, and the second wife dieth, and after the tenant in taile is disseised, and hee release to the disseisor all his right, &c. and bind him and his heires to warrantie, &c. and die, this is no discontinuance to the issue in taile by the second wife, but he may well enter, for that the warrantie descendeth to his elder brother which his father had by the first wife, &c.

Sect. 603.

EN mesme le manner est, loutenements sont descendable a le fits puisne solonques le custome de Burgh English, queux sont entayles, &c. et le tenant en le taile ad deux fits, et est disseisie, et il releffa a son disseisor tout son droit ove garrantie, &c. et morust, le puisne fits poit enter sur le disseisor, nient obstant le garrantie, pur ceo que le garrantie descendist al eigne fits: car tous foits le garrantie

IN the same manner is it, where lands are descendible to the youngest sonne after the custome of Burrough-English, which are entayled, &c. and the tenaunt in taile hath two sonnes, and is disseised, and he releaseth to his disseisor all his right with warrantie, &c. and dieth, the younger sonne may enter upon the disseisor, notwithstanding the warranty, for that the warrantie descendeth to the elder son: for alwayes the warrantie

(8. Rep. 86.)

* &c. added L. M. and Roh.

§ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† donques added L. and M. and Roh.

|| &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

the family estate, (without limiting the period, when this happens, to any particular time) the second estate shall shift from the person so becoming intitled to the family estate, and go to the persons next intitled in remainder. An instance of this kind may be seen in an act of parliament, passed in the year 1758, intituled, "an act to enable Charles Bagot, now called Charles Chester, and his sons, to take the surname of Chester." 2dly, As to clauses injoining persons, to whom estates are limited in strict settlement, to take the name and use the arms of the settlor. This, in some respects, is nicer than the former clause; because, in the former clause, the intention of the settlor generally is, that the second estate, upon the accession of the family estate, shall pass, not only from the person himself upon whom the family estate descends, but from his issue; but, in the case now under consideration, it generally is not the intention of the settlor, that the issue shall be prejudiced by the non-compliance of his parent with the condition or requisition annexed to his estate. Now suppose an estate is limited to A. for life, remainder to trustees and their heirs, during his life, to preserve the contingent remainders; remainder to A.'s sons successively in tail male, with a proviso, enjoining A. and his sons, and the heirs male of their bodies, when they become seised in possession of the estate, to take the name and bear the arms of the settlor, otherwise the estates limited to them to determine: in this case, if A. the first taker, should not comply with the condition or requisition annexed to his estate, before the birth of a son, his estate would determine, and the contingent remainders limited to his sons would either be void, or be preserved by the limitation to the trustees. The former would be intirely contrary to the intention of the settlor; the latter also would be contrary to his intention, so far, as by the words usually inserted in limitations of this nature, the person refusing to comply with the condition, would be intitled to the rents of the estate during his life; and, if those words were not inserted, the rents, being undisposed of, would belong to the heir at law of the settlor. To prevent this, it is proper to direct, that the trustees for preserving the contingent remainders shall, after the ceffer or determination of the estate for life, and during the suspence and contingency of the then next expectant remainder, stand and be seised of the estate limited to them; in the first place, to preserve the contingent remainders till they come in esse; and in the next place, during the suspence of such remainder, upon trust to pay the rents to those, who would be entitled to the estate, if the persons taking under the contingent remainders then in suspence were dead. It may not, perhaps, be unacceptable to the reader to be presented with the following clauses, in which all the above circumstances seem to be attended to. It must be supposed, that the estate is previously limited to A. (a feme sole) for her life, with a power to limit a rent-charge to any person whom she may marry, for his life: with a limitation to C. and D. and their heirs during her life, to preserve the contingent remainders; remainder to her sons successively in tail male; remainder to her daughters, as tenants in common in tail, with cross remainders in tail between them; with several remainders over: then the proviso in question immediately follows: "Provided always, and it is hereby agreed and declared

"between tie descendera a celuy que est heire rantie shall descend to him who is per le common ley. heire by the common law.

BY these two examples in this and the Section next following, it appeareth that a warrantie being added to a release or confirmation, and descending upon him that right hath to the lands, maketh a discontinuance; otherwise it is out of the reason of the law, and worketh no discontinuance, if the warrantie descendeth upon another.

Ove garrantie, &c. Here is implied that he doth binde him and his heires to warrant to the releasce and his heires.

Touts foits le garrantie descendist sur le heire al common ley. This is a maxime of the common law, and hereof more shall be said in the Chapter of Warrantie, Sectiones 718, 735, 736, 737. so as it is not the warrantie only that maketh a discontinuance, but the warrantie and the discent upon him that right hath together. 13. H. 4. Garrantie 94.
19. R. 2. Garrantie 100.
(10ft. 376. 1.)

Sect. 604.

ITEM, si un abbe soit disseise, et il releffa a le disseisor ALSO, if an abbot bee disseised, and hee releaseth to the disseisor with warrantie, this is no discontinuance to his successor, because nothing passeth by this release but the right which hee hath during the time that he is abbot, and the warrantie is expired by his privation, or by his death.

THE reason hereof yeeld ed by Littleton is, for that the warrantie is expired by his privation or death. (3. Rep. 73.)

Per son privation, ou per sa mort. Note, that privation is here resembled to death, and so is translation also. Wherein this diversitie is worthy of observation, that when a bishop, &c. make an estate, lease, grant of a rent-charge, warranty, or any other act which may tend to the diminution of the revenues of the bishopricke, &c. which should maintain the successor, there the privation or translation of the bishop, &c. is all one with his death. But where the bishop is patron and ordinary, and confirmeth a lease made by the parson without the deane and chapter, and after the parson dieth, and the bishop collateth another, and then is translated, yet his confirmation remaineth good; for the revenues that are to maintain the successor are not thereby diminished. And the like diversitie doth hold in case of resignation, notwithstanding [m] the authoritie to the contrary.

Vide 29. E. 3. 16.
(Ant. 300. b.)
(Dyer 356.)

[m] 29. E. 3. 16. tit. garrant. 99.

Sect. 605.

ITEM, si home seise en droit sa feme est disseise, et il releffa, &c. ove garrantie, ceo n'est pas discontinuance a la feme, si el survesquist son baron, mes que el poit enter, &c. ALSO, if a man seised in the right of his wife be disseised, and he releaseth, &c. with warrantie, this is no discontinuance to the wife, if shee surviveth her husband, but that she may enter, &c. Causa patet.

THIS is evident, unlesse the wife be heire to the husband (as by law she may be), and then it is a discontinuance for the cause aforesaid.

Sect.

"between and by the parties to these presents, that the person or persons whom the said A. shall marry; and every person who by virtue of the limitations hereinbefore contained, or of this proviso, or of the proviso next hereinafter contained, shall become intitled to the possession, or to the receipt of the rents and profits of the manors and other hereditaments hereby released, or expressed and intended so to be, shall and do, within the space of one year next after they respectively shall so marry, or so become intitled to the possession, or to the rents and profits of the said manors and other hereditaments as aforesaid, take upon him and them respectively, and use in all deeds, letters, accounts, and other writings, whereto or wherein they respectively shall be, or parties, or which they respectively shall sign, the surname of Browne only, and take and use no other surname; and quarter the arms of Browne, with their own respective family arms; and also shall and do, within the space of one year next after they respectively shall so marry, or so become intitled, as aforesaid, apply, sue for, and endeavour to obtain an act of parliament, or a proper licence from the crown, or take such other means as may be requisite or proper to enable or authorise him, or them, respectively, to take and bear the said surname and arms: and that, in case any such person or persons shall refuse or neglect to take such surname and arms, and to take and use the steps, or means, which shall be requisite or proper to enable and authorize him or them so to do, within the said space of one year; then, if the person so refusing or neglecting shall be the husband of the said A. the limitation hereinbefore contained, to the use of the said A. shall cease, determine, and be utterly void; and any annual sum, which by virtue of the power for that purpose hereinafter contained, the said A. shall grant, limit, or appoint, to the use of, or on trust for, or for the benefit of such husband so refusing or neglecting, and the powers, or remedies, and terms of years which the shall limit, demise or create for securing the same, shall cease, determine, and become utterly void; and that if the person so refusing, or neglecting, shall be any other than the husband of the said A. or of any of her daughters, the limitation hereinbefore contained of the said manors and other hereditaments, to the use of him or them so refusing, or neglecting, shall cease, determine, and become utterly void: and that the same manors and other hereditaments shall, in such cases, immediately thereupon go to the person next beneficially intitled in remainder, under the limitations hereinbefore contained, in the same manner as if the person or persons, whose estate shall so cease, determine, and become void, being tenant or tenants for life, was or were dead, or being tenant or tenants in tail, was, or were dead without issue;—without prejudice, nevertheless, to any jointure or jointures, portion or portions, annual sum or annual sums of money, lease or leases, or demise or demises, which, previous to such ceasing or determination, shall have been granted or demised of, or charged upon, the said manors and other hereditaments, hereby released or expressed and intended so to be, or any part thereof, in pursuance of any of the powers hereinafter contained: (except as to any annual sum, and the powers, or remedies, and terms of years for securing the same, which shall have been granted, limited, or appointed, by the said A. in pursuance hereinafter for that purpose contained.) And it is hereby further agreed and declared be-

Lib. 3. Cap. 11. Of Discontinuance. Sect. 606, 607, 608,

Sect. 606.

(1. Saun. 261.)

ITEM, si tenant en taile de certaine terre lessa mesme la terre a un auter pur terme des ans, per force de quel le lessée en eit possession, en quel possession le tenant en taile per son fait releffa tout le droit que il avoit en mesme le terre, a aver et tener a le lessée et a ses heires a tous jours; ceo n'est pas discontinuance, mes apres le decease le tenant en taile, son issue poit bien enter, pur ceo que per tiel release riens passa forsque pur terme de * la vie de le tenant en le taile.

ALSO, if tenant in tayle of certaine land letteth the same land to another for terme of yeares, by force whereof the lessee hath thereof possession, in whose possession the tenant in tayle by his deed releaseth all the right that he hath in the same land, to have and to hold to the lessee and to his heires for ever; this is no discontinuance, but after the decease of the tenant in tayle, his issue may well enter, because by such release nothing passeth but for terme of the life of the tenant in tayle.

CAR per tiel releas riens passa. Here is one of the maxims of the common law rehearsed by our author, whereof he doth put divers examples hereafter.

Sect. 607.

(3. Rep. 85. b.)

EN mesme le manner est, si le tenant en le taile conferma l'estate le lessée pur terme des ans, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires, ceo n'est pas discontinuance, pur ceo que riens passa per tiel confirmation forsque l'estate que le tenant en le taile avoit pur terme de sa vie, &c.

IN the same manner it is, if the tenant in tayle confirme the estate of the lessee for yeares, to have and to hold to him and to his heires, this is no discontinuance, for that nothing passeth by such confirmation but the estate which the tenant in tayle hath for terme of his life, &c.

(Ant. 328)

RIENS passa per tiel confirmation. Here is another of the maxims of the common law rehearsed by our author, whereof he putteth examples hereafter. More shall be said hereof in the next Section following.

Sect. 608.

ITEM, si tenant en taile apres tiel leas granta le reversion en fee per son fait a auter, et voile

ALSO, if tenant in taile after such lease grant the reversion in fee by his deed to another, and will-que

* la—son, L. and M. and Roh.

"tween, and by, the parties to these presents, that the cesser or determination of the estate of the said A., or of any other tenant for life, by force of the proviso hereinbefore contained, shall not operate to exclude, prevent, or prejudice, any of the contingent remainders hereinbefore limited to her, his, or their son or sons, daughter or daughters, or any other person or persons; but that the remainder limited to the said C. and D., and their heirs during the life of the said A., or such other tenant for life, shall, after such cesser or determination, take effect, and continue, for preserving such contingent remainders, and giving them effect as they may arise. And that immediately from and after such cesser or determination of such preceding estate for life, and during the suspense and contingency of such then expectant remainder, the said C. and D., their heirs and assigns, shall receive, pay and apply the rents and profits of the said manors and other hereditaments, which would belong to such tenant for life, if such cesser or determination had not taken place, unto the person or persons, for the intents and purposes, and in the manner, to, for, and in which, the same rents and profits would be, or would have been payable and applicable respectively, under and by virtue of the limitations and provisos herein before contained, in case such tenant for life was actually dead; so that immediately from and after such cesser or determination, the issue of the said A., or of such other tenant for life, intitled for the time being, under the limitations aforesaid, to the said manors and other hereditaments, in remainder immediately expectant on the decease of the said A., or of such other tenant for life, may be intitled to the rents and profits of the said manor and other hereditaments, for his and their own proper use and benefit respectively, during the life of the parent, as if such parent were dead: and that in case no such issue be in existence, then, during the vacancy or contingency of such issue, the person next intitled for the time being, under the limitations aforesaid, to a vested remainder in the said manors and other hereditaments, expectant on the decease of the said A., or of such other tenant for life, and failure of such issue of her, or his body, shall and may be entitled to the said rents and profits for his and their proper use and benefit respectively, but without any exclusion of, or prejudice to the estate, interest, or right of any such issue, afterwards coming into existence, but only from the time of the birth of such issue respectively."

que apres le terme fine, que mesme le terre remaindroit a le grantee et a ses heires a tous jours, et le tenant a terme d'ans atturna, ceo n'est pas discontinuance. Car tiels choses queux passent en tiels cases de tenant en le taile tantsolement per voy de graunt, ou per confirmation, ou per tiel release, rien poit passer pur faire estate a celui a que tiel graunt, ou confirmation, ou release, est fait, forsque ceo que le tenant en taile poit droiturement faire, * et ceo n'est forsque pur terme de sa vie, &c.

eth that after the terme ended, that the same land shall remaine to the grantee and his heires for ever, and the tenant for yeares attorne, this is no discontinuance. For such things which passe in such cases of tenant in taile only by way of grant, or by confirmation, or by such release, nothing can passe to make an estate to him to whom such grant, or confirmation, or release, is made, but that which the tenant in taile may rightfully make, and this is but for terme of his life, &c.

Sect. 609.

CAR si jeo lessa terre a un home pur terme de sa vie, &c. et le tenant a terme de vie lessa mesme la terre a un autre pur terme des ans, &c. et puis mon tenant a terme de vie graunta le reversion a un autre en fee, et le tenant a terme des ans atturna, en cest case le grantee † n'aden le franktenement forsque ‡ estate pur terme de vie son grauntor, &c. et jeo que suis en le reversion de fee simple, ne puisse enter per force de cel grant del reversion fait per mon tenant a terme de vie, pur ceo que per tiel grant mon reversion n'est pas discontinue, mes tout temps demurt a moy, sicome il fuit adevant, nient obstant tiel grant del reversion fait al grantee, a luy et a ses heires, &c. pur ceo que riens passa per force de tiel grant, forsque estate que le grantor avoit, &c.

FOR if I lett land to a man for (Ant. 251. b.) terme of his life, &c. and the tenant for life letteth the same land to another for terme of years, &c. and after my tenant for life grant the reversion to another in fee, and the tenant for yeares attorne, in this case the grantee hath in the freehold but an estate for terme of the life of his grantor, &c. and I which am in the reversion of the fee simple may not enter by force of this grant of the reversion made by my tenant for life, for that by such grant my reversion is not discontinued, but alwayes remaines unto me, as it was before, notwithstanding such grant of the reversion made to the grantee, to him and to his heires, &c. because nothing passed by force of such grant, but the estate which the grantor hath, &c. (1)

Sect.

* et ceo n'est—&c. est, L. and M. and Roh.

† n'ad—ad, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ estate not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) VII. As to the modes of conveyance which work a discontinuance, it may be laid down as a general rule, that no alienation which is not made by livery of seisin, or what is equivalent to it, can work a discontinuance. It has been observed before, that the usual mode of conveyance at the common law, was a feoffment; that feoffments were formerly made without writing; and that when writing came into use, the transmutation of the property was effected, not by the writing, but by the livery which it authenticated. A fine is often defined to be a feoffment upon record, the donor's acknowledgment upon record of the right of the donee to the land, being considered as tantamount to actual livery. The fines, therefore, which are said to be executed, in contradistinction from those which are said to be executory, give the donee the immediate possession of the land; and those which are called executory, enable him to recover it immediately, by an habere facias seisinam.—A common recovery is the judgment of a court of record, that the demandant shall recover against the tenant; upon which he may immediately sue out the habere facias seisinam. Considering, therefore, fines and recoveries only as common assurances, the acknowledgment upon record in the former, and the judgment to recover in the latter, are supposed to equipoise the notoriety of livery. Hence, both a fine and a common recovery are of force to work a discontinuance. With respect to releases,—where the person whose estate is discontinued, releases to the alienee, his release must be considered as operating pur mitter le droit. Now, it has been observed in a former place, that releases by persons disseised, may be made either to the disseisor, his feoffee, or his heir; and that in all these cases, the possession is in the releasee, the right in the releasor; and that the union of the right to the possession completes the title of the releasee, the notoriety of the disseisin countervailing the livery. But this can only be understood of those cases where the releasor has the fee simple. In both cases the possession of the disseisor is equally notorious; but where the releasor, as in the instance brought by Littleton, has only a partial estate in the lands, he has not in him the right of possession, and cannot, of course, transfer, or cede it to another. Hence, though the release of a disseisee, who before the disseisin was seized in fee-simple, completes the title of the disseisor; the release of a disseisee, who before the disseisin had only

Sect. 610.

(Ant. 318, 319.)

EN mesme le maner est, si le tenant a terme de vie per son fait confirme l'estate son lessée pur terme des ans, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires, ou releffa a son lessée et a ses heires, uncore le lessée a terme d'ans n'ad estate forsque pur terme de vie de le tenant a terme de vie, &c.

IN the same manner is it, if tenant for terme of life by his deed confirme the estate of his lessee for yeares, to have and to hold to him and his heires, or release to his lessee and his heires, yet the lessee for yeares hath an estate but for terme of the life of the tenant for life, &c.

CAR tiels choses que passent en tiels cases de tenant en le taile, &c.

Here is rehearsed another ancient maxime of the common law touching grants; and hereby it appeareth that a feoffment in fee (albeit it be by parol) is of a greater operation and estimation in law, than a grant of a reversion by deed, though it be inrolled, and attornment of the lessee for yeares of a release, or a confirmation by deed, for the reasons aforesaid. And this is manifested by the examples which our author here in these three Sections putteth.

Sect. 611.

(Post 367. a.)

FORSQUE estate pur terme d'ans, &c.

Here it is implied, that albeit the feoffment made by lessee for yeares be a feoffment between the feoffor and feoffee, and that by this feoffment the fee simple passeth by force of the livery, yet is it a disseisin to the lessor. And here it is worthy to be observed, that our author saith, that tenant for terme of yeares may make a feoffment; whereupon it followeth, that the feoffor may thereunto annex a warrantie, whereupon the feoffee may vouch him: but of this you shall reade more in the MES auterment est quant tenant a terme de vie fait un feoffment en fee, car per tiel feoffment le fee simple passa. Car tenant a terme d'ans poit faire feoffment en fee, et per son feoffment le fee simple passera, et uncore il n'avoit al temps del feoffment fait forsque estate pur terme d'ans, &c.

BUT otherwise it is when tenant for life maketh a feoffment in fee, for by such a feoffment the fee simple passeth. For tenant for yeares may make a feoffment in fee, and by his feoffment the fee simple shall passe, and yet he had at the time of the feoffment made but an estate for terme of yeares, &c. (1)

Chapter of Warranties, Sect. 698.

Sect. 612.

ITEM, si tenant en le taile grant ta son terre a un auter pur terme de vie de mesme le tenant en taile, et livrer a luy seisin, &c. et apres per son fait il releffa a le tenant et a ses heires tout le

ALSO, if tenant in taile grant his land to another for terme of the life of the said tenant in taile, and deliver to him seisin, &c. and after by his deed hee releaseth to the tenant and to his heires all the droit

(1) What possession is required in the feoffor to make his feoffment an actual disseisin of the freehold; — not merely a disseisin, which is such at the election of the party; has been, of late, a subject of much discussion; and it is therefore supposed, that the following attempt at a full investigation of the very abstruse, but not useless, learning upon the subject, will not be unac-

only an estate tail, does not complete his title, and therefore does not amount to a discontinuance. — With respect to conveyances which operate by the statute of uses; it is clear that there cannot be a discontinuance, where the possession remains with the party; for, in those cases, the possession is not disturbed, nor can there be any livery of seisin, or any thing tantamount to it; — but it is equally clear, that if the uses are raised by a transmutation of the possession, that transmutation may produce a discontinuance. This, in fact, is only repeating what has been observed before; for it is not the creation or limitation of the use, but the operation upon the possession, that produces the discontinuance. — Upon these grounds, therefore, a bargain and sale, a covenant to stand seised, and a lease and release, cannot work a discontinuance; but a feoffment executed, a fine levied, or a recovery suffered of uses, have that power. See page 275. contin. of note, 271. b. — But if a warranty is annexed to a bargain and sale, covenant to stand seised, or release, it may produce a discontinuance. This will be better understood after perusing our author's chapter on Warranty. At present it is sufficient to observe, from lord chief-baron Gilbert's Ten. 120. that a release with warranty works a discontinuance; — for at common law the warranty was a voluntary covenant of the force of a feudal contract, repelling the warrantor from claiming the land, and obliging him to defend it; and though the statute takes away the force of such covenants, that they shall not bar the issue, yet the issue must claim in the method the statute prescribes, viz. by action; and, therefore, it works a discontinuance, since the issue, in such case, cannot reconinue but by action only.

droit que il avoyt en mesme la terre; en cest cas l'estate del tenant de la terre n'est pas enlarge per force de tiel releas, pur ceo que quant le tenant avoit l'estate en le terre pur terme de vie de le tenant en le taile, donque il avoit tout le droit que le tenant en le taile pouvoit droiturement grant ou releaser: * issint que per tiel releas nul droit passa, entant que son droit fuit ale adevant.

right which hee hath in the same land; in this case the estate of the tenant of the land is not enlarged by force of such release, for that when the tenant had the estate in the land for terme of the life of the tenant in taile, hee had then all the right which tenant in taile could rightfully grant or release: so as by this release no right passeth, inasmuch as his right was gone before.

Sect. 613.

ITEM, si tenant en le taile per son fait grant a un auter tout son estate que il avoit en les tenements a luy tailes, a aver et tener tout son estate al auter, et a ses heires a tous jours, et delivra a luy seisin accordant; en cest cas le tenant a que l'alienation fuit fait, n'ad auter estate forsque pur terme de vie del tenant en taile. Et issint il poit bien estre prove, que le tenant en taile ne poit pas graunter ne alier, ne faire aucun droiturel estate de franktenement a auter person, forsque pur terme de sa vie demesne, &c.

ALSO, if tenant in taile by his deed grant to another all his estate which hee hath in the tenements to him entailed, to have and to hold all his estate to the other, and to his heires for ever, and deliver to him seisin accordingly; in this case the tenant to whom the alienation was made, hath no other estate but for terme of the life of tenant in taile. And so it may bee well proved, that tenant in taile cannot grant nor alien, nor make any rightfull estate of freehold to another person, but for terme of his owne life only, &c. (1)

(1. Saund. 26. 3. Rep. 84.)

THE meaning of Littleton in both these cases, in this and in the Section next preceding is, that having regard to the issue in taile, and to them in reversion or remainder, tenant in taile cannot lawfully make a greater estate than for terme of his life; and therefore this release or grant is no discontinuance. But in regard of himselfe, this release or grant leaveth no reversion in him, but puts the same in abeyance, so as after this release or grant made he shall not have any action of waste, &c.

(Post. 342. b. 345. a. Ant. 263. b.)

13. H. 7. 10. 2. Brooke Release, 95.

Grant tout son estate. Vid. Sect. 650. Action of waste, &c. there is implied that he shall not enter for a forfeiture, if after the release or grant the lessee maketh a feoffment in fee.

Sect. 614.

CAR si jeo done terre a un home en taile, savant

FOR if I give land to a man in taile, saving the reversion to my

HERE Littleton proveth, that the feoffee of tenant in taile hath no rightfull estate, having respect

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The livery, in this case, is secundum formam chartæ; and therefore, according to Sir Edward Coke's doctrine, ante 48. a. its operation and effect are restrained to the quantity and quality of the effectual estate contained in the deed. Thus, says he, if a man makes a lease for years by deed, and delivers seisin according to the form and effect of the deed, yet he has but an estate for years, and the livery is void. The expression in the text, that tenant in tail cannot grant, or alien; or make any rightfull estate of freehold to another person, but for the term of his own life, is not to be understood literally, that the grantee has but an estate for life, and that his estate is ipso facto determined by the death of the tenant in tail: all that is meant by it is, that his estate is certain and indefeasible, no longer than the life of the tenant in tail; for that, upon the death of the tenant in tail, it is defeasible by the issue, either by action, or by entry or claim on the land, at his election. Still it has a continuance till it is so defeated by the issue. In note 1. ante 326. b. it has been explained upon what principle, in the case of a tenant in tail conveying by feoffment, it was held, that the statute de donis did not absolutely nullify the alienation, but only took away the entry of the issue, and reduced him to his remedy by formædon. Upon similar principles, in the case of a tenant in tail conveying by bargain and sale, release, covenant to stand seised, or any other mode of conveyance operating by way of grant, it has been held, that the statute does not nullify the conveyance, but reduces the issue in tail to his entry; or, if he prefers it, to his action, to avoid it. Thus, the grantee hath a base fee; his wife is entitled to her dower during the continuance of the fee; and if the grantee commits waste, the tenant in tail, having no reversion, has no right of action against him. 3. Rep. 84. b. 10. Rep. 96. See Machel v. Clarke, 2. Salk. 619. Farrerley 18. Com. 119. Lord Raym. 778. Goodright on the demise of Tyrrell v. Mead and Shilfon. 3. Burr. 1703. The passage, therefore, in Littleton must be understood in this qualified sense, otherwise it is inaccurate. This was observed by lord chief-justice Holt in the case of Machel v. Clarke, and by lord chief-justice Hobart in the case of Sheffield v. Ratcliff, Hob. Rep. 338, 339.

ceptable to the reader. By the doctrine of the feudal law, no person who had an estate of less duration and extent than for his own life, or for the life of another man, was considered to be a freeholder; and none but a freeholder was considered to have the possession of the land. It is true, that estates were sometimes held for terms of years. In that case, the possession of the termor was considered to be the possession of the freeholder;—but still the termor held the possession, tho' he held it for the freeholder; and the freeholder, by trusting the termor with it, exposed himself to lose it, by the termor's negligence or treachery. If the termor left the possession vacant; if he permitted himself to be disseised of it; if he undertook to alien it either by act in pais, or by matter of record; if he claimed the fee; or if he affirmed

(F. N. B. 211. b.)

[n] Bract. li. 4. fol. 238.
Flet. lib. 5. cap. 11.

Bract. & Flet. ubi supra.

[o] Mir. cap. 2. sect. 25.
(5. Rep. 85. 2. Inlt. 350.)

Westm. 2. cap. 4.

respect to two persons; the one is to the donor, whose reversion is divested and displaced; and the other to the issue in taile, who is driven to his action to recover his right.

A tort luy deforce.

[n] Deforciare is a word of art, and cannot be expressed by any other word; for it signifies, to withhold lands or tenements from the right owner; in which case either the entry of the right owner is taken away, or the deforcestor holdeth it so fast, as the right owner is driven to his reall præcipe, wherein it is said, unde A. eum injuste deforceat, or the deforcestor so disturbeth the right owner, as he cannot enjoy his owne: and therefore it is said, Per hoc autem quod dicitur in brevi ultimæ præsentationis deforceant, videtur quibusdam quod querens innuat per hoc quod deforceans sit in seisinâ, sicut in brevi de reâ, sed reverâ non est ita, sed satis deforceat qui possessorem uti seisinâ non permisit omnino vel minus commodè impediat præsentando, appellando, impetrand,

secundum quod dicitur de disseisnore, satisfacit disseisnam, qui uti non permisit possessorem vel minus commodè licet omnino non expellat. In this case that Littleton putteth, the discontinuance being in by wrong, is no disseisor, abator, or intruder, but a deforcestor; and hereof commeth Deforcement, and thus did antiquitie describe it: [o] Deforcement, come si ascun enter en auter tenement tant come le veray seignior est al market, ou ailors, et retourne, et ne poet aver entre eins est celui deforce et deboutue. And for that at the first the withholding was with violence and force, it was called a deforcement of the lands or tenements; but now it is generally extended to all kinde of wrongfull withholding of lands or tenements from the right owner. There is a writ called a quod ei deforceat, and lieth where tenant in taile, or tenant for life, loseth by default, by the statute he shall have a quod ei deforceat against the recoveror, and yet he commeth in by course of law. (1) le reversion a moy, et puis le tenant en le taile enseoffa un auter en fee, le feoffee n'ad pas droiturel estate en les tenements pur deux causes. Un est, pur ceo que per tiel feoffment ma reversion est discontinue, le quel est a tort fait, et nemy a droit fait. Un auter cause est, si le tenant en taile mourust, et son issue fust briefe de formedon envers le feoffee, le briefe dirra, et auxyle count, &c. que le feoffee a tort luy deforce, &c. Ergo s'il a tort luy deforce, &c. il n'ad pas droiturel estate.

selfe, and after the tenant in taileinfeoffeth another in fee, the feoffee hath no rightfull estate in the tenements for two causes. One is, for that by such feoffment my reversion is discontinued, the which is a wrong and not a rightfull act. Another cause is, if the tenant in taile dieth, and his issue bring a writ of formedon against the feoffee, the writ and also the declaration shall say, &c. that the feoffee by wrong himdeforces, &c. Ergo if he deforceth him by wrong, he hath no right estate.

Sect. 615.

ITEM, si terre soit lessé a un home pur terme de sa vie, le remainder a un auter en le taile, si celui en le remainder voile graunter son remainder a un auter en fee per son fait, et le tenant a terme de vie attorna, ceo n'est pas discontinuance de le remainder*.

ALSO, if land bee let to a man for terme of his life, the remainder to another in taile, if he in the remainder will grant his remainder to another in fee by his deed, and the tenaunt for life attorne, this is no discontinuance of the remainder.

Sect.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Sir William Blackstone, in his account of a deforcement, 3. Com. c. 10. observes, that it is nomen generalissimum; being a much larger and more comprehensive expression than any of the former, and signifying the holding of any lands or tenements to which another person has a right; so that it includes as well an abatement, an intrusion, a disseisin, or a discontinuance, as any other species of wrong whatsoever, whereby he that hath a right to the freehold is kept out of possession. But, as contradistinguished from the former, it is only such a detainer of the freehold from him that hath the right of property, but never had any possession under that right, as falls within none of those injuries. A deforcement may also be grounded on the non-performance of a covenant real: as if a man seized of lands covenants to convey them to another, and neglects or refuses so to do, but continues possession against him, this possession being wrongful is a deforcement. And hence, in levying a fine of lands, the person against whom the fictitious action is brought upon a supposed breach of covenant, is called a deforçant. Mons. Howard, Anc. Loix des François, tom. 1. p. 654. mentions, that Du Cange refers to the laws of Alfred and other kings of England precedent to the Conquest, for an explanation of the word Deforcement; but that he ought to have observed, that it was not introduced into the Latin translation of those laws till after the introduction of the Norman customs into England; that deforce is an old French word, and that fortia is taken for force in the 28th formula of Marculphus.

affirmed it to be in a stranger;—in all these cases, the freeholder exposed himself to the loss of the possession, as much as if they were his own acts. Thus the termor held the possession, but he was said to hold it nomine alieno, in contradistinction to the freeholder himself, who was said to hold it nomine proprio. Hence Britton expressly defines an estate of freehold to be “the possession of the soil by the freeholder:” and the author of the Doctor and Student says, “that the possession of the land is called in the law of England the franktenement or freehold.” Britt. C. 52. Doct. and Stud. b. 2. d. 22. So nearly synonymous in those days was the possession to the freehold. In this manner, the possession of the termor differed from that of a mere bailiff, who had no possession. The same principles obtained with respect to the transfer of the freehold. Nothing further was necessary than a delivery of the possession, or, as it is called by our law-writers, livery of seisin. The freehold could be transferred by no other means. But here a difference is to be observed with respect to the effect of the livery of a termor for years (such as was mentioned before), and the livery of a mere bailiff. On account of the solemnity, upon which the entry of the termor into the lands was grounded; the connection between him and the reversioner, and his actually holding the possession of the land (though he held it for the freeholder), the livery of the former was a transfer of the possession; but the livery of the latter was absolutely without effect.

Sect. 616.

*ITEM, si home ad rent service ou rent charge en taile, et il granta le dit rent a un autre en fee, et le tenaunt attorne, * ceo n'est pas discontinuance, &c.*

ALSO, if a man hath a rent service or rent charge in taile, and hee grant the sayd rent to another in fee, and the tenaunt attorne, this is no discontinuance, &c.

Sect. 617.

ITEM, si home soit tenant en taile de un advowson en grosse, ou de un common en grosse, s'il per son fait voile graunt l'advowson ou le common a un autre en fee, ceo n'est pas discontinuance; car en tielx cases les grantees n'ont estate forsque pur terme de vie de le tenant en taile que fist le grant, &c.

ALSO, if a man bee tenaunt in taile of an advowson in grosse, or of a common in grosse, if he by his deed will graunt the advowson or common to another in fee, this is no discontinuance; for in such cases the grantees have no estate but for terme of the life of tenant in taile that made the grant, &c.

BY the cases in these three Sections it appeareth, that if a remainder or a rent service, or a rent charge, or an advowson, or a common, or any other inheritance that lieth in grant, be granted by tenant in taile, it is no discontinuance, as formerly hath bene said.

[p] Note, here is an advowson named by Littleton, as a thing that lieth in grant, and passeth not by livery of seisin.

Bra. l. 2. f. 3. & f. 366. 378.
Brit. f. 187. Mir. ca. 2. sect. 17.
Flet. lib. 3. ca. 15.
(Post. 335.)

[p] 5. E. 3. 58. 21. E. 3. 37. 38.
43. E. 3. 1. b. 11. H. 6. 4.
5. H. 7. 37. 18. H. 8. 16. M.
Dy. 323. b.

Sect. 618.

ET nota, que de tiels choses que passent per voy de graunt, per fait fait en pays, † et sans livery, la tiel graunt ne fait pas discontinuance, come en les cases avantdits, ‡ et en autres cases semblables, &c. || Et coment que tiels choses sont graunts en fee, per fine levie en le court

AND note, that of such things as passe by way of grant, by deed made in the cuntry, and without livery, there such grant maketh no discontinuance, as in the cases aforesayd, and in other like cases, &c. And albeit such things bee graunted in fee, by fine levied in the king's court, &c.

HERE is the generall reason yeilded of the precedent cases and the like; for that it is a maxime in law, that a grant [d] by deed of such things as doe lie in grant, and not in livery of seisin, doeth worke no discontinuance. (1) But the particular reason is, for that of such things the grant of tenant in taile worketh no wrong, either to the issue in taile, or to him in reversion or remainder; for nothing doth passe but onely during the life of tenant in taile, which is lawfull, and every discontinuance worketh a wrong, as hath bene said.

[d] 6. E. 3. 56. 32. E. 3.
Discont. 2. 33. Aff. 8. 4. H. 7. 17.
21. H. 7. 42. 15. H. 7. 19.
21. H. 6. 52. 53. 5. E. 4. 3.
21. E. 4. 5. 22. R. 2.
Discon. 56. 38. H. 8.
Discon. 35. Brooke. 19. E. 3.
Bre. 468. Pl. Com. 435
18. Aff. p. 2.

[q] If

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
|| Et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† et sans livery, la—&c. tou, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ et en—ou, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) VII. That nothing which lies in grant can be said to be discontinued.—The term discontinuance is used to distinguish those cases where the party, whose freehold is ousted, can restore it by action only, from those in which he may restore it by entry. Now, things which lie in grant, cannot either be divested or restored by entry. The owner, therefore, of any thing which lies in grant, has in no stage, and under no circumstances, any other remedy but by action; consequently the distinction in question can never be applicable to him. It is true, that the books often mention both disseisins and discontinuances of incorporeal hereditaments; but these disseisins and discontinuances are only at the election of the party, for the purpose of availing himself of the remedy by action.—Some observations on disseisins of this description are inserted in the note below, commencing at page 330. b.—But a disseisin or discontinuance of corporeal hereditaments necessarily operates as a disseisin or discontinuance of all the incorporeal rights or incidents which the disseisee or discontinuancee has himself in upon or out of the land affected by the disseisin or discontinuance.

effect. In process of time, involuntary alienation, or alienation arising from attachment for debt, was admitted. This produced the estates of tenants by elegit, by statute-merchant, and statute-staple. Long leases for years also came into use, and more settled and accurate notions were had, of tenancies by sufferance and at will. All these were considered to be in the same situation as the termor for years. Their possession was held to be the possession of the immediate freeholder; but as they had, or rather held, the possession, and were in by the act of the freeholder in some cases, and by his privity or forbearance in all, they were considered to be in, as of the seisin of the fee. It sometimes happened that persons had the possession who had not the right; such were tenants by disseisin, deforcement, abatement, or intrusion. Still, as they had the possession, they might, by livery of it, transfer it to another. Thus, by the old feudal law, on the one hand, the freehold could not be transferred but by livery of seisin; on the other, livery of seisin could not be made by any person who had the possession, without transferring the freehold. This transfer of the fee was called a feoffment. No writing was necessary for this purpose; and when charters came into use, the transfer of the fee was supposed to be produced (as has been already observed), not by the charter, but by the livery which it authenticated. But the material variation with respect to the form of transferring property by livery was, that originally it was usual to make the feoffment on the land before the peers of the court, who subscribed the charter of feoffment with their names, and the entry of the feoffee upon the land was afterwards recorded in the lord's court: but in progress of time, the feoffment was allowed to be good,

Lib. 3. Cap. 11. Of Discontinuance. Sect. 619.

[7] 33. E. 3. Formed. 47.
13. H. 7. 10. 36. Aff. 8.
4. H. 7. 17.

[3. Rep. 84, 85. 9. Rep. 51. a.)

[r] 3. H. 7. 12.
(Mo. 634.)
9. E. 4. 22.
(1. Roll. Abr. 632. Sir Edward Seymour's case. 10. Rep. 95.)

[f] 38. H. 8. Paten. Br. 101.
Pl. Com. 233. Li. 1. f. 26.
Alton Wood's case.
(Ant. 251. b.)
48. E. 3. 23.
(2 Sid. 65.)

[r] 15. E. 4. tit. Discont. 30.
6. H. 56, 57.
(1. Rep. 76. 1. Roll. Rep. 188.
1. Sid. 83.)

[7] If tenant in taile of a rent service, &c. or of a reversion, or remainder in taile, &c. grant the same in fee with warrantie, and leaveth affets in fee simple, and dieth, this is neither barre nor discontinuance to the issue in taile; but he may distraine for the rent or service, or enter into the land after the decease of tenant for life. But if the issue bringeth a formedon in the discender, and admit himselfe out of possession, then he shall be barred by the warrantie and affets.

[r] Tenant in taile of a rent disseiseth the tenant of the land, and maketh a feoffment in fee with warrantie and dieth, this is no discontinuance of the rent, but the issue may distreine for the same; and albeit the warrantie extend to the rent, yet by the rule of Littleton it lieth not in discontinuance: and where the thing doth lie in liverie, as lands and tenements, yet if to the conveyance of the freehold or inheritance no liverie of seisin is requisite, it worketh no discontinuance. [f] As if tenant in taile exchange lands, &c. or if the king being tenant in taile, grant by his letters patents the lands in fee, there is no discontinuance wrought.

Per fine. Of a thing that lieth in grant, though it be granted by fine, yet it worketh no discontinuance; and this is regularly true.

[r] If tenant in taile make a lease for yeares of lands, and after levie a fine, this is a discontinuance; for a fine is a feoffment of record, and the freehold passeth. But if tenant in taile maketh a lease for his owne life, and after levie a fine, this is no discontinuance, because the reversion expectant upon a state of freehold which lieth onely in grant passeth thereby. (1)

Sect. 619.

[†] *NOTA, si jeo done terre a un auter en taile, et il lessa mesme la terre a un auter pur terme d'ans, et puis le lessor graunta le reversion a un auter en fee, et le tenant a terme d'ans atturra al grantee, et le terme est expire durant la vie le tenant en taile, per que le grantee enter, et puis le tenant en taile ad issue et devie; en ceo case ceo n'est discontinuance, nient obstant que le grant soit execute en la vie le tenaunt en taile, pur ceo que al temps de lease fait a terme d'ans, nul novel fee simple fuit reserve en le lessor, eins le reversion demurt a luy en taylor, sicome il fuit devant le lease fait. **

NOTE, if I give land to another in taile, and hee letteth the same land to another for terme of yeares, and after the lessor graunteth the reversion to another in fee, and the tenant for yeares attorne to the grantee, and the terme expireth during the life of the tenant in taylor, by which the grauntee enter, and after the tenant in taile hath issue and die; in this case this is no discontinuance, notwithstanding the grant be executed in the life of the tenant in taile, for that at the time of the lease made for yeares, no new fee simple was reserved in the lessor, but the reversion remained to him in taile, as it was before the lease made.

* THIS is added to Littleton, and not in the originall, and therefore I purposely omit it: yet is the case good in law, because neither the lease for yeares, nor the grant of the reversion, divesteth any estate.

Sect.

† Nota—item, L. and M. and Roh. No part of these Sections within crotchets, is in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It is frequently said in our law-books, that a fine has no operation upon any estate or interest, which is not previously divested or turned to a right; but this expression, considering it strictly, is inaccurate. By turning to a right, it is generally meant, that the person whose possession is usurped, cannot restore it by entry, and can only recover it by action. See note 1. ant. 239. a. But in the present case, the expression, turned to a right, must be understood in a more general sense. The import of it is, that the parties to the fine, or some of them, have in them at the time of their levying the fine, or acquire by it, a possession, adverse to, and inconsistent with, the estate or right intended to be barred; the real owner, therefore, at the time of levying the fine, or by its operation, is disseised of his possession, but the right still remains in him. In this general sense, his possession may be said to be turned to a right; but this right may be such as enables him to restore his possession by mere entry, without his resorting to an action. See 2. Atk. 631. In another sense it is inaccurate, as it seems to imply, that the turning to a right is produced by the operation of the fine; but, generally speaking, this is not the case. Every disseisin, intrusion, or abatement, turns the estate to a right, in the sense in which that expression is explained above. If the disseisor, intruder, or abator, afterwards levies a fine, it operates by the statute, after a non-claim of five years, as a bar to the right of the person whose estate is disseised, intruded upon, or abated. But its operation in these cases is merely as a bar, the ouster of the possession or divesting of the right being previously effected by the disseisin, intrusion, or abatement. In some cases, however, it does not operate only as a bar. As if tenant for life levies a fine, it is a forfeiture of his estate; and if the reversioner does not enter within five years after the forfeiture, or at the furthest within five years after the death of the tenant for life, he is barred of his remedy to recover. Wherley and Tancred, 1. Ventris 241.

good, though it were attested by strangers only; and the recording of the feoffee's entry was dispensed with. This, undoubtedly, lessened, very considerably, the solemnity and notoriety of feoffments: and we have an opinion of the highest authority, delivered with much consideration and infinite ability, in a case of the highest moment, that it had a very great effect on their operation and efficacy, with respect to the circumstance before us.—The case alluded to is that of Taylor on the demise of Atkins v. Horde and others, 1 Burr. 60. 3 Bro. Par. Ca. 247. Cow. 689.—As a minute and accurate statement and examination of the doctrines laid down in that case will serve greatly to illustrate the point now under consideration, they shall be presented here to the reader. The case, so far as it relates to the points in question, was, that sir Robert Atkins was tenant for life; remainder to dame Ann Atkins; his wife, for life; remainder to sir Robert Atkins (his eldest son by a former marriage) in tail male; remainder to Mr. John Tracy and his younger brothers successively, in tail male; remainder to Mr. Richard Atkins and his heirs. Upon the death of sir Robert

Sect. 620.

† *MES si le tenant en taile fait leas a terme de vie le lessee, &c. en cest case le tenant en le taile ad * fait un novel reversion de † fee simple en luy; pur ceo que quant il fist leas pur terme de vie, &c. il discontinua le taile ‡, &c. per force de mesme le leas, et auxy il discontinua ma reversion, &c. Et il covient que la reversion de fee simple soit en aucun person en tiel cas: et il ne poit estre en moy que sue donor, entant que mon reversion est discontinue; ergo il covient que la reversion de fee soit en le tenant en le taile, que discontinua ma reversion per tiel leas, &c. Et si en cest case le tenant en le taile graunta per son fait cest reversion en fee a un auter, et le tenant a terme de vie attorna, &c. et puis le tenant a terme de vie morust, vivant le tenant en le taile, et le grantee de le reversion entra, &c. en la vie le tenant en le taile, donques ceo est un discontinuance en fee; et si apres le tenant en le taile morust, son issue ne poit enter, mes est mis a son brieve de forme-*

BUT if the tenant in taile make a lease for terme of the life of the lessee, &c. in this case the tenant in taile hath made a new reversion of the fee simple in him; because when hee made the lease for life, &c. he discontinued the taile, &c. by force of the same lease, and also hee discontinued my reversion, &c. And it behoveth that the reversion of the fee simple be in some person in such case: and it cannot be in me which am the donor, inasmuch as my reversion is discontinued; ergo the reversion of the fee ought to be in the tenant in taile, who discontinued my reversion by lease, &c. And if in this case the tenant in taile grant by his deed this reversion in fee to another, and the tenant for life attorne, &c. and after the tenant for life dieth, living the tenant in taile, and the grantee of the reversion enter, &c. in the life of the tenant in taile, then this is a discontinuance in fee; and if after the tenant in taile dieth, his issue may not enter, but is put to his writ of formedon.

PUR terme de vie del lessee, &c.

Here is implied, or for (1. Roll. 633.) terme of another man's life. (1)

Novel reversion 15. E. 4. tit. Discont. 36.

de fee simple.

Which must bee understood of a fee simple determinable upon the life of the lessee, which our author here calleth a fee simple; for if the lessee dieth, the donee is tenant in taile againe, as hee was before: and that is the reason that if in that case hee granteth over the reversion (Cro. Car. 156.) and dieth; and after the death of tenant in taile, the lessee dieth; the entry of the issue is lawfull, because by the death of the lessee the discontinuance is determined; and consequently the grant made of the reversion gained upon that discontinuance, is void also.

If tenant in taile maketh a lease for three lives according to the statute of 32 H. 8. that is no discontinuance of the estate taile or of the reversion, because it is authorized by act of parliament, whereunto every man in judgement of law is partie.

And yet in some cases the freehold may be discontinued and not the reversion. [u] As if the husband and wife make a lease for life by deed (2) of the wife's land, reserving a rent, the husband dieth; this was a discontinuance at the common law for life; and yet the reversion was not discontinued, but remained in the wife. Otherwise it is if

† In L. and M. and MSS. this Section begins thus: Si jco done terre a un auter en le taile, et il lessa mesme la terre a un auter pur terme de vie, &c. * en added L. and M. † de—en, L. and M. ‡ le taile, &c. per force de mesme le leas, et auxy i discontinua, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) VIII. It has been observed before, that no conveyance by tenant in tail can operate as a discontinuance, unless it is created by livery, or by that which, in the eye of the law, is tantamount to it.—Littleton now proceeds to lay down, that to make a discontinuance, the conveyance must be of such an estate as in its original creation may, by possibility, endure beyond the life of the tenant in tail. When the estate so created is at an end, the discontinuance also is at an end.

(2) Nota, a proviso on 32 Hen. VIII. that the lease shall be made in both their names, where the inheritance is in the woman. And see Cro. Car. 22. Smith v. Trender, where there is a quere, whether it ought to be so where the inheritance is in both.—Lord Nott. MSS.

Robert the father, dame Ann his widow entered upon the lands. In Trinity term 1710 an ejectment was brought, in the court of common-pleas, against her ladyship, by John Phillips, upon the several demises of sir Robert Atkyns the son, and of Joseph Walker, to whom several terms of years attendant upon the inheritance had been assigned, in trust for sir Robert the son. A verdict was found for the plaintiff, and he recovered terminum suum predictum, and had an habere facias possessionem. It is to be observed, that no account of the case states the grounds upon which this verdict was found for the plaintiff. Most probably, it was merely in consequence of the terms of years which had been assigned to him. On the 1st of January 1710, John Phillips, the plaintiff, surrendered the terms to sir Robert the son; and on the 17th of the same month sir Robert made a feoffment of the estates in question, with livery of seisin, to James Earle and his heirs. In the deed of feoffment it was declared, that the feoffment was made, that James Earle might become perfect tenant of the freehold, in order for the suffering of a common recovery; which recovery, it was thereby declared, should enure, to the use of sir Robert Atkyns the son and his heirs. The recovery was suffered in Hilary term 1710. Sir Robert died on the 9th of November 1711, without issue, and intestate. His nephew, Mr. Robert Atkyns, was his heir at law. In Hilary term 1711 an ejectment was brought against him by lady Atkyns; and in Easter term 1712 a general verdict was given for her. She died in the month of October following. Upon her death, Mr. Robert Atkyns entered, and continued in possession of the estates till the 16th of March 1753, when he died, leaving issue only two daughters; Ann, the wife of Mr. Horde; and Elizabeth, the wife of Mr. Chamberlayne. The death of sir Robert Atkyns the son without issue, necessarily brought into question the validity of the recovery suffered by him; for if it were good, it destroyed his estate tail, and all the remainders expectant upon it; and Mr. Robert Atkyns, his nephew, and after his decease Mrs. Horde and Mrs. Chamberlayne, his only children, became entitled to the estates, as his heirs at law. But if it were not a good recovery, then, upon

(8. Rep. 71.)

21. H. 6. 52. 15. E. 4. tit.
Discont. 30.32. E. 3. Discont. 2. 43. E. 3.
Entr. Cong. 31. 3. H. 4. 9.
22. R. 2. Discont. 50. 34. Aff. 6.
Pl. 4. 38. Aff. 6. p. 6.
43. Aff. 6. 48. 18. E. 3. 43.
21. H. 6. 52. 15. E. 4. tit. Discontinuance 30. Brooke tit.
Discont. 3. & 14. 4. H. 7. 17.
21. H. 7. 11.

[w] 21. H. 6. 52, 53.

[y] 34. E. 1. quare impedit 179.
22. E. 3. 6. 17. E. 3. 3.
33. E. 3. quare imp. 196.
23. Aff. 8. 50. E. 3. 26.
(Ant. 298. Post. 349. b. F.N.B. 32.
1. Roll. Abr. 632. 1 Rep. 76.)36. Aff. 8. 42. E. 3. 20.
22. R. 2. Discont. 50.
(Sect. 601. 638.)
21. H. 6. 52, 53. Brooke tit.
Discont. 3. 21. H. 7. 11. Lib. 1.
fol. 85. Lib 10. fol. 96, 97.
(W. Jones 210. Cro. Car. 156.)(*) 15. E. 4. Discont. 30.
Vide Sect. 642.if the husband had made the lease alone.Et puis le tenant a terme de vie morust, &c. The like law it is if the tenant for life surrender to the grantee, or if the grantee recover in an action of waste, or enter for the forfeiture.Avoit seisin et execution. And here it is to be observed, that when the reversion in this case is executed in the life of tenant in taile, it is equivalent in judgement of law to a feoffment in fee, for the state for life passed by livery.[w] If tenant in taile make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, this is an absolute discontinuance, albeit the remainder be not executed in the life of tenant in taile, because all is one estate, and passeth by one livery. And so note a diversitie betweene a grant of a reversion, and a limitation of a remainder. B. tenant in taile maketh a gift in taile to A. and after B. releaseth to A. and his heires, and after A. dieth without issue; the issue of the first donee may enter upon the collateral heire, because A. had not seisin and execution of the reversion of the land in his demesne as of fee, as Littleton here speaketh. But if tenant in taile make a lease for the life of the lessee, and after releaseth to him and his heires, this is an absolute discontinuance; because the fee simple is executed in the life of tenant in taile.[y] If tenant in taile of a manor whereunto an advowson is appendant, maketh a feoff-ment in fee by deed (as it ought to be) of one acre with the advowson, and the church becommeth void, and the feoffee present, tenant in taile dieth, the church becommeth void; the issue shall not present untill he hath re-continued the acre. But if the feoffee had not executed the same by presentment, then the issue in taile should have presented. And so was it at the common law, of the husband seised in the right of his wife, mutatis mutandis.If a fine be levied to a tenant in taile, and he granteth and rendreth the land to him and his heires, and die before execution, this is no discontinuance. Otherwise it is, if it had beene executed in the life of tenant in taile.If tenant in taile make a lease for life of the lessee, and after grant the reversion with warrantie, and dieth before execution, this is no discontinuance; because the discontinuance was (as hath beene said) but for life, and the warrantie cannot enlarge the same. (1)Et ceo est per force del grant de mesme le tenant en taile. Hereupon Littleton himselfe is of the same opinion, (*) as it appeareth he was in our bookes; that if tenant in taile make a lease for life, and grant the reversion in fee, and the lessee attorne, and that grantee granteth it over, and the lessee attorne, and then the lessee for life dieth, so as the reversion is executed in the life of tenant in taile, yet this is no discontinuance, but that after the death of tenant in taile the issue may enter; because (as Littleton here saith)
he is not in of the grant of the tenant in taile, but of his grantee.If at this day tenant in taile make a lease for life, and after by deed indented and inrolled according to the statute he bargaineth and selleth the reversion to another in fee, and the lessee dieth, so as the reversion is executed in the life of tenant in taile; albeit the bargainee is not in the per by the tenant in taile, yet inasmuch as he claimeth the reversion immediately from him, which is executed in his lifetime, this is a discontinuance. And so it is, and for the same cause, if tenant in taile had granted the reversion to the use of another and his heires. If tenant in taile maketh a lease for life, and after disseiseth the lessee for life, and maketh a feoffment in fee, the lessee dieth, and then tenant in taile dieth; albeit the fee be executed, yet for that the fee was not executed by lawful meanes, (as in all the cases of Littleton it appeareth it ought to be) it is no discontinuance.

Sect.

* No part of this or of the following Section within crotchets is in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) All this is a consequence of the doctrine laid down in the last page. If the remainder or reversion is created at the same time as the particular estate, it necessarily must be created by the same livery. If it is created at a subsequent time, then to continue the discontinuance after the determination of the particular estate, the reversion or remainder must be executed in possession during the life of the tennant in tail. The entry of the reversioner or remainder-man in this case is tantamount to a second livery.

upon the decease of dame Ann Atkyns, Mr. John Tracy became seised in tail of the lands devised by the testator's will, with the several remainders over.—In the year 1752, an ejectment was brought against Mr. Robert Atkyns, and Mr. and Mrs. Horde, and Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlayne, by Cyprian Taylor, on the demise of Mr. John Tracy, who, in consequence of a direction contained in sir Robert Atkyns the father's will, had taken the name of Atkyns. The jury found a special verdict.
The case was argued four times before the judges of the court of king's-bench. A point arose, whether, supposing the recovery to be bad, the plaintiff's ejectment, not having been brought within twenty-one years after his title accrued, was not barred by the statute of limitations. The court was of opinion it was barred by that statute. The case afterwards went to the house of lords:
all the judges were ordered to attend: their opinion was asked upon the point arising from the statute of limitations; it agreed with that of the judges of the court of king's bench: the judgment of the court was therefore affirmed. Afterwards, Mr.
John Tracy Atkyns and all his brothers died without issue; and then, supposing the recovery to be void, Mr. Edward Kinsey Atkyns, the then heir at law of Mr. Richard Atkyns, became entitled to the estate. He claimed under a new title, and was not therefore bound by the statute of limitations. An ejectment was delivered by him in Hilary term 1777. This brought the question of the validity of the recovery once more before the court. It is to be observed, that though, when the case came before the court upon the ejectment brought by Mr. John Tracy Atkyns, the matter went off on the point arising from the statute of limitations, yet the questions arising upon the validity of the recovery were most elaborately argued by the bar: and lord chief-justice Mansfield, when he gave the judgment of the court, entered into a very minute discussion of them, and gave his opinion very fully and decisively upon them all: so that what was said upon this subject, when the case came before the court in 1777, was, in general, only a repetition of what was said upon it on the former occasion. As lord Mansfield's speech, in the report given of it by sir James Burrow, contains the most methodical and comprehensive state of the arguments and opinions intended to be discussed in this place, it is here particularly referred to.—His lordship stated the question to be, Whether Earle was a good tenant of the freehold. He observed, that to prove he was a good tenant of the freehold, it was necessary to shew, either that sir Robert Atkyns, by the entry under the judgment in ejectment in 1710, acquired the freehold by disseisin; or that, supposing he did not acquire the freehold, he acquired the possession, and by his feoffment vested an estate of freehold in Earle. His lordship denied both of these positions.
As to the first, he laid it down, that the disseisin to be effectual in this case, must be an actual disseisin, not a disseisin, which was merely such, at the election of the party. No case, therefore, or other authority from the books respecting disseisins, was applicable to the present case, if it did not relate to an actual disseisin. He then proceeded to explain the nature of an actual disseisin. He defined

Sect. 621.

EN mesme le manner ferra, IN* the same manner shall it be, if (Post. 335. b. mesme le case.)
si en le case avantdit le te- in the case aforesaid the tenant nant a terme de vie apres l'at- for terme of life after the attornetournement al grantee uft alien ment to the grantee had aliened en fee, et le grantee uft enter pur in fee, and the grantee had entred forfeiture de son estate, et puis le by forfeiture of his estate, and af-tenant en taile uft devie, c'est un ter the tenant in taile had died, discontinuance, causã quã su- this is a discontinuance, causã quã pra.] supra.

THIS is added in this place, but in the originall it commeth in after in this Chapter *. 21. H. 6. 52. 53. 15. E. 4.
 Discont. 30.

Sect. 622.

MES en cest cas, si tenant en BUT* in this case, if tenant in taile (Sir W. Jones 209. Cro. Car. 156.)
taile que granta le rever- that grants the reversion, &c.
sion, &c. morust, vivant le tenant dieth, living the tenant for life, and a terme de vie, et puis le tenant a after the tenant for life dieth, and terme de vie morust, et puis ce- after hee to whom the reversion luy a que le reversion fuit graunt was granted enter, &c. then this is enter, &c. doncque ceo n'est pas no discontinuance, but that the is-discontinuance, mes que l'issue del sue of the tenant in taile may well tenant en taile poit bien enter enter upon the grantee of the re-sur le grauntee del reversion; version; because the reversion pur ceo que le reversion que le which the grantee had, &c. was grauntee avoit, &c. ne fuit exe- not executed, &c. in the life of the cute, &c. en le vie le tenant en tenant in taile, &c. And so there is taile, &c. Et issint il est graund a great diversitie when tenant in diversity quant tenant en taile taile maketh a lease for yeares, fuit un leas pur terme d'ans, et and where hee maketh a lease for lou il fait leas pur terme de vie; life; for in the one case hee hath a car en l'un cas il ad reversion en reversion in taile, and in the other taile, et en l'auter cas il ad un re- case hee hath a reversion in fee. (1) version en fee.

OF this sufficient hath beene said before, and is of itselfe manifest, and needeth no explication.

Like law was at the common law of a husband seised of land in right of his wife, mutatis mutandis. 18. Aff. 6. 21. H. 6. 53.

Sect.

* But it does not appear in this Chapter in L. and M. nor Roh. nor in MSS.

(1) See the note on the following Section.

defined feisin to be a technical term, to denote the completion of that investiture, by which the tenant was admitted into the tenure: disseisin, therefore, must mean the turning the tenant out of his tenure, and usurping his place and feudal relation. He observed, that originally no tenant could alien without licence of the lord; and that, when the lord consented to the alienation, the only form of conveyance was by feoffment, before the peers of the court, with the lord's concurrence, and with the ceremonies of homage and fealty. That a disseisin differed from a disposssession. It was something more. The effect of it was to make the disseisor tenant to every demandant, and freeholder de facto, in spite of the true owner. That, on the one hand, the lord must know upon whom to call as his tenant; on the other hand, the stranger must know against whom to bring his præcipe. A disposssession, therefore, did not amount to a disseisin, if it were not forcible, that is, against the will of the real owner; and if it were not such as, both with respect to the lord and to strangers, introduced the dispossessor into the tenure. These, he said, were the consequences of an actual disseisin. A disseisin by election was attended by none of these circumstances. In that case, the disseisor was neither tenant to the lord nor the stranger;—he was merely a disseisor at the will of the disseisee, who might, if he thought the process of assise a more eligible remedy than any of those to which he might have recourse, without disclaiming his feisin, resort to it, and, for that purpose, choose to be considered as disseised. From this description of the nature and consequences of the two different kinds of feisin, his lordship inferred, that sir Robert's entry was not an actual disseisin. Supposing it a real proceeding, a termor might recover against the disseisor, or against the feoffee of the lessor; the possession he recovered enured to himself, or for his own benefit during his term:—subject to that, it enured to, or for the benefit of the persons who had the right to the freehold; that is, to the lessor, if he continued the owner of the fee; to his alienee, if he had inclosed; to the heir or feoffee of his disseisor, if he had been disseised, and his entry taken away.—Then, suppose the proceeding to be merely fictitious, the judgment only entitled the party to recover the possession, without prejudice to the right. Now, by the special verdict it appears he had no right to the possession: he had therefore a possession without prejudice to the right. He was not in as particular tenant; there was no privy of feisin; he had only a naked possession.—But, says his lordship, the case is still stronger: the true owner cannot even elect to make a person in possession under a judgment in ejectment, a disseisor: the entry is not injuste & sine judicio, but under authority of a court of justice. The true owner might enter upon a disseisor. But after a judgment in ejectment, an actual entry would not be permitted. Upon this reasoning his lordship establishes his first position. That sir Robert Atkyns did not acquire, by his entry, an actual estate of freehold, by disseisin. This brought his lordship to the second question, Whether the feoffment to Earle vested an estate of freehold in him by disseisin. Here his lordship concluded, from

Sect. 623.

CAR si terre soit done a un home et a ses heires males de son corps engendres, le quel ad issue deux fits, et l'eigne fits ad issue file et devy, * et le tenant en taile fait un leas pur terme des ans et devy, ore le reversion descendist a le fits puisne, pur ceo que le reversion fuit forsque en le taile, et le fits puisne est heire male, &c. Mes si le tenant ust fait un leas pur terme de vie, &c. et puis morust, ore le reversion descendist a le file del eigne fits, pur ceo que le reversion est en fee simple, et la file est heire general, &c.

FOR if land bee given to a man and to his heires males of his body engendred, who hath issue two sonnes, and the eldest sonne hath issue a daughter and dieth, and the tenant in tayle maketh a lease for yeares and die, now the reversion descendeth to the younger sonne, for that the reversion was but in the taile, and the youngest sonne is heire male, &c. But if the tenant had made a lease for life, &c. and after died, now the reversion descendeth to the daughter of the elder brother, for that the reversion is in the fee simple, and the daughter is heire generall, &c. (1)

This is evident also, and needeth no explanation.

Sect. 624.

ITEM, si home soit seisse en taile de terres devisables per testament, &c. et il ceo devisa a un auter en fee, et morust, et l'auter enter, &c. ceo n'est pas discontinuance, pur ceo que nul discontinuance fuit fait en la vie del tenant en le taile, &c.

ALSO, if a man be seised in taile of lands devisable by testament, &c. and hée deviseth this to another in fee, and dieth, and the other enter, &c. this is no discontinuance, for that no discontinuance was made in the life of the tenant in taile, &c.

9. E. 4. 22. 20. H. 6. 14.
Vid. 18. E. 3. 8.
(Cro. Cra. 405.
1. Roll. Abr. 633.)

THIS is manifest, and needeth no explanation: only this is to be observed, that no discontinuance can be made by tenant in taile, but such as is made and taketh effect in his life-time, which is here implied in the (&c.)

Sect. 625.

[4] 9. E. 4. 24. b.

AND of this opinion is Littleton [a] in our bookes, and saith that so it was adjudged.

Enfeoffe le donor, &c. This must be understood where the reversion of the donor is immediately ex-

ITEM, si terre soit done en taile, savant le reversion al donor, et puis le tenant en taile per son fait enfeoffa le donor, ALSO, if land be given in taile, saving the reversion to the donor, and after the tenant in taile by his deed enfeoffe the do-

Lib. 1. fol. 140. in Chudlye's case.

* et le tenant en taile fait un leas pur terme des ans, et devy, not in L. and M. nor Rok.

(1) The estate of the lessee for years not being created by livery, does not displace the possession, and consequently does not disturb the descent of the inheritance upon the issues inheritable to the estate. It is otherwise where the lease is for life. That is created by livery, and therefore displaces the possession, and gives the tenant in tail a tortious estate in fee simple, in reversion immediately expectant upon the life estate of his donee;—that reversion must therefore descend on the daughter as heir general.

the principles laid down by him in his discussion of the first question, that the feoffment did not amount to an actual disseisin, but was such merely at the will of dame Atkyns. In this part of the question he says, that except the special case of fines with proclamation, which, he observed, stands upon distinct grounds, and the construction of the stat. of 4 Hen. VII. c. 24. for the sake of the bar, he could not think of a case where the true owner, whose entry is not taken away, might not elect, by choosing a possessory remedy, to be deemed as not having been disseised. The judges of the king's bench, in the opinion delivered by them in 1774, express themselves still more strongly on this head. They say, that "where the books speak of feoffments in fee by tenants for years, and that the fee simple passes thereby, it is to be understood of those feoffments of old, attended with livery, and actual transmutation of the possession from one man to another; that feoffments, from having been the only conveyance of land, for a long term of years have languished into mere form, and are nothing now more than a common conveyance; that their grandeur and efficacy is lost; and that without actually transferring of the estate from one man to another, they mix with the community of all other assurances: that the name of these feoffments, and the remembrance of them, remains, and survives them, however imperfectly, after the practice of making them, and consequently their solemnity, is quite at an end." Lord Mansfield afterwards considered the case in a third point of view, which was, That a tenant in tail in remainder could not, by the established law of the land, suffer a common recovery, without the consent and concurrence of the immediate tenant of the freehold. Now, says his lordship, the law will never permit that to be effected by wrong, unfair, or indirect means, which cannot be effected by right, fair, and direct means: but sir Robert could not by right, fair, or direct means, suffer a common recovery, in the life of dame Ann, without her concurrence; he never had her concurrence; it follows, that his recovery must have been covinous, and therefore void. Upon these grounds, the court were of opinion, 1st, that sir Robert Atkyns the son by his entry under the verdict in 1710, was not an actual disseisor, and therefore had not in him any actual estate of freehold: 2dly, that his feoffment to Earle gave Earle an estate of freehold only at the election of dame Atkyns, but did not give him an actual estate of freehold; and, 3dly, that the whole transaction was fraudulent, and therefore void. The doctrine upon which the first of a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires a tous jours, et liver a luy seisin accordant, &c. ceo n'est pas discontinuance, pur ceo que nul poit discontinuer l'estate en le taile, si non que il discontinue le reversion celuy que ad le reversion, &c. ou le remainder, si ascun ad le remainder, &c. Et entant que per tiel feoffment fait a le donnor (le reversion adonques esteant en luy) son reversion ne fuit discontinue ne alterate, &c. cest feoffment n'est pas discontinuance, &c.

nor, to have and to hold to him and to his heires for ever, and deliver to him seisin accordingly, &c. this is no discontinuance, because none can discontinue the estate taile, unless he discontinueth the reversion of him who hath the reversion, &c. or remainder, if any hath the remainder, &c. And inasmuch as by such feoffment made to the donnor (the reversion then being in him) his reversion was not discontinued nor altered, &c. this feoffment is no discontinuance, &c.

pectant upon the estate of the donee; [b] for if a man make a gift in taile the remainder in taile, reserving the reversion to himselfe: in this case if the donee enfeoffe the donor, this is a discontinuance, because there is a meane estate; and so doth Littleton here put his case of a reversion immediately expectant upon the gift in taile. Also it is to be intended of a feoffment made to the donor solely or only; for if the donee enfeoffe the donor and a stranger, this is a discontinuance of the whole land.

But if tenant for life make a lease for his owne life to the lessor, the remainder to the lessor and an estranger in fee: in this case forasmuch as the limitation of the fee should worke the wrong, it enureth to the lessor as a surrender for the one moitie, and a forfeiture as to the remainder of the stranger; for he cannot give to the lessor that which he had before, as our author here saith; and as to the remainder to the stranger, it is a forfeiture

(1. Roll. Abr. 634.)
[b] 41. Aff. 2. 41. E. 3. 2.
(1. Rep. 146. b.)

(Ant. 42. a.)

28. H. 8. Dier 12.

(1. Rep. 76. b. Sid. 361.)

(Dyer 12. b.)

(Ant. 169. a. 186. a. 193. b.
200. b. 2. Roll. Abr. 86. 403.
1. Rep. 100. b. 4. Leo. 23.)

40. Aff. 36. 21. Aff. 36.
18. E. 3. 45. F. N. B. 142. a.
Pl. Com. 555.

[c] 33. H. 8. tit. Taile. Br. 41.
Pl. Com. ubi supra.

[d] 27. Aff. p. 60. 29. Aff.
43. 11. Aff. 11. 16. Aff. 11.
18. E. 3. 45.
(Ant. 333. b. Post. 336.)

for his moitie, and when the lessor entreteth, he shall take the benefit of it. But if two joynt-nants be, and one of them enfeoffe his companion and a stranger, and make livery to the stranger; this shall vest only in the stranger, because the livery cannot enure to his companion.

Nul poit discontinuer l'estate en taile, si non que il discontinue le reversion, &c. ou le remainder, &c. And therefore for this cause, if the reversion or remainder be in the king, the tenant in taile cannot discontinue the estate taile. [c] But tenant in taile, the reversion in the king, might have barred the estate taile by a common recovery, untill the statute of 34 H. 8. ca. 20. which restraineth such a tenant in taile; but that common recovery neither barred nor discontinued the king's reversion. (1)

Note, the reversion may be revested, and yet the discontinuance remaine. [d] As if a feme covert be tenant for life, and the husband make a feoffment in fee, and the lessor enter for the forfeiture; here is the reversion revested, and yet the discontinuance remained at the common law.

Sect. 626.

EN mesme le maner est, lou terres sont dones a un home en taile, le remainder a un auter en fee, et le tenant en taile enfeoffa celuy que est en le remainder, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires; ceo n'est pas discontinuance, causâ quâ supra.

IN the same manner is it, where lands are given to a man in taile, the remainder to another in fee, and the tenant in taile enfeoffe him that is in the remainder, to have and to hold to him and to his heires; this is no discontinuance, causâ quâ supra. (2)

(1. Roll. Abr. 633.)

LE remainder a un auter. Here it appeareth that (as hath beene said in case of a reversion) the remainder must be immediately expectant upon the estate taile.

Sect.

(1) See Stone v. Newman, 2. Cro. 427.

(2) IX. As to discontinuances made to, or with the concurrence of, the remainder-man or reversioner:—The feoffment of tenant in taile to the immediate remainder-man or reversioner in fee, has the operation of a surrender. In this light it cannot be considered to pass a greater estate than the grantor may lawfully convey: it does not, therefore, work a discontinuance. But if it is made to a stranger, the mere concurrence of the remainder-man or reversioner does not prevent the discontinuance, either with respect to the issues in tail, or his own remainder or reversion, even though the tenant in tail die without having issue. Thus, in Baker v. Hacking, 3. Cro. 387. 405. J. C. being tenant in tail, with the immediate reversion in fee to R. C. both of them joined in a feoffment to A. for life. R. C. made his will and died; and then J. C. died without issue. It was admitted, that if it were a discontinuance of the reversion, the deviser, not being seised, had no power to devise. Sir Geo. Croke was of opinion, that as there was no issue of the tenant in tail, his feoffment was no discontinuance of the reversion: he considered it as the lease of the tenant in tail during his life, and afterwards, the lease of the reversioner; and that the reversioner's joining shewed it was not the intention of the parties to displace his estate. But the three other judges held it to be a discontinuance on the ground, that the effect of a discontinuance is immediate, and does not depend on the tenant in tail having or not having issue.—They were also of opinion, that if the reversion in fee, instead of being in a stranger, had been in the tenant in tail himself, the feoffment would have been a discontinuance, as well of his own reversion as of the estate of the issue in tail.—But where the tenant for life and reversioner join in the conveyance, each of them is considered to pass his own estate: the tenant for life, the freehold; the reversioner, the inheritance. Hence if tenant for life, remainder in tail, remainder in fee, join in a fine, it is no discontinuance to the remainder-man in fee. This was resolved in Peck v. Channell, 1. Cro. 827, 828. on the ground, that none shall make a discontinuance, but he who is seised of an estate tail in possession.

of these points turns, is not immediately the subject of the present enquiry. But some of the principles laid down by the court in giving their opinions on the 2d and 3d points, will be investigated here, under two general questions: 1. What estate in the lands a feoffor must have to give the feoffment efficacy.—It seems to be admitted by the court, in the case referred to, that, originally, no greater estate was required to be in the feoffor than mere possession. This they attribute to the solemnities originally attending both the admission of tenants into the tenure, and the transfer of the fee. But it seems to be their opinion, that, since most, if not all, of these solemnities have been dispensed with, the peculiar efficacy of a feoffment has been lost. This has certainly been the case in one very remarkable instance. Lord chief-baron Gilbert, in his Treatise of Tenures, p. 43. observes, "that the feoffee of the disseisor that came in by title, after a year and a day was expired, was anciently held, to have right of possession,"

Sect. 627.

*ITEM, si un abbe ad un reversion, ou rent service, ou rent charge, et voile graunter * cel reversion, ou rent service, ou rent charge, a un auter en fee, et le tenant atturna, &c. ceo n'est pas discontinuance.*

ALSO, if an abbot hath a reversion, or a rent service, or a rent charge, and he will grant this reversion, or rent service, or rent charge, to another in fee, and the tenant attorne, &c. this is no discontinuance.

Of inheritances that lie in grant, sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 628.

EN mesme le manner lou abbe est seifie d'un advowson, ou de tielx choses que passent per voy d'un grant sans liverye de seisin, &c.

IN the same manner where an abbot is seised of an advowson, or of such things which passe by way of grant without liverye of seisin, &c.

HERE it appeareth, (as hath beene said) that an advowson doth not lie in liverye, but in grant.

Sect. 629.

(Ant. 234. a.)

ITEM, si tenant en taile lessa sa terre a un auter pur terme de vie, et puis il graunta en fee le reversion a un auter, et le tenant atturna, et puis le tenant a terme de vie aliena en fee, et le grantee de reversion entra, &c. en le vie le tenant en le taile, et puis le tenant en le taile morust, son issue ne poit enter, mes est mis a son brieve de formedon, pur ceo que le reversion en fee simple que le grauntor avoit per le grant del tenant en le taile, fuit execute en le vie de mesme le ternaunt en le taile, et pur ceo est un discontinuance en fee, &c.

ALSO, if tenant in tayle letteth his land to another for life, and after he granteth in fee the reversion to another, and the tenant attorne, and after the tenant for life alien in fee, and the grantee of the reversion enter, &c. in the life of the tenant in taile, and after the tenant in taile dieth, his issue shall not enter, but is put to his writ of formedon, because the reversion in fee simple which the grauntor had by the graunt of the tenant in tayle, was executed in the life of the same tenant in tayle, and therefore it is a discontinuance in fee, &c.

Of this sufficient hath beene said before.

SECT.

* cel reversion, ou rent service, ou rent charge,—un d'eux, L. and M. and Roh. but as above in MSS.

" and to put the disseisee to his writ of entry, because the feoffee came in by title. Hence, writs of entry against the feoffee in the " per and cui :—but this was not held so in respect of disseisors, because they themselves being the wrong-doers, had no law in " their favour, lest it should encourage such injuries. But afterwards, as feoffments became more secret, and nothing paid to the " lord, then they thought it too hard such feoffments should alter the right of possession; and therefore they construed the feoffee, " that came in by his own act, to be a wrong-doer, and not to alter the right of possession." But it will be difficult to find another instance in which feoffments have lost their efficacy. The arguments brought to prove that they have lost their efficacy in creating an estate of freehold, when it is not in the feoffor at the time of the feoffment, are, 1st. that livery is not made now with the solemnity with which it was made formerly;—2dly. that the passages in the books which speak of feoffments by tenants for years, and others having estates less than freehold, creating estates of freehold in the feoffee, by disseisin, are to be understood as referring only to a disseisin by election.—As to the first objection, It seems to be every where admitted, that the feoffments we are speaking of, once had the operation and efficacy in question; and that this operation and efficacy is ascribed to them in numberless passages in our law books: so that the great, if not the only, difficulty is to shew, that, at the time when it is universally agreed feoffments had this operation and efficacy, they were made with no other forms and solemnities than those with which they are made now. It is certain, that the custom of making livery before the peers of the court, and recording the entry of the feoffee in the records of the lord's court (if it were ever absolutely necessary), was dispensed with very soon after the Conquest, and was fallen completely into disuse at so early a period as that of Henry II.; so that in this reign, and from thence to the present time, no other ceremony in making feoffments was used, than that which is now practised, of the feoffor and feoffee coming upon the land, either in person or by attorney, and there the feoffor in the presence of witnesses (all other persons being out of the land) delivering the possession of it to the feoffee. The form of making feoffments in the reign of Henry II. is minutely described in Bracton, lib. 2. cap. 18. Item, non valet donatio, nisi subsequatur traditio, tunc demum, cum donator plenam fecerit seisinam donatorio per se si presens fuerit, vel per procuratorem, & literas si absens fuerit, ita quod charta donationis & literae procuratorie coram vicinis, ad hoc specialiter convocatis, legantur in publicis, & etiam cum donator corpore & animo recesserit a possessione. This is the account given by Bracton of the mode of making feoffments in his time. He makes no mention of the presence of the pares curie being necessary; or of its being necessary to record the entry of the feoffee in the lord's court; or of any other ceremony besides those now practised. Hence we find that the account given by Sir William Blackstone, book 2. chap. 2. § 3. of the present mode of making feoffments, is no more than a transcript of the passage cited above from Bracton. The next thing to be shewn is, that as the ceremony of making feoffments has been the same during all this period, the courts of judicature, and the writers upon our laws, have, during all this period, agreed in ascribing to them the effect and operation in question. Their language

Sect. 630.

ET nota, que ascuns font discontinuances pur terme de vie. Sicome tenaunt en le taile fait un lease pur terme de vie, savant le reversion a luy auxy longement que le reversion est al tenant en taile, ou a ses beires; ceo n'est discontinuance, forsque durant la vie le tenant a terme de vie, &c. Et si tiel tenant en taile dona les tenements a un auter en taile, savant le reversion, donques ceo est discontinuance durant le second taile, &c.

AND note, that some make discontinuances for terme of life. As if tenant in tayle make a lease for life, saving the reversion to him as long as the reversion is to the tenaunt in tayle, or to his heyres; this is no discontinuance but during the life of tenant for life, &c. And if such tenant in taile giveth the lands to another in tayle, saving the reversion, then this is a discontinuance during the second tayle, &c. (1. Roll. Abr. 631.)

THIS is manifest, and hath beene handled before, and needeth no explanation; onely this is to be observed, where Littleton putteth hereafter cases of discontinuances by feoffment, &c. he hath a double entendment. First, by feoffment, or by any other conveyance which may make a discontinuance. Secondly, (&c.) implieth a discontinuance by a gift in taile, or a lease for life, &c.

Sect. 631.

MES lou le tenant en taile fait un lease pur terme d'ans, ou pur terme de vie, le remainder a un auter en fee, et delivra liverie de seisin accordant, ceo est discontinuance en fee, pur ceo que le fee simple passa per force de liverie de seisin, &c.

BUT where the tenant in tayle maketh a lease for yeares or for life, the remainder to another in fee, and delivereth liverie of seisin accordingly, this is a discontinuance in fee, for that the fee simple passeth by force of the liverie of seisin, &c.

This is evident also, and hereof sufficient hath beene spoken before.

Sect. 632.

ET est ascavoir, que ascuns tiels discontinuances font fait sur condition, &c. et pur ceo que les conditions sont enfreints, &c. ou pur

AND it is to be understood, that some such discontinuances are made upon condition, &c. and for that the conditions be broken, &c. or for DISCONTINUANCES fait sur condition, &c. Here is to be understood a diversitie betweene a condition in deed, whereof Littleton here speaketh, and a condition in law, whereof somewhat hath beene said before in this chapter, viz.

guage in this respect is perfectly uniform, that no freehold is required in the feoffor, and that however tortious or slender his possession may be, his feoffment, necessarily and unavoidably, gives an estate of freehold to the feoffee. Nothing can be more decisive on this subject, than the following passages transcribed from Bracton:—*Poterit autem res esse omnino aliena, & ex toto, quantum ad jus & proprietatem, & feodum, & liberum tenementum, usum fructum, & nudum usum; & aliquis posuerit se in feysnam, per disseysnam, vel per intrusionem, cum sorte invenerit rem vacantem. Et si talis, dum ita fuerit in feysina, donationem fecerit, valebit quantum ad ipsum, & feoffatum suum, & alios, qui jus non habent, ut prius dictum est, donec per illum, qui jus habet, revocetur. Item poterit esse aliena, quantum ad omnia predicta, et alicujus in possessione existentis, quoad nudum usum, vel quoad hoc, quod servitutem habeat in re, quoad usum fructum percipiendum, sive ad certum terminum vel ad voluntatem. Item quoad hoc, quod habeat custodiam, vel curam, vel hujusmodi; in quibus casibus, si dum sic fuerit in feysina, quali quali, donationem fecerit, statim fit res data accipientis, quoad dantem & accipientem, & quoad alios, qui jus non habent. Sed quoad verum dominum, nunquam erit liberum tenementum, nisi ex longa & pacifica feysina, & unde si incontinenti post tale feoffamentum possit verus dominus ponere se in feysnam, omnes quoscunque tenere possit exclusus a possessione.—Sed quid dicatur de eo qui nullam omnino feysnam habuit, nec aliquid juris scintillam, si donationem fecerit de re quam alius tenet, per se ipsum vel per alium nomine suo, non faciet rem accipientis, cum ipse nihil teneat, quia non potest plus juris ad alium transferre quam ipse habet, nec plus valebit ista donatio quam valeret si aliquis transiens per aliquod manerium ab aliquo possessum, diceret socio suo viatori, Do tibi tale manerium, quod talis possidet, quia nihil aliud esset dicere quam dare ei plenam pugnatam ex nihilo, cum possessio non sit vacua.—Bract. lib. 2. c. 14.—Si fiat donatio de re aliena.—So, in another place: Item licet liberum tenementum non habuerit, potest facere quis, dum tamen in feysina fuerit aliqua iusta de causa, sicut ad terminum annorum, vel ratione custodie. Idem erit, si nullam iustam causam habuerit, ut si per intrusionem vel disseysnam; et cum sit in feysina alius donare poterit, licet non cum effectu et aliis per donationem facere liberum tenementum, quod quidem ipse non habuerit.—Ibid. lib. 2. c. 5. § 4.—It seems to be clear from these passages, that in Bracton's time, every person who had the possession, however slender his possession might be, as termor for years, tenant at will, or guardian; or however tortious his possession might be, as a disseisor or intruder; was nevertheless considered to be in the seisin of the fee, and might by livery transfer it to another. Bracton frequently repeats this doctrine, and illustrates it by many examples in the course of the second book.—Such is the account given by Bracton of the operation of feoffments; and as the account given by him of the form of feoffments has been contrasted with the account given of it by William Blackstone, the reader is desired to contrast the above account given by him of the operation of feoffments with the account given of it by Edward Coke, ant. 48. b. and 49. a. He expresses himself to the same effect in his 2d Inst. fol. 413. Commenting on the statute of Westminster 2. cap. 2. he observes, that though the act speaks of an alienation by feoffment by a tenant for years, yet*

(Ant. 335. a.)

viz. where the feme is tenant for life, and the husband maketh a feoffment in fee, and the lessor entreth for the condition in law.

Conditions sont enfreints, &c. Here is implied, or any cause given either by disability of the feoffees, or by any condition performed on the part of the feoffor, or otherwise, whereby the state is in any sort avoided.

(1. Rep. 59.)

Come si le baron soit seisi de certain terre en droit sa feme, &c.

Here it appeareth, that for the condition broken, the heire of the husband may enter; for albeit no right descend from the husband to his heire, yet the title of entry by force of the condition which the husband created upon the feoffment, and reserved to him and his heirs, doth descend to his heire; and Littleton saith truly, that so it hath been adjudged.

4. H. 6. 2. 9. H. 7. 24. b. Lib. 8. fol. 43, 44. Whittingham's case.

(Ant. 12. b. 46. b. 202. a.)

Sur le heire. Note, when the heire in this case hath entred for the condition broken, and hath avoided the feoffment, the estate of the other causes, according to the course of law, such estates are defeated, then are the discontinuances defeated, and shall not by force of them take any man from his entrie, &c. As if the husband be seised of certaine land in right of his wife, and maketh a feoffment in fee upon condition, and dyeth, if the heire after enter upon the feoffee for the condition broken, the entrie of the wife was congeable upon the heire, for that by the entry of the heire the discontinuance is defeated, as is adjudged.

*autres causes, selonque le course de la ley, tiels estates sont defeatés, donques sont les discontinuances defeatés, et ne tollent aucun home per force de eux de son entrie, &c. * Come si le baron soit seisi de certaine terre en droit sa feme, et fait feoffement en fee sur condition, et devie, si le heire apres enter sur le feoffee pur le condition enfreint, l'entrie la feme est congeable sur le heire, pur ceo que per l'entrie del heire le discontinuance est defeat, come est adjudge.*

the feme or her heirs, without any entry or claime by her or them; for the heire entreth in respect of the condition, upon the reall contract, and not of any right, as hath been said; and if the husband himselfe had re-entred, the state had vested in his wife: and therefore where Littleton and our bookes say, that the wife shall enter upon the heire, the meaning is, that after the re-entry of the heire she may enter.

Whittingham's case, ubi supra.

Sect. 633.

Whittingham's case, ubi supra.

THE reason here rendered by Littleton is, for that the husband cannot enter in his owne right, but in the right of his wife; and the heire of the husband cannot enter, for no right or title descends unto him, and the wife in this case shall take benefit of the nonage of her husband, and enter into the land.

If an infant be tenant for another man's life, and make a feoffment in fee, and cestuy que vie dieth, the infant himselfe shall not enter, because he hath no right at all.

ITEM, si feme inheritrix que ad un baron, quel baron est deins age, et il esteant deins age fait un feoffment de les tenements son feme en fee, et morust, il ad este question, si la feme poit enter, ou non, &c. Et il semble a ascuns, que l'entry la

ALSO, if a woman inheritrix hath a husband who is within age, and hee beeing within age maketh a feoffment of the tenements of his wife in fee, and dieth, it hath beene a question, if the wife may enter or not, &c. And it seemeth to some, that the

* The remaining part of the above Section is not in L. and M. nor Roh. nor in Pynson, nor MSS. But in all, the case of the grandfather, father, and son, Sect. 637. is here inserted, with some small variation.

yet it extends to tenants by statute-merchant, statute-staple, tenant at will, and tenant by sufferance; because all these have a possession. But he observes, that it is otherwise of a bailiff, for he has no possession at all.—Several other authorities will be offered to prove this point in a subsequent part of this note; one more authority only shall be mentioned here. Mr. Knowler in his argument for the defendant in the case above referred to, seems, with reason, to lay great stress upon it. It is 10. Ed. IV. 8, 9. In trespass, the defendants said, that one M. was seised in his demesne as of fee, and leased to him for his life. The plaintiff said, that long before M. had any thing in the land, D. was seised in fee, and leased to E. for life; that E. died, and thereupon the reversion descended upon Jane his daughter, who married M.; that M. granted the reversion to the defendant for life; that the tenant attorned; that M. died, and then Jane granted the reversion to the plaintiff, and the tenant attorned; whereupon he (the plaintiff) entered, and was seised till the defendant made the trespass without this, that M. whom the defendant supposes to have leased to him, was seised in his demesne as of fee. It is to be observed, that the leases mentioned here, being for lives, were necessarily created by livery. The question before the court therefore was, Whether want of seisin in a feoffor was a good plea? All the judges held it was not; and that the plaintiff should have pleaded generally ne lessu pas. And Littleton expressly says there, that if a man pleads a feoffment, it is no plea to say, that the feoffor had nothing at the time; he can only plead n'enfeoffa pas.—Here then we have the most decisive evidence, that from the reign of Henry II. to the present time, the courts of judicature and the writings of the professors of the law are perfectly agreed, in considering feoffments as made with the same ceremonies, and attended with the same efficacy and operation. It follows from this, that it can be no argument against their having the efficacy and operation contended for in the particular instance now in question—that at a period anterior to that mentioned here, they were made (if that really was the case) with more notoriety and ceremony than they are now.—As to the second objection, that the passages in the books which speak of tenants for years and others having estates less than of freehold, creating estates of freehold in the feoffee by disseisin, are to be understood as referring only to a disseisin by election;—lord Mansfield, on his entering into this part of the argument, observes, that the precise definition of what constituted that disseisin which made the disseisor the tenant to the demandant's præcipe, though the right owner's entry was not taken away, was once well known, but that it is not now to be found. Most unquestionably there are many cases in which it would now be difficult, perhaps impossible, to say with certainty, whether they amounted to an actual disseisin, according to the doctrine of the old law; yet surely many cases may be stated, which by the most conclusive and satisfactory reasoning may be shewn to be actual disseisins, according to that law. Perhaps the following observations may serve to establish a general rule for distinguishing those acts which amount to actual disseisins, from those which feme apres la mort sa baron, est congeable en cest cas. Car quant sa baron feasoit tiel feoffment, &c. il pouvoit bien enter, nient contristant tiel feoffment, &c. durant la couverture; et il ne pouvoit enter en son droit demesne, mes en le droit la feme: ergo, tiel droit que il avoit d'entrer en droit sa feme, &c. cest droit d'entrer demurt al feme apres son decease.

entrie of the wife after the death of her husband, is congeable in this case. For when her husband made such feoffment, &c. he might well enter, notwithstanding such feoffment, &c. during the couverture; and he could not enter in his owne right, but in the right of his wife: ergo, such right as hee had to enter in the right of his wife, &c. this right of entrie remayneth to the wife after his decease.

If the husband within age take to wife some tenant in taile generall, and the husband make a gift in taile and dieth within age, in this case the wife may enter, as Liverton here holdeth, or the heire of the husband in respect of the new reversion descended unto him may enter. But if the heire enter, presently thereupon his estate vanisheth. If tenant in taile being within the age of one and twenty yeeres make a feoffment in fee, and after is attainted of felony and dieth, the entry of the issue is not lawfull; for his entry is not lawfull in respect of his estate only, but of his blood also which is corrupted; and therefore in that case he is driven to his formdon.

If husband and wife be both within age, and they by deed indented joyne in a feoffment reserving a rent, the husband dieth, the wife may enter, or have a dum fuit infra etatem. But if she were of full age, she shall not have a dum fuit infra etatem, for the nonage of her husband, albeit they be but one person in law.

(8. Rep. 43.)

14. E. 3. Bre. 281. 14. E. 3.

Dum fuit infra etatem 6.

F. N. B. 192.

(1. Roll. Abr. 634.)

Sect. 634.

ET il y ad este dit, que si deux joyntenants esleants deins age font un feoffment en fee, et l'un des enfants devy, et l'auter survesquist; entant que les ambideux enfants puissent enter joyntment en leur vies, cel droit accruist tout a luy que survesquist, et pur ceo celuy que survesquist poit enter en l'entiertie, &c. Et auxy l'heire le baron que fist le feoffment deins age ne poit enter, &c. pur ceo que nul droit descendist a tiel heire en le cas avantdit, pur ceo que le baron n'avoit unques riens forsque en droit de sa feme, &c.

AND it hath beene said, that if two joyntenants being within age make a feoffment in fee, and one of the infants die, and the other surviveth; in as much as both the infants might enter joyntly in their lives, this right accrueth all to him which surviveth, and therefore hee that surviveth may enter into the whole, &c. And also the heire of the husband which made the feoffment within age cannot enter, &c. because no right descendeth to such heire in the case aforesaid, for that the husband had never any thing but in right of his wife, &c.

POIT enter en l'entiertie, &c.

And the reason hereof is implied in this (&c.) for that they may joyne in a writ of right, and therefore the right shall survive. But they cannot joyne in a dum fuit infra etatem, because the nonage of the one is not the nonage

21. E. 3. 50. 18. E. 2. Bre. 831.

6. E. 3. 4. 9. H. 6. 6. 1. H. 6. 6.

39. H. 6. 42. 34. H. 6. 31.

F. N. B. 192.

which are such only at the election of the party. By a disseisin at the election of the party, is not to be understood an act which in itself is a disseisin, but which the party supposed to be disseised, may, if he please, consider as not amounting to a disseisin: on the contrary, every act which is susceptible of being made a disseisin by election, is no disseisin till the party in question, by his election, makes it such. It follows therefore, that every act which is said by the writers to produce an immediate disseisin, necessarily implies an actual disseisin. Now we find, that the disseisins produced by feoffments instantly gave the feoffee, against every person but the disseisor, an immediate estate of freehold, with all the rights and incidents annexed to it. To this effect Bracton writes, lib. 2. ch. 5. § 3. Item valida poterit esse donatio statim ab initio inter quasdam personas, et invalida et suspensa quantum ad alias personas, ut si quis rem alienam dederit alicui, ut supra dictum est. Hence we find every where, that the wife of the feoffee became immediately intitled to her dower; the husband of the feoffee became immediately intitled to his curtesy; and the descent upon the heir of the feoffee immediately took away the entry of the disseisor. This is the constant language of the books, when they speak generally of disseisins. Now the books make no difference, whether the feoffment is made by a person seized of an estate of freehold, or by a person having only the bare possession, as tenant for years, at will, or by sufferance. The description given by Bracton in the passages cited from him, answers every notion given by lord Mansfield of an actual disseisin. Bracton says, that immediately upon the feoffment the estate becomes the property of the feoffee, as between him and the feoffor, and every other person, except the rightful owner; that a long and uninterrupted possession of a certain duration, will make the title of the feoffee good even against the rightful owner; that, to prevent this, the donor must restore his own seisin.—Here then is what his lordship so justly considers as necessarily requisite to form an actual disseisin—a person who has expelled the tenant from his fee, and usurped his feudal place and relation; a tenant to the præcipe of every demandant, though the true owner's right of entry upon him is not taken away. If the feoffee in this case were only a disseisor at the election of the disseisor, it would follow, that he was not a disseisor till the right owner made him such by his election, and therefore, that the fee would not be in him, if the rightful owner did not elect to make him a disseisor. According to this doctrine, if the feoffee of tenant for years, or any other person making a feoffment without an estate of freehold in him, died in the life of the rightful owner of the estate, the estate would not be subject to dower or curtesy, nor would the entry of the rightful owner be taken away. But we find, that in all cases in which our law-writers treat of disseisins made by feoffments, they consider it as a matter of course, that the estate of the feoffee, immediately, became an estate of freehold, with all the qualities and rights of a freehold estate annexed to it. A similar argument lies from the relation in which such a feoffee stood with respect to strangers. Bracton observes, that he immediately acquired the seisin of the fee as against strangers; which could not be, if he were only a disseisor at the election of the party. It has been observed before, that the books make no difference between feoffments made by persons having estates of freehold, and feoffments

Lib. 3. Cap. 11. Of Discontinuance. Sect. 635, 636.

See of this in the Chapter of Joyntenants.
(8. Rep. Whittingham's case.)

nonage of the other. In this case, if one joyntenant had made a feoffment in fee and died, the right should not have survived, for the joynture was severed for a time. If two joyntenants be, and the one is of full age, and the other within age, and both they make a feoffment in fee, and he of full age dieth, the infant shall enter, or have a dum fuit infra etatem but for the moitie.

Sect. 635.

(F. N. B. 192. a. 5. Rep. 27. 29.
6. Rep. 3. 9. Rep. 84. b.
8. Rep. 42.)

ET auxy quant un enfant fait un feoffment esteant deins age, ceo ne luy greevera ne ledra, mes que il poit enter bien, &c. car ceo serroit encounter reason, que tiel feoffment fait per celuy que ne fuit able de faire tiel feoffment, greevera ou ledra auter, de toller eux de lour entre, &c. Et pur ceux causes il semble a ascuns, que apres la mort de tiel baron issint esteant deins age al temps de le feoffment, &c. que sa feme bien poit enter, &c.

AND also when an infant make a feoffment being within age, this shall neither grieve nor hurt him, but that hee may well enter, &c. for it should be against reason, that such feoffment made by him that was not able to make such a feoffment, shall grieve or hurt another, to take them from their entry, &c. And for these reasons it seemeth to some, that after the death of such husband so being within age at the time of the feoffment, &c. that his wife may well enter, &c.

Bracl. fol. 14. Britton fol. 88. a.
Fleta lib. 3. cap. 3.
(Poll. 350. b. 380. b.)

MES que il poit enter bien, &c. Here is implied, that he might enter either within age, or at any time after full age, and likewise after his death his heire may enter. Meliorum enim conditionem facere potest minor deterorem nequaquam.

Nota. A speciall heire shall take advantage of the infancie of the ancestor. As if tenant in taile of an acre of the custome of borow English make a feoffment in fee within age, and dieth, the youngest sonne shall avoid it; for he is privie in blood, and claimeth by descent from the infant.

(8. Rep. 54. Ant. 12. a.)

And so if tenant in taile to him and the heires females of his bodie make a feoffment in fee and dieth within age, having issue a sonne and a daughter, the daughter shall avoid the feoffment. And so note, that a cause to enter by reason of infancie is not like to conditions, warranties, and estoppels, which ever descend to the heire at the common law.

The residue of this Section upon that which hath beene said is evident.

Sect. 636.

(Ante 218. b. Perk. 581.
2. Roll. Abr. 494.)

SURRENDER, sursum redditio, properly is a yeelding up of an estate for life or yeares to him that hath an immediate estate in reversion or remainder, wherein the estate for life or yeares may drowne by mutuall agreement betweene them. (1)

ITEM, si feme enkeritrix prent baron, et ont issue fite, et le baron morust, et el prent auter baron, et le second baron lessa la terre que il ad en droit sa feme a un au-

ALSO, if a woman inheritrix taketh husband, and they have issue a sonne, and the husband dieth, and she takes another husband, and the second husband letteth the land which he

ter

(1) A surrender differs from a release in this respect, that the release operates by the greater estate's descending upon the less:—a surrender is the falling of a less estate into a greater. As there is necessarily a privity of estate between the surrenderor and the surrenderer, no livery of seisin is necessary to a perfect surrender. See 2. Bla. Com. ch. 20.—In Thompson v. Leach, 2. Salk. 618. the court held, that a surrender immediately divests the estate out of the surrenderor, and vests it in the surrenderee; for this is a conveyance at common law, to the perfection of which no other act is requisite but the bare grant; and that, tho' it be true, that every grant is a contract, and there must be an actus contra actum, or a mutual consent, yet that consent is implied; that a gift imports a benefit; that an assumpsit to take a benefit may well be presumed; and that there is the same reason why a surrender should vest the estate before notice or agreement, as why a grant of goods should vest a property; or sealing of a bond to another in his absence, should be the obligee's bond, immediately without notice.

made by persons having estates less than freehold. Bracton expressly mentions guardians, tenants for years, by sufferance, at will, by disseisin, or intrusion, as persons whose feoffments are attended with the effect described above. So does sir Edward Coke, in the passage cited from the 2d Institute. So Perkins, sect. 222. "If lessee for years enfeoff a stranger, the lessor being upon the land, yet the land shall pass by the feoffment; but perhaps, if he continues upon the land, claiming the same after the feoffment, this countervails an entry for a forfeiture: and the reason why it passed by such a feoffment, is, because the lessor had nothing to do, to meddle with the possession of the land during the term." So Dyer, 362. b. A termor for 1000 years made a feoffment, by the words dedi, concessi, et feoffavi. It was made a doubt, whether the lands passed by the feoffment, so that the lessor might enter for the forfeiture; or whether the term passed by the first words. The very doubt shews that it was taken for granted, that without those words the freehold would vest in the feoffee. In the margin of that case it is said, that in the case of Read and Morpeth v. Errington (reported in Cro. Eliz. 322.) it was held, that the lessee for years might make a feoffment, notwithstanding the presence of the lessor; and that it was a forfeiture of the lease; for though the lessee had the possession and might dispose of it, yet the lessor might enter for the forfeiture. Thus, in the case of Blundell v. Baugh, sir William Jones 315. the judges held, that when tenant at will makes a lease rendering rent, and he enters and pays rent, that is no disseisin, but at the election of the first lessor; for, say they, it never shall be a disseisin, unless there be the claim of a stranger by entry to have the freehold, or unless the owner of the land waives the occupation of the land, or brings an action, or otherwise declares his intention, that he takes it by disseisin. Here the two kinds of disseisin are contrasted in the most direct and positive manner. The judges also, in the case of Blundell v. Baugh, cited Matthew Taylor's case, 34. Eliz. C. B. Tenant at will, or for years, makes a feoffment in fee, and dies, his wife brings dower against the feoffee, who pleaded ne unque seise que dower: but the whole court was against him; for in the instant the fee was gained. In 12. Edw. IV. 12. ant. 31. b. Cro. Jac. 615. that doctrine is controverted, on the ground that the seisin of the feoffor was but momentary: but this proves the position attempted to be established here; for if the feoffment

*ter pur terme de sa vie, et puis la feme morust, et puis le tenant a terme de vie surrendist son estate a le second baron, &c. quære, si le fite le feme poit enter en cest cas sur le second baron durant la vie le tenant a terme de vie, * &c. Mes il est cleere ley, que apres la mort le tenant a terme de vie, le fite la feme poit enter; pur ceo que le discontinuance, que fuit tantsolement pur terme de vie, est determine, &c. per la mort de mesme le tenant a terme de vie †.*

Michaelmasse next, this future interest cannot be surrendered, because there is no reversion wherein it may drown; but by a surrender in law it may be drowned. As if the lessee before Michaelmasse take a new lease for years either to begin presently, or at Michaelmasse, this is a surrender in law of the former lease. Fortior & æquior est dispositio legis quàm hominis (2)

Also there is a surrender without deed, whereof Littleton putteth here an example of an estate for life of lands, which may be surrendered without deed, and without livery of seisin; because it is but a yielding, or a restoring of the state againe to him in the immediate reversion or remainder, which are alwayes favoured in law. And there is also a surrender by deed; and that is of things that lie in grant, whereof a particular estate cannot commence without deed, and by consequent the estate cannot be surrendered without deed. But in the example that Littleton here putteth, the estate might commence without deed, and therefore might be surrendered without deed. And albeit a particular estate be made of lands by deed, yet may it be surrendered without deed, in respect of the nature and qualitie of the thing demised, because the particular estate might have beene made without deed; and so on the other side. If a man be tenant by the courtiesse, or tenant in dower of an advowson, rent, or other thing that lies in grant; albeit there the estate begin without deed, yet in respect of the nature and qualitie of the thing that lies in grant, it cannot be surrendered without deed. And so if a lease for life be made of lands, the remainder for life; albeit the remainder for life began without deed, yet because remainders and reversions, though they be of lands, are things that lie in grant, they cannot be surrendered without deed. See in my Reports plentifull matter of surrenders.

Quære, si le fite la feme poit enter, &c. Here Littleton maketh a quære. So as grave and learned men may doubt, without any imputation to them; for the most learned doubteth most, and the more ignorant for the most part are the more bold and peremptory. It is holden of some, that after the surrender the issue in taile during the life of tenant for life may enter; for that having regard to the issue, the state for life is drowned, and consequently the inheritance gained by the lease is by the acceptance of the surrender vanished and gone: as if tenant in taile make a lease for life, whereby he gaineth a new reversion (as hath beene

Note, there be three kinde (Ant. 218. b.) of surrenders, viz. a surrender properly taken at the common law, which is here before described, and whereof Littleton speaketh. (1) Secondly, a surrender by custome of lands holden by copy, or of customary estates, whereof you have read before, Sec. 74. and a surrender improperly taken (as appeare before, Sec. 550.) of a deed. And so of a surrender of a patent, and of a rent newly created, and of a fee simple to the king.

A surrender properly taken is of two sorts, viz. a surrender in deed, or by expresse words, (whereof Littleton here putteth an example) and a surrender in law wrought by consequent by operation of law. Littleton here putteth his case of a surrender of an estate in possession, for a right cannot be surrendered. And it is to be noted, that a surrender in law is in some cases of greater force than a surrender in deed. As if a man make a lease for yeares to begin at

(9. Rep. 75.)
2. Eliz. Dier. 176. 14. H. 7. 3.
27. Aff. 37. 49. E. 3. 2.
11. H. 4. 2. 12. H. 4. 21.
13. H. 4. 13.

14. H. 8. 15. 37. H. 6. 17.
21. H. 7. 6. 40. E. 3. 24.
31. Aff. 26. 50. E. 3. 6.
44. Aff. 3. 35. H. 8. Dier 37.
8. Aff. 20. 4. Ma. Dier. 141.
11. Eliz. Dier. 280.

6. H. 7. 9. 37. H. 6. 17.
21. H. 7. 6. 14. H. 7. 4.
Lib. 6. f. 69. Sir Moyle Finche's case.
(5. Rep. 11. 1. Leo. 323.
4. Rep. 53.)

(10. Rep. 67. 6. Rep. 69.
Cro. Jac. 84. 2. Roll. Abr. 494.
Ant. 47. b. Dyer 58.)
19. H. 6. 33. 27. Aff. 46.
14. H. 7. 4. 1. H. 6. 1.
Pl. Com. 541.

(Ant. 225. b. Cro. Car. 399;
2. Roll. Abr. 498.)

(10. Rep. 66, 67.)

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) By the stat. 29. Cha. II. c. 3. sect. 3. no lease, &c. either of freehold or term of years, or any uncertain interest, not being copyhold or customary interest, shall be surrendered, unless it be by deed or note in writing, signed by the party surrendering the same, or his agents thereunto lawfully authorized by writing, or by act and operation of law. Upon this statute it was held, by lord chief-baron Gilbert, in Magennis v. Macculloch, Gilb. Ca. in Eq. 236. that a lease for years cannot be surrendered by cancelling of the indenture without writing; because the intent of that statute was to take away the manner they formerly had of transferring interests to lands, by signs, symbols, and words only; and therefore, as a livery and seisin on a parol feoffment was a sign of passing the freehold, before the statute, but is now taken away by the statute; so the cancelling of a lease was a sign of a surrender, before the statute, but is now taken away, unless there be a writing under the hand of the party. In Farmer v. Rogers, 2. Will. p. 27. it was held, that the statute does not make a deed absolutely necessary to a surrender; for it directs it to be made either by deed or note in writing; and when it is made by a note in writing, there is no occasion for any stamp-duty, it not being a deed. But see 23. Geo. III. c. 58. sect. 1.

(2) For the first lease and the second cannot subsist together, and the parties, by making a contract of as high a nature for the same thing, tacitly consented to dissolve the former; for without the dissolution of that, the lessor could not grant to the lessee that interest which was already passed from the lessor to the lessee by the first lease. Note to the 11th edition.

feoffment in this case only gave a freehold at the election of the reversioner, the feoffor had no seisin. The same doctrine seems to be laid down very expressly by lord Hardwicke. Having occasion to mention a fine levied by tenant at will, he says, "If they meant a wrong thereby, they must have taken another method; as this could not work a disseisin on the trustees, and turn their estate to a right, while they were tenants at will to the trustees. This way indeed they might do it, according to the distinction taken in several cases, particularly in Dormer and Parkhurst, if they executed a feoffment on the land; because it is a feoffment on livery which is a notoriety to the trustees, and puts it on them to make entry to avoid." In the same manner, 3. Atk. 339. his lordship says, "If a man enters as my tenant, he does not gain such a possession to levy a fine thereon, unless he continues in possession; for a wrong-doer to gain a possession by disseisin, must not step on the land, and withdraw, and leave the rightful owner in possession, which would be sufficient to give a seisin on a feoffment, but not to levy a fine."—In every stage of our law, the most modern as well as the most antient, the peculiar operation of a feoffment, as to the divesting of estates, destruction of contingent remainders, and extinction of powers, has been recognised. Citations and arguments to prove the point before us, might be easily multiplied; but they shall be concluded here, by some observations upon the allowed effect of a fine levied by a tenant for years, or even by a tenant at sufferance, who has previously made a feoffment. No point of our law is more clearly settled, than that, unless some

21. H. 6. 53.
(Ant. 185. 8. Rep. 145.)

45. E. 3. 13. 5. H. 5. 9.
9. E. 4. 18.

40. E. 3. 13. 9. E. 4. 18.
1. H. 6. 1. 24. E. 3. 77.
5. H. 5. 8. 26. Aff. 38.
7. H. 6. b.
(6. Rep. 79. 7. Rep. 38.
Ant. 184. b.)

(Ant. 234)
48. E. 3. 16.
(Mo. 94.)

(Flo. Com. 198.)

(4. Leo. 37. Hob. 3.)
Adjudge Mich. 16. & 17. Eliz.
int. Turner pl. & Gray def. in ejectione firmæ in communi banco Rot. 945. Sir Francis Fleming's case.
[a] 6. H. 4. 7. Pl. Com. 418.

[b] 32. H. 8. Br. surrender 52.
(2. Cro. 275. Mo. 54.)

Vide Sect. 638.
(1. Roll. Abr. 634.)

beene said) if tenant for life surrender to the tenant in taile, the estate for life being drowned, the reversion gained by wrong is vanished and gone, and he is tenant in taile againe against the opinion Obiter of Portington, 21. H. 6. 53.

But herein are two diversities worthy of observation. The first is, that having regard to the parties to the surrender, the estate is absolutely drowned, as in this case betwene the lessee and the second baron. But having regard to strangers, who were not parties or privies thereunto, left by a voluntary surrender they may receive prejudice touching any right or interest they had before the surrender, the estate surrendered hath in consideration of law a continuance. (1) As if a reversion be granted with warrantie, and tenant for life surrender, the grantee shall not have execution in value against the grantor, who is a stranger during the life of tenant for life; for this surrender shall worke no prejudice to the grantor who is a stranger.

So if tenant for life surrender to him in reversion being within age, he shall not have his age; for that should be a prejudice to a stranger, who is to become demandant in a reall action.

If tenant for life grant a rent charge, and after surrender, yet the rent remaineth, for to that purpose he commeth in under the charge. Causâ quâ supra.

If a bishop be seised of a rent charge in fee, the tenant of the land enfeoffe the bishop and his successors, the lord enter for the mortmaine, he shall hold it discharged of the rent; for the entrie for the mortmaine affirmeth the alienation in mortmaine, and the lord claimeth under his estate; but if tenant for life grant a rent in fee, and after enfeoffe the grantee, and the lessor enter for the forfeiture, the rent is revived, for the lessor doth claime above the feoffment. But if I grant the reversion of my tenant for life to another for terme of his life, and tenant for life attorne, now is the waste of tenant for life dispunishable. (2) Afterwards I release to the grantee for life and his heires, or grant the reversion to him and his heires; now albeit the tenant for life be a stranger to it, yet because he attorned to the grantee for life, the estate for life which the grantee had shall have no continuance in the eye of the law as to him, but he shall be punished for waste done afterward.

The second diversity is, that for the benefit of an estranger the estate for life is absolutely determined. As if he in the reversion make a lease for yeares, or grant a rent charge, &c. and then the lessee for life surrender, the lease or rent shall commence maintenant. So in the case of Littleton, first, betwene the lessee and the second husband, the state for life is determined; and secondly, for the benefit of the issue it shall be so adjudged in law. Here note a diversity, when it is to the prejudice of a stranger, and when it is for his benefit.

If a man maketh a lease to A. for life, reserving a rent of 40 shillings to him and his heires, the remainder to B. for life, the lessor grant the reversion in fee to B. A. attorne, B. shall not have the rent; for that although the fee simple doe drowne the remainder for life betwene them, yet as to a stranger it is in esse; and therefore B. shall not have the rent, but his heire shall have it.

A master of an hospitall being a sole corporation, by the consent of his brethren makes a lease for yeares of part of the possessions of the hospitall; afterwards the lessee for yeares is made master, the terme is drowned; for a man cannot have a terme for yeares in his owne right and a freehold in auter droit to consist together (as if a man lessee for yeares take a feme lessor to wife). (3) [a] But a man may have a freehold in his owne right and a terme in auter droit; and therefore if a man lessor take the feme lessee to wife, the terme is not drowned, but he is possessed of the terme in her right during the coverture. [b] So if the lessee make the lessor his executor, the terme is not drowned. Causâ quâ supra. (4)

But if it had beene a corporation aggregate of many, the making of the lessee master had not extinguished the terme, no more than if the lessee had beene made one of the brethren of the hospitall.

* Sect. 637.

UN foits. Here it is to bee observed, that it is not necessary that the tenant in taile bee ever seised of an estate taile at the time when the discontinuance of the whole estate is begun: as if tenant in taile make a lease [NOTA, que un estate taile ne peut estre discontinue, mes la ou cestuy que fait le discontinuance fuit un foits seise per force de le taile, sinon] NOTE, that an estate taile cannot bee discontinued, but there where hee that makes the discontinuance was once seised by force of the taile, unless it be que

* The part of this Section within crotchets is not either in L. and M. nor Roh. nor MSS. and the remainder of this Section in those copies immediately follows (with a small variation) that part of the work which is distinguished by Sect. 632.

(1) On the surrender of terms of years by one termor for years to another termor for years, see Hughes v. Robotham, 1st Cro. 302.

(2) See note 2. ante 218. b.

(3) Cont. Lichden v. Winimore, 1. Roll. Abr. 954.

(4) Mergers were never favoured in courts of law, and still less in courts of equity. Hence, even in a very early period of the equitable jurisdiction of the court of chancery, it was admitted, that a fine or feoffment to lessee for years to the use of a stranger, did not extinguish the term; because the cestui que use had no method to compel the execution of it, but thro' the medium of the court of chancery; and the court would not compel him to execut it, to his own prejudice, during the continuance of the term. The statute of uses expressly saves the rights of the feoffee to the use; this preserves him the benefit of any terms which may be vested in him. Even where a termor for years was made a tenant to the præcipe, it was determined, that the momentary freehold vested in him, for the purpose of making him tenant, did not extinguish the term. Cro. Jac. 643. It is however dangerous to make feoffees or releasees to uses, trustees for terms of years, if they are also trustees for preserving contingent remainders; for if they should have occasion to enter for the forfeiture of the tenant for life, it may be made a question, whether, at least in law, that would not be a merger of their term.

some one of the parties to a fine has an estate of freehold in the lands, of which it is levied, it is totally void, as to all strangers, and may be avoided at any time by the plea, quod partes finis nihil habuerunt. Now, supposing a tenant for years to make a feoffment, and the feoffee afterwards to levy a fine, it is clear, that the fine would be without effect, unless the feoffment gave him an estate of freehold. In the case of Whaley v. Tancred, 1. Vent. 241. Sir Thomas Raymond, 219. 1. Leo. p. 2. 52. it was settled, that where a fine is levied in this manner, the fine will bar the lessor at the end of five years after the expiration of the term. This would never be the case unless the feoffment had previously created an estate of freehold.—In the case of Doc v. Proffer, Cowp. 217. Lord Mansfield expressed himself as follows:—"It is very true that I told the jury, they were warranted by the length of time in this case, to presume an adverse possession and ouster by one of the tenants in common, of his companion; and I continue still of the same opinion. Some ambiguity seems to have arisen from the term "actual ouster," as if it meant some act accompanied by real force, and as if a turning out by the shoulders were necessary. But that is not so. A man may come in by a rightful possession, and yet hold over adversely without a title. If he does, such holding over under circumstances will be equivalent to an actual ouster. For instance, length of possession during a particular estate, as a term of "one que soit per reason de garrantie, &c. Come] si soit aiel, pier, et fits, * et l'ayel soit tenant en taile, et est disseise per le pier que est son fits, et le pier fait un feoffment de ceo sans garrantie et devie, et puis l'ayel devie, le fits bien poit enter sur le feoffee, pur ceo que ceo ne fuit pas discontinuance, entant que le pier ne fuit seise per force de le taile al temps del feoffment, &c. mes fuit seise en fee per le disseisin fait al ayel.

by reason of a warranty, &c. As if there be grandfather, father, and son, and the grandfather is tenant in taile, and is disseised by the father who is his son, and the father maketh a feoffment of this without warranty and die, and afterwards the grandfather dies, the son may wel enter upon the feoffee, because this was no discontinuance, inasmuch as the father was not seised by force of the entaile at the time of the feoffment, &c. but was seised in fee by the disseisin of the grandfather.

for life, whereby he gaineth, as hath been said, a fee simple by wrong; in this case if he grant the reversion in fee, and the lessee dieth, the whole estate is discontinued; and yet at the time of the grant (by which the discontinuance continueth) hee was not seised by force of the taile; and therefore Littleton materially added these words (un feits) that is, that hee was once seised by force of the estate taile: and seeing that (as hath been said) a discontinuance is a privation, the rule of law agreeth well with the rule of philosophie, that omnis privatio presupponit habitum. and therefore he cannot discontinue that estate which he never had.

Sinon que il soit per reason del garrantie, &c. For in many cases a warrantie added to a conveyance is said to make a discontinuance ab

Vide Sect. 592. 596, 597 601. 640. 658.

effectu, although he that made the conveyance was never seised by force of the estate taile, because it taketh away the entrie of him that right hath, as a discontinuance doth. As if tenant in taile be disseised and dieth, and the issue in taile release to the disseisor with warrantie; in this case the issue was never seised by force of the taile; and yet this hath the effect of a discontinuance by reason of the warrantie, and the reason hereof appeareth before in this Chapter.

9. E. 4. 19. 12. E. 4. 11. 21. E. 4. 97.

Le fits poit enter. But if the father that made the feoffment had survived the grandfather, he should never have entred against his own feoffment; but albeit the father had survived, yet after his decease the sonne should have entred, for the reason here yeilded by Littleton. But if the feoffment had beene with warrantie, then it had wrought the effect of a discontinuance; and therefore Littleton saith sans garrantie, without warrantie.

15. E. 4. Discont. 30. & entr. Cong. 21. 21. E. 4. 97. 9. E. 4. 19. 39. H. 6. 45. 21. H. 6. 52. 12. E. 4. 11. 1. Mar. Dier. 98. (Ant. 265.)

Sect. 638.

ITEM, si tenant en taile fait un lease a un auter pur terme de vie, et le tenant en taile ad issue et devie, et le reversion descendist a son issue, et puis l'issue granta le reversion a luy descendue, a un auter en fee, et le tenant a terme de vie attourna † et devie, et le grantee del reversion enter, &c. et est seise en fee en la vie del issue, et puis issue en le taile ad issue fits et devie, il sem-

ALSO, if tenant in taile make a lease to another for terme of life, and the tenant in taile hath issue and dieth, and the reversion descendeth to his issue, and after the issue granteth the reversion to him descended, to another in fee, and the tenant for life attorne and die, and the grantee of the reversion enter, &c. and is seised in fee in the life of the issue, and after the issue in taile hath

ble

* et l'ayel soit tenant en taile, et est disseise per le pier que est son fits, not in L. and M. † et devie, et le grantor del reversion enter, &c.—&c. et puis le tenant a terme de vie morust, et celui en le reversion entra, &c. L. and M. and Roh.

"one thousand years, or under a lease for lives, as long as the lives are in being, gives no title. But if tenant pur autre vie hold over for twenty years after the death of cestuy que vie, such holding over will in effect be a complete bar to the remainder-man or reversioner; because it was adverse to his title. So in the case of tenants in common; the possession of one tenant in common, eo nomine, as tenant in common, can never bar his companion; because such possession is not adverse to the right of his companion, but in support of their common title; and by paying him his share, he acknowledges him co tenant: nor indeed is a refusal to pay of itself sufficient, without denying his title. But if upon demand by the co-tenant of his moiety, the other denies to pay, and denies his title, saying he claims the whole and will not pay, and continues in possession, such possession is adverse and ouster enough." By the adverse possession mentioned in this case, his lordship never could mean, a disseisin at the election of the party. What is there to distinguish it from an actual disseisin?—Upon the whole, therefore, it is submitted to the learned reader's consideration, 1st, that, as feoffments have not been made from the reign of Henry the 11th. to the present time, with any other solemnities than those with which they are made at present, every operation and efficacy which has ble que ceo n'est pas discontinuance issue a son and dieth, it seemes that a le fits, mes que le fitz poit enter, this is no discontinuance to the Ec. pur ceo que son pier, a que son, but that the son may enter, le reversion de fee simple descendist, &c. for that his father, to whom the Ec. n'avoit unques riens en la reversion of the fee simple de-terre per force de le taile, Ec. scended, had never any thing in the land by force of the entaile, &c.

15. E. 4. Discont. 30. 43. Ed. 3.
 6. 21. H. 6. 52. 4. H. 7. 17.
 (1. Roll. Abr. 634.)
 (4. Leo. 39. 160. 156.)

21. H. 6. 52, 53.
 (Ant. 333.)

OF this opinion is Littleton in our bookes.

Le grantee del reversion enter, Ec. Here it is to be understood and observed, that in this case of the grant of the reversion Littleton doth not say sans garrantie; because if a warrantie had been added, it had wrought no discontinuance, for that (as hath beene said) the discontinuance in judgement of law was but for life: but when the addition of a warrantie doth worke a discontinuance, then Littleton saith, sans garrantie, as you may observe often in this Chapter.

Sect. 639.

CAR si home seifie en droit sa feme, lessa mesme la terre a un auter pur terme de vie, ore est le reversion de fee simple a le baron, Ec. Et si le baron mo-rust, vivant sa feme et le tenant
*a terme de vie, * et le reversion* descendist al heire le baron, si le heire le baron grant le reversion a un auter en fee, et le tenant atturna, Ec. et puis le tenaunt a terme de vie morust, et le grauntee del reversion en cel case enter:
† en cest case ceo n'est pas discontinuance a la feme, mes la feme bien poit enter sur le grantee, Ec.
pur ceo que le grantor n'avoit riens al temps del graunt, en le droit la feme, quant il fist le graunt del reversion.

FOR if a man seised in the right of his wife, letteth the same land to another for terme of life, now is the reversion of the fee simple to the husband, &c. And if the husband dieth, living his wife and the tenant for life, and the reversion descend to the heire of the husband, if the heire of the husband grant the reversion to another in fee, and the tenant attorne, &c. and afterwards the tenant for life dieth, and the grantee of the reversion in this case enter: in this case this is no discontinuance to the wife, but she may well enter upon the grantee, &c. because the grantor had nothing at the time of the graunt, in the right of his wife, when hee made the graunt of the reversion.

14. E. 3. Discont. 5. 18. Aff.
 p. 2. 18. E. 3. 54. 38. E. 3. 32,
 22. H. 6. 24. 21. H. 6. 52, 53.
 15. E. 4. Discont. 30.

CAR si home seifie en droit sa feme, lessa, Ec. Here Littleton putteth his case where the baron onely makes a lease for life; for if he and his wife joyne in a lease by deed, there the reversion is not discontinued. See before, Sect. 620. More need not to be said hereof, in respect the like case of tenant in taile hath been explained before.

Sect.

* et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† en cest cas not in L. and M. nor Roh.

been constantly and uniformly allowed or ascribed to them by the courts of judicature, or writers of authority contemporary with or subsequent to that monarch's reign, down to the present time, ought, notwithstanding the objection that they are not now made with some of the solemnities with which they are said to have been made in their very earliest institution, to be allowed and ascribed to them now: 2dly, that by the passage cited from Bracton, and the other authorities cited or referred to in the course of this note, it appears, that the disseisin produced by feoffments must be understood to be an actual disseisin, and not a disseisin merely at the election of the party: 3dly, that in many of these authorities it is most expressly mentioned, and that in all of them it must be implied, that however slender, bare, or tortious, the possession of the feoffee is, his feoffment necessarily and unavoidably vests the freehold in the feoffee, till the disseisee by entry or action restores his possession: 4thly, (to apply this abstruse and antiquated learning to the present subject-matter of business) that copyholders, tenants for years, by elegit, statute-merchant, statute-staple, at will, or by sufferance, are all considered to have the possession of the estate, and that they may by feoffment vest an actual estate of freehold in the feoffee: 5thly, that a fine may be levied of, or a common recovery suffered upon, this estate of freehold: 6thly, that the feoffment so executed, the fine so levied, and the recovery so suffered, are immediately good against every person except the rightful owner: and, 7thly, that in process of time they become good against the owner himself.—To ascertain the exact period of time when fines levied by persons of this description will be a bar to the rightful owner, would be too great an extension of this note, the length of which already requires an apology.—As to the second objection, that the feoffment of sir Robert Atkyns was founded in fraud, and was therefore void; it is to be observed, that however that reasoning applied to the particular case before the court, it does not apply to the general question discussed in this note, which presupposes previous

Sect. 640.

ET issint il semble, coment que homes queux sont inheritables per force de le taile, et ils ne fueront unques seises per force de mesme le taile, que tiel feoffements ou grants per eux fait sans clause de warrantie, n'est pas discontinuance a lour issues apres lour decease, mes que lour issues poyent bien enter, &c. coment que ceux queux fierent tielz grants en lour vies fueront forbarres d'entrer per lour fait demesne, &c.

AND so it seemeth, that men ^(1. Roll. 6, 4.) which are inheritable by force of an entaile, and never were seised by force of the same entaile; that such feoffements or grants by them made without clause of warrantie, is no discontinuance to their issues after their decease, but that their issues may well enter, &c. albeit they which made such graunts in their lives were forebarred to enter by their owne act, &c.

Sect. 641.

*ET si le tenant en taile ad issue deux firs, et l'eigne disseisist son pier, et ent fait feoffment en fee sans clause de garrantie, et devia sans issue, et puis le pier devie, le puisne firs poit bien enter sur le feoffee; pur ceo que le feoffment son eigne frere ne poit estre discontinuance, pur ceo que il ne fuit unques seisie per force de mesme le taile. Car il semble encounter reason, que per matter en fait, &c. sans clause de garrantie, home poit discontinuer un * fait, &c. que ne fuit unques seisie per force de mesme le taile †.*

AND if tenant in taile hath issue two sonnes, and the eldest disseiseth his father, and thereof maketh a feoffment in fee without clause of warrantie, and die without issue, and after the father die, the youngest son may well enter upon the feoffee; for that the feoffment of his elder brother ^(10. Rep. 95.) cannot be a discontinuance, because he was never seised by force of the same taile. For it seemeth to be against reason, that by matter in fact, &c. without clause of warrantie, a man should discontinue a deed, &c. that was never seised by force of the same taile.

NOTE, there also in these two Sections appeareth, that (as hath beene said before) a warrantie, though he were never seised by force of the taile, may worke the effect of a discontinuance. ^{Vide Sect. 592. 596, 597. 601. 658.}

Home poit discontinuer un fait, &c. This is mistaken, and should be, home poit d'continuer un taile; and so is the originall.

Sect.

* fait—tail, L. and M.

† &c. added in L. and M. and Roh.

previous possession in the feoffor, free from every circumstance of fraud; either fair and innocent; or acquired by the open and notorious circumstances of disseisin, abatement, intrusion, or forcement. Sir Robert Atkyns acquired his possession by the entry made by him under the verdict obtained by him in 1710. He lost it by the verdict given for dame Ann Atkyns in 1712. It may, therefore, be said (and the fact really was), that he obtained the verdict given for him in 1710, and consequently the possession under it, by a pretended title. He had not a fair or innocent possession. He did not acquire his possession by disseisin, intrusion, abatement, or forcement; it did not descend upon him; it did not come to him by act of law; he was not in the seisin of the fee by virtue of any gift or demise from the freeholder: he obtained his possession by the judgment of a court of law, under the colour of a pretended title. Thus, in the language of the law, his original possession was founded in fraud, practice, and stratagem. And to use an expression of the judges, 3. Rep. 78. a. "the common law does so abhor fraud and covin, that all acts, as well judicial as others, which of themselves are just and lawful, yet being mixed with fraud and deceit, are in judgment of law "wrongful and unlawful."—In Burr. 117. great stress was laid on the resolution of the judges in Fermor's case. The case there was, that Thomas Smith being seised in fee of several lands, and holding others by copy of court-roll, and others for a term of years, and others at will (all of them lying in the same vill), made a feoffment with livery of all those held by copy, for years, and at will, to one Chappell for life, and afterwards levied a fine. The question was, Whether the fine was a bar to the owners of the fee, at the expiration of the first five years. It appeared that Smith continued in possession of the land, and paid the rents. See 3. Rep. 77. 1. And. 170. Cary, 20. Cro. Eliz. 86. The judges were of opinion, that the feoffment was fraudulent. Upon an examination of the different reports of the case, it will be found, that his continuing in the possession of the land, and paying rent after

Sect. 642.

NOTA, si soit seignior et tenant, et le tenant dona les tenements a un auter en † taile, le remainder a un auter en fee, et puis le tenant en taile fait un leas a un home pur terme de vie, &c. savorant le reversion, &c. et puis granta le reversion a un auter en fee, et le tenant a terme de vie attorna, &c. et puis le grantee del reversion morust sans heire, ore mesme le reversion devient al seignior per voy d'escheate. Si en cest cas le tenant a terme de vie deviaist, et le seignior per force de son escheate enter en la vie le tenant en le taile, et puis le tenant en le taile morust, il semble en ceo cas que ceo n'est pas discontinuance al issue en le taile, ne a celuy en le remainder, mes que il poit bien enter, pur ceo que le seignior est eins per voy d'escheat, et nemy per le tenant en le taile, &c. Mes secus effet, si le reversion ust este execute en le grantee en le vie de tenant en le taile, car adonque ust le grantee este eins en les tenements per le tenant en le taile, ‡ &c.*

NOTE, if there be lord and tenant, and the tenant giveth lands to another in taile, the remainder to another in fee, and after the tenant in taile makes a lease to a man for a terme of life, &c. saving the reversion, &c. and after granteth the reversion to another in fee, and the tenant for life attorne, &c. and after the grantee of the reversion die without heire, now the same reversion commeth to the lord by way of escheat. If in this case the tenant for life dieth, and the lord by force of his escheat enter in the life of tenant in taile, and after the tenant in taile dieth, it seemeth in this case that this is no discontinuance to the issue in taile, nor to him in the remainder, but that he may well enter, because the lord is in by way of escheat, and not by the tenant in taile. But otherwise it should bee, if the reversion had beene executed in the grantee, in the life of tenant in taile, for then had the grantee been in the tenements by the tenant in taile, &c.

Vide Sect. 620.

Lib. 1. fol. 136.
Lib. 3. fol. 62, 63.

THE reason of this case is here rendred (as before it was in this Chapter), that albeit the reversion be executed in the lord by escheat in the life of tenant in taile, yet because he is not in by the tenant in taile but by escheat, it worketh no discontinuance. But if it had beene executed in the life of tenant in taile in the grantee which was in by tenant in taile, then the lord by escheat should have taken advantage of it. But of this sufficient hath beene said before in this Chapter.

Sect. 643, 644, & 645.

PARCEL de son ITEM, si un parson ALSO, if a parson glebe, &c. In son d'un esglise of a church or vi-whom the fee simple of the ou un vicar d'un car of a church alien esglise

Not. — Item, L. and M. and Roh.

† taile, le remainder a un auter en, not in L. and M. nor Roh.
‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

after he made the feoffment, were the chief circumstances which induced the court to consider the feoffment to be fraudulent. The same may be observed of the case of White v. Bacon, Saville 126. The continuing in the possession of the land after the conveyance, has always been considered in our law as a badge of fraud. Fermor's case therefore only proves, that if a tenant for years, after making a feoffment, continues in the possession of the land, and pays rent for it, the possession acquired by him under the feoffment is fraudulent; and therefore a fine, and every other act which derives its effect from that possession, is void. But Fermor's case does not apply to the general question, of the operation of a fine levied by tenant for years, who has previously executed a feoffment, when the case is not affected by circumstances of fraud. The case mentioned before in this note of Whaley v. Tancred is directly in point, that a fine so levied by lessee for years is a bar to the lessor after five years from the expiration of the lease. And with respect to the feoffor's remaining in the possession, if by the deed declaring the uses of the fine it is expressed that the fine should enure to his use, the possession will be invested in him by the statute of uses.—The editor begs to conclude with an observation of lord Hardwicke (3. Atk. 631.) which seems to him to sanction, in some measure, the general reasoning contained in this note:—"If it is a mere legal title, and a man has purchased an estate which he sees himself has a defect upon the face of the deeds, yet the fine will be a bar, and not affect him with notice so as to make him a trustee for the person who had the right, because this would be carrying it much too far; for the defect upon the face of the deeds is often the occasion of the fine's being levied."

esglise, alien certaine terres ou tenements parcel de son glebe, &c. a un auter en fee, et morust, ou resigne, &c. son successeur poit bien enter, nient contristeant tiel alienation, come est dit en un Nota 2. H. 4. Terme Mich. quod sic incipit.

certaine lands or tenements parcell of his glebe, &c. to another in fee, and die or resigne, &c. his successor may well enter, notwithstanding such alienation, as is said in a Nota 2. H. 4. Termine Mich. which beginneth thus.

glebe is, is a question in our bookes. [a] Some hold that it is in the patron; but that cannot be for two reasons. First, for that in the beginning the land was given to the parson and his successors, and the patron is no successor. Secondly, the words of the writ of juris utrum be, si sit libera elemosina ecclesie de D. and not of the patron. Some others doe hold that the fee simple is in the patron and ordinary; but this cannot be, for the causes abovesaid: and therefore, of necessitie, the fee simple is in abeyance, as Littleton saith. And this was provided by the providence and wisdom of the law; for that the parson and vicar have curam animarum, and were bound to celebrate divine service, and administer the sacraments; and therefore no act of the predecessor should make a discontinuance to take away the entry of the successor, and to drive him to a recalculation, whereby he should be destitute of maintenance in the meane time. Upon consideration of all our bookes I observe this diversitie: that a parson or vicar, for the benefit of the church and of his successor, is in some cases esteemed in law to have a fee simple qualified; but to doe any thing to the prejudice of his successor in many cases, the law adjudgeth him to have in effect but an estate for life.

Causae ecclesiarum publicis causis equiparantur: and Summa ratio est quae pro religione facit. And Ecclesia fungitur vice minoris, meliorem facere potest conditionem suam, deteriorem nequaquam.

As a parson, vicar, archdeacon, prebend, chantery priest, and the like, may have an action of waste, and in the writ it shall be said, ad exheredationem ecclesiae, &c. ipsius B. or praebendae ipsius A.

And the parson, &c. that maketh a lease for life, shall have a confimili casu during the

[a] 8. H. 6. 24. 12. H. 8. 8.

Vide Registr. 307. a. 45. E. 3. tit. Exchange. 12. H. 8. 9. (F. N. B. 48, 49. a.)

F. N. B. 19. L. (Dyer 71. a. 2. Roll. Abr. 339.)

Bracton lib. 4. fol. 226.

Brit. fol. 143.

F. N. B. 55. D. & 57. E. F. 10. H. 7. 5.

Sect. 644.

NOTA quod dictum fuit pro lege, en un brieve de accomplt port per un master d'un college * vers un chapleine, que si un parson, ou un vicar, graunt certaine terre quel est de droit son esglise a un auter et devie, ou permute, le successor poit enter, &c. Et jeo croy que la cause est, pur ceo que le parson, ou vicar, que est seisie, &c. come en droit de son esglise, n'ad pas droit de fee simple en les tenements, † et le droit de fee simple de ceo demurt en ascun auter person; et pur cel cause son successor poit bien enter, nient contristeant tiel alienation, &c.

NOTA quod dictum fuit pro lege, in a writ of account brought by a master of a college against a chaplaine, that if a parson, or vicar, grant certaine land which is of the right of his church to another and die, or changeth, the successor may enter, &c. And I take the cause to bee, for that the parson, or vicar, that is seised, &c. as in right of his church, hath no right of the fee simple in the tenements, but the right of the fee simple abideth in another person; and for this cause his successor may well enter, notwithstanding such alienation, &c.

* vers un chapleine—d'un chapel, L. and M. and Rob.

† et—ne, L. and M. and Rob.

F. N. B. 49. l. m. n. 20. E. 3.
tit. Juris utrum. Temps E. 3.
Juris utrum 14. 1. 14. E. 3.
ibid. 4. F. N. B. 50. 30. E. 3. 26.
21. E. 3. 11. tit. Entrée 10.
F. N. B. 206. F. Registr. 237.
4. E. 4. 2. 8. E. 3. tit. Entrée 2.
7. H. 3. 54. 55.
(Ant. 67. a.)

[c] F. N. B. 49. L. 50. a.

(1 Roll. Abr. 476. 479. 488.
Cro. Car. 38. 5. Rep. 81.
2. Roll. Abr. 63. 334.)

20. E. 3. tit. Aid. 30. 25. E. 3. 54.
8. E. 3. 45. 8. H. 6. 24.
11. H. 6. 9. 6. E. 3. 45.
43. Aff. Pl. 13. F. N. B. 129.
(Flo. 538.)

(2. Cro. 200. Ant. 225. b.
Flo. 356. Doc. Pla. 27. 271.)

44. E. 3. 11. 11. H. 4. 63.
9. F. 4. 16. 18. E. 3. 7.
6. E. 3. 11. 5. E. 2. Aid 167.
12. H. 4. 11. 32. E. 3. Aid 39.
38. E. 3. 19. 24. E. 3. Juris utrum 4.

the life of the lessee, and a writ of entree ad communem legem after his death, or a writ ad terminum qui præterit, or a quoddam permittat in the debet, and none can maintain any of these writs, but a tenant in fee simple or fee taylor.

And a parson, &c. may receive homage, which tenant for life cannot do. Temps E. 1. Incumbent 19.

[c] Likewise a parson, &c. shall have a writ of mesne, and a contra formam feoffamenti.

But a parson cannot make a discontinuance, as Littleton here teacheth; for that should be to the prejudice of his successor to take away his entree, and to drive him to a real action.

Also if a parson, &c. make a lease for yeares, reserving a rent, and dieth, the lease is determined by his death; as if tenant for life had made a lease, no acceptance of the rent by the successor can make it good. Also in a real action a parson, vicar, archdeacon, prebend, &c. shall have aid of the patron and ordinary, as tenant for life shall have. So as it is evident, that to many purposes a parson hath but in effect an estate for life, and to many a qualified fee simple, but the entire fee and right is not in him; and that is the reason that hee cannot discontinue the fee simple that he hath not, nor ever had; for, as it hath beene said, Omnis privatio præsupponit habitum. And for the same cause he cannot have a writ of right right, nor a writ of right in his nature; as a writ of right sur disclaimer of customs and services, ne injuste vexes, rationabilibus divisis, quo jure, and the like.

But here it appeareth by Littleton, that such bodies politike or corporate as have a sole seisin, and may have a writ of right, for that the fee and right is in them (albeit they cannot absolutely convey away their lands, &c. without assent of others), may make a discontinuance; as a bishop, an abbot, a deane, a master of an hospitall, and the like. But this is to be understood where a deane or a master of an hospitall, &c. are solely seised of distinct possessions; for if the bodie that is seised be aggregate of many, as the deane and chapter, master and confreres, &c. then the scottment of the deane or master is so farre from a discontinuance as it is a disseisin.

And these that have the fee and right in them shall not have aid in respect of their high and large estate, albeit any of them be presentable: but a deane that is collative shall have aid of the king.

And it is to be observed, that the remedie is ever agreeable to the right; and therefore the bishop, deane, master of an hospitall, that hath college and common seale, or the like, shall have a writ of right right, which is the highest remedie, for that they have the highest estate.

Here

Sect. 645.

*CAR un evesque
poit aver breve
de droit de * tenements de droit de son es-glise, pur ceo que le droit est en son cha-piter, et le fee simple demurrant en luy et en son chapiter. Et un
deane poit aver breve de droit, pur ceo que le droit demurt en luy.
† Et un abbe poit aver briefe de droit, pur ceo que le droit demurt en luy et en son covent. Et un master d'un hospitall poit aver briefe de droit, pur ceo que le droit
demurt en luy et en ses confreres, &c.
Et sic de aliis § ca-
sibus consimilibus. ||
Mes un parson ou
un vicar ne poit aver briefe de droit,
&c.*

FOR a bishop may have a writ of right of the tenements of the right of his church, for that the right is in his chapter, and the fee simple abideth in him and in his chapter. And a deane may have a writ of right, because the right remaines in him. And an abbot may have a writ of right, for that the right remaines in him and in his convent. And a master of an hospitall may have a writ of right, because the right remaineth in him and in his confreres, &c. And so of other like cases. But a parson or vicar cannot have a writ of right, &c.

* tenements de droit de son esglise, pur ceo que le droit est en son chapiter, et le—not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† Et un abbe poit aver briefe de droit, pur ceo que le droit demurt en luy, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ Et un abbe poit
§ in added L. and M. and Roh.

Here Littleton citeth the booke case, Mich. 2. H. 4. as an authoritie whereupon he groundeth his opinion. And it is to be observed, that the yeares of H. 4. were published before Littleton did write.

But at this day, the bishop, deane, master of an hospitall, or the like, that have the fee and right in them, as hath beene said, cannot discontinue; neither can they or any parson, vicar, archdeacon, prebend, or any other having any ecclesiasticall living, with assent of deane and chapter, patron and ordinary, or the consent of any others, make any lease, gift, grant or conveyance, estate, charge or incumbrance to binde his successor other than for terme of one and twentie yeares, or three lives in possession, whereupon the accustomed rent or more shall be reserved. These be excellent lawes, and have beene well expounded for the maintenance of religion and the good of God's church; for otherwise it is to bee feared that holy church would lose more than it would gaine in these dayes.

But where Littleton, in this and other Sections, makes mention of masters of hospitals, the reader must know, that since Littleton wrote, there hath beene a great alteration made by divers acts of parliament concerning hospitals.

Master del hospitall. These points concerning hospitals were resolved [c] by the justices.

First, that no hospitall was given to the crowne by the statute of 27. H. 8. nor any hospitall is within the statute of 31. H. 8. of monasteries, but only religious and ecclesiasticall hospitals, and that no lay hospitall was within those statutes.

Secondly, if upon the foundation of any lay hospitall or after it was ordained, that one or divers priests should be maintained within the hospitall to celebrate divine service to the poore, and to pray for the soule of the founder, and all christian soules, or the like; and that the poore of such hospitall should make the like orisons, yet such an hospitall is not within the said statutes; for the hospitall is lay, and not religious; and all or the most part of antient lay hospitals were founded or ordained after the like sort; and the makers of those statutes never intended to overthrow workes of charitie, but to take away the abuse.

Thirdly, that no hospitall was given to the king by the statute of 37. H. 8. but in two cases, where the donors, founders or patrons, &c. had entred and expelled the priests, wardens, &c. betweene the fourth day of Februarie, Anno 27. H. 8. and the five and twentieth of December, Anno 37. H. 8. or where king Henry the eighth, by commission according to that act, should enter and seise the same; but that determined by the death of that king.

Fourthly, that the statute of 1. E. 6. extended not to any hospitall whatsoever, either lay or religious, as by the same appeareth.

And I was of counsell with the lord Cheney in this case, which, seeing it may doe good for maintenance of charitable uses, I thought good summarily to report it. To this I will adde, Panis pauperum vita pauperum; qui defraudat eos vir sanguinis est.

Nota. Of hospitals, some are corporations aggregate of many; as of master or warden, &c. and his confreers: some, where the master or warden hath only the estate of inheritance in him, and the brethren or sisters power to consent, having college and common seale: some, where the master or warden hath the state in him, but hath no college and common seale; and such a master or warden shall have a juris utrum: and of these hospitals some bee eligible, some donative, and some presentable.

Vide Sect. 577. 593. &c. 1. Eliz. c. 18. 13. Eliz. c. 10. 1. Jacobi cap. 3.

Lib. 2. fol. 46. Lib. 4. fol. 76. & 20. Lib. 5. fol. 9. & 14. Lib. 6. fol. 37. Lib. 7. fol. 8. Lib. 11. fol. 67. 37. H. 8. 31. H. 8. 32. H. 8. 37. H. 8. 1. E. 6. &c.

[c] Patch. 24. Eliz. the Lord Cheneye's case. Lib. 2. fol. 48, 49. Evesque de Canterburie's case.

(2. Sid. 48.)

Lib. 1. f. 24. Porter's case.

Porter's case ubi supra, Lib. 4. 111. 113, 114. 116. in Lambert's case.

Ecclesiasticus c. 34. ver. 22. (8. Rep. 131. a.)

14. E. 3. juris utrum 4.

Sect. 646.

*MES le plus haut briefe que ils poient aver est le briefe de juris utrum, le quel est graund prooffe que le droit de fee n'est en eux, ne en nul auters, &c. Mes le droit de fee simple est en abeiance, &c. ceo est a dire, que il est tant-solement en le remembrance, entendement et consideration de la ley, * &c. Car moy semble que tiel*

BUT the highest writ that they can have is the writ of juris utrum, which is a great prooffe that the right of fee is not in them, nor in any others, &c. But the right of the fee simple is in abeiance, that is to say, that it is only in the remembrance, intendment and consideration of the law, &c. for it seemeth to me, chose

(F. N. B. 48.)

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

*chose * et tiel droit que est dit en divers livres estre en abeyance, est † a tant a dire en Latyne (scilicet), Talis res, vel tale rectum, quæ vel quod non est in homine adtunc superstitie, sed tantummodo est, et consistit in consideratione et intelligentiâ legis, ‡ et quod alii dixerunt, talem rem aut tale rectum fore in nubibus. Mes jeo suppose que ils intenderont per ceux parols, in nubibus, &c. come jeo aye dit adevant. §*

that such a thing and such a right which is sayd in divers bookes to be in abeyance, is as much to say in Latine (scilicet), Talis res, vel tale rectum, quæ vel quod non est in homine adtunc superstitie, sed tantummodo est, et consistit in consideratione et intelligentiâ legis, et quod alii dixerunt, talem rem aut tale rectum fore in nubibus. But I suppose, that they meane by these words (in nubibus, &c.), as I have said before.

24. E. 3. 63. Vi. Sect. 648, 649, 650. 651.
Vide Sect. 1.
(Hob. 338. Ant. 263. b.
2. Roll. 339. Post. 345. 2.
1. Rep. 66.)

EN abeyance. (1) That is, in expectation, of the French word bayer, to expect. For when a parson dieth, wee say that the freehold is in abeyance, because a successor is in expectation to take it; and here note the necessity of the true interpretation of words.

If tenant pur terme d'auter vie dieth, the freehold is said to be in abeyance untill the occupant entreth. If a man make a lease for life, the remainder to the right heires of I. S. the fee simple is in abeyance untill I. S. dieth. And so in the case of the parson, the fee and right is in abeyance, that is, in expectation, in remembrance, entendment, or consideration of law, 1. In consideratione fore intelligentiâ legis, because it is not in any man then living; and the right that is in abeyance is said to be in nubibus, in the clouds, and therein hath a qualitie of fame whereof the poet speaketh:

Virg. 4. Æneid.

Ingrediturque solo, et caput inter nubila condit.

Sect. 647.

ITEM, si un parson d'un esglise devie, ore le franktenement del glebe del parsonage est en nul luy durant le temps que le parsonage est voide, mes in abeyance; c'est a scavoir, in consideration et en le intelligence de le ley, tant que un auter soit fait parson de mesme l'esglise; et immediat quant un auter est fait parson, le franktenement en fait est en luy come successor. ¶

ALSO, if a parson of a church dieth, now the freehold of the glebe of the parsonage is in none during the time that the parsonage is voide, but in abeyance, viz. in consideration and in the understanding of the law, untill another be made parson of the same church; and immediatly when another is made parson, the freehold in deed is in him as successor.

SI un parson d'un esglise devie, &c. So it is of a bishop, abbot, deane, archdeacon, prebend, vicar, and of every other sole corporation or body politike, presentative, elective, or donative, which inheritances put in abeyance are by some called hereditates jacentes; and some say, que le fee est en balance.

Bract. li. 1. c. 2. Brit. f. 249.

Sect.

* et—en, L. and M. and Roh.

in nubibus, &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

¶ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

§ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ Mes jeo suppose que ils intenderont per ceux parols,

¶ fait not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) In the course of these notes, frequent mention has been made of the necessity which there was at the old law, that there should always be an immediate tenant of the freehold, and of the reasons upon which this necessity was grounded; but these reasons did not apply, in the same degree, against the suspension of the inheritance. Hence, tho' for the reasons I have mentioned, it was an established maxim, that the freehold never could be in suspension, or, as it is generally called, in abeyance, it was admitted that the inheritance might. But this suspension or abeyance of the inheritance could not but be considered with a very jealous eye; for tho' fiefs, in their original constitution, were not hereditary; still, when they had once become hereditary, the consequences of their becoming such were so numerous, and affected materially so many other parts of the feudal system, that, tho' it was always admitted that the inheritance might be suspended, it was agreed, that the suspension of it should be discountenanced and discouraged as much as possible, and allowed upon none but the most pressing and urgent occasions. The chief reasons of the aversion of the old law from the suspension of the inheritance are set forth in two late matterly and profound publications, sir William Blackstone's Argument on the Case of Perryn and Blake, and Mr. Hargrave's Observations on the Rule in Shelley's case.—To these reasons the modern law has added her marked and unremitted odium of every restraint upon alienation; it being clear, that no restraint upon the alienation of property would be more effectual than the admission of a suspension of the inheritance.—The same principles have, in some degree, given rise to the well-known rule of law, that a preceding estate of freehold is indispensably necessary for the support of a contingent remainder; and they influence, in some degree, the doctrines respecting the destruction of contingent remainders. Mr. Fearne's excellent Essay upon these subjects makes any farther investigation of them here quite unnecessary: but perhaps the reader will not be displeased with the following short discussion of a subject intimately connected with them;—the suspension and extinction of powers, deriving their effect from the statute of uses, or the statute of wills; those powers which are given to mere strangers, that is, to persons who have neither a present nor a future estate or interest in the land, are said to be collateral to the land; those which are reserved to a person who has either a present or future estate or interest in the land, are said to be relating to the land: and these again are subdivided into two classes, powers annexed to the estate in the land, and powers in gross. The former are, where a person has an estate in the land, and the estate to be created by the power is to take effect in possession during the continuance of the estate to which the power is annexed: such is the power usually given in settlements to tenants for life, when respectively in possession, to make leases.—Powers in gross are, where the person to whom they are given has an estate in the land; but the estate to be created under, or by virtue of the power, is not to take its effect till after the determination of the estate to which it relates: such are the powers usually inserted in settlements to jointure an after-taken wife.—I. As to the powers collateral to the land,—it is said, that a release, fine, feoffment, or common recovery, will not extinguish or destroy them. See ante

Sect. 648.

ITEM, ascuns peradventure voient arguer et dire, que en-
tant que un parson
ove l'assent del patron et ordinarie, poit gran-ter un rent charge
hors del glebe del parsonage en fee, et issint charger le glebe del parsonage perpetualment, ergo ils ont fee simple, ou deux ou un de eux avoit fee simple* al meins†. A ceo poit estre respon-due, que il est principle en le ley, que de chescuns terres il y ad fee simple, &c. en
ascun home, ou ‡ auterment le fee simple
est en abeyance ||. Et un auter principe est, que chescun terre de fee simple poit estre charge de un rent-charge en fee per un
voy ou per auter.
Et quant tiel rent est
graunt per le fait le parson, et le patron, et l'ordinaire, &c. en
fee, nul avera prejudice ou parde per force
de tiel grant, forsque les § grantors en lour vies, et les heires le patron, et les successors del ordinary a-pres leur decease. Et apres tiel charge, si le

ALSO, some peradventure wil argue and say, that inasmuch as a parson with the assent of the patron and ordinary, may grant a rent charge out of the glebe of the parsonage in fee,
and so charge the glebe
of the parsonage perpetually, ergo they have a fee simple, or two or one of them have a fee simple at the least. To this may bee answered, that it is a principle in law, that of everie land there is a fee simple, &c. in some bodie, or otherwise the fee simple is in abeyance. And there is another principle, that every land of fee simple may bee charged with a rent charge in fee by one way or other. And when such rent is granted by the deed of the parson, and the patron, and ordinary, &c. in fee, none shall have prejudice or losse by force of such grant, but the grantors in their lives, and the heires of the patron, and the successors of the ordinary after their decease.
And after such charge

IL est un principe (Ant. 10. b.) en la ley, &c. Prin-cipium, quod est quasi primum caput, from which many cases have their originall or beginning, which is so strong, as it suffereth no contradiction;
and therefore it is said in our books, that ancient principles of the law [a] ought not to be disputed, Contra negantem prin- cipia non est disputandum. That which our author here calleth a principle, Sect. 3. & 90. he calleth a maxime. [a] 11. H. 4. 9. Sect. 3. & 90.

Here Littleton in answer to an objection alleageth two principles. First,

Que de chescun terre il y ad fee simple, &c.
This is perspicue verum, and needeth no explanation. Secondly,

*Chescun terre de
fee simple poit estre
charge en fee per un
voy ou auter.* Hereby it (Lampet's case 10. Rep. 46. b.) appeareth, that albeit the right of the fee simple be in abeyance, yet it may be charged by one way or another.
And so it may be aliened in fee, albeit the right of the fee be in abeyance, or in confideration of law. And herein is a diversitie worthy the observation to be made; that when the right of fee simple is perpetually by judgement of law in abeyance; without any expectation to come in esse, there he that hath the qualified fee, concurrentibus hiis que in jure requiruntur, may charge or alien it, as in the case of parson, vicar, prebend, &c. But where the fee simple is in abeyance, and by pos-sibilitie may every houre come in esse, there the fee simple cannot be charged untill
it commeth in esse. (1) As if a (2. Roll. 418, 419.)
lease for life be made, the remainder to the right heires of
I. S. the fee simple cannot be charged

* al—an, L. and M. and Roh. † &c. added L. and M. and Roh. ‡ outerment not in L. and M. nor Roh. || &c. added
L. and M. and Roh. § grantors—grantees, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) On the question, whether the fee simple, during the suspense of a contingent remainder, remains in the grantor, or is in abeyance, see Mr. Fearn's Essay on Contingent Remainders, 3d ed. 275.

ante 265. b. Albanie's case, 1. Rep. 110. b. Digges's case, 1. Rep. 173. a. Moore 605. The reason why a release does not extinguish them, is said to be (ante 265. b.), that collateral powers are not in the nature of rights or titles, and cannot therefore, from their nature, be released. 2dly, That where powers are given or reserved to any person having any estate or interest, either present or future, in the land, the exercise of these powers is considered as advantageous to him; and there is no reason why he should not be allowed to depart with, or exclude himself from the benefit of them: but that, when they are given to strangers, they are intended for the benefit of some third person; and therefore the extinction of them is supposed to be injurious to some person intended to be benefited by them. With respect to their not being destroyed by feoffment, fine, or recovery; every man, it is said, is estopped from claiming any estate contrary to his own feoffment; but if a stranger, with a power of revocation, makes a feoffment, levies a fine, or suffers a recovery, and afterwards revokes, the person claiming the estate under the revocation is immediately by, and makes his title immediately from the original settlor or devisor, and not by or from the feoffor, consor, or recoverer; he is not therefore bound or estopped by any act of the feoffor, consor, or recoverer. Thus, by the old law, if cessui que use devised that his feoffees should sell his land, and died, and his feoffees made a feoffment over; yet it was held, that the feoffees might sell against their own feoffment, because the power to sell was merely collateral to the right to the land, and the vendee took nothing by the feoffment. II. As to powers relating to the land.—Such of those powers as are in the nature of powers appendant to the estate, may, it is agreed, be extinguished by release, feoffment, fine, or common recovery. These powers also are liable to be extinguished or suspended by any of the conveyances which are said not to operate by transmutation of the possession, as bargains and sales, leases and releases, and covenants to stand seised:
for whoever has any estate in the land, may convey that estate to another; and it would be unjust that he should afterwards be admitted to avoid, or to do any thing in derogation from his own grant.—Any assurance of this nature, therefore, which carries with it the whole of the grantor's estate, is a total destruction of the powers appendant to that estate; and by parity of reason, any such assurance as carries with it only a part of the estate (as a term for years or an estate for life), suspends, during the continuance of that estate, the exercise of the power, or, at least, the estate to be raised by it; and any such assurance, which induces only a charge upon the estate (as a grant of a rent), necessarily subjects the estate created by the power to that charge. With respect to such of the powers relating to land as are said to be powers in gross:—As the estates raised by them do not fall within the compass of the estate to which they are said to relate, there does not

charged till I. S. be dead. And so is Littleton to be understood, viz. that either it may be charged in presenti, or in futuro.

Chefcun terre de fee simple. And so it is of lands entailed, for they may be charged in fee also; for the estate taile may be cut off by fine or recovery. Also the estate taile may continue, and yet tenant in taile may lawfully charge the land and binde the issue in taile. As if a disseisor make a gift in taile, and the donee in consideration of a release by the disseisor of all his right to the donee, granteth a rent charge to the disseisor and his heires, proportionable to the value of his right, this shall binde the issue in taile. Vide Sect. 1. Bridgewater's case; which lands, by the rule of Littleton, may be charged: and therefore if the owner of those thirteene acres grant a rent-charge out of those thirteene acres generally, lying in the meadow of eightie, without mentioning where they lie particularly; there, as the state in the land removes, the charge shall remove also. But since our author wrote, all ecclesiasticall persons are disabled to charge in fee any of their ecclesiasticall possessions, as before hath beene spoken of at large.

Et quant tiel rent est grant, &c. This is an excellent interpretation and limitation of the said principle, viz. that none shall have prejudice or losse by any such grant, but such as are partie or privie thereunto; as the patron and his heires, the ordinary and his successors; and the parson and his successors; which successors of the parson are to be presented by the patron or his heires, and admitted and instituted by the ordinary or his successors. The like is to be said of an archdeacon, prebend, vicar, chauntrye priest, and the like.

Per le fait le parson, et patron, et l'ordinarie, &c. Yet if the parson die, and in time of vacation the patron, of the assent of the ordinary, or the patron and ordinary grant an annuitie or rent-charge out of the glebe, this shall (as hath beene said) binde the succeeding parsons for ever.

If there be parson, patron, and ordinary, and the parson by the ordinance and assent of

 parson devie, son successeur ne peut venir a le dit esglise de estre parson de mesme le esglise per la ley, forsque per presentment del patron, et admission et institution del ordinarie. † Et pur cel cause il convient que le successeur soy teigne content, et agree de ceo que son patron et l'ordinarie loyalment fesoient adevant, &c. Mes ceo n'est prooffe que le fee simple, &c. est en le patron et l'ordinarie, ou en aucun de eux, &c. Mes la cause que tiel grant de rent-charge ‡ est bone, est, pur ceo que ceux queux averont interest, &c. en la dit esglise, scilicet, le patron solonque la ley temporal, et l'ordinarie solonque la ley spiritual, fueront assentus, ou parties a tiel charge, &c. Et ceo semble estre la verie cause que tiel glebe peut estre charge en perpetuitie, || &c.*

if the parson die, his successor cannot come to the sayd church to be parson of the same by the law, but by the presentment of the patron, and admission and institution of the ordinarie. And for this cause the successor ought to hold himselfe content, and agree to that which his patron and the ordinarie have lawfully done before, &c. But this is no prooffe that the fee simple, &c. is in the patron and the ordinarie, or in either of them, &c. But the cause that such graunt of rent-charge is good, is, for that they who have the interest, &c. in the sayd church, viz. the patron according to the law temporall, and the ordinarie according to the law spiritual, were assenting, or parties to such charge, &c. And this seemeth to be the true cause why such glebe may be charged in perpetuitie, &c.

44. E. 3. 21, 22.

(Flo. Com. 435.)

Vide Sect. 1. Bridgewater's case, &c. 39.

Vide Sect. 593. (Doct. and Stud. 50. a.) 31. E. 1. tit. Grant. 90. 8. R. 2. Annuity. 53. (2. Cro. 197.)

(5. Rep. 81.)
16. E. 3. Annuity. 24. 40. E. 3. 30.
3. E. 3. 17. Reg. 38.
(Doct. & Stud. 56. b.)

* parson not in L. and M. nor Roh. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. no Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

|| &c. not in L.

not seem to be any reason why any alteration in that estate should affect them. Hence, if tenant for life, with a power to jointure an after-taken wife, conveys a life estate by bargain and sale, lease and release, or covenant to stand seised, this conveyance will not affect the power of making a jointure. If he even makes a conveyance in fee by any of these assurances, as it is not their operation to pass a greater estate than the grantor has a right to convey, the power in gross is not affected by it; but if he conveys by fine, feoffment, or recovery, as these assurances not only pass the estate of the grantor, but convey a tortious fee, they necessarily disturb the whole inheritance; and consequently divest the seisin, out of which the uses to be created by the power are to be fed. They therefore operate in extinction of the power. A power in gross may also be released to any of those in remainder.—And if the whole fee is in the terre-tenant, subject to the power; as where an estate is limited to A. for life, remainder to such uses as he shall by deed or will appoint, remainder to A. in fee; there if A. conveys the whole fee by lease and release, his power of appointment; notwithstanding it is in the nature of a power in gross, is totally extinguished. See Ca. Temp. Talbot 41.—It should be observed, that in mentioning above the effect of a feoffment, fine, or common recovery, the expression is, that powers may be extinguished by those conveyances. But it is not intended to imply, either with respect to powers collateral or powers relating to the lands, that those conveyances necessarily and unavoidably extinguish the powers in all cases. In some cases they do not. Thus, in the earl of Leicester's case, 1 Vent. 278, A. being tenant for life, with power to revoke by deed or will, executed a deed, whereby he covenanted to levy a fine to several uses, and afterwards levied a fine accordingly; it was held, that the deed and fine (taken together) were a good execution of the power, and not an extinction of it. Afterward, in Herring v. Brown, Carth. 22. 1 Vent. 368. 371. Skin. 35. 184. where A. being tenant for life, with power of revocation, levied a fine, and afterwards declared the uses, it was contended, that the fine was an extinction of the power; and to distinguish that case from the earl of Leicester's case, it was said, that in the former case the deed preceded, in the latter it was subsequent to the fine. In the former case it was said, the power was executed, and an estate created by the deed, so that no estate remained forfeitable by the fine; but that, in the latter case, the fine being first levied, was ipso facto a forfeiture of the estate, and the subsequent deed could not, by any intendment of law, revive the power. Three judges against one, in the king's-bench, were of this opinion. But error was afterwards brought in the exchequer-chamber to reverse their judgment; and it was accordingly reversed, by five judges against two, on the ground, that the fine and the subsequent deed, declaring the uses thereof, were but one and the same conveyance.—These cases shew, that where a person is tenant for life, with a general power of revocation, a fine and a deed, declaring the uses of it, will be construed as a good exercise of the power. The principles of these cases may be extended much farther in argument; but it is by no means advisable to do it in practice. In Carthew 23. it is expressly said, that if an estate is granted to one for life, who afterwards levies a fine sur convauance de droit, and declares the uses to himself for life, remainder in fee to the grantor or lessor, this is a forfeiture, notwithstanding the declaration of the use.

of the ordinarie grant an annuities to another, having quid pro quo in consideration thereof, this shall binde the successor of the parson, without the consent of the patron.

A church parochiall may be donative and exempt from all ordinarie jurisdiction, and the incumbent may resigne to the patron, and not to the ordinarie; neither can the ordinarie visit, but the patron by commissioners to be appointed by him. And by Littleton's rule, the patron and incumbent may charge the glebe; and albeit it be donative by a layman, yet merit laicus is not capable of it, but an able clerke infra sacros ordines is; for albeit he come in by lay donation, and not by admission or institution, yet his function is spirituall; and if such a clerke donative be disturbed, the patron shall have a quare impedit of this church donative, and the writ shall say, quod permittat ipsum presentare ad ecclesiam, &c. and declare the speciall matter in his declaration. And so it is of a prebend, chantery, chappell, donative, and the like; and no laps shall incurr to the ordinarie, except it be so specially provided in the foundation. But if the patron of such a church, chantery, chappell, &c. donative, doth once present to the ordinarie, and his clerke is admitted and instituted, it is now become presentable, and never shall be donative after, and then laps shall incurr to the ordinarie, as it shall of other benefices presentable. But a presentation to such a donative by a stranger, and admission and institution thereupon, is meere void. And all this was resolved by the whole court of king's bench, for the rectorie parochiall donative of Saint Buxian in the countie of Cornwall.

It appeareth by our bookes, and by divers acts of parliament, that at the first all the bishopricks in England were of the king's foundation, and donative per traditionem baculi, (id est) the crozier, which was the pastorall staffe, & annuli, the ring whereby hee was married to the church. And king Henry the first being requested by the bishop of Rome to make them elective, refused it: but king John by his charter bearing date quinto Junii, anno decimo septimo, granted that the bishopricks should be eligible. If the king doth found a church, hospitall, or free chappell donative, he may exempt the same from ordinarie jurisdiction, and then his chancellor shall visit the same. Nay, if the king doe found the same without any speciall exemption, the ordinarie is not, but the king's chancellor, to visit the same. Now as the king may create donatives exempt from the visitation of the ordinarie, so he may by his charter licence any subject to found such a church or chappell, and to ordaine that it shall be donative, and not presentable, and to be visited by the founder, and not by the ordinarie. And thus beganne donatives in England, whereof common persons were patrons.

Ordinarie. Ordinarius is hee that hath ordinarie jurisdiction in causes ecclesiasticall, immediate to the king and his courts of common law, for the better execution of justice, as the bishop or any other that hath exempt and immediate jurisdiction in causes ecclesiasticall.

Ley temporel. Which consisteth of three parts, viz. First, on the common law, expressed in our bookes of law, and judiciall records. Secondly, on statutes contained in acts and records of parliament. And thirdly, on customes grounded upon reason, and used time out of minde; and the construction and determination of these doe belong to the judges of the realme.

Ley spiritual, &c. That is, the ecclesiasticall lawes allowed by the lawes of this realme, viz. which are not against the common law (whereof the king's prerogative is a principall part) nor against the statutes and customes of the realme; and regularly according to such ecclesiasticall lawes, the ordinarie and other ecclesiasticall judges doe proceed in causes within their consueance. And this jurisdiction was so bounded by the antient common lawes of the realme, and so declared by act of parliament.

Admission & institution. In propriety of speech, admission is, when the bishop upon examination admitteth him to be able, and saith, Admitto te habilem. [d] Institution is, when the bishop saith, Instituo te rectorem talis ecclesie cum cura animarum, & accipe curam tuam & meam. [e] But sometimes in a more large sense, admissus doth include institutus also: cujus presentatus sit admissus, (i. e.) institutus. And it is to be observed, that institution is a good plenarie against a common person (but not against the king, unless he be inducted); and that is the cause that regularly plenarie shall be tried by the bishop, because the church is full by institution, which is a spirituall act; but void or not void shall be tried by the common law.

At the common law, if an estranger had presented his clerke, and he had benee admitted and instituted to a church, whereof any subject had benee lawfull patron, the patron had no other remedy to recover his advowson, but a writ of right of advowson, wherein the incumbent

Lib. 3. Cap. 11. Of Discontinuance. Sect. 648.

6. E. 3. 28. 39. 52. 39. E. 3. 24.
43. E. 3. 25. 45. E. 3.
Quar. imp. 139. 10. E. 2.
Com. 22. 31. E. 1.
Quar. imp. 186.

(5. Rep. 57. 97. Lib. 6. 49. 50. b.
6. Rep. Green's Case.
2. Cro. 385. F. N. B. 33. h.)

F. N. B. 36. k. 143. 2.
35. E. 3. ca. 3. 13. R. 2. ca. 1.
4. H. 4. ca. 21. 1. H. fol. 19.

[*] Li. 6. fol. 51. Li. 7. fol. 19.
3. H. 6. Dam. 17. 34. H. 6. 28.
12. E. 3. Champerty 9.
18. E. 3. 2. Temps E. 1.
Quar. imp. 181.
[a] W. 2. ca. 5. 13. E. 1.
[g] 45. E. 3. 35. 38. E. 3. 4.
25. E. 3. 47. 13. El. Dy. 292.
Reg. 302, &c. 18. El. Dy. 348.
14. E. 4. 2. 7. H. 4. 32. 31. E. 1.
Quar. imp. 185. W. 2. ub. sup.
[h] 17. E. 3. 64.

(2. Infl. 336. 6. Rep. 29. a. 50. a.)

(3. Rep. 39. a. 50. a.)

9. H. 6. 32. & 56. 19. H. 6. 68.

(7. Rep. 27. Cro. Car. 74.
Doct. & Stud. 11. b. Lib. 6. 51.
Ant. 17. b.)

(10. Rep. 53. 5. Rep. 102.
6. Rep. 51. Hob. 201.
2. Cro. 93.)
18. E. 2. Presentment. 20.
50. E. 2. Encumbent 10.
21. H. 7. 8. a. & b. 9. Eliz.
Dyer. 260. F. N. B. 32.
14. H. 8. 31. 19. E. 2.
Dar. Pref. 21. 10. E. 3. 17.
9. H. 6. 31.
30. E. 3. tit. Quar. imp. Stath.
46. E. 3. 15. 9. H. 6. 39. 56.
19. H. 6. 68. L. 5. E. 4. 115.
9. E. 4. 30.

11. H. 4. 80.
(Hob. 151)

incumbent was not to be removed: and so it was at the common law, if an usurpation had beene had upon an infant or feme covert, having an advowson by descent, or upon tenant for life, &c. the infant, feme covert, and he in the reversion were driven to their writ of right of advowson; for at the common law, if the church were once full, the incumbent could not be removed, and plenarie generally was a good plea in a quare impedit, or assise of darreine presentment; and the reason of this was, to the intent that the incumbent might quietly intend and applie himselfe to his spirituall charge. And secondly, the law intended, that the bishop that had cure of soules within his diocese, would admit and institute an able man for the discharge of his dutie and his owne; and that the bishop would doe right to every patron within his diocese. But at the common law, if any had usurped upon the king, and his presentee had beene admitted, instituted, and inducted, (for without induction the church had not beene full against the king) the king might have removed him by quare impedit, and beene restored to his presentation; for therein he hath a prerogative, quod nullum tempus occurrit regi; but he could not present, for the plenarie barred him of that; neither could he remove him any way but by action, to the end the church might be the more quiet in the meane time. [*] Neither did the king recover dammages in his quare impedit at the common law. But the said statute [a] hath altered the common law in the cases aforesaid; as namely, Quoad hoc, quod si pars rea accipiat de plenitudine ecclesie per suam propriam presentationem, non propter illam plenitudinem remaneat loquela, dummodo breve infra tempus semestris impetretur, &c. and also hath provided remedy in the other cases, as by the said act appeareth.

[g] And if the king doe present to a church, and his clerke is admitted and instituted, yet before induction the king may repeale and revoke his presentation. But regularly no man can be put out of possession of his advowson, but by admission and institution upon an usurpation by a presentation to the church, cum aliquis jus presentandi non habens presentaverit, &c. and [not by collation of the bishop: [b] and therefore if the bishop collate without title, and his clerke is inducted, this shall not put the rightfull patron out of possession; for it shall be taken to be only provisionally made for celebration of divine service untill the patron doe present; and therefore he is not driven to his quare impedit, or assise of darreine presentment, in that case; but an usurpation by collation shall take away the right of collation that is in another. (1)

It is to be observed, that an usurpation upon a presentation shall not only put out of possession him that hath right of presentation, but right of collation also. Therefore at this day the incumbent shall be removed in a quare impedit, or assise of darreine presentment, if there be not a plenarie by six moneths before the teste of the writ; but then the incumbent must be named in the writ, or else he shall never be removed: yet at the common law, if the ordinary refused to admit and institute the clerke of the patron, or when any disturbed him to present, so as he could not preferre his clerke, he might have his quare impedit, or assise of darreine presentment; and if the church were not full, have a writ to the bishop to admit his clerke: but so odious was symonie in the eye of the common law, that before the statute of W. 2. he recovered no dammages. At the common law, if hanging the quare impedit against the ordinary for refusing of his clerke, and before the church were full, the patron brought a quare impedit against the bishop, and hanging the suit, the bishop admit and institute a clerke at the presentation of another, in this case if judgement be given for the patron against the bishop, the patron shall have a writ to the bishop, and remove the incumbent that came in pendente lite by usurpation; for pendente lite nihil innovetur; and therefore at the common law it was good policie to bring the quare impedit against the bishop as speedily as might be. And it is to be observed, that albeit the clerke that comes in pendente lite, by usurpation, shall be removed; yet if the rightfull patron, being a stranger to the writ, present pendente lite, and his clerke is admitted and instituted, he shall not be removed; for else by the bringing of such quare impedit against the ordinary, the rightfull patron might be defeated of his presentation: and therefore ever after the statute of Westm. 2. amongst other things it was enquired ex officio, if the church were full, and of whose presentation, &c. and if the plaintife should have a writ to the bishop, and his clerke admitted, (as in most cases hee ought) yet may the rightfull incumbent have his remedie by law.

And as it was good policie (as hath beene said) to bring a quare impedit as speedily as might be against the bishop, so it is good policie at this day to name the bishop in the quare impedit, for then he shall not present by laps. But seeing the bishop shall not present by laps because he is named in the writ, what then, after that the time be devolved to the metropolitan, shall not he present by laps, because he is not named? To this it is answered, that he shall not in that case present by laps; for the metropolitan shall never present or collate by laps after six moneths, but when the immediate ordinary might have collated by laps within the six moneths, and had surceased his time. And so it is if the time be devolved to the king for

(1) V. stat. 7. Ann. c. 18.

for the first step or beginning faileth; and in humane things, Quod non habet principium, non habet finem. And all these points were resolved [*] in a writ of error brought by Richard bishop of London and John Lau after against Anthony Lowe upon a judgement given against them in a quare impedit in the common-place for the church of Winbifhe. But now let us heare what our author will say unto us.

Sect. 649.

ITEM, si tenant en taile ad issue et soit disseise, et puis il releffa per son fait tout son droit a le disseisor: en cest case nul droit de taile poit estre en le tenant en taile, pur ceo que il avoit releas tout son droit. Et nul droit poit estre en l'issue en le taile durant le vie son pere. Et tiel droit del enheritance en le taile n'est pas tout ousterment expire per force de tiel releas, &c. Ergo, il covient que tiel droit demurt en abeyance*, ut supra, durant la vie le tenant en taile que releffa, &c. et apres son decease donque est tiel droit maintenant en son issue en fait, &c.

ALSO, if tenant in taile hath issue and is disseised, and after he releaseth by his deed all his right to the disseisor: in this case no right of taile can be in the tenant in taile, because hee hath released all his right. And no right can bee in the issue in taile during the life of his father. And such right of the inheritance in the taile is not altogether expired by force of such release, &c. Ergo, it must needs be that such right remaine in abeyance, ut supra, during the life of tenant in taile that releaseth, &c. and after his decease such right presently is in his issue in deed, &c.

LITTLETON having declared where a fee is in abeyance, and where a freehold and fee is in abeyance by act in law, and where a fee that is in abeyance may be charged; here he putteth two cases where a right of an estate taile may be in abeyance by the act of the partie, which are so cleere and evident, as there needs no further proote or argument, than Littleton hath justly and artificially made, albeit some objections of no weight have beene made against it. If tenant in taile of lands holden of the king be attainted of felonie, and the king after office seifeth the same, the estate taile is in abeyance, there said to be in suspence.

Grant son estate, concedit statum suum.

State or estate signifieth such inheritance, freehold terme for yeares, tenancie by statute merchant, staple, elegit, or the like, as any man hath in lands or tenements, &c. And by the grant of his estate, &c. as much as he can grant shall passe, as here by Littleton's case appeareth. Tenant for life, the remainder in taile, the remainder to the right heires of tenant for life, tenant for life grant totum statum suum to a man and his heires, both estates doe passe.

(Hob. 338)

Pl. Com. fol. 562, 563. in Walsingham's case. 14. E. 3. Discont. 5.

(Cro. Car. 427, 8, 9. Ant. 117. a. Dyer 71. a.)

19. H. 6. 60. 20. Aff. p. Walsingham's case, ubi supra. (Ant. 263. b. 299. b. 331. a. 342. b.)

Vide Sect. 65. 524, 525, 526. 44. E. 3. 10. 14. Aff. 28. 43. Aff. 8. 5. H. 7. 30.

44. Aff. 28. 44. E. 3. 10.

Sect. 650.

EN mesme le maner est, lou tenant en taile granta tout son estate a un autre; en cest cas le grauntee n'ad estate forsque pur terme de

IN the same manner it is, where tenant in taile grant all his estate to another; in this case the grantee hath no estate but for terme of life of the tenant

Right, jus, sive rectum, (Flo. 484.)

(which Littleton often useth) signifieth properly, and specially in writs and pleadings, when an estate is turned to a right, as by discontinuance, disseisin, &c. where it shall bee said, quod jus descendit et non terra. But (Right) doth also include the estate

20. H. 6. 9.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

Lib. 3. Cap. II. Of Discontinuance. Sect. 650.

Vide Sect. 465. Pl. Com. 484. Lib. 8. fol. 153. Altham's case. 39. H. 6. 38.

(1. Cro. 429.)

[a] W. 2. cap. 3. Pl. Com. 484. & 487. b.]

Vid. Sect. 429. 659. &c. (Post. 347. b.)

6. H. 7. 8. 2. Altham's case ubi supra.

Pl. Com. fol. 374. in feignior Zouche's case; & fol. 487. & 448. in Nichol's case.

23. H. 8. taile Br. 32. 35. H. 8. Grant. Br. 150. Vide 16. Eliz. Dier 325. b. Titulum.

43. Aff. p. 13. 41. E. 3. tit. Waste 83. 11. H. 4. 67. 13. H. 7. 10. Pl. Com. 482. per Dier. 27. H. 8. 20.

42. E. 3. 23.

F. N. B. 60. H. 41. E. 3. Waste 83. 42. E. 3. 18.

estate in esse in conveyances; and therefore if tenant in fee simple make a lease for yeares, and release all his right in the land to the lessee and his heires, the whole estate in fee simple passeth.

And so commonly in fines, the right of the land includeth and passeth the state of the land; as A. cognovit tenementa prædicta esse jus ipsius B. &c. And the statute [a] saith, jus suum defendere (which is) statum suum. And note that there is jus recuperandi, jus intrandi, jus habendi, jus retinendi, jus percipiendi, jus possidendi.

Title, properly, (as some say) is, when a man hath a lawfull cause of entry into lands whereof another is seised, for the which hee can have no action, as title of condition, title of mortmain, &c. But legally this word (Title) includeth a right also, as you shall perceive in many places in Littleton: and title is the more generall word; for every right is a title, but every title is not such a right for which an action lieth; and therefore Titulus est justa causa possidendi quod nostrum est, and signifieth the meanes whereby a man commeth to land, as his title is by fine or by feoffment, &c. And when the plaintife in assise maketh himselfe a title, the tenant may say, Veniat assisa super titulum; which is as much to say, as upon the title which the plaintife hath made by that particular conveyance. Et dicitur titulus à tuendo, because by it he holdeth and defendeth his land; and as by a release of a right a title is released, so by release of a title a right is released also. See more hereof in Fitzherbert and Brookes' Abridgements in the title of Title.

Interest. Interesse is vulgarly taken for a terme or chattle reall, and more particularly for a future tearme; in which case it is said in pleading, that he is possessed de interesse termini. But ex vi termini, in legall understanding, it extendeth to estates, rights, and titles, that a man hath of, in, to, or out of lands; for he is truly said to have an interest in them: and by the grant of totum interesse suum in such lands, as well reversions as possessions in fee simple shall passe. And all these words singularly spoken are nomina collectiva; for by the grant of totum statum suum in lands, all his estates therein passe. Et sic de cæteris.

Ne unques avera brieve de waste, &c. So it is if tenant for life be, the remainder in taile, and he in the remainder release to the tenant for life, all his right and state in the land. Hereby it is said in our bookes, that the estate of the lessee is not enlarged, but the release serveth to this purpose, to put the estate taile into abeyance, so as after that he in the remainder cannot have an action of waste; yet in that case (saving reformation) the lessee for life hath an estate for the life of tenant in taile expectant upon his owne life. But if tenant in fee release to his tenant for life all his right, yet he shall have an action of waste. And if tenant in taile make a lease for his owne life, he shall have an action of waste.

vie del tenant en le taile, et le reversion de le taile n'est pas en le tenant en taile, pur ceo que il avoit graunt tout son estate et son droit, &c. Et si le tenant a que le graunt fuit fait fist wast, le tenant en le taile ne unque avera brieve de wast, pur ceo que nul reversion est en luy. Mes le reversion et le enberitance de le taile, durant le vie le tenant en le taile, est en abeiance, cest a savoir, tant solement en le remembrance, consideration, et intelligence de la ley.*

in taile, and the reversion of the taile is not in the tenant in taile, because he hath granted all his estate and his right, &c. And if the tenant to whom the grant was made make waste, the tenant in taile shall not have a writ of waste, for that no reversion is in him. But the reversion and inheritance of the taile, during the life of the tenant in taile, is in abeyance, that is to say, only in the remembrance, consideration, and intelligence of the law.

Titulus est justa causa possidendi

Sect.

* &c. added in L. and M. and Rob.

Sect. 651.

ITEM, si un evesque alien terres que sont parcel de son evesquery et devie, ceo est un discontinuance a son successor, pur ceo que il ne poit enter, mes est mis a son brieve de ingressu sine assensu capituli.

AL S O, if a bishop alien lands which are parcell of his bishopricke and die, this is a discontinuance to his successor, because he cannot enter, but is put to his writ of de ingressu sine assensu capituli.

(Ant. 342. a. F. N. B. 194.)

Of this sufficient hath beene said (how the law standeth at this day) before in this Chapter.

Sect. 652.

ITEM, si un dean alien terres * queux il ad en droit de luy et son chapitre, et morust, son successor † poit enter. ‡ Mes si le deane est sole seise come en droit son deanry, dunque son alienation est discontinuance a son successor, come est dit adevant.

AL S O, if a deane alien lands which he hath in right of him and his chapter, and dieth, his successor may enter. But if the deane bee sole seised as in right of his deanry, then his alienation is a discontinuance to his successor, as is said before.

(Ant. 342. a.)

HEREOF also that which was necessary is before said in this Chapter, and Littleton's owne words are plaine and evident.

22. E. 4. tit. Feoffment, & Faits, 29.
21. E. 4. 85, 86.

Sect. 653.

ITEM, peradventure ascuns voilont arguer et dire, que si un abbe et son covent sont seises en leur demesne come de fee de certaine terres a eux et a leur successors, &c. et l'abbe sans assent de son covent alien mesmes les terres a un autre et devie, ceo est un discontinuance a son successor, &c.

AL S O, peradventure some will argue and say, that if an abbot and his covent bee seised in their demesne as of fee of certaine lands to them and to their successors, &c. and the abbot without the assent of his covent alien the same lands to another and die, this is a discontinuance to his successor, &c.

Sect. 654.

PER mesme raison ils voilont dire, que lou un dean || en chapitre sont seises de certain terre a eux et a leur successors, si le deane alien mesme la terre, &c.

BY the same reason they will say, that where a deane and chapter are seised of certaine lands to them and their successors, if the deane alien the same lands,

ceo

* queux il ad en droit de luy et son chapitre, — parcel de son deanry; L. and M. and Roh. † ne added L. and M. and Roh.
† Mes poit aver brieve de ingressu sine assensu episcopi et capituli, &c. added L. and M. and Roh. and MSS. || en—et le;
L. and M. and Roh.

*ceo ferroit un discontinuance a son successeur, issint que son successeur ne poit enter, &c. A ceo poit estre respondue, que il y ad grand diversitie perenter les * deux cases.*

&c. this shall be a discontinuance to his successor, so as his successor cannot enter, &c. To this it may be answered, that there is a great diversitie betweene these two cases.

Sect. 655.

(Ant. 343. a.)

CAR quant un abbe et le covent sont seises †, uncore s'ils sont disseise, l'abbe avera assise en son nosme demesne, sans nosmer le covent, ‡ &c. Et si ascun voile suer præcipe quodd reddat, &c.
de mesmes les terres quant ils fue-ront en le maine l'abbe et covent, il covient que tiel action real soit sue envers l'abbe solement sans nosme la covent ||, pur ceo que
touts sont morts persons en la ley, forsque l'abbe que est le souveraigne,
&c. Et ceo est per cause del souveraigntie §; car autrement il ferroit forsque come ¶ un de les auters moignes de le covent,
&c.

FOR when an abbot and the covent are seised, yet if they bee disseised, the abbot shall have an assise in his owne name, without naming the covent, &c. And if any will sue a præcipe quodd reddat, &c. of the same lands when they were in the hands of the abbot and covent, it behoveth that such action reall be sued against the abbot only without naming the covent, because they are all dead persons in law, but the abbot who is the souveraigne, &c.
And this is by reason of the soveraignty; for otherwise he should bee but as one of the other monkes of the covent, &c.

Sect. 656.

MES un dean et le chapter ne
sont morts persons en la ley, &c. car chescun de eux poit aver action per soy en divers cases. Et de tiels terres ou tenements que le deane et chapter ont en common, &c. s'ils soient disseises, le deane et chapter averont un assise, et nemy le deane sole,  &c. Et si auter voile aver action real de tiels terres ou tenements envers le deane, &c. il covient de suer envers le deane et chapter, et nemy envers le deane sole, &c. et issint il ap-piert

BUT deane and chapter are not dead persons in law, &c. for every of them may have an action by himselfe in divers cases. And of such lands or tenements as the deane and chapter have in common, &c. if they bee disseised, the deane and chapter shall have an assise, and not the deane alone, &c.
And if another will have an action reall for such lands or tenements against the deane, &c. he must sue against the deane and chapter, and not against the deane alone,
&c. and so there appeareth a piert

* dites added L. and M. and Roh.
|| &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
 &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
§ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.
¶ not in L. and M. nor Roh.

appiert grand diuersitie perenter great diuersitie betweene the two les deux cafes, &c. cafes, &c.

THESE are apparent, and need no explanation. Saving in the 655. Section mention is made of the præcipe quod reddat, which in this place is intended of a reall action whereby land is demanded, and is so called of the words in every such writ. (10. Rep. 132. F. N. B. 2. c. 131. e. 192. b.)

And the reason of this diuersitie betweene the case of the abbot and covent, and deane and chapter is, for that (as hath beene said) the monkes are regular, and civilly dead, and the chapter are secular, and persons able and capable in law. But by the policie of law the abbot himselfe (here termed the soveraigne) albeit he be a monke and regular, yet hath he capacitie and abilitie to sue and be sued, to enfeoffe, give, demise, and lease to others, and to purchase and take from others; for otherwise they which right have should not have their lawfull remedie, nor the house remedie against any other that did them wrong; neither could the house without such capacitie and abilitie stand. And the covent have no other abilitie or capacitie, but only to assent to estates made to the abbot, and to estates made by him, which for necessitie's sake, though they be civilly dead, they may doe. Vid Sect. 200. S. E. 3. 27. 11. H. 4. 84. 21. E. 4. 86. 11. II. 7. 12.

Sect. 657.

ITEM, si le master d'un hospitall ALSO, if the master of an hos- (Ante 342. a.) discontinue certaine terre de son pitall discontinue certaine hospitall, son successeur ne peut en- land of his hospitall, his successor ter, mes est mis a son brieve de in- cannot enter, but is put to his gressu sine assensu confratrum et writ of de ingressu sine assensu con-  confrorum, &c. Et tous tiels* fratrum et confrorum, &c. And briefes pleinement appareront en le all such writs fully appeare in (Flo. 22. b.)
Registre, &c. the Register, &c.

THIS must also be understood where the master of the hospitall hath sole and distinct possessions, and not where he and his brethren are seised as a body politike aggregate of many. And here Littleton (as divers times before) doth cite the Register.

Sect. 658.

ITEM, si terre soit lessé a un ALSO, if land be lett to a man (1. Roll. Abr. 634.) home pur terme de sa vie, le for terme of his life, the re-remainder a un autre en le taile, mainder to another in taile, saving savant le reversion al lessor, et the reversion to the lessor, and af-puis celui en le remainder dis- ter he in the remainder disseiseth seist le tenant a terme de vie, et the tenant for terme of life, and fait un feoffment a un autre en maketh a feoffment to another in fee, et puis morust sans issue, et fee, and after dyeth without issue, le tenant a terme de vie morust; and the tenant for life dyeth; it il semble en cest cas, que celui en la seemeth in this case, that hee in reversion bien puit enter sur le the reversion may well enter upon feoffee, pur ceo que celui en le the feoffee, because he in the re-remainder que fist le feoffment, mainder which made the feoffne fuit unque seise en le taile per ment, was never seised in taile by force de mesme le remainder, &c. force of the same remainder, &c.

HERE

* confrorum—frorum, L. and M. and Roh.

Vid. Sect. 637. 592. 596. 597.
601. 640. 641. Vide Sect. 637.
(10. Rep. 35. 1. Roll. Abr. 634.)

HERE it appeareth, that albeit the feoffor hath an estate taile in him expectant upon an estate for life, yet his feoffment worketh no discontinuance. Wherein Littleton doth adde a limitation to that which in this Chapter he had generally said, viz. That an estate taile cannot be discontinued, but where he that maketh the discontinuance was once seised by force of the taile; which is to be understood, when he is seised of the freehold and inheritance of the estate in taile, and not where he is seised of a remainder or a reversion expectant upon a freehold; which freehold (as often hath beene said) is ever much respected in law.

CHAP. 12.

Of Remitter.

Sect. 659.

HERE our author having next before treated of a Discontinuance, very aptly beginneth this Chapter with a description of a Remitter.

Remitter est un antient terme en la ley, and is derived of the Latine verbe remittere, which hath two significations; either, to restore and set up againe, or to cease. Therefore a remitter is an operation in law upon the meeting of an ancient right remediable, and a latter state in one person where there is his follie in him, whereby the ancient right is restored and set up againe, and the new defeasible estate ceased and vanished away. And the reason hereof is, for that the law preferreth a sure and constant right, though it be little, before a great estate by wrong and defeasible; and therefore the first and more ancient is the most sure and more worthy title; Quod prius est, verius est, Et quod prius est tempore, potius est jure: [a] therefore many bookes in stead of remitter say, that he is en son primer estate, or en son meior droit, or en son meior estate, or the like. (1)

Lou home ad deux titles. Here this word

(Titles) is taken in the largest sense, including rights: for being properly taken, [b] as in case of a condition, mortmaine,

*REMITTER est un antient terme en la ley, et est lou home ad deux titles a terres ou tenements, scilicet, un plus antient title, et un auter title plus darrein; et s'il vient a la terre per le plus darreine title, uncore la ley luy adjudgera eins per force del plus eigne title, pur ceo que le plus eigne title est le plus sure title, et plus digne title. Et donque quant home est adjudge eins per force de son eigne title, ceo est a luy dit un remitter, pur ceo que la ley luy mitter d'estre eins en la terre per le plus eigne * et sure title. Sicome tenant en le taile discontinua la taile, et puis il disfeist son discontinuee, et issint morust seise, per que les tenements discendent a son issue ou cosine inheritable*

REMITTER is an antient terme in the law, and is where a man hath two titles to lands or tenements, viz. one a more antient title, and another a more latter title; and if he come to the land by a latter title, yet the law will adjudge him in by force of the elder title, because the elder title is the more sure and more worthie title. And then when a man is adjudged in by force of his elder title, this is sayd a remitter in him, for that the law doth admit him to be in the land by the elder and surer title. As if tenaunt in taile discontinue the taile, and after hee disseiseth his discontinuee, and so dieth seised, whereby the tenements descend to his issue or cosine inheritable by

(1. Roll. Abr. 422.)

[a] 25. Aff. pl. 4. 35. Aff. pl. 11.
26. E. 3. 69. 11. H. 4. 50. a.
41. E. 3. 17. b. Et tit. Remit. 11.
6. E. 3. 17.

(3. Rep. 153.)

[b] Vide Sect. 429. & 659, &c.
34. H. 8. tit. Remitter Br. 50.
44. E. 3. Attaint. 22.
38. Aff. pl. 7.
(Flo. 484. Ant. 345.)

* et sure not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) I. As to the general doctrine of remitter:—In note 1, p. 239. a notice was taken of the different degrees of title, which a person disseising another of his lands acquires in them in the eye of the law, independently of any anterior right: That if A. is disseised by B. while the possession is in B. it is a mere naked possession, unsupported by any right; and that A. may restore his possession, and put a total end to the possession of B. by an entry on the land, without any previous action: but that if B. dies, the possession descends on his heir by act of law. That, in this case, the heir comes to the possession of the land by a lawful title, and acquires in the eye of the law an apparent right of possession, which is so far good against the person disseised, that he has lost his right to recover the possession by entry, and can only recover it by an action at law. That the actions used in these cases are called possessory actions; but that if A. permits the possession to be withheld from him beyond a certain period of time, without claiming it, or suffers judgment in a possessory action to be given against him by default; or, if being tenant in tail, he makes a discontinuance; in all these cases, B.'s title is strengthened, and A. can no longer recover by a possessory action, and his only remedy there is, by an action on the right. That these last actions are called droiturel actions, and that they are the ultimate resource of the person disseised.—Now, if in any of these three different stages of the adverse title, the disseisee, without any default in him, comes to the possession of the estate by a defeasible title, he is considered to be in not as of his new right, but as of his ancient and better right; and consequently, the right of the person, who, supposing the disseisee still to be in as of his defeasible estate, would be entitled to the lands, upon the ceasing or determination of that estate, is gone for ever. In these circumstances, the disseisee is said to be remittered to his ancient estate. The principal reason for his being remitted is, that the person so remitted cannot sue or enter upon himself; so that in these cases where the possession is recoverable by entry, the remitter has the effect of an entry; and in those cases where it is recoverable by action, it has the effect of a judgment at law. But there is no remitter where he who comes to the defeasible estate, comes to it by his own act, or his own assent. Hence, the defeasible estate, to intitle the party to be remitted, must be made to him during infancy or coverture, or must come to him by descent, or act of law: neither is there any remitter where the ancient estate is recoverable, neither by action, nor by entry. So that in those cases where the disseisee is beyond the three stages mentioned in the beginning of the note, if he afterwards comes to the estate by a defeasible title, he remains seised as of that estate, and is not remitted to his more ancient title. These are the per force de le taile ; en cest case, ceo est a luy a que les tenements descendent, que ad droit per force de le taile un remitter a le taile, pur ceo que le ley luy mitte et adjudge d'estre eins per force de le taile, que est son eigne title: car s'il ferroit eins per force de le discent, donques le discontinuee puissoit aver briefe de entre sur disseisin en le per envers luy, et recouvreroit les tenements et ses dammages, &c. Mes entant que il est eins en son remitter per force de le taile, le title et le interest le discontinuee est tout ousterment anient et defeat, &c.*

force of the taile ; in this case, this is to him to whom the tenements descend, who hath right by force of the taile a remitter to the taile, because the law shall put and adjudge him to bee in by force of the taile, which is his elder title: for if hee should bee in by force of the discent, then the discontinuee might have a writ of entrie sur disseisin in the per against him, and should recover the tenements and his dammages, &c. But inasmuch as he is in his remitter by force of the taile, the title and interest of the discontinuee is quite taken away and defeated, &c. (1) assent to a ravisher, and the like, there is no remitter wrought unto them, because these are but bare titles of entrie, for the which no action is given; but a remitter must be to a precedent right: and Littleton in this Chapter putteth all his cases onely of remitters, to rights remediable.

Et un auter title plus darreine, &c. Here is to be observed, that an estate must worke a remitter to an ancient right; for albeit two rights doe descend, there can be no remitter, because one right cannot worke a remitter to another: for regularly to every remitter there be two incidents, viz. an ancient right and a defeasible estate of freehold coming together.

Le plus eigne title est le plus sure title, et plus digne title. So as the eldest title is worthily (as hath bene said) preferred, because it is the more sure and more worthy.

Sicome tenant en taile discontinuee le taile, &c. Here our author, according to his accustomed manner; to illustrate his description putteth an example of a remitter, where the law preferreth the ancient estate by right, before a new estate defeasible. And this remitter is wrought by an estate cast upon the issue in taile by discent, which is an act in law; and the discent of the land in possession, and the right of estate taile descend together.

Est tout ousterment anient et defeat, &c. Here be two things implied and to be understood: First, that this remitter is wrought in this case by operation of law upon the freehold in law descended without any entrie. Secondly, that the law so favoureth a remitter (being a restoring to right), that if the discontinuee be an infant or a feme covert, and tenant in taile after a discontinuance disseise them and die seised, the issue shall be remitted without any respect of the privilege of infancie or coverture; and therefore our author said, le title et interest le discontinuee est tout ousterment anient et defeat.

Donques le discontinuee, &c. Here is a reason added in this particular case, that sitteth not other cases of remitter; for in this case and many other, the law that abhorreth fruits of vexation, doth avoid circuitie of action; for the rule is, Circuitus est evitandus.

19. H. 6. 59. 78. 45. tit. Entre Cong. 3. Pl. Com. 246. a. (3. Rep. 1.)

19. H. 6. 61, 62.

(Post. 390. 2. Ant. 246. 2. Post. 357. 2.)

11. E. 4. 1.

11. E. 3. 3. tit. Aff. 85.
4. E. 4. 35. 11. R. 2. Bar. 242.
30. E. 3. 8. 6. E. 3. 7.
19. H. 6. 63. 24. E. 3. 70.
14. H. 4. 27. 10. H. 7. 11.
F. N. B. Mesne & Wall.

Sect. 660.

ITEM, si le tenant en taile enseoffa son fies en

ALSO, if tenant in taile infeoffe his sonne in fee,

OUR author having put one example where both the rights descend together, now puts another example, where Temp. E. 1. Remit. 13.

11. E. 3. Age 5. 38. E. 3. 24.
40. E. 3. 43. 21. E. 4. 19.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) I. Here the ancient right and the defeasible estate come together. It is immaterial whether they come by discent or by act of law. See the instances brought by Littleton afterwards, Sect. 665, 666. and 678.

the doctrines of the common law respecting remitter. But they are greatly altered by the statute of the 27 Hen. VIII. That statute executes the possession to the party in the same plight, manner, and form, as the use was limited to him: It operates only with respect to the first taker, and therefore the issue of the issue is remitted. By the statute of 32 Hen. VIII. it is enacted, that no fine, feoffment, or other act by the husband, of the wife's lands, shall be any discontinuance; but that the wife and her heirs, and such others to whom the right shall appertain after her decease, shall, notwithstanding such fine, or other act, lawfully enter into her lands, according to their rights and titles therein. This takes from the wife, and those claiming under her, the effect of the statute of the 27 Hen. VIII. so that she has her election to take by the 27 Hen. VIII. or to enter by the 32 Hen. VIII. upon which she shall be remitted. See Duncombe v. Wingfield, Hobart 254.—Sir W. Blackstone, 3. Com. Cha. 10, observes, that the doctrine of remitter might seem superfluous to an hasty observer, who perhaps would imagine, that since the tenant hath now both the right, and also the possession, it little signifies by what means such possession shall be said to be gained. But the wisdom of our ancient law determined nothing in vain. As the tenant's possession was gained by a defective title, it was liable to be overturned, by shewing that defect in a writ of entrie; and then he must have been driven to his writ of right to recover his just inheritance; which would have been doubly hard, because, during the time he was himself tenant, he could not establish his prior title by any possessory action: the law, therefore, remits him to his prior title, and puts him in the same condition as if he had recovered the land by writ of entrie. Without the remitter, he would have had jus et seisinam separate, a good right, but a bad possession; now, by the remitter, he hath the most perfect of all titles, juris et seisinam conjunctionem.

where the issue in taile claimeth by purchase in the life of tenant in taile, and the ancient right descendeth after to the same issue.

Car coment que tiel heire fuit de pleine age al temps del mort, &c.

The reason is, because no follie can be adjudged in the infant at the time of the acceptance of the feoffment. Therefore the law respecteth the time of the feoffment, and not the time of the death: and albeit he might have waived the estate which he had by the feoffment at his full age, yet here it appeareth, that the right of the estate taile descending to him either within age, or of full age, shall worke a remitter in him; for that the waiver of the state should have beene to his losse and prejudice.

Since Littleton wrote, and after the statute of 27 H. 8. cap. 10. if tenant in taile make a feoffment in fee to the use of his issue being within age, and his heires, and dieth, and the right of the estate taile descend to the issue being within age; yet he is not remitted, because the statute executeth the possession in such plite, manner and forme, as the use was limited: Et sic de similibus, so as there is a great change of remitters since Littleton wrote. (1)

But if the issue in taile in that case waive the possession, and bring a formedon in the discender, and recover against the feoffees, he shall thereby bee remitted to the estate taile; otherwise the lands may be so incumbered, as the issue in taile should be at a great inconvenience: but if no formedon be brought, if that issue dieth, his issue shall be remitted; because a state in fee simple at the common law descendeth unto him.

Esleant de pleine age, il charge per son fait, *fee, ou son cosine inheritable per force de le taile, le quel fuit ou cosin al temps de feoffment est deins age, et puis le tenant en le taile devia, et celui a que le feoffment fuit fait est son heire per force de le taile; ceo est un remitter al heire en le taile a que le feoffment fuit fait. Car coment que durant la vie le tenant en le taile que fist le feoffment, tiel heire serra adjudge eins per force de le feoffment, uncore apres la mort le tenant en le taile, l'heire serra adjudge eins per force de le taile, et nemy per force de le feoffment. * Car coment que tiel heire fuit de pleine age al temps de le mort de le ternaunt en le taile que fist le feoffment, ceo ne fait ascun matter, si l'heire fuit deins age al temps del feoffment fait a luy. Et si tiel heire esleant deins age al temps de tiel feoffment, vient al pleine age, vivant le tenant en le taile que fist le feoffment, et issint esleant de pleine age, il charge per son fait mesme la terre ove* or his cosine inheritable by force of the taile, which sonne or cosine at the time of the feoffment is within age, and after the tenant in taile dieth, and hee to whom the feoffment was made is his heire by force of the taile; this is a remitter to the heire in taile to whom the feoffment was made. For albeit that during the life of the tenant in taile who made the feoffment, such heire shall bee adjudged in by force of the feoffment, yet after the death of tenant in taile, the heire shal be adjudged in by force of the taile, and not by force of the feoffment. For altho' such heire were of full age at the time of the death of the tenant in taile whomade the feoffment, this makes no matter, if the heire were within age at the time of the feoffment made unto him. And if such heire beeing within age at the time of such feoffment, commeth to full age, living the tenant in taile that made the feoffment, and so beeing of full age he charges by his deed

un

27. H. 8. c. 10. of Uses.

35. H. 8. Dy. 54. b. 6. E. 6.

ib. 77. 1. & 2. P. & M. 116.

2. & 2. P. & M. 129. 191.

28. H. 8. 27. b. Pl. Com. Amy

Townshend's case, fol. 111.

34. H. 8. tit. Remit. Br. 49.

(Dyer 106. Sid. 63. 1. Leo. 91.

Hob. 255. 298.)

Pl. Com. ub. sup.

(2. Roll. Abri. 419. 421.

1. Roll. Rep. 260.)

* Car not in L. and M., nor Rob.

(1) The effect of this statute on the doctrine of Remitter is very fully explained in Duncombe v. Wingfield, Hob. 254. See 2. Leo. 222. Sid. 63. Dyer, 351.

un common de pasture, ou ove un rent charge, et puis le tenant en le taile mortuif; ore il semble que le terre est discharge del common, et de le rent, pur ceo que le heire est eins de autre estate en la terre que il fuit al temps de le charge fait, entant que il est en son remitter per force de le taile, et issint l'estate que il avoit al temps de le charge, est ousterment defeat, &c.*

the same land with a common of pasture, or with a rent charge, and after the tenant in taile dieth; now it seemeth that the land is discharged of the common, and of the rent, for that the heire is in of another estate in the land than he was at the time of the charge made, in as much as hee is in his remitter by force of the taile, and so the estate which hee had at the time of the charge, is utterly defeated, &c. (1)

&c. The reason is, because the grantor had not any right of the estate in taile in him at the time of the grant, but only the estate in fee simple gained by the feoffment, which (as Littleton here saith) is wholly defeated. And the state of the land out of which the rent issued, being defeated, the rent is defeated also.

But if tenant in taile make a lease for life whereby he gaineth a new reversion in fee, so long as tenant for life liveth, and he granteth a rent-charge out of the reversion, and after tenant for life dieth, whereby the grantor becommeth tenant in taile againe, and the reversion in fee defeated; yet because the grantor had a right of the entaile in him, cloathed with a defeasible fee simple, the rent-charge remaineth good against him, but not against his issue; which diversitie is worthy of observation, for it openeth the reason of many cases.

(2. Roll. Abr. 419. 421. 3. Rep. 5. b. Hob. 45.)

11. H. 7. 21. Edriche's case. (Mo. 319. 1. Rep. 148. Ant. 278. a.)

If the heire apparent of the disseisee disseise the disseisor, and grant a rent-charge, and then the disseisee dieth, the grantor shall hold it discharged; for there a new writ of entrie doth descend unto him, and therefore he is remitted. (2. Roll. Abr. 422.)

So if the father disseise the grandfather, and granteth a rent-charge, and dieth, now is the entry of the grandfather taken away, if after the grandfather dieth, the sonne is remitted, and he shall avoid the charge. So as where our author putteth his example of a fee taile, it holdeth also in case of a fee simple.

Un common de pasture, ou un rent charge, &c. Here Littleton putteth his case of things granted out of the land. But what if the issue at full age by deed indented or deed poll make a lease for yeares of the land, and after by the death of tenant in taile he is remitted, whether shall he avoid the lease or no? And it is holden, he shall not, because it is made of the land it selfe, and the land is become by the lease in another plight than it is in the case of a grant of a rent-charge, which I gather out of our author's owne words in another place.

33. H. 8. Dier 51. b.

Vide Sect. 289.

La terre est discharge del rent, &c. Littleton doth adde these words materially, because the whole grant is not thereby avoided; but the land discharged of the rent-charge; for the grantee shall have notwithstanding a writ of annuitie, and charge the person of the grantor. Li. 2. f. 26. b. Ward's case.

Sect. 661.

ITEM, un principall cause pur que tiel heire en les cases avantdits, et auters cases semblables, serra dit en son remitter, est pur ceo que il n'y ad ascun person envers que il poet fuer son brieve de

ALSO, a principall cause why such heire in the cases afore-said; and other like cases, shall bee said in his remitter, is for that there is not any person against whom he may sue his writ of formedon. For against

UN principall cause pur que, &c. And of this opinion is [d] Littleton in our bookes. [d] 12. E. 4. 20.

41. E. 3. 18. 11. H. 4. 50.

Il n'ad ascun person envers que, &c. sicome il avoit loialment recover mesme la terre vers un autre, &c. Here it is to be understood, that regularly a man shall not be remitted to a right

(6. Rep. 58. b. 1. Sid. 63. 2. Roll. Abr. 419.)

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) 11. Here the ancient right comes after the defeasible estate.

Lib. 3. f. 3. the Marquess of Winchester's case.

(3. Rep. 2.)

(Ant. 122. b.)
5. H. 7. 35.

Britton fol. 126.

[c] Brañ. li. 4. f. 243. b.

8. R. 2. Quare Imp. 199.
2. H. 4. 18. 14. H. 6. 15, 16.
8. H. 6. 17. 33. H. 6. 15.
F. N. B. 35. B. & 36 F.
24. E. 3. Discont. 16.
33. H. 8. Dier 48. b.
(Ant. 324. b. 333. b.)
Post. 363. b.)

right remediable, for the which he can have no action; for Litleton here saith, that there is no person against whom the issue when he commeth to the land without folly may bring his action; and saith also, that this is the principall cause of the remitter; for neither an action without a right, nor a right without an action, can make a remitter. As if tenant in taile suffer a common recovery in which there is error, and after tenant in taile disseiseth the recoveror and dieth, here the issue in taile hath an action, viz. a writ of error; but as long as the recovery remaineth in force, he hath no right, and therefore in that case there is no remitter. (1)

If B. purchase an advowson, and suffereth an usurpation and six moneths to passe, and after the usurper granteth the advowson to B. and his heires, B. dieth, his heire is not remitted, because his right to the advowson was remediable, viz. a right without an action. (2).

Tenant in taile of a manor whereunto an advowson is appendant maketh a discontinuance, the discontinuance granteth the advowson to tenant in taile and his heires, tenant in taile dieth, the issue is not remitted to the advowson, because the issue had no action to recover the advowson before he recovered the manor whereunto the advowson was appendant. And so it is of all other inheritances regardant, appendant, or appurtenant; a man shall never be remitted to any of them before he recontinueth the manor, &c. whereunto they are regardant, appendant, or belonging.

Car nul ne poet clamer droit en les appurtenances ne en les accessories que nul droit ad en le principall.

[c] Item, excipi potest, &c. quavis jus habeat in tenemento et pertinentiis, primò recuperare debet tenementum ad quod pertinet advocatio, et tunc postea presentet et non ante, et de hac materia in Rotulo de termino Sancti Michaelis, anno regis Henrici tertio in comitatu Norff. de Thomā Bardolfe.

But, on the other side, if a man be remitted to the principall, he shall also be remitted to the appendant or accessory, albeit it were severed by the discontinuance, or other wrong doer. And therefore if tenant in taile be of a manor whereunto an advowson is appendant, and infeofeth A. of the manor with the appurtenances, A. re-infeoffeth the tenant in taile, saving to himselfe the advowson, tenant in taile dieth; his issue being remitted to the manor, is consequently remitted to the advowson, although at that time it was severed from the manor. So it is in the same case if tenant in taile had bene disseised, and the disseisor suffer an usurpation, if the disseisee enter into the manor, he is also remitted to the advowson.

formedon. Car envers luy mesme il ne poit suer, et il ne poit suer envers nul autre, car nul autre est tenant del franktenement; et pur cel cause la ley luy adjudge eins en son remitter, scilicet, en tiel plite, sicome il avoit loialment recover mesme la terre envers un autre, &c.

himselfe he cannot sue, and hee cannot sue against any other, for none other is tenant of the freehold; and for this cause the law doth adjudge him in his remitter, scilicet, in such plite, as if hee had lawfully recovered the same land against another, &c.

Sect. 662.

ITEM, si terre soit taile a un home et a sa feme, et a les heires de lour deux corps engendres, les queux ont issue file, et le feme devy, et le baron prent autre feme, et ad issue un autre file, et discontinua le taile, et puis disseise le discontinuee et issint morust seise, ore le terre disce-

ALSO, if land be entailed to a man and to his wife, and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, who have issue a daughter, and the wife dieth, and the husband taketh another wife, and hath issue another daughter, and discontinue the taile, and after he disseiseth the discontinuee and

(1) III. By what sir Edward Coke says here, and in other parts of this Chapter, it appears, that there is no remitter to a bare title, to an immediate right, or to a bare right of action, nor in those cases where the freehold does not accrue to the right. It is upon the last ground, that where tenant in tail makes a discontinuance, the issue in tail is not remitted; neither is there a remitter to a term for years. Hence, if lessee for years to commence at a future day enters before that day (which is a disseisin), and continues in possession till the term commences, he shall not be remitted, for the disseisor acquires by the disseisin an estate of freehold; which, tho' it be tortious, the law will not divest from him for a term which is of no account. See 2. Roll. Abr. 420. l. 25. Com. Dig. vol. 5. 417, 418, 419, 420.

(2) This seems to be altered by the afore-mentioned statute of 7. Ann. c. 18. Note to the 11th edition.

*dera a les deux files. * Et en cest cas quant al eigne file, que est inheritable per force de le tayle, ceo † n'est un remitter forsque de le moity. Et quant al auter moity, el est mis a suer son action de formedon envers sa soer. Car en cest cas les deux soers ne sont pas tenants en parcenary, mes sont tenants en common, pur ceo que ils sont eins per divers titres. Car l'un soer est eins en son remitter per force de le taile, quant a ceo que a luy affiert; et l'auter soer est eins quant a ceo que a luy affiert en fee simple per le discent son pier, ‡ &c.*

so die seised, now the land shal descend to the two daughters. And in this case as to the eldest daughter, who is inheritable by force of the tayle, this is no remitter but of the moitie. And as to the other moitie, she is put to sue her action of formedon against her sister. For in this case the two sisters are not tenants in parcenarie, but they are tenants in common, for that they are in by divers titles. For the one sister is in in her remitter by force of the entaile, as to that which to her belongeth; and the other sister is in as to that to her belongeth in fee simple by the discent of her father, &c.

CEO n'est remitter forsque pur le moitie, &c. Here Littleton putteth a case where the issue in taile shall be remitted to a moitie, because but a moity of the land descended unto her, and there cannot be any remitter, but for so much as cometh to the issue by discent, or by any other meanes without his folly; and in this case by act in law the coparcenary is defeated, for the daughters are in by severall titles, viz. the eldest daughter is tenant in taile per formam doni, by the remitter of the one moitie; and the youngest seised in fee simple by discent of the other moitie, against whom the other sister in taile may have her formedon. (1) 44. E. 3. 26. 19. H. 6. 59. (Flo. 246. 2.)

Sect. 663.

EN mesme le manner est, si tenant
en taile enfeoffa son
heire apparant en le taile (estant l'heire deins age), et un au-
ter jointenant en fee, et le tenant en taile
morust; ore l'heire en
taile est en son remitter quant a l'un moity, et quant a l'au-ter moitie il est mis a son brieve de for-
medon, || &c.

IN the same manner
it is, if tenant in taile enfeoffe his heire apparant in taile (the heire being within
age) and another join-tenant in fee, and the tenant in taile dieth;
now the heire entaile
is in his remitter as to the one moitie, and as to the other moitie
hee is put to his writ of formedon, &c.

LE beire, &c. est en son remitter quant
a l'un moitie, &c. (2. Roll. Abr. 41.)

Hereby it appeareth, that albeit joyntenants be seised pro indiviso per my et per tout, yet each of them hath in judgement of law but a right to a moitie; and therefore the issue in taile in this case is remitted but to a moity, and is tenant in common but with the other feoffee. And so it is if the discontinuee, after the death of tenant in taile, make a charter of feoffment to the issue in taile, being within age, who hath right, and to a stranger in fee, and make livery to the infant in name of both; the issue is not remitted to the whole, but to the halfe: for first he taketh the fee simple, and after the remitter is wrought by operation of law, and therefore can remit him but to a moitie. But of this sufficient hath bene said in the Chapter of Joyntenants.

Vide Sect. 288.

Sect.

* Et not in L. and M. nor Roh.
in L. and M. nor Roh.

† n'est—est, L. and M. and Roh.

(&c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.)

&c. not

(1) IV. By this and the following Section it appears, that if part of the estate comes to the right, it is remitted for that part.

Sect. 664.

ITEM, si tenant en taile enfeoffa son heire apparant, l'heire esteant de pleine age al temps de feoffment, et puis le tenant en taile morust; ceo n'est remitter al heire, pur ceo que il fuit sa folly, que il esteant de pleine age voile prendre tiel feoffment, &c. Mes tiel folly ne poit estre adjudge en l'heire esteant deins age * al temps del feoffment, &c.

AL SO, if tenant in tail enfeoffe his heire apparant, the heire being of full age at the time of the feoffment, and after tenant in taile dieth; this is no remitter to the heire, because it was his folly, that being of full age hee would take such feoffment, &c. But such folly cannot be adjudged in the heire being within age at the time of the feoffment, &c.

(Ant. 171. b. 187. a. 246. a. 337. b. 308. b.)
40. E. 3. 44. 18. E. 4. 25.

BY this feoffment albeit the heire apparent hath some benefit in the life of his ancestor, yet is he thereby (besides his owne) subject during his life to all charges and incumbrances made or suffered by his ancestor. And therefore our author saith well, que il fuit son folly que il esteant de pleine age voile prendre tiel feoffment, but folly shall not be judged in one within age in respect of his tender yeares, and want of experience.

Sect. 665.

(Ant. 202. b.)

HERE Linleton putteth a case where the husband within age by the intermarriage may be remitted, albeit he gaineth but a freehold during the coverture en auter droit.

Also here is to bee observed, that the estate which doth in this case worke the remitter, could not have continuance after the decease of the wife. And so on the other side, if the husband make a discontinuance, and take backe an estate to him and his wife, during the life of the husband, this is a remitter to the wife presently, albeit the estate is not by the limitation to have continuance after the decease of the husband; which case is proved by the reason of the case which our author here putteth. And here our author observeth the diversity when the husband is within age, and when hee is of full age; for when he is within age, no folly can be adjudged in him, as in this Chapter hath bene often said.

ITEM, si tenant en taile enfeoffa un feme en fee, et morust, et son issue deins age prent mesme la feme † a feme; ceo est un remitter al enfant ‡ deins age, et la feme donque n'ad rien, pur ceo que le baron et la feme sont forsque come un person en ley. Et en cest cas le baron ne poit suer brieve de formedon, sinon que il voiloit suer envers luy mesme, le quel seroit enconvenient; et pur cel cause la ley adjudgera l'heire en son remitter, pur ceo que nul folly poit estre || adjudge en luy esteant

AL SO, if tenant in taile enfeoffe a woman in fee, and dyeth, and his issue within age taketh the same woman to wife; this is a remitter to the infant within age, and the wife then hath nothing, for that the husband and his wife are but as one person in law. And in this case the husband cannot sue a writ of formedon, unlessse he will sue against himselfe, which should bee inconvenient; and for this cause the law adjudgeth the heire in his remitter, for that no folly can bee adjudged in him being deins

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
|| adjudge—avette, L. and M. and Roh.

† a feme not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ deins age not in L. and M. nor Roh.

deins age al temps d'espousels, &c. Et si l'heire soit en son remitter per force de le taile, il ensuist per reason, que la feme n'ad riens, &c. Car entant que le baron et sa feme sont come un person, la terre ne poit estre seveire per moities; et pur cel cause le baron est en son remitter de l'entiertie. Mes autrement est si tiel heire juit de pleine age al temps de les espousels, car donques le heire n'ad riens forsque en droit sa feme, &c.

within age at the time of the espousels, &c. And if the heire bee in his remitter by force of the entaile, it followeth by reason, that the wife hath nothing, &c. For inasmuch as the husband and wife be as one person, the land cannot be parted by moities; and for this cause the husband is in his remitter of the whole. But otherwise it is if such heire were of full age at the time of espousels, for then the heire hath nothing but in right of his wife, &c.

Here is also to be noted, that presently by the marriage within age, the husband is remitted, and the freehold and inheritance of the wife banished cleane away.

Priſt meſme la feme (4. Rep. 29.)

al feme. Here it is good to be seene what things are given to the husband by marriage. (1) First, it appeareth here by Littleton, that if a man taketh to wife a woman seised in fee [f], he gaineth by the intermarriage an estate of freehold in her right, which estate is sufficient to worke a remitter, and yet the estate which the husband gaineth dependeth upon uncertainty, and consisteth in privitie [g]; for if the wife be attainted of felony, the lord by escheat shall enter and put out the husband: otherwise it is if the felony be committed after issue had. Also, if the husband be attainted of felony, the king gaineth no freehold, but a pernanie of the [f] 13. H. 4. 6. Stanf. 1. 7. b.

18. E. 4. 5. 11. H. 7. 19.
10. H. 6. 11. 7. H. 6. 9. b.

Vide Sect. 58.

[g] 4. Aff. p. 4. 4. E. 3.
Aff. 166.

(1. Rep. 30. a.
1. Roll. Abr. 343, 344.
5. Rep. 17. Hob. 285.)

[h] Pl. Com. fol. 260. b. Dame
Hale's case. 50. Aff. 5.

38. H. 6. 23. 21. F. 4. 35.
7. E. 4. 6. 7. H. 7. 2. 10. H. 6. 11.

[i] Mich. 26. & 27. Eliz. inter Amnor & Lodington in brieve
de error adjudge in both Courts.
Lib. 8. fol. 96. Mat. Manning's
case.

7. H. 6. fol. 2.
(1. Roll. Abr. 346.)

Vid. Sect. 58.

Pl. Com. fol. 294. Osborne's case, and there fol. 192. b.
Wrottesley's case.

[j] Pasch. 32. Eliz. in Cancellar. in Wytham's case. Hill. 38. Eliz.
in Cancell. in Waterhouse's case.
Wrottesley's case, ubi sup.

13. E. 3. Quar. Imp. 57.
14. H. 4. 12. 38. E. 3. 35. b.
50. E. 3. 13. 10. H. 6. 11.
F. N. B. 121. 22. H. 6. 25.
29. E. 3. 40. 11. R. 2.
Account 49. 12. R. 2.
Briefe 639 5. E. 3. Execut. 99.

[k] 50. E. 3. 13. 28. H. 6. 9.
7. H. 7. 2.

But

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) On the interest which the husband takes in the chattels real and things in action of his wife.—Some observations have been offered to the reader, in a former part of this work, upon the nature of the estate which the husband takes in his wife's lands of freehold or inheritance. See ante 325. b. note 2. The following observations are now submitted to his consideration, upon the nature of the interest which the husband takes in his wife's chattels real and things in action.—I. Where the husband survives the wife.—At the common law no person had a right to administer. It was in the breast of the ordinary to grant administration to whom he pleased, till the statute of the 21st of Hen. VIII. which gave it to the next of kin; and if there were persons of equal kin, whichever took out administration first was entitled to the surplus. The statute of distribution was made to prevent this injustice, and to oblige the administrator to distribute. In those cases where the wife was entitled only to the trust of a chattel real, or to any chose in action, or contingent interest in any kind of personalty, it seems to have been doubted, whether, if the husband survived her, he was entitled to the benefit of it or not. See the commentary above, and 4. Inst. 87. Roll. Abr. 346. All. 15. Wytham v. Waterhouse, Cro. Eliz. 466. 3. Rep. in Cha. 27. and Gilb. Ca. in Eq. 234.—By the 22 and 23 Car. II. c. 10. administrators are liable to make distributions; but as the act makes no express mention of the husband's administering to his wife, and as no person can be in equal degree to the wife with the husband, he was not held to be within the act. To obviate all doubts upon this question, by the 29 Car. II. c. 3. § 25. it is declared, that the husband may demand administration of his deceased wife's personal estate, and recover and enjoy the same, as he might have done before the statute of the 22d and 23d of that reign.—Upon the construction of these statutes it has been held, that the husband may administer to his deceased wife, and that he is entitled, for his own benefit, to all her chattels real, things in action, trusts, and every other species of personal property, whether actually vested in her and reduced into possession, or contingent, or recoverable only by action or suit.—It was, however, made a question after the statute of 29 Car. II. c. 3. § 25. whether, if the husband, having survived his wife, afterwards died during the suspense of the contingency upon which any part of his wife's property depended, or without having reduced into possession such of her property as lay in action or suit, his representative, or his wife's next of kin, were entitled to the benefit of it.—But by a series of cases it is now settled, that the representative of the husband is entitled as much to this species of his wife's property, as to any other; that the right of administration follows the right of the estate, and ought, in case of the husband's death, after the wife, to be granted to the next of kin of the husband. See Mr. Hargrave's Law Tracts, 475. And that if administration de bonis non of the wife is obtained by any third person, he is a trustee for the representative of the husband. See

26. E. 2. 64. 10. H. 6. 11.
F. N. B. 121. 22. H. 6. 25.
[1] Lib. 4. fol. 51. in Ongel's case. Hil. 17. El. Rot. 457. in
Com. Banco, Sharp's case.
21. E. 4. 4. 21. H. 7. 29.
11. H. 7. 4. 26. H. 8. 7.
43. E. 3. 10. 3. H. 6. 23. 37.
4. H. 6. 5. 14. E. 2. Det. 73.
5. E. 2. Ibid. 169. 30. E. 3.
48. E. 3. 12. 12. R. 3.
Bre. 638, 639. 16. E. 4. 8.
16. H. 6. Bre. 939.
[m] 43. E. 3. 8. V. 10. H. 6. 11.
39. E. 3. 17.

But if the arrerages had become due, or the church had fallen voyd before the marriage, there they were meere in action before the marriage; and therefore the husband should not have them by the common law, although he survived her. And so it is of releefes, mutatis mutandis. [1] But now by the statute of 32. H. 8. cap. 37. if the husband survive the wife, he shall have the arrerages as well incurred before the marriage, as after.

But the marriage is an absolute gift of all chattels personals in possession in her owne right, whether the husband survive the wife or no; but if they be in action, as debts by obligation, contract, or otherwise, the husband shall not have them unlesse he and his wife recover them. And of personall goods en auter droit, as executrix or administratrix, &c. the marriage is no gift of them to the husband, although he survive his wife. (1)

[m] If an estray happen within the mannor of the wife, if the husband die before seisure, the wife shall have it, for that the propertie was not in the wife before seisure.

But as to personall goods, there is a diversitie worthy of observation betweene a propertie in personall goods (as is aforesaid) and a bare possession; for if personall goods be bailed to a feme, or if she finde goods, or if goods come to her hands as executrix to a bailiffe, and taketh a husband, this bare possession is not given to the husband, but the action of detinue must be brought against the husband and wife.

But now let us heare Littleton.

Le quel ferra inconvenient. This argument ab inconvenienti, our author hath used in many places.

Vide Sect. 87, &c.

Sect. 666,

*ITEM, si feme seisie de certaine terre en fee prent baron, le quel aliena mesme la terre a un auter en fee, * l'alienee lessa mesme la terre al baron et sa feme pur terme de leur deux vies, savant le reversion al lessor et a ses heires; en cest cas la feme est eins en son remitter, et el est seisie en fait en son demesne come de fee, sicome el fuit adevant, pur ceo que le reprisal del estate ferra adjudge en ley le fait le baron, et nemy le fait la feme; issint nul folly poit estre adjudge en la feme, que est covert en tiel case. Et en cest case le lessor n'ad + rien en le reversion, pur ceo que la feme est seisie en fee, † &c.*

(Ant. 330. b.)

ALSO, if a woman seised of certaine land in fee taketh husband, who alieneth the same land to another in fee, the alienee letteth the same land to the husband and wife for terme of their two lives, saving the reversion to the lessor and to his heires; in this case the wife is in her remitter, and she is seised in deed in her demesne as of fee, as shee was before, because the taking backe of the estate shall be adjudged in law the fact of the husband, and not the fact of the wife; so no folly can be adjudged in the wife, which is covert in such case. And in this case the lessor hath nothing in the reversion, for that the wife is seised in fee, &c.

21. E. 3. 26. 29. E. 3. 43.
41. E. 3. Remit. 11. 19. E. 3.
Remit. 14. 35. Aff. 12.
38. E. 3. 24. 39. E. 3. 29. 30.
41. E. 3. 17. 46. E. 3. 20. b.
26. E. 3. 69. Vi. Sect. 676.
11. R. 2. Remit. 12. 44. E. 3. 17.

LA feme est en son remitter.

By this it appeareth, that albeit there be no moities betweene husband and wife, yet this is a remitter presently, and standeth not upon the survivor of the wife, as some have thought: for if the estate gained by intermarriage be a sufficient estate to worke a remitter; a fortiori, an estate made to the husband and wife shall worke a remitter in the wife. And so it is if tenant in taile infeoffe his issue being within age, and his wife in fee, and dieth; this is a remitter to the issue presently, by the death of tenant in taile; though some have thought the contrarie.

Here

* et added L. and M. and Roh.

+ afun added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) But they shall go to the administrator de bonis non; for should they go to the husband, the creditors, legatees, &c. of the deceased would be thereby wronged. Note to 11th edition.

Squibb v. Wynne, 1. P. W. 378. Carr v. Reeve, ib. 382.—II. If the wife survives the husband:—As to this point, there is a material difference with respect to chattels real, and goods, cattle, money, and other chattels personal. All chattels personal become the property of the husband immediately upon the marriage; he may dispose of them without the consent or concurrence of his wife; and at his death, whether he dies in her life-time or survives her, they belong to his personal representative.—With respect to her chattels real, as leases for years, there is a distinction between those which are in the nature of a present vested interest in the wife, and those in which she has only a possible or contingent interest. To explain this fully, it seems proper to mention, that it was formerly held, that a disposition of a term of years to a man for his life was such a total disposition of the term, that no disposition could be made of the possible residue of the term, or at least, that if it was made, the first devisee might dispose of the whole term, notwithstanding the devise of the residue. This is reported by Dyer 74. to have been determined by all the judges in a case in the 6th of Edw. VI.—The court of chancery first broke through this rule, and supported such future dispositions when made by way of trust. Their example was followed by the courts of law in Matt. Manning's case, 8. Rep. 94. b. and Lampet's case, 10. Rep. 46. b.—This disposition of the residue of a term, after a previous disposition of the term to a person for his life, operates by way of executory devise, and the interest of the devisee of the residue is called a possibility. This possible interest in a term of years differs from a contingent interest, created by way of remainder.—If a person limits a real estate to A. for life, and after the decease of A. and if B. dies in A.'s life-time, to C. for a term of years, this operates not as an executory devise, but as a remainder, and therefore is not to be considered as a possibility, but as a contingent interest. Now, if a person marries a woman possessed of, or entitled to, the trust of a present actual and vested interest in a term of years, or any other chattel real, it so far becomes his property, that he may dispose of it during her life; and if he survives her, it vests in him absolutely; but if he makes no disposition of it, and she survives him, it belongs to her, and not to his representatives: nor is he, in this case, entitled to dispose of it from her by will. See Pred in Chan. 418. Factor v. Samyne, 2. Vern. 270. If a person marries a woman entitled to a possible or contingent interest in a term of years, if it is a legal interest, that is, such an interest as, upon the determination of the previous estate, or the happening of the contingency, will immediately vest in possession in the wife, there the husband may assign it, unless, perhaps, in those cases where the possibility or contingency is of such a nature, that it cannot happen during the husband's life-time. Ante 46. b. 10. Rep. 51. a. Hutt. 17. 1. Salk. 326. But it is an exception to this rule, at least in equity, that if a future or executory interest in a term or other chattel is provided for the wife, by or with the consent of the husband, there the husband cannot dispose of it from the wife; as it would be absurd and unfair in the highest degree that he should be allowed to defeat

Here also it appeareth, that no follie in this case can be adjudged in a feme covert, for the taking backe of the estate shall be adjudged in law the act of the husband. The Marques of Winch. case, ub. sup. (Hob. 71.)
 Note in the case of the feme covert, she may be remitted in the life of the discontinuor, because she hath a present right: but in the case of tenant in taile, the issue cannot be remitted in the life of the discontinuor, because the issue hath no right untill his decease.

Sect. 667.

*MES en cest case si le lessour voile fuer action de wast vers le baron et sa feme, pur ceo que le baron avoit fait wast, le baron ne poit barrer le lessor pur monstre ceo, que le reprisel del estate fait a luy et a son feme fuit un remitter a sa feme, pur ceo que le baron est estoppe a dire ceo * que est encounter son feoffment, et son reprisel demesne del estate pur terme de vie a luy et a sa feme. Et uncore le lessor n'ad † un reversion, pur ceo que le fee simple est en la feme. Et issint home poit veier un matter en ceo case, que home serra estoppe per un matter en fait, coment que nul escripture soit fait per fait indent ou auterment.*

BUT in this case if the lessor wil sue an action of wast against the husband and his wife, for that the husband hath committed wast, the husband cannot barre the lessor by shewing this, that the taking backe of the estate to him and to his wife was a remitter to his wife, because the husband is stopped to say that which is against his owne feoffment, and taking backe of the estate for terme of life to him and to his wife. And yet the lessor hath no reversion, for that the fee simple is in the wife. And so a man may see one thing in this case, that a man shall bee stopped by matter in fact, though there bee no writing by deed indented, or otherwife.

PUR ceo que baron est estoppe a dire, &c.

Estoppe commeth of the French word estoupe, from whence the English word stopped: and it is called an estoppel or conclusion, because a man's owne act or acceptance stoppeth or clofeth up his mouth to alleage or plead the truth: and Littleton's case here proveth this description.

Touching estoppels, which is an excellent and curious kinde of learning, it is to be observed, that there be three kinde of estoppels, viz. by matter of record, by matter in writing, and by matter in pais.

[a] By matter of record, viz. by letters patents, fine, recoverie, pleading, taking of continuance, confession, imparlance, warrant of attorney, admittance.

[b] By matter in writing, as by deed indented, by making of an acquittance by deed indented or deed poll,

[c] by defeasance by deed indented or deed poll.

By matter in pais, as by livery, by entry, by acceptance of rent, by partition, and by acceptance of an estate, as here in the case that Littleton putteth; whereof Littleton maketh a speciall observation, that a man shall be estopped by matter in the country, without any writing. (1)

To make the reader more capable of the learning of estoppels, these few rules, amongst others, are to be knowne.

[d] First, that every estoppel ought to be reciprocally, that is, to binde both parties; and this is the reason, that regularly a stranger shall neither take advantage, nor be bound by the estoppel: [e] privies in blood, as the heire; privies in estate, as the feoffee, lessee, &c. privies in law, as the lords by escheat; tenant by the curtesie, tenant in dower, the incumbent

[d] 33. H. 6. 19. 50. 30. H. 6. 2. 31. E. 3. Ellop. 240. 33. Aff. 18. 30. Aff. 51. 14. Aff. 9. 18. E. 4. 1. (3. Mod. 141.)
 [e] 8. Aff. 53. Br. Fines, 73. 8. H. 6. 17. 21. E. 3. 35. 38. E. 3. 31. 20. E. 3. Ellop. 187.

* que est not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† un—null, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The reasons why estoppels are allowed, seem to be these: No man ought to alledge any thing but the truth for his defence, and what he has alledged once, is to be presumed true, and therefore he ought not to contradict it; for as 'tis said in the 4. Inst. 272. allegans contraria non est audiendus. Secondly, as the law cannot be known till the facts are ascertained, so neither can the truth of them be found out but by evidence; and therefore 'tis reasonable that some evidence should be allowed to be of so high and conclusive a nature, as to admit of no contradictory proof. Note to the 11th edition.

his own agreement. But this supposes the provision to be made before the marriage; for if it be made subsequent to the marriage, it is a mere voluntary act, and void against an assignee for a valuable consideration. 1. Cha. Ca. 225. Lanc. 54. Sir Edward Turner's Case, 1. Vern. 7. Pitt v. Hunt, 1. Vern. 18. Walker v. Saunders, 1. Eq. Ca. Abr. 58.—With respect to things in action, they do not vest in the husband, until he reduces them into possession. It has been held, that the husband may sue alone for a debt due to the wife upon bond, but that if he joined her in the action, and recovered judgment and died, the judgment would survive to her. Oglander v. Baston, 1. Vern. 396. See Aileyn 36. 2. Lev. 107. & 2. Vez. 677. The principle of this distinction appears to be, that his bringing the action in his own name alone, is a disagreement to his wife's interest, and implies it to be his intention that it should not survive to her; but if he brings the action in the joint names of himself and his wife, the judgment is, that they both should recover: so that the surviving wife, not the representative of the husband, is to bring the scire facias on the judgment. His bringing the action, therefore, in the joint names of himself and his wife, does not, in effect, alter the property, or shew it to be his intention that it should be altered. In 3. Alk. 21. Lord Hardwicke is reported to say, that, at law, if the husband has recovered a judgment for a debt of the wife, and dies before execution, the surviving wife, not the husband's executors, is entitled. This appears to be the general principles of the courts of law, respecting the interest which the husband takes in, and the power given him over, the things in action of his wife: but the courts of equity have admitted many very nice distinctions respecting them. 1st, a settlement made before marriage, if made in consideration of the wife's fortune, entitles the representative of the husband dying in his wife's life-time, to the whole of her things in action; but it has been said, that if it is not made in consideration of her fortune, the surviving wife will be entitled to the things in action, the property of which has not been reduced by the husband in his life-time: so, if it is in consideration of a particular part of her fortune, such of the things in action as are not comprised in that part, it has been said, survive to the wife. See Cleland v. Cleland, Cha. Prec. 63. 2. Vern. 502. Adams v. Cole, Cas. Temp. Talbot 168. In the case of Blois and the Countess of Hereford, 2. Vern. 501. a settlement was made for the benefit of the wife, but no mention was made of her personal estate. Lord-Keeper decreed that it should belong to the representative of the husband; and said, that in all cases where there [f] 21. E. 4. 4. 23. Aff. 14.

 27. H. 6. Eltop. 273.
 18. E. 3. 30. 7. H. 7. 6. & 16.
 [g] 46. E. 3. 33. 29. Aff. 38.
 Pl. Com. 393.
 [h] 35. H. 6. 33. 46. E. 3. 12.
 49. E. 3. 14. 8. Aff. 3. 45. Aff. 5.
 3. El. Dy. 195. 41. El. 1b. 280.
 9. H. 6. 60.
 [i] 5. E. 4. 7. 8. E. 4. 19.
 10. E. 4. 12. 22. E. 4. 38.
 32. Aff. 9. 35. H. 6. 20.
 [k] 33. H. 6. 16. 4. E. 3. 22.
 6. H. 4. 7. 31. E. 1. Gard. 155.
 F. N. B. 142. E.
 [l] 12. H. 7. 4. 20. H. 6. 29.
 3. H. 4. 9. 41. E. 3. 4.
 11. H. 4. 30.
 [m] 2. R. 3. 14. 2. R. 2.
 Eltopell. 20. 40. E. 3. 21.
 12. E. 4. 13. 18. E. 3. 31. 35.
 44. E. 3. 45. 17. Aff. 27.
 45. E. 3. 2. 21. H. 7. 24.
 5. E. 4. 7. 7. E. 4. 19.
 3. E. 4. 11. 4. E. 3. 54. 7. E. 6.
 B1. Eltop. 162. 11. H. 4. 30.
 3. E. 3. 21. 31. Aff. 14.
 [n] 37. Aff. 17. 38. H. 6. 12.
 5. El. Dy. 223.
 [o] 7. El. Dy. 244.

[p] B1. fo. 420. 26. Aff. 64.
 39. Aff. 10. 11. H. 4. 84.
 7. H. 6. 7. 35. Aff. 5. 11. E. 3.
 Eltop. 279. 21. E. 3. 39.
 19. R. 2. Eltop. 282. 3. E. 3.
 1b. 23. 33. E. 3. Eltop. Stath.
 Le Stat. de 9. H. 6. ca. 11.
 30. H. 6. 2. Doct. & Stud. 69.
 34. H. 6. 39. 18. E. 4. 1. b.
 40. E. 4. 16.

20. E. 1. Defensio juris.

[a] W. 2. ca. 3.
 [b] B1. fo. 303. Min. lib. 3.
 cap. Exceptions.

cumbent of a benefice, and others that come under by act in law, or in the poss, shall be bound and take advantage of estoppels; and that a rebutter is a kinde of estoppel.

[f] Secondly, that every estoppel, because it concludeth a man to allege the truth, must be certaine to every intent, and not to be taken by argument or inference.

[g] Thirdly, every estoppel ought to be a precise affirmation of that which maketh the estoppel, and not be spoken impersonally; as if it be said, Ut dicitur, quia impersonalitas non concludit, nec ligat: impersonalis dicitur, quia sine personā. [b] Neither doth a recital conclude, because it is no direct affirmation.

[i] Fourthly, a matter alleged that is neither traversable nor materiall, shall not estoppe.

[k] Fifthly, regularly a man shall not be concluded by acceptance or the like, before the title accrued.

[l] Sixthly, estoppel against estoppel doth put the matter at large.

[m] Seventhly, matters alleged by way of supposall in counts, shall not conclude after non-suit: otherwise it is after judgement given; and after non-suit, albeit the supposall in the count shall not conclude, yet the barre, title, replication, or other pleading of either partie, which is precisely alleged, shall conclude after non-suit; and hereby are the bookes reconciled.

Eighthly, where the veritie is apparant in the same record, there the adverse party shall not be estopped to take advantage of the truth; for he cannot be estopped to allege the truth, when the truth appeareth of record. [n] If a fine be levied without any originall, it is voydable, but not void; but if an original be brought, and a retraxit entred, and after that a concord is made, or a fine levied, this is void, in respect the veritie appeareth of record. [o] An impropriation is made after the death of an incumbent, to a bishop and his successors; the bishop by indenture demiseth the parsonage for fortie yeares, to begin after the death of the incumbent; the deane and chapter confirme it, the incumbent dieth; this demise shall not conclude, for that it appeareth that he had nothing in the impropriation till after the death of the incumbent.

[p] Ninthly, where the record of the estoppel doth run to the disability or legitimation of the person, there all strangers shall take benefit of that record; as outlawrie, excommenement, profession, attainder of præmunire, of felonie, &c. bastardie, mulietie, and shall conclude the partie, though they be strangers to the record. Vide in Littleton cap. Villenage, Sec. 196, 197, &c. But of a record concerning the name of the person, qualitie, or addition, no stranger shall take advantage, because he shall not be bound by it. But nota, reader, that in case of the mulietie primâ facie, an stranger shall take benefit of it, &c. But yet because he may be a mulier by the ecclesiasticall law, and a bastard by the common law, therefore against such a certificate pleaded, the adverse partie may allege the speciall matter, and confesse the certificate of the bishop according to the ecclesiasticall law, and allege further the speciall matter according to the common law, whereunt the adverse partie must answer; and so are the books that treat of this matter to be reconciled. (1) But now let us returne to Littleton.

Sect. 668.

(Ant. 192. b.)

LA feme pria d'estre receve et soit re-sceive.

Receipt, receptio, cometh of the Latine verbe recipere, so called because the wife, upon the default of her husband, is received as a feme sole alone, without her husband, to defend her right; and it is also called defensio juris; and in this case the wife may bee received by the [a] statute: and yet [b] ancient authors who wrote before the statute, doe speake of a kind of receipt at the common law. The civilians call receipt, admissionem tertii pro sui interesse, which more properly is resembled to the receipt of him in the reversion or remainder, that is no part to the wife.

*MES si en action de wast le baron fait default a le graund distresse, et la feme pria d'estre
 receve et soit receve, el monstra bien tout
 le matter, et coment
 el est en son remit-ter, et el barrera le lessor de son action,
 &c.*

BUT if in the action of wast the husband make default to the grand distresse, and the wife pray to be received, and is received, shee may well shew the whole matter, and how shee is in her remitter, and shee shall barre the lessor of his action, &c.

Sect.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) See note 1. to page 245. a.

there was a settlement equivalent to the wife's portion, it should be intended that he is to have the portion, though there is no agreement for that purpose. See Eq. Ca. Abr. p. 69. 2d. If the husband cannot recover the things in action of his wife but by the assistance of a court of equity, the court, upon the principle that he who seeks equity must do equity, will not give him their assistance to recover the property, unless he either has made a previous provision for her, or agrees to do it out of the property prayed for; or unless the wife appears in court, and consents to the property being made over to him. 2. P. W. 641. 3. P. W. 12. Tantfield v. Davenport, Tothill 179. 2. Vez. 569. Neither will the court, where no settlement is made for the wife, direct the fortune to be paid the husband, in all cases where she appears in court personally, and consents to it. 2. Vez. 579. It appears to be agreed that the interest is always payable to the husband, if he maintains his wife, 2. Vez. 561. 2.; yet, where the husband receives a great part of the wife's fortune, and will not settle the rest, the court will not only stop the payment of the residue of her fortune, but will even prevent his receiving the interest of the residue, that it may accumulate for her benefit. 3. Atk. 21. 3d. Volunteers and assignees on a commission of bankruptcy, are, in cases of this nature, subject to the same equity as the husband; and are therefore required by the court, if they apply for its assistance in recovering the wife's fortune, to make a proper provision for her out of it. 2. Atk. 420. Jacobson v. Williams, 1. P. W. 382. But if the husband assigns either the trust term of his wife, or a thing in action for a valuable consideration, the court does not compel the assignee to make a provision for the wife. See Mr. Edward Turner's Case, 1. Vern. 7. In the case of Pitt v. Hunt, 1. Vern. 18. Lord Chancellor Nottingham expressed great surprize at the determination in Mr. Edward Turner's case, but he thought himself bound by it. Lord Thurlow, by the manner in which he is reported to have expressed himself in the cause of Worral v. Marlbar, and Bushnan v. Poll, (see Mr. Cox's very valuable edition of Peere Williams's Reports, note to page 459, vol. 1.) seems to be of the same way of thinking. His lordship there said, "he had considered the several cases upon this subject, and did not find it any where decided, that if the husband makes an actual assignment by contract for a valuable consideration, the assignee should be bound to make any provision for the wife out of the property assigned; but that a court of equity has much greater consideration for an assignment actually made by contract, than for an assignment by mere operation of law: for as to the latter, his lordship declared it to be his opinion, that when the equitable interest of the wife

Sect. 669.

*CAR en chescun cas lou feme est receive pur default son baron, el pledera et avera mesme l'avantage en plee ple-dant, come el fuissoit feme sole, * &c. Et coment que l'alienee fist le leas al baron et a sa feme per fait en-dent, uncore ceo est remitter a la feme. Et auxy, coment que l'alienee rendist mesme la terre al baron et a sa feme per fine pur terme de lour vies, uncore ceo est un re-mitter al feme, pur ceo que feme covert que prent estate per fine, ne serra my ex-amine per les justices, † &c.*

FOR in every case where the wife is received for default of her husband, she shall plead and have the same advantage in pleading, as shee were a woman sole, &c. And albeit that the alienee made the lease to the husband and wife by deed indented, yet this is a remitter to the wife. And also, albeit the alienee rendereth the same land to the husband and his wife by fine for terme of their lives, yet this is a remitter to the wife, because a feme covert which takes an estate by fine, shall not be examined by the justices, &c.

CÔME el fuissoit feme sole, &c. In this Section four things are to be understood.

First, when a feme covert is received, that she shall plead as if she were sole. And this is regularly true, yet holdeth not in all cases; [c] for if a [c] 37. Aff. 1. feme covert be received in an assise, and plead a record and faille, therefore she shall not be adjudged a disseisor, as shee should be if shee were sole, &c. So if a feme covert onely levie a fine executorie, and a scire facias is brought against her and her husband, if shee be received upon the default of her husband, shee shall barre the consuee, which if she had been sole, shee could not doe, and in some other cases.

Secondly, that though the estate taken backe be by deed indented, yet that shall not hinder the remitter in case of a feme covert, or an infant.

Thirdly, that though it be by fine sur render, yet that shall not hinder the remitter; because a feme covert is not to be examined upon any fine, but when shee and her husband passe some estate or interest, or release her right by a fine of the lands or tenements.

[c] 37. Aff. 1.

17. Aff. 17. 29. E. 3. 43. 5. E. 3. Voucher 178.

(10. Rep. 43.)

Fourthly, if the husband levie a fine of his wife's lands, and the consuee grant and render the land to the husband and wife, although the wife be not partie to the original, nor to the consuees, and therefore she ought not by the law to take any present estate but by way of remainder only; yet here it is proved by Littleton, that the grant and render de facto to the wife in presenti is not void; for then it could not worke a remitter, but voidable by writ of error; and that avoidable estate doth worke a remitter. (1)

Trin. 27. Eliz. inter Owen & Morgan. Rot. 276. in banco communi. L. 3. fol. 5. the marriage of Winchester's case. 7. E. 3. 64. 13. E. 3. Voucher 119.

Ne serra my examine per les justices, &c. The examination of a feme covert ought to be secret; and the effect is to examine her, whether shee be content to levie a fine of such lands (naming them particularly and distinctly, and the state that passeth by the fine) of her owne voluntary free will, and not by threats, menaces, or any other compulsorie means.

(3. Rep. 5. a.)

Sect. 670.

ET hic nota, que quant ascun chose passera de la feme que est covert de baron per force

AND here note, that when any thing shall passe from the wife which is covert of a husband by d'un

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) V. From this passage, and others mentioned both by Littleton and Coke, it appears to be a general rule, that the remitter shall take effect, though the estate which made the remitter is voidable; as if it be taken from an infant, a feme covert, or upon condition. See Com. Dig. vol. 5. 415.

"was transferred to the creditor of the husband by mere operation of the law, he should exactly be in the place of the husband, and was subject precisely to the same equity in respect of the wife." 4th, But notwithstanding the uniform and earnest solicitude of the courts of equity to make some provision for the wife out of her fortune, in those cases where the husband, or those claiming under him by act of law, cannot come at it, without the assistance of the courts, still it does not appear that they have ever interfered to prevent its being paid the husband, or to inhibit him from recovering it at law. 2. Atk. 420. In Cha. Prec. 414. it is observed, that if the trustees pay the wife's fortune, it is without remedy. 5th, Money due upon a mortgage is considered as a thing in action. It seems to have been formerly understood, that as the husband could not dispose of lands mortgaged in fee without the wife, the estate remaining in the wife carried the money along with it to her and her representatives; but that as the husband had the absolute power of a term of years, there was nothing to keep a mortgage debt, secured by a term, from going to the husband's representatives; but this distinction no longer prevails; and it is now held, that though, in the case of a mortgage in fee, the legal fee of the lands in mortgage continues in the wife, she is but a trustee, and the trust of the mortgage follows the property of the debt. See Boswell v. Brander, 1st Peere Williams 458. Bates v. Dandy, 2. Atk. 267. 6th, If baron and feme have a decree for money in the right of the feme, and then the baron dies, the benefit of the decree belongs to the feme, and not to the executor of the husband. This was certified by Hyde chief-justice, and his certificate confirmed by lord chancellor, Michaelmas, 15. Car. II. Manners v. Martin, 1. Cha. Ca. 27. If the wife has a judgment, and it is extended upon an elegit, the husband may assign it without a consideration: so if a judgment be given in trust for a feme sole, who marries, and, by consent of her trustees, is in possession of the land extended, the husband may assign over the extended interest; and by the same reason, if the feme has a decree to hold and enjoy lands until a debt due to her is paid, and she is in possession of the land under this decree, and marries, the husband may assign it without any consideration, for it is in nature of an extent. 3. Peere Williams 200.

*d'un fine : sicome le baron et la feme feson un conufance de droit a un auter, &c. ou fesoient un grant et render a un auter, ou releffent per fine a auter, et sic de fimilibus, lou le droit del feme passeroit del feme per force de mesme le fine ; en tous tielx cases la feme serra examine devaunt que la fine soit accept, pur ceo que tiels fines concluderont tiels femes coverts a tous jours, * &c.
Mes lou riens est move en le fine forsque tantsolement que le baron et la feme preignent estate per force de mesme le fine, ceo ne con-cluder la feme ; pur ceo que en tiel cas el jammes ne serra my examine,
† &c.*

force of a fine : as if the husband and wife make conufance of right to another, &c. or make a grant and render to another, or release by fine unto another, et sic de similibus, where the right of the wife shall passe from the wife by force of the same fine ; in all such cases the wife shall be examined before that the fine be taken, because that such fines shall conclude such femes coverts for ever. But where nothing is moved in the fine but onely that the husband and wife doe take an estate by force of the said fine, this shall not conclude the wife ; for that in such case she shall not be at all examined, &c.

QUANT aucun chose passera de la feme covert, &c. per force d'un fine, &c. And of this opinion is [d] Littleton in our bookes.

[d] 15. E. 4. 28. 24. E. 3. 31.
42. E. 3. 6. 3. H. 6. 42.
20. E. 3. tit. Cui in vita 10.
[*] 29. E. 3. 43. 46. E. 3. 5.

* Therefore if the husband and wife be tenants in speciall tayle, and they levie a fine at the common law, and after the husband and wife take backe an estate to them and their heires ; in this case the estate tayle is not barred ; and yet against a fine levied by her selfe she cannot be remitted, because thereupon she was examined : but in that case if the land descend to her issue, he shall be remitted. (1)

Sect. 671.

ITEM, si tenant en taile dis-continua le taile, et ad ‡ issue file, et morust, et la file esteant de pleine age prent baron, et le discontinuee fait un releas de ceo al baron et a sa feme pur terme de lour vies, ceo est un remit-ter al feme, et la feme est eins per force de le taile, causâ quâ supra.

ALSO, if tenant in taile discontinue the taile, and hath issue a daughter, and dieth, and the daughter being of full age taketh husband, and the discontinuee make a release of this to the husband and wife for terme of their lives, this is a remitter to the wife, and the wife is in by force of the taile, causâ quâ supra, &c.

ET la feme esteant de plein age prent baron, &c.

Here it appeareth, that her full age when she tooke baron is not materiall, but her coverture at the taking backe of the estate. And so note a diversitie betweene a remitter and a discent : for if a woman be disseised, and being of full age taketh husband, and then the disseisor dieth seised, this discent shall binde the wife, albeit she was covert when the discent was cast, because she was of full age when she tooke husband, as appeareth before in the Chapter of Discents. But albeit the wife that hath an ancient right, and being of full age, taketh a husband, and the discontinuee letteth the land to the husband and wife for their lives, this is a remitter to the wife ; for remitters to ancient rights are favoured in law.

(Ante 246.)

Sect.

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ issue not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Since Littleton wrote, several statutes have been passed, which have given rise to a great extension of the doctrine respecting alienations by husbands of their wives estates. These are chiefly the statutes of the 4. H. 7. respecting the force and effect of fines, the 27. H. 8. for transferring uses into possession, and the 32. H. 8. for preserving the estates of wives against the alienations of their husbands. The reader will find the effect of these statutes upon the doctrine of remitter, investigated in a very copious and masterly manner in lord chief-justice Hobart's account of his argument on giving judgment in the case of Duncomb v. Wingfield. See his Rep. page 254.

Sect. 672.

ITE M, si terre soit done a le baron et a sa feme, aver et tener a eux et a les heirs de leur deux corps engendres, et puis le baron aliena la terre en fee, et reprent estate a luy et a sa feme pur terme de leur deux vies; en cest cas il est remitter en fait a le baron et a sa feme, maugre le baron. Car il ne poit estre un remitter en cest cas a la feme, sinon que soit un remitter a le baron, pur ceo que le baron et sa feme sont tout un mesme person en ley, coment que le baron est estoppe de claymer. Et pur ceo, ceo est un remitter en luy enconter son alienation et son reprisel demesne, come est dit adevant †.

A L S O, if land be given to the husband and to his wife, to have and to hold to them and to the heirs of their two bodies begotten, and after the husband alien the land in fee, and take backe an estate to him and to his wife for terme of their two lives; in this case this is a remitter in deed to the husband and to his wife, mauger the husband. For it cannot be a remitter in this case to the wife, unlesse it be a remitter to the husband, because the husband and wife are all one same person in law, though the husband be stopped to claime it. And therefore this is a remitter against his owne alienation and reprisel, as is said before.

H E R E it appeareth, that the husband against his owne alienation, if he had taken the estate to him alone, could not have beene remitted. But when the estate is made to the husband and wife, albeit they be but one person in law, and no moities betweene them; yet for that the wife cannot be remitted in this case, unlesse the husband be remitted also, and for that remitters, as hath beene often said, are favoured in law, because thereby the more ancient and better rights are restored againe; therefore in this case, in judgement of law, both husband and wife are remitted; which is worthy of great observation.

Sect. 673.

ITE M, si terre soit done a un feme en taile, le remainder a un autre en taile, le remainder a le tierce en taile, le remainder al quart en fee, et la feme prent baron, et le baron discontinua la terre en fee; per cel discontinuance tous les remainders sont discontinues. Car si la feme deviait sans issue, ceux en le remainder n'averont aucun reme- die forsque de suer leur briefes de formedon en le remainder,

A L S O, if land be given to a woman in taile, the remainder to another in taile, the remainder to the third in taile, the remainder to the fourth in fee, and the woman taketh husband, and the husband discontinue the land in fee; by this discontinuance all the remainders are discontinued. For if the wife die without issue, they in the remainder shall not have any reme- die but to sue their writs of for- medon in the remainder, when quant

† Et pur ceo not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

quant il avient a leur temps*. Mes si apres tiel discontinuance, estate soit fait a le baron et sa feme pur terme de leur deux vies, ou pur terme d'auter vie, ou auter estate, &c. pur ceo que ceo est un remitter al feme, ceo est † auxy un remitter a tous ceux en le remainder. Car apres ceo que la feme que est en son remitter morust sans issue, ceux en le remainder poyent enter, &c. sans aucun action suer, &c. En mesme le maner est de ceux que ont la reversion apres tiel tailles‡.

it comes to their times. But if after such discontinuance, an estate be made to the husband and wife for terme of their two lives, or for terme of another man's life, or other estate, &c. for that this is a remitter to the wife, this is also a remitter to all them in the remainder. For after that that the wife which is in her remitter be dead without issue, they in the remainder may enter, &c. without any action suing, &c. In the samemanner is it of those which have the reversion after such entail.

41. E. 3. 17. 41. Aff. 1.
36. Aff. p. 4.

44. Aff. p. 15. 44. E. 3. 30.
(1. Roll. Ab. 421. 3. Cro. 145.
W. Jones, 199.)
20. E. 3. Aid. 29.

Wid. Pl. Com. 489. Nichol's case, & fol. 553. in Walsingham's case. 17. Eliz. Dier. 344.
25. E. 3. 48. tit. Rescit. 28.
49. E. 3. 16.
[a] Seignior Stafford's case, lib.
8. fol. 76. b.
[b] Cholmley's case, lib. 2. 53.
7. R. 2. Aide le Roy, 61.
22. E. 3. 7.

LITTLETON having spoken of remitters to the issue in taile, who is privie in bloud, and to the wife, who is privie in person, now he speaketh of remitters to them in reversion or remainder expectant, upon an estate taile, who are privie in estate. And this case proveth that the wife is remitted presently; for the equitie of the law requireth, that as the discontinuance of the estate in taile is a discontinuance of the reversion or remainder; so, that the remitter to the estate in taile, should be a remitter to them in the reversion or remainder.

Tenant for life the remainder to A. in taile, the remainder to B. in fee, tenant for life is disseised, a collaterall ancestor of A. releaseth with warrantie and dieth, whereby the estate taile is barred; the tenant for life re-entreteth, the disseisor hath an estate in fee simple determinable upon the state taile, and the remainder of B. is revested in him; and so note in this case the estate for life and the remainder in fee are revested and remitted, and an estate of inheritance left in the disseisor. If a fine be levied sur grant et render to one for life or in taile, the remainder in fee, if tenant for life, or in taile, execute the estate for life or in taile, this is an execution of the remainder.

A gift in taile is made to B. the remainder to C. in fee, B. discontinueth and taketh backe an estate in taile, the remainder in fee to the king by deed inrolled; tenant in taile dieth, his issue is remitted, and consequently the remainder, as Littleton here saith; and the diversity is [a] betweene an act in law, for that may devest an estate out of the king, and a tortious act, or entry, or a false and a feined recovery against tenant for life or in taile, which shall never devest any estate, remainder, or reversion out of the king. [b] But a recovery by good title against tenant for life, or in taile, where the remainder is to the king by defeasible title, shall devest the remainder out of the king, and restore and remit the right owners. (1)

Sect. 674, 675.

(5. Rep. 85. 2. Infl. 350.
11. Rep. 62.)

FEINT et faux action, 1. Adio fida et falsa, but hereof Littleton speaketh himselfe in this Chapter.

Quod ei deforceat, is a writ that is given by [c] statute to any tenant for life or in taile upon a recovery by default against them in a præcipe, and lyeth against the

ITEM, si home les-sa un mease a un
feme pur terme de sa vie, savant le reversion al lessour, et puis un suist un feint et faux action envers la feme, et recoversast le mease envers luy per default, issint que

ALSO, if a man let a house to a woman
for terme of her life, saying the reversion to the lessor, and after one sue a feyned and false action against the woman, and recovereth
the house against her by default, so as the la

[c] W. 2. cap. 4.

(Ant. 331. b.)

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† auxy not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) VI. Thus it may be laid down as another general rule, that a remitter to the particular estate, is a remitter to him in the reversion or remainder. See Com. Dig. vol. 5. 417.

la feme puit aver envers luy un quod ei deforceat, solongue le statute de Westm. 2. ore le reversion le lessor est discontinue, issint que il ne poit aver ascun action de wast. Mes en cest case si la feme prent baron, et celui que recoverast lessa le mease al baron et a sa feme pur terme de lour deux vies, la feme est eins en son remitter per force del primer lease.

woman may have against him a quod ei deforceat, according to the statute of Westm. 2. now the reversion of the lessor is discontinued, so that he cannot have any action of waste. But in this case if the woman take husband, and he which recovereth let the house to the husband and his wife for terme of their two lives, the wife is in her remitter by force of the first lease.

Sect. 675.

ET si le baron et la feme font wast, le primer lessor avera envers eux breve de wast, pur ceo que entant que la feme est en son remitter, il est remise a son reversion. Mes semble en cest cas, si celui que recoverast per le faux action, voile porter auter brieve de wast envers le baron et sa feme, le baron n'ad auter remedy envers luy, mes de faire default a la graund distres, &c. et causer la feme d'estre receive, et de pleder cel matter envers le second lessor, et monstrier comment l'action per que il recoverast fuit faux et feint en ley, &c. issint le feme poit luy barrer, &c.

AND if the husband and wife make waste, the first lessor shall have a writ of waste against them, for that inasmuch as the wife is in her remitter, he is remitted to his reversion. But it seemeth in this case, if hee that recovereth by the false action, will bring another writ of waste against the husband and his wife, the husband hath no other remedie against him, but to make default to the grand distresse, &c. and cause the wife to be received, and to plead this matter against the second lessor, and shew how the action wherby hee recovered was false and fained in law, &c. so the wife may bar him.

recoveror and his heires, in which case the particular tenant was without remedie at the common law, because hee could not have a writ of right. And it is called a quod ei deforceat, for that they are part of the words of that writ, viz. Præcipe A. quod, &c. reddat B. unum mesuagium, &c. quod clamat esse jus et maritagium suum, et quod idem A. ei injuste deforceat.

Bracton lib. 4. 367.
Pleta lib. 5. cap. 22. & 26.
cap. 14. 7. E. 3. 62.
F. N. B. 155.
(6. Rep. 8. b.)

(Cro. Jac. 292.
Cro. Car. 178. 414.)

Recoverast, &c. per default. There hath beene a question in our bookes upon these words (by default): as for example, whether a recoverie had by default in an action of waste against tenant in dower, or by the courtesie, a quod ei deforceat lyeth by the said statute. And divers hold opinion, that in that case no quod ei deforceat lieth, for that judgement is not given by default; for notwithstanding the default, there goeth out a writ to enquire de wasto facto, et quod wastum prædictum A. (le defendant) fecit; so as the defendant may give evidence, and the jurors may finde for the defendant, that no waste was done: as in the assise albeit it bee awarded by default, yet may the tenant give evidence, and the recognitors of the assise may finde for the tenant; and therefore in those cases, the defendant or tenant non amittit per defaultem, as the statute and Littleton speaketh, and they cite F. N. B. in the point. (1)

(F. N. B. 155. b.)

W. 1. cap. 4.

F. N. B. fol. 155. E.

Secondly, they hold that a quod ei deforceat lieth where the tenant can have no remedie by attain; but in this case (say they) an attain doth lie.

2. H. 4. 2. 21. H. 6. 56.
41. E. 3. 8. 3. H. 6. 29.
22. E. 3. 19.

Thirdly, they hold, that in an action of waste, although it be brought against a tenant in dower, or tenant by the courtesie that have a freehold, yet the damages are the principall; for they were recoverable against tenant in dower and by the courtesie by the common law; and the statute of Gloucester gave the

(8. Rep. 85.)

* luy not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) Co. MSS. 215. p. 33. Eliz. Elmer v. Thacker. The case was this. Elmer and his wife, tenant in dower, brought quod ei deforceat versus W. Thacker, who pleaded, that 30. Eliz. he brought waste against the demandants who appeared, and upon nihil dicit W. Thacker recovered damages and had judgment. The demandants replied, null wast fait. The tenant demurred in law; and these points were moved, 1st, Whether quod ei deforceat lies upon recovery by default against tenant in dower in waste. 2d, Admitting that it does, whether quod ei deforceat lies upon the recovery by nihil dicit, as this case is. As to the second point, the whole court resolved clearly, that quod ei deforceat does not lie; for in as much as the judgment upon nihil dicit is after appearance, there the default is not the cause of the judgment; and the statute says, per defaultem: and for this reason judgment was given against the demandant, as appears afterwards in page 356. But as to the 1st point it was objected, that quod ei deforceat does not lie upon default of tenant in dower in waste, as is the case here; for if it should lie in this case, he shall avoid the verdict of twelve men, which was not the intention of the statute, but only to relieve the tenant where he makes default; therefore, in as much as the tenant, notwithstanding the default, might give evidence to the jury, then every person in policy might make default, if afterwards he might prevail upon evidence to have quod ei deforceat: and the reason of F. N. B. is, that the verdict has found waste. 2. Hen. 2. If in waste the jury find falsely, attain lies, and 21 Hen. 6. 56. 34 Hen. 6. 12.; so where the assise is awarded for default, yet the tenant may have attain, if it be found against him by false oath. 17 Ed. 2. Attain 89. 34 Hen. 6. 7. Prior recovers in waste, and has a writ of enquiry in waste, and the sheriff returns the waste 20 marks, and awards that he shall recover the place wasted, and treble damages, and that he shall have execution for the damages immediately, licet cesset execution for the thing wasted till the collusion should be enquired into, therefore the damages are the principal; for it is no where found that execution should be awarded of the accessory before the principal: and for this reason, 12 Rich. 2. Estrepement 6. judgment shall not be given in the estrepement, because it is only the accessory, until judgment shall be given in the principal plea. And in Elmer's case, ante 355. it was resolved, that this writ lies upon recovery by default in waste against tenant in dower, or any other tenant for life.—Lord Nott. MSS.

(7. Rep. 68. b.)

[d] 34. H. 6. 7. 40. E. 3. 37.
& 38. E. 3.

[e] 9. H. 5. 15.

30. H. 6. tit. Bar. 59.

[*] 17. E. 3. 58. 29. E. 3. 42.

F. N. B. 98. b. 12. H. 4. 4.

19. E. 2. Disceit 56.

W. 2. cap. 3. 3. H. 4. fol. 1.

W. 2. ca. 3. 9. E. 4. 16.

41. E. 3. 8. b. 2. H. 4. 2.

21. H. 6. 56. 44. E. 3. 42.

Br. tit. quod ei deforc. 4. Pasch.

33. El. Rot. 1125. inter Ed. Elmer & El. fa feme, ten. en dower

demandants, & Wil. Thacker

ten. in quod ei deforceat.

(Cro. Eliz. 263.)

[f] 33. E. 3. quod ei deforc.

Pl. ult. F. N. B. 156.

V. Flet. 1. 5. c. 21. 48. E. 3. 19.

40. Aff. 23. 33. H. 6. 25.

39. H. 6. 1. F. N. B. 107.

[g] 17. E. 2. Attaint 69.

21. H. 6. 56. 34. H. 6. 12.

(1. Cro. 414. Mo. 184.

F. N. B. 107. c. 6. Rep. 8. b.

17. Rep. 5.)

34. H. 6. 7. Waff 50.

10. Rep. 115. 1. Leo. 297.

6. Rep. 44.)

[h] 6. E. 3. 47. 48. E. 3. 19.

(2. Rep. 68. b. Ant. 139. a.

285. a.)

the place wasted but for a penaltie, so as the nature of the action (say they) remaineth still to bee personall, for that the damages are the principall; [d] and in prooffe hereof they cite divers authorities in law. And if two bring an action of waste, the release of one of them is a good barre against the other, [e] and so resolved by the whole court; which proveth (say they) that the damages are the principall: for if the land were the principall, the release of one of them should not barre the other, no more than in an assise, a writ of ward, an ejectione firma, &c.

Lastly, they say, that in actions where damages are to be recovered, and the land is the principall, the demandant never counteth to damages, and yet shall recover them: but in an action of waste the plaintiff counteth to his damage; and if the damages be the principall, then cleereely no quod ei deforceat lieth.

Others doe hold the contrarie: and as to the first they say, that albeit that in the writ of waste, judgement is not only given upon the default, yet the default is the principall, and the cause of awarding of the writ to enquire of the waste as an incident thereunto: and the law alwayes hath respect to the first and principall cause; and therefore upon such a recoverie [g] a writ of deceit lieth; and that writ lieth not but where the recoverie is by default. So in an action of waste against the husband and wife, upon the default of the husband, the wife shall be received; and yet the statute there speaketh also, per defaultam. So upon such a recoverie in waste against the baron and feme by default, the wife shall have a cui in vita by the statute; and it speaketh where the recoverie is per defaultam. And albeit the defendant may give in evidence, if he knoweth it; yet when he makes default, the law presumeth he knoweth not of it, and it may be that he in truth knew not of it; and therefore it is reason, that seeing the statute, that is a beneficiall statute, hath given it him, that he be admitted to his quod ei deforceat, in which writ the truth and right shall be tried. And so it is of a recoverie by default in an assise; albeit the recognitors of the assise give a verdict, a quod ei deforceat lieth. And all this as to this point was resolved by the whole court of common pleas; and so the doubt in 41. E. 3. 8. well resolved. Nota, if tenant for life make default after default, and he in the reversion is received and plead to issue, and it is found by verdict for the demandant, the default and the verdict are causes of the judgement; and yet the tenant shall have a quod ei deforceat.

As to the second objection, that the defendant may have an attain. First it was utterly denied of the other part, [f] that an attain did lie in this case; for though it be taken by the oath of twelve men, yet it is but an enquest of office, whereupon no attain did lye on either partie, as upon an enquire of collusion, although it be by one jurie, nor upon a verdict of quale jus. Secondly, admitting that an attain did lie in that case, yet it followeth not ex consequenti, that a quod ei deforceat did not lie; [g] for if an assise bee taken by default, a quod ei deforceat doth lie; and yet the partie may have an attain; for this is no enquest of office, but a recognition by the recognitors of an assise, who were returned the first day, and not returned upon the awarding of the assise by default. And as to the second objection, of this opinion was the whole court in Edward Elmer's case above mentioned. As to the third objection, that the damages should bee the principall, because they were at the common law; that is an argument (say the other side) that they are more antient, but not that they are more principall; and treble damages were not at the common law (for the common law never giveth more damage than the losse amounteth unto), but are given by the statute of Gloucester; but the place wasted is worthier being in the realtie, than damages that be in the personaltie: Et omne majus dignum trahit ad se minus dignum, quamvis minus dignum sit antiquius et à digniori debet fieri denominatio. And it is confessed, that in an action of waste against tenant for life, or for yeares, the place wasted is the principall, because the statute of Gloucester doth give the place wasted and treble damages at one time; for no prohibition or action of waste lay against them at the common law; and in an action of waste, if the defendant confesse the action, the plaintiff may have judgement for the place wasted, and release the damages; which proveth (and so Fitzherbert collecteth) that the damages are not the principall; for a man shall never release the principall, and have judgement of the accession: and an action of waste against tenant for life, is as reall as an action against tenant in dower. And as to the case of 9. H. 5. cited on the other side, it was answered, that it was an action in the tenuit, which is only in the personaltie, and then the release of the one doth barre both; neither could summons and severance lie in that case; [h] but in an action of waste (in the tenet), either against tenant for life or for yeares, the release of the one doth not barre the other; and in both those cases summons and severance doth lie: and this point was also resolved accordingly in Edward Elmer's case. But when these three points were resolved by the court for the demandant, then the counsell of the tenant moved in arrest of judgement another point, viz. that the judgement was given upon a nihil dicit, which is alwayes after appearance, and not per defaultam; and thereupon judgement was stayed. (1)

But

(1) Sir Edward Coke, in his commentary on the statute of Gloucester, 2. Inst. 286. observes, that regularly in personal and mixed actions damages were to be recovered at the common law; but that in real actions no damages were to be recovered at the common law, because the court could not give the demandant that which he demanded not; and the demandant in real actions demands no damages either by writ or count. The assise was a mixed action; and therefore if upon the trial the demandant made out his title, his seisin, and his disseisin by the tenant, he had judgment to recover his seisin and his damages for the injury sustained. But the damages in these cases were awarded against the disseisors only, and not against their alienees or tenants. The statute of Marlbridge, 52. Hen. III. c. 16. gave damages in a writ of mortuanceffor against the chief lord. The statute of Gloucester, 6. Ed. 1. was a considerable extension of the law of damages. It ordained, that if the disseisor should alien the lands, and should not have whereof damages might be levied, the person into whose hands the tenements came should be charged with the damages, so that each should answer for the time he held them; that the disseisor should recover damages on a writ of entry sur disseisin against him who was found tenant against the disseisor; that damages should for the future be recovered in a writ of mortuanceffor, as in one of novel disseisin; and also in writs of cosinage, aiel, and besaiel; and generally, that damages should in all cases be rendered where the land was recovered against a man upon his own intrusion, or his own act. The statute then mentions, that till that time damages had been taxed only to the value of the issues of the land: it was therefore provided, that a demandant in future should recover the costs of the writ purchased, together with the damages, not only in the above instances, but generally in cases where he was entitled to recover damages. Tho' this statute only mentions the costs of the writ, the construction of it has been extended to the whole expence of carrying on the suit. Before this statute the justices in eyre used, where the plaintiff obtained a verdict, to compute the expences of the suit, and in assessing damages, assessed a sum sufficient to satisfy that expence, as well as the damages. The statute of Marlbridge gave costs in particular cases to the defendant; so that it is a mistake to say, that the statute of Gloucester was the first statute by which costs were given. See Sayer's Law of Costs, p. 3. The general law of costs still rests on the statute of Gloucester; so that where costs were not recoverable before that statute, they are not recoverable now, unless in those cases where they have been given by some subsequent statute.

But to returne to Littleton. Here he openeth a secret of law ; for the cause of this remitter is, for that the tenant for life in this case might have a quod ei deforceat, for so Littleton saith : issint que il poit aver quod ei deforceat : Now it appeareth by our bookes, that the tenant for life at the common law was remediable, because he could not have (as hath bene sayd) a writ of right ; and consequently the feme covert in this case could not bee remitted by the taking of an estate to her husband and her, because her right was remediable, and could have no action. But when an act of parliament or a custome doth alter the reason and cause thereof, thereby the common law it selfe is altered, if the act of parliament and custome be pursued ; for Alteratâ causâ et ratione legis, alteratur et lex, et cessante causâ seu ratione legis cessat et lex : as in this case the statute of W. 2. giving remedie to this feme tenant for life, in this it giveth her abilitie to bee remitted, because her right is not now remediable, but shee hath an action to recover it.

And Littleton warily putteth his case, that the recoverie was had against the feme while she was sole ; for there was a time when it was a question, whether a recoverie beeing had by default against the husband and wife, (the wife being tenant for life) the said statute gave a quod ei deforceat to the husband and wife, for that the statute gave it against tenant in dower and tenant for life, &c. and here the husband is not tenant for life, but seised in the right of his wife, and therefore out of the statute : and of this opinion is one [g] booke ; but (Apices juris non sunt jura, et parùm differunt quæ re concordant) the contrarie hath bene adjudged, and so that point is now in peace : and the like in case of receipt for him in reversion. But if the husband and wife lose by default, and the husband die, the wife shall not have a quod ei deforceat ; for a cui in vitâ is given to her in that case by a former statute, viz. W. 2. cap. 3. These things are worthy of due observation, and points of excellent learning ; and Littleton in our bookes speakes of another kinde of quod ei deforceat at the common law, upon a disseisin, which you may read. But now let us heare him in his booke.

Le reversion est discontinue, issint que il ne poit aver action de waste.

Here it appeareth, that when the reversion is devested, the lessor cannot have an action of waste, because the writ is, that the lessee did waste ad exheredationem of the lessor, and that inheritance must continue at the time of the action brought. And it is to bee observed, that in an action of waste brought by the lessor against the lessee, the lessee in respect of the privitie cannot plead generally, riens en le reversion, viz. [b] that the lessor hath nothing in the reversion, but he must shew how and by what meanes the reversion is devested out of him ; and this holdeth (as hath been said) betweene the lessor and the lessee : but if the grantee of a reversion bringeth an action of waste, the lessee may plead generally, that he hath nothing in the reversion. And yet in some speciall cases an action of waste shall lie, albeit the lessor had nothing in the reversion at the time of the waste done. As if tenant for life make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and waste is done, and after the lessee re-enter for the condition broken ; in this case the lessor shall have an action of waste. And so if a bishop make a lease for life or yeares, and the bishop die, the lessee, the fee being void, doth waste, the successor shall have an action of waste. So if lessee for life be disseised, and waste is done, the lessee re-enter, an action of waste shall be maintained against the lessee ; and so in like cases : and yet in none of these cases the plaintiffe in the action of waste had any thing in the reversion at the time of the waste made ; but these especiall cases have their severall and especiall reasons, as the learned reader will easily finde out.

Here note, that albeit the action be false and feigned, yet is the recoverie so much respected in law, as it worketh a discontinuance. [i] But if tenant for life suffer a common recoverie, or any other recoverie by covine and consent betweene the tenant for life and the recoveror, this is a forfeiture of his estate, and he in the reversion may presently enter for the forfeiture. Since our author wrote, the statute of 14 El. cap. 8. hath bene made concerning this matter, which is to be considered, [k] and hath bene well construed and expounded, and needs not here to be repeated.

And it is to be observed, that although the discontinuance groweth by matter of record, yet the remitter may be wrought by matter in pais : and of the residue of these two Sections sufficient hath bene said before.

(8. Rep. 62. 356. F. N. B. 155. b. 2. Inst. 350.)

Vide for the cases upon this ground, 14. H. 7. 11. per Fineux. 27. H. 8. 4. b. Aid. 35. H. 6. Gard. 72. 29. E. 3. 5. per Wilbie Custome. Lib. 3. fol. 86. Justice Windham's case, a. & b.

[g] 4. E. 3. 38. 33. E. 3. Avowrie 255. 5. E. 3. 4. F. N. B. 156. a. 5. E. 3. 5. 2. E. 4. 13. F. N. B. 156. C. 33. H. 6. 46. 2. E. 4. 11. 19. E. 4. 2.

45. E. 3. 21. 44. E. 3. 34. 35. F. N. B. 60. 23. H. 8. tit. Wast. Br. 138. (Cro. Car. 405. Ant. 327. a. 334. b.)

[h] 46. E. 3. 20. 8. H. 6. 17. 30. H. 6. 7.

(Ant. 54. a. Mo. 52.)

(F. N. B. 112. h.)

(Post. 362. a.)

[i] 5. Aff. pl. 3. 5. E. 3. Ent. Cong. 42. 15. E. 3. Age 95. 41. E. 3. 18. per Finchden. 22. E. 3. 2. b. Lib. 1. fol. 15. Sir Will. Pelham's case. 14. El. cap. 8. [k] Lib. 3. fol. 60. Lib. 1. fol. 15.

Sect. 676.

ITEM, si le baron discontinua le terre de sa feme, et puis reprist estate a luy et a sa feme, et al tierce person pur terme de lour vies, ou en fee, ceo * n'est un remitter a la feme, forsque quant a la moity; et pur l'auter moity el covient apres la mort son baron de fuer un brieve de cui in vitâ †.

{1. Infl. 343 F. N. B. 193. a.)

ALSO, if the husband discontinue the land of his wife, and after taketh backe an estate to him and to his wife, and to a third person for terme of their lives, or in fee, this is no remitter to the wife, but as to the moitie; and for the other moitie shee must after the death of her husband sue a writ of cui in vitâ.

44. E. 3. 17. 44. Aff. 2.
45. Aff. 3. Vid. Sect. 666.

CEO n'est remitter forsque quant al moitie, &c. Albeit there is authoritie in our bookes to the contrarie, yet the law is taken as Littleton here holdeth it, and as before it appeareth in the like case in this Chapter, and for the reason therein expressed.

Sect. 677.

ET puis le baron revient, et agreea,

15. E. 4. 1. b. 7. H. 4. 17.
1. H. 7. 16. b. 39. E. 3. 30.
27. H. 8. 24.

&c. In this case the estate is in the feme covert presently by the liverie before any agreement by the husband; and of this opinion is Littleton in our bookes.

Ala ouster le mere.

If hee had beene within the realme, it doth not alter the case.

Quere en cest case

si le baron, &c. Here is a question moved by Littleton, whether the disagreement of the husband shall ouste the wife of her remitter. And it seemeth that the disagreement shall not devest the remitter.

First, because the state made to the wife which wrought the remitter is banished and wholly defeated, and therefore no disagreement of the husband can devest the state gained by the lease, which by the remitter was devested before.

Secondly, for that the law having once restored her ancient and better right, will not suffer the disagreement of the husband to devest it out of her, and to revive the dis-

ITEM, si le baron discontinua la terme sa feme, et ala ouster le mere, et le discontinuee lessa mesme la terre al feme pur terme de sa vie, et liver a luy seisin; et puis le baron revyent, et agreea a cel liverie de seisin, ceo est un remitter a la feme: et uncore si la feme fuisset sole al temps de le leas fait a luy, ceo ne serroit a luy un remitter.

Mes entant que el fuit covert de baron al temps de la leas, et de le liverie de seisin fait a luy, coment que el prist solement le liverie de seisin, ceo fuit un remitter a luy, pur ceo que feme covert serra adjudge

ALSO, if the husband discontinue the land of his wife, and goeth beyond sea, and the discontinued let the same land to the wife for terme of her life, and deliver to her seisin; and after the husband commeth backe, and agreeth to this liverie of seisin, this is a remitter to the wife: and yet if the wife had beene sole at the time of the lease made to her, this should not be to her a remitter. But inasmuch as she was covert baron at the time of the lease, and liverie of seisin made unto her, albeit shee taketh only the liverie of seisin, this was a remitter

ficome

* n'est—est, L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

*comme enfant deins age en tiel cas, &c. Quære en cest cas si le baron quant il revient, voil disagee a le leas et livery de seisin fait a son feme en son absence, si * ceo oustera son feme de son remitter †, ou nemy, &c.* to her because a feme covert shall be adjudged as an infant with- in age in such a case, &c. Quære in this case if the husband when hee comes backe, will disagee to the lease and livery of seisin made to his wife in his absence, if this shall ouste his wife of her remitter, or not, &c.

the will. As if lands be given to the husband and wife, and a feoffment in fee, the feoffee giveth the land to the husband and wife and the heires of their two bodies, the husband dieth; in this case the wife may elect which of the estates shee will; for both estates are waivable, and her time of election and power of wayver accrewed to her first after the decease of her husband. If lands be given to a man and the heires females of his body, and he maketh a feoffment in fee, and take backe an estate to him and his heires, and dieth, having issue a daughter, leaving his wife grossment enfant with a sonne and dieth, the daughter is remitted; and albeit the sonne be afterward borne, he shall not devest the remitter. (1) continuance, and reveest the wrongfull estate in the dis-continuee.

Thirdly, for that remitters tending to the advancement of ancient rights are favoured in law.

And so it is for the same causes, if the wife survive her husband, she cannot claime in by the purchase made during the coverture; but the law adjudgeth her in her better right. But if both estates be waivable, there albeit the wife prima facie is remitted; yet after the decease of her husband, she may elect which of the estates

41. E. 3. 18.
(Flo. 114. b.)

18. Eliz. Dier 351.

(2. Rep. 37. 3. Rep. 26. b. 32. a.
2. Roll. Abr. 421, 422, 423.
9. Rep. 140. b. 2. Cro. 489.
Ante 246. a. 348. 3. Leon. 2.)

Sect. 678.

ITEM, si le baron discontinua les tenements son feme, et le discontinuee est disseise, et puis le disseisor lessa mesmes les tenements a le baron et a son feme pur terme de vie, ceo est un remitter a la feme. Mes si le baron et son feme fueront de covin † et consent que le disseisin doit estre fait, donques il n'est remitter a son feme, pur ceo que el est disseisereffe. Mes si le baron fuit de covin et consent a le disseisin, et nemy la feme, donque

ALSO, if the husband discontinue the lands of his wife, and the discontinuee is disseised, and after the disseisor letteth the same lands to the husband and wife for terme of life, this is a remitter to the wife. But if the husband and his wife were of covine and consent that the disseisin should be made, then it is no remitter to his wife, because she is a disseisereffe. But if the husband were of covin and consent to the disseisin, and not the wife

ET puis le disseisor lessa mesme les tenements, &c. Note, so much are remitters favoured in law, that the state made by the disseisor (which cometh to the land by wrong, and upon whom the entry of the discontinuee is lawfull) doth remit the wife, and devesteth all out of the discontinuee, albeit he hath a warrantie of the land.

18. E. 4. 2. b.
(F. N. B. 98. c.)

Mes si le baron et feme fueront de covin et consent, &c. Here it appeareth that covin and consent of the husband and wife doth hinder the remitter of the wife; for covine and consent in many cases to do a wrong, doth choak a meere right, and the ill manner doth make a good matter unlawfull.

18. E. 4. ubi supra.

Covin, Covina, com- Pl. Com. 546. in Wimbithe's meth of the French word case.
Convine, and is a secret assent deter.

* ceo—jeo, L. and M. and Roh.

† ou nemy, &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh. nor MSS.

‡ et—ou, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) VII. The remitter defeats the wrongfull estate immediately without entry; yet where both estates are waivable by a wife, without prejudice to a third person, she may waive which she pleases. But if a third person is interested, she must take her ancient estate. Thus, if there be a feoffment to the husband and wife in tail, remainder to A. the husband discontinues, and takes back an estate to him and his wife in tail, remainder to B. though the wife in respect to herself may take either the original estate tail, or the estate tail created by the feoffment, both the estates being after marriage; yet she ought to take the first, being for the benefit of A. the rightful remainder-man. Hob. 71. 255.

(Ant. 35. a. 4. Rep. 82. b.
F. N. B. 98. d.)

44. E. 3. 46. 11. H. 4. 60.
44. Aff. 29. 19. H. 8. 12.
18. H. 8. 5. 11. E. 4. 2.
7. H. 7. 11.

(3. Rep. 78. Plo. 51. a. 54.
Ant. 35. a.)

41. Aff. p. 28. 25. Aff. p. 1.
27. Aff. 74. 15. E. 4. 4. a.
12. Aff. p. 10.

11. E. 4. 2. 15. E. 4. 23.
14. H. 8. 13. 33. H. 6. 5.
12. E. 4. 21. b.

F. N. B. 179. g. 12. E. 4. 9.
35. Aff. 5. 44. E. 3. 9. 23.
13. Aff. 1. Temps E. 1.
Waste 128. 16. Aff. p. 7.
21. E. 4. 53. 21. H. 7. 35.
3. H. 4. 17.
(1. R. II. Abr. 278. 660.
F. N. B. 117. g.)

determined in the hearts of two or more to the defrauding and prejudice of another.

A woman is lawfully intitled to have dower, and she is of covine and consent, that one shall disseise the tenant of the land, against whom she may recover her lawfull dower, all which is done accordingly; the tenant may lawfully enter upon her, and avoid the recovery in respect of the covine. But if a disseisor, intruder, or abator, doe endow a woman that hath lawfull title of dower, this is good, and shall binde him that right hath, if there were no such covine or consent before the disseisin, abatement, or intrusion.

And so it is in all cases where a man hath a rightfull and just cause of action; yet if he of covine and consent doe raise up a tenant by wrong against whom he may recover, the covine doth suffocate the right, so as the recovery, though it be upon a good title, shall not binde or restore the demandant to his right.

If tenant in taile and his issue disseise the discontinuee to the use of the father, and the father dieth, and the land descendeth to the issue, he is not remitted against the discontinuee in respect he was privie and partie to the wrong; but in respect of all others he is remitted, and shall deraigne the first warrantie. And so note a man may be remitted against one, and not against another.

A. and B. joynttenants be intitled to a recall action against the heire of the disseisor, A. cause the heire to be disseised, against whom A. and B. recover and sue execution. B. is remitted, for that he was not partie to the covine, and shall hold in common with A.; but A. is not remitted, for the reason that Littleton here sheweth.

Pur ceo que el est disseisoresse. Nota, it is regularly true, that a feme covert cannot be a disseisoresse by her commandement or procurement precedent, nor by her assent or agreement subsequent; but by her actual entry, or proper act, she may be a disseisoresse. And therefore some doe hold that Littleton must be intended, that the husband and wife were present when the disseisin was done; and others doe hold that Littleton is good law, albeit she were absent; for that if her procurement or agreement be to doe a wrong, to cause a remitter unto her in this speciall case, she shall faile of her end, and remitted she shall not be; but in this speciall case she shall be holden as a disseisoresse by her covine and consent quatenus to hinder the remitter. And here it appeareth, that albeit the husband be of covine and consent, &c.; yet if the wife were not of covine and consent also, she shall be remitted, because, as Littleton saith, there was no default in the wife.

Sect. 679.

ITEM, si tiel discontinuee fe-soit estate de franktenement al baron et a son feme per fait en-dent sur condition, scilicet, reser-vant al discontinuee un certaine rent, et pur default de payment un re-entry, et pur ceo que le rent est aderere le discontinuee enter; don-ques de cel entrie le feme avera un assise de novel disseisin, apres la mort son baron envers le discon-tinnee, pur ceo que le condition fuit tout ousterment aniente, entant que la feme fuit en son remit-ter; uncore le baron ovesque sa

ALSO, if such discontinuee make an estate of freehold to the husband and wife by deed indented upon condition, scilicet, reserving to the discontinuee a certain rent, and for default of payment a re-entrie, and for that the rent is behind the discontinuee enter; then for this entrie the wife shall have an assise of novel disseisin, after the death of her husband against the discontinnee, because the condition was altogether taken away, inasmuch as the wife was in her remitter;
yet the husband with his wife canfeme

feme ne poient aver assise, pur ceo que le baron est estoppe, &c. not have an assise, because the husband is estopped, &c. (4. Rep. 52.)

IT is hereby to be observed, that the wife is presently remitted, and that the conditions, and rents, and all other things annexed to, or reserved upon the state (that is vanished and defeated by the remitter) are defeated also. (1) Pl. Com. in Amy Townshend's Case. 12. R. 2. tit. Remitter. 12.

Sect. 680, 681.

ITEM, si le baron discontinua les tenements sa feme, et reprist estate a luy pur terme de sa vie, le remainder apres son decease a sa feme pur terme de sa vie; en cest cas ceo n'est un remitter a la feme durant la vie le baron, pur ceo que durant la vie le baron, la feme n'ad riens en le franktenement. Mes si en ceo cas la feme survesquist le baron, ceo est un remitter a la feme, pur ceo que un franktenement en ley est ject sur luy maugre le soen. † Et entant que el ne poit aver action envers nul auter person, et envers luy mesme el ne poit aver action, pur ceo el est en son remitter. Car en cest cas coment que la feme ne entra pas en les tenements, uncore un estrange que ad cause de aver action, poit suer son action envers la feme de mesmes les tenements, pur ceo que el est tenant en ley, coment que el ne soit tenant en fait.

ALSO, if the husband discontinued the tenements of his wife, and take backe an estate to him for life, the remainder after his decease to his wife for terme of her life; in this case this is no remitter to the wife during the life of the husband, for that during the life of the husband, the wife hath nothing in the freehold. But if in this case the wife surviveth the husband, this is a remitter to the wife, because a freehold in law is cast upon her against her will. And inasmuch as she cannot have an action against any other person, and against herself shee cannot have any action, therefore she is in her remitter. For in this case although the wife doth not enter into the tenements, yet a stranger which hath cause to have an action, may sue his action against the wife for the same tenements, because shee is tenant in law. albeit that she be not tenant in deed. (Sid. 69.) (Hob. 260.)

Sect. 681.

CAR tenant de franktenement en fait est celui, que, s'il soit disseise de * franktenement, il poit aver assise: mes tenant de franktenement en ley devant son entre † en fait, n'avera my assise. Et si home ‡ soit seise § de certaine terre, § et ad issue firs quel prent

FOR tenant of freehold in deed is he, who, if hee be disseised of the freehold, may have an assise: but tenant of freehold in law before his entrie in deed, shall not have an assise. And if a man bee seised of certaine land, and hath issue a sonne who taketh wife, and

feme

† soen—feme, Paper M. S. * soen added L. and M. and Roh. † en fait not in L. and M. nor Roh. ‡ soit not in L. and M. nor Roh. § en fee added L. and M. and Roh. § et not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) VIII. The remitter defeats entirely the wrongful estate, and consequently every thing annexed to or issuing out of it. See ant. Sect. 659. 665, 666. and post. Sect. 686, 687. But an estate made of the land itself by him who is remitted, as a lease for years, is not defeated by the remitter.—See Com. Dig. vol. 5. 416.

(4. Rep. 8.)

(Plo. 416. b.)

18. H. 8. 3.
(3. Rep. 26. a.)Vide Sect. 447.
Bracton, lib. 4. fol. 206. 237.
Britton, 83. b.
Fleta, lib. 3. cap. 15.
(Plo. 229. b. 230. a.
Cro. Car. 338. Hob. 256.)

feme, et le pier devie seisie, et puis le fits devie devant ascun entrie fait per luy en la terre, le feme le fits ferra endowe en le terre, et uncore il n'avoit nul franktenement en fait, mes il avoit un fee et franktenement en ley. Et issint nota, que præcipe quod reddat poit auxy bien estre maintenus envers celuy que ad franktenement en ley, sicome envers celuy que ad le franktenement en fait.

the father dieth seised, and after the sonne dies before any entrie made by him into the land, the wife of the sonne shall be endowed in the land, and yet he had no freehold in deed, but hee had a fee and freehold in law. And so note, that a præcipe quod reddat may as well bee maintained against him that hath the freehold in law, as against him that hath the freehold in deed.

HERE five things are to be observed. First, that a remainder expectant upon an estate for life worketh no remitter, but when it fall in possession: for before his time he can have no action, and no freehold is in him. Secondly, though the woman might waive the remainder, yet because she is presently by the death of the husband tenant to the præcipe, it is within the rule of remitter, and her power of waiver is not materiall. Thirdly, that a freehold in law being cast upon the woman by act of law, without any thing done or assented to by her, doth remit her, albeit she be then sole and of full age. Fourthly, that a præcipe lyeth against one that hath but a freehold in law. Fifthly, that a woman shall be endowed where the husband hath the inheritance, and but a freehold in law, as hath beene said in the Chapter of Dower.

Sect. 682.

ITEM, si tenant en taile ad issue deux fits de pleine age, et il lessa la terre taile al eigne fits pur terme de sa vie, le remainder al fits puisne pur terme de sa vie, et puis le tenant en taile morust; en cest cas l'eigne fits n'est pas en son remitter, pur ceo que il prent estate de son pier. Mes si l'eigne fits morust sauns issue de son corps, donque ceo est un remitter al puisne frere, pur ceo que il est heire en le taylor, et un franktenement en le ley est escheate, et jecte sur luy per force de le remainder, et il y ad nul envers que il poit fuer son action *.

ALSO, if tenant in taile hath issued two sons of full age, and he letteth the land tailed to the eldest son for terme of his life, the remainder to the younger son for terme of his life, and after the tenant in taile dieth; in this case the eldest sonne is not in his remitter, because hee tooke an estate of his father. But if the eldest die without issue of his bodie, then this is a remitter to the younger brother, because he is heire in taile, and a freehold in law is escheated, and cast upon him by force of the remainder, and there is none against whom he may sue his action.

[a] 12. E. 4. 20.
[b] Sect. 684, 685.

OF this opinion is [a] Litleton in our bookes; and of this sufficient hath beene said in the next Section before. See hereafter [b] some explanation hereof.

Sect.

* &c. added L. and M. and Rob.

Sect. 683.

EN mesme le maner est, lou home soit disseise, et le disseisor morust seise, et les tenements descendent a son heire, et l'heire le disseisor fait un leas a un home de mesmes les tenements pur terme de * vie, le remainder a le disseisee pur terme de vie, ou en taile, ou en fee, † le tenant a terme de vie morust, ore ceo est un remitter al disseisee, &c. causâ quâ supra, ‡ &c.

IN the same manner it is, where a man is disseised, and the disseisor dieth seised, and the tenements descend to his heire, and the heire of the disseisor make a lease to a man of the same tenements for terme of life, the remainder to the disseisee for terme of life, or in taile, or in fee, the tenant for life dieth, now this is a remitter to the disseisee, &c. causâ quâ supra, &c.

AND this standeth upon the same reason that the cases in the two Sections precedent doe. See the next Section following.

Sect. 684.

§ * NOTA, si tenant en taile enfeoffa son firs et un autre per son fait de la terre taile, en fee, et livery de seisin est fait a l'auter accordant al fait, || et le firs rien conusant de ceo ¶ agreea a le feoffment, et puis celui que prist le livery de seisin devy, et le firs ne occupia la terre, ne prent ascun profit del terre durant la vie le pier, et puis le pier morust, ore ceo est un remitter al firs, pur ceo que le franktenement est ject sur luy per le survivor; et nul default s'uit en luy, pur ceo que il ne unque

NOTE, if tenant in taile infeoffe his sonne and another by his deed of the land intailed, in fee, and livery of seisin is made to the other according to the deed, and the son not knowing of this agreeth not to the feoffment, and after hee which tooke the livery of seisin dieth, and the son doth not occupie the land, nor taketh any profit of the land during the life of the father, and after the father dieth, now this is a remitter to the sonne, because the freehold is cast upon him by the survivor; and no default was in

* IT should seeme by this marke, that this was an addition to Littleton; but it is of Littleton's owne worke, and agreeth with the originall, saving the originall begun this Section thus: Item si tenant en taile, &c.

Per son fait, &c.

(Ant. 49. b. 52. a. 297. b.)

Here Littleton materially addeth by his deed; for if a man intendeth to [b] make a feoffment by parol to A. and B. and he and B. come upon the land, A. being absent, and make livery to B. in the name both of B. and A. and to their heires, this shall enure onely to B.; for neither can a man absent take livery, nor make livery without deed.

[b] Temps H. 8. Feoffments. Br. 72. 40. E. 3. 41. 10. E. 4. 1. a. 15. E. 4. 18. 18. E. 4. 12. 22. H. 6. 12.

Et livery de seisin (9. Rep. 136.)

est fait a l'auter accordant al fait, &c.

Note, livery being made to one according to the deede, enureth to both, because the deede whereunto the livery referreth is made to both; for the rule is, that Verba relata hoc maxime operantur per referentiam ut in eis in esse videntur.

(Ant. 49. b. 52. a.)

Et

* son added L. and M. and Roh.

† et added in L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ Nota—item,

L. and M. and Roh.

|| &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

¶ ne added L. and M. and Roh.

Et le firs nient conu- agreea, &c. en la vie sant de ceo, ne agreea a son pier, et il ad nul le feoffement. Here it ap- envers que il poit peareth, that if the sonne be fuier brieve de forme- conusant, and agreeth to the don, &c.
 feoffement, &c. this is no remitter to him. And therefore if the feoffement were made him, because he did never agree, &c. in the life of his father, and hee hath none against whom hee may sue a writ of formedon, &c.

Vide Sect. 682.

by deed indented, and the sonne with the other sealeth the counterpart, and then the feoffor maketh livery to the other according to the deed, and the other dieth, the son is not remitted, because he was conusant of the feoffement, and agreed to the same; and Littleton saith in the case that he putteth, that there was no default in the son, because he agreed not to the feoffement in the life of the father: and so it seemeth, that if A. be seised in taile, and have issue two sons, and by deed indented betweene him of the one part, and the sons of the other part, maketh a lease to the eldest for life, the remainder to the second in fee, and dieth, and the eldest son dieth without issue, the second son is not remitted, because he agreed to the remainder in the life of the father; or if the like estate had been made by parol, if in the life of the father the tenant for life had been impleaded, and made default, and he in the remainder had been received, and thereby agreed to the remainder, after the death of the father and the eldest son without issue, the second son should not be remitted, because he agreed to the remainder in the life of the father; all which is well warranted by the reason yielded by our author in this Section.

Sect. 685.

CAR si bome soi disseise de certaine terre, et le disseisor fait un fait de feoffment per que il infeoffa B. C. et D. et le liverie de seisin est fait a B. et C. mes
 D. ne fuit al liverie de seisin, ne unque agreea a le feoffment, ne un-que voile prender les profits, &c.
 et puis B. et C. devieront, et D. eux survesquist, et le disseisee port son brieve sur disseisin en le per envers D. * il monstra tout le matter, † coment il ne unques agreea a le feoffment, et issint il dischargera luy de damages, issint que le demandant ne recovers ascuns dammages envers luy, coment que il soit tenant del frank-tenement del terre. Et uncore le statute de Gloucester, ‡ cap. 1.
 voit, que le disseisee recovers damages en brieve de entre, foundue sur § disseisin vers celuy que est trouve tenant. Et ceo est un proove en l'auter case, que entant

FOR if a man be disseised of certaine land, and the disseisour make a deed of feoffement whereby he infeoffeth B. C. and D. and liverie of seisin is made to B. and C. but D. was not at the liverie of seisin, nor ever agreed to the feoff-ment, nor ever would take the profits, &c. and after B. and C. die, and D. survive them, and the disseisee bringeth his writ upon disseisin in the per against D. hee shall shew all the matter, how he never agreed to the feoffement, and hee shall discharge himselfe of dam-mages, so as the demandant shall recover no damages against him, although he be tenant of the freehold of the land. And yet the statute of Gloucester cap. 1. will,
 that the disseisee shall recover damages in a writ of entrie founded upon a disseisin against him which is found tenant. And this is a proove in the other case,
 que

* il mesme celuy D. L. and M. and Roh.
 † le novel added L. and M. and Roh.

† et added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ cap. 1. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

que l'issue en le taile avient a le franktenement, et * nemy per son fait, ne per son agreement, † mes apres la mort son pier, ceo est un remitter a luy, entant que il ne poit fuer action de formedon envers nul auter person, &c.

that forasmuch as the issue in taile came to the freehold, and not by his act, nor by his agreement, but after the death of his father, therefore this is a remitter to him, inasmuch as he cannot sue an action of formedon against any other person, &c.

THIS case standeth upon the same reason that the next precedent case doth.

Mes celui que est trouve tenant, &c. Here it appeareth, that acts of parliament are to be so construed, as no man that is innocent, or free from injurie or wrong, be by a literall construction punished or endamaged: and therefore in this case, albeit the letter of the statute is generally to give damages against him that is found tenant, and the case that Littleton here putteth, D. being survivor, is consequently found tenant of the land; yet because he waived the estate, and never agreed to the feoffment, nor tooke any profits, he shall not be charged with the damages.

(8. Rep. 1.
Post. 365. b. 366. a. 369. 381.
Ant. 11. b. 115. a.
Flo. 365.)

Sect. 686, 687.

ITEM, si un abbe aliena la terre de son meason a un auter en fee, et l'alienee per son fait charge la terre ove un rent charge en fee, et puis l'alienee infeoffe l'abbe ove licence, a aver et tener al abbe et a ses successors a tous jours, et puis l'abbe morust, et un auter est eslieu, et fait abbe: en cest case l'abbe que est le successor, et son covent, sont en lour remitter, et tiendront la terre discharge, pur ceo que mesme l'abbe ne poit aver aucun action, † ne briefe d'entre sine assensu capituli, de mesme la terre envers nul auter person. (1)

ALSO, if an abbot alien the land of his house to another in fee, and the alienee by his deed charge the land with a rent-charge in fee, and after the alienee infeoffe the abbot with licence, to have and to hold to the abbot and to his successors for ever, and after the abbot die, and another is chosen, and made abbot: in this case the abbot that is the successor, and his covent, are in their remitter, and shall hold the land discharged, because the same abbot cannot have an action, nor a writ of entre sine assensu capituli, of the same land against any other person.

(2. Roll. Abr. 522.)

Sect. 687.

EN mesme le maner est, lou un evesque, ou un deane, ou auters tiels persons aliena, &c. sans assent, &c. et l'alienee charge la terre, &c. et puis l'evesque reprist estate de mesme la terre per licence, a luy et a ses

IN the same manner it is, where a bishop or a deane, or other such persons alien, &c. without assent, &c. and the alienee charge the land, &c. and after the bishop takes backe an estate of the same land by licence, to him and his succes-

* see added L. and M. and Roh.

† mes — que, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ ne — de, L. and M. and Roh.

(1.) VIII. Here Littleton begins to treat of remitter to bodies politic.

successors, et puis l'evesque devie; sours, and after the bishop dieth; son successor est en son remitter, his successor is in his remitter, as come en droit de son esglise, et defeat the charge, &c. causâ quâ supra, &c.

OUR author having spoken of remitters to singular or naturall persons, as issues in taile, and to feme coverts, and to their heires, and to them in reversion or remainder, and their heires; now he speaketh of remitters to bodies politike and incorporate, as to abbots, bishops, deanes, &c. And as descents doe remit the heire which comes in the per, so succession doth remit the successor, albeit he cometh in the post. And so in other cases where the issue in taile of full age shall be remitted, there in the like case shall the successor be remitted also, and defeat all meane charges and incumbrances.

Ove licence, &c. That is, of the king and the lords immediate and mediate, to dispense with the statutes of mortmaine; whereof see more before, Se^ct. 140.

Se^ct. 688.

ITEM, si home fust faux action envers le tenant en taile, sicome home voile fuer envers luy un brieve d'entre en le post, supposant per son brieve que le tenant en taile n'ad pas entre sinon per A. de B. que disseisist l'ayel le demandant, et ceo est faux, et il recover envers le tenant en le taile per default, et fust execution, et puis le tenant en taile morust, son issue poit aver brieve de formedon envers luy que recovera; et s'il voile pleader le recoverie envers le tenant en taile, l'issue poit dire, que le dit A. de B. ne disseisist poynt l'ayel celuy que recoverast, en le maner come son brieve supposa, et issint il fauxera * le recoverie. Auxy politico que ceo fust voyer, que le dit A. de B. disseisist l'ayel le demandant que recoverast, et que apres le disseisin le demandant, ou son pier, ou son ayel per un fait avoyent releffe al tenant en taile tout le droit que il avoit en la terre, &c. et ceo nient contriste-

ALSO, if a man sue a false action against tenant in taile, as if one will sue against him a writ of entrie in the post, supposing by his writ that the tenant in taile had not his entrie but by A. of B. who disseised the grandfather of the demandant, and this is false, and he recovereth against the tenant in taile by default, and sueth execution, and after the tenant in taile dieth, his issue may have a writ of formedon against him which recovereth; and if hee will plead the recoverie against the tenant in taile, the issue may say, that the said A. of B. did not disseise the grandfather of him which recovered, in manner as his writ suppose, and so he shall falsifie his recovery. And admit this were true, that the said A. of B. did disseise the grandfather of the demandant which recovered, and that after the disseisin, the demandant, or his father, or his grandfather by a deed had released to the tenant in taile all the right which hee had in the

ant

* le—son, L. and M. and Rob.

ant il fust un brieve d'entre en le post envers le tenant en taile, en le manner come est avaunt dit, et le tenant en taile pleda a celuy, que le dit A. de B. ne dis-seist pas son aiel, en le manner come son brieve supposa; et sur ceo sont a issue, et l'issue est trove pur le demandant, per que il ad judgement de recover, et fust execution; et puis le tenant en le taile morust, son issue poit avoir un brieve de formedon envers celuy que recovers; et s'il voile plead le recoverie per l'action trie envers son pier* que fuit tenant en taile, donque il poit monstrier et pleader le release fait al son pier, et issint l'action que fuit sue, feint en ley †.

land, &c. and notwithstanding this hee sueth a writ of entrie in the post against the tenant in taile, in manner as is aforesaid, and the tenant in taile plead to him, that the said A. of B. did not disseise his grandfather, in such manner as his writ suppose; and upon this they are at issue, and the issue is found for the demandant, wherby he hath judgment to recover, and sueth execution; and after the tenant in taile dieth, his issue may have a writ of formedon against him that recovered; and if he will plead the recovery by the action tried against his father who was tenant in taile, then he may shew and plead the release made to his father, and so the action which was sued, feint in law.

IL recovers envers le tenant en taile per default. Littleton addeth (by default) because if the [c] recovery passed upon an issue tried by verdict, he shall never falsifie in the point tried, because an attain might have beene had against the jurors; and albeit all the jurors be dead, so as the attain doe faile, yet the issue in taile shall not falsifie in the point tried, which, untill it be lawfully avoided, pro veritate accipitur. As if the tenant in taile be impleaded in a formedon, and he traverseth the gift, and it is tried against him, and thereupon the demandant recover; in this case the issue in taile shall not falsifie in the point tried; but he may falsifie the recovery by any other matter: as that the tenant in taile might have pleaded a collateral warrantie, or a release, as Littleton here putteth the case, or to confesse and avoid the point tried. And Littleton's case holdeth not only in a recovery by default, whereof he speaketh, but also upon a nihil dicit, or confession or demurrer.

[c] 12. E. 4. 19. 13. E. 4. 3.
11. H. 4. 89. 7. H. 4. 17.
14. H. 7. 10, 11. 28. Aff. 32. 52.
34. Aff. 7. 10. H. 6. 5.
19. H. 6. 39. Brooke tit. Fauxifier de Recoverie 55.
22. H. 6. 28. 34. H. 6. 2.
26. H. 6. 32. 36. H. 6. Fauxer.
de Recoverie 27.
(6. Rep. 7. 1. Roll. Rep. 443.)

Sect. 689.

ET il semble, que feint action est autant a dire en English, a fained action, c'est a scavoir, tiel action que coment que les parolx de le brieve sont voyers, uncore per certaine causes il n'ad cause ne title per la ley de recover per mesme l'action. Et faux action est, lou les parolx de brieve sont faux. Et en les deux cas avaunt dits, si le cas fuit tiel, que apres tiel recovery, et execution

AND it seemeth, that a faint action is as much to say in English, a fained action, that is to say, such an action as albeit the words of the writ be true, yet for certaine causes hee hath no cause nor title by the law to recover by the same action. And a false action is, where the words of the writ bee false.
And in these two cases aforesaid, if the case were such, that after such recovery, and execution ent

* que fuit not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

*ent fait, le tenant en taile uſt diſſeie celui que recouera, et ent moruſt ſeiſie, per que la terre diſcendiſt a ſon iſſue, ceo eſt un remitter al iſſue, et l'iſſue eſt eins per force de le taile; et pur cel cauſe jeo aye mis les deux caſes precedents, pur enformer toy, mon ſits, que l'iſſue en taile per force d'un diſcent fait a luy apres un recovery et execution * fait envers ſon auncether, poit eſtre auxy bien en ſon remitter, ſicome il ſerroit per le diſcent fait a luy apres un diſcontinuance fait per ſon auncether de les terres tayles per feoffement en pais, ou auterment, &c.*

thereupon done, the tenant in tayle had diſſeiſed him that recovered, and thereof died ſeiſed, whereby the land deſcended to his iſſue, this is a remitter to the iſſue, and the iſſue is in by force of the taile; and for this cauſe I have put theſe two caſes precedent, to enforme thee (my ſonne) that the iſſue in taile by force of a diſcent made unto him after a recovery and execution made againſt his anceſſour, may be as well in his remitter, as he ſhould be by the diſcent made to him after a diſcontinuance made by his anceſſour of the entayled lands by feoffement in the countrey, or otherwiſe, &c.

HERE Littleton explaineth what a faint action is, and what a falſe action is, which is plaine and perſpicuous. And here it is to be obſerved, that a remitter may be had after a recovery upon a faint action by a diſſeiſin and a diſcent, aſwell as by a diſcent after a diſcontinuance by a feoffement, &c.

Sect. 690.

28. Aff. 32. 34. Aff. pl. 7.
15. E. 3. Age 95. 11. H. 4. 89.
7. H. 4. 17. 33. E. 3. Enrie
Cong. 31. 21. H. 6. 13.
10. H. 6. 6. 12. E. 4. 20.
14. H. 7. 11. 23. Eliz. Dier 376.
Lib. 1. fol. 100. Shelley's caſe.
Pl. Com. 55.
(Cro. Car. 388. Pl. 14.)

See hereafter Sect. 709.
15. E. 3. Bucke 34. 41. E. 3. 53.
41. E. 3. 21. 46. E. 3. 11.
1. E. 4. 5. 5. E. 4. 2.

[d] 10. E. 4. 20. Dier
23. Eliz. 375. Lib. 10. fol. 37. 38.
in Mary Portington's caſe.

HERE it appeareth, that if a judgement be given againſt a tenant in taile upon a faint or falſe action, and tenant in taile die before execution, no execution can be ſued againſt the iſſue in taile. But if in a common recoverie judgement bee had againſt tenant in taile where he voucheth, and hath judgement to recover over in value, albeit the tenant in taile dyeth before execution, yet the recoverer ſhall execute the judgement againſt the iſſue in taile in reſpect of the intended recompence; and for that it is the common aſſurance of the realme, and is well warranted [d] by our bookes, and was not invented by juſtice Choke, who was a grave and learned judge in the time of E. 4. (as ſome hold by tradition); but it may bee

ITEM, en les caſes avantdits, ſi le cas ſuit tiel, que apres ceo que le demandant avoit judgement de recover envers le tenant en taile, et meſme le tenant en taile moruſt devaunt aſcun execution ewe envers luy, per que les tenements diſcendent a ſon iſſue, et celui que recouera ſuiſt un ſcire facias hors de le judgement d'aver execution de le judgement envers l'iſſue en taile, l'iſſue pledera le

ALSO, in the caſes aforeſaid, if the caſe were ſuch, that after that the demandant have judgement to recover againſt the tenant in taile, and the ſame tenant in taile dieth before any execution had againſt him, whereby the tenements deſcend to his iſſue, and he who recovereth ſueth a ſcire facias out of the judgement to have execution of the judgement againſt the iſſue in taile, the iſſue ſhal plead the matter *matter come avaunt est dit; et issint pro- va que le * dit recovery fuit faux ou feint en ley, et issint luy barre- ra d'aver execution de le judgement +.*

ter as aforesaid; and so prove that the said recovery was false or faint in law, and so shall barre him to have execution of the judgement.

If a recoverie bee had against tenant for life without consent or covine, though it be without title, and execution be had, and tenant for life dieth, the reversion or remainder is discontinued, so as he in the reversion or remainder cannot enter; but if such a recovery be had by agreement and covine between the demandant and the tenant for life, then, as hath beene said, it is a forfeiture of the estate for life, and he in the reversion or remainder may enter for the forfeiture. So it is if the tenant for life suffer a common recovery at this day, it is a forfeiture of his estate; for a common recovery is a common conveyance or assurance, whereof the law taketh knowledge. Since Littleton wrote, there were two statutes [e] made for preservation of remainders and reversions expectant upon any manner of estate for life; the one in 32. H. 8. the other in 14. Eliz.: but 32. H. 8. extended not to recoveries, when tenant for life came in as vouchee, &c. and therefore that act is repealed by 14. Eliz. and full remedie provided for preservation of the entrie of them in reversion or remainder. But the statute of 14. Eliz. extendeth not to any recovery, unlesse it be by agreement or covine. Secondly, [f] if there be tenant for life, remainder in taile, the reversion or remainder in fee, if tenant for life be impleaded by agreement, and he vouches tenant in taile, and he vouch over the common vouchee, this shall barre the reversion or remainder in fee, although he in the reversion or remainder did never assent to the recovery; because it was not the intent of the act to extend to such a recovery, in which a tenant in taile was vouched; for he hath power by common recovery, if he were in possession, to cut off all reversions and remainders. And so if tenant for life had surrendered to him in remainder in taile, he might have barred the remainders and reversions expectant upon his estate. Thirdly, where the proviso of that act speaketh of an assent of record by him in reversion or remainder, it is to be understood, that such assent must appeare upon the same record, either upon a voucher, aid prier, receipt, or the like; for it cannot appeare of record, unlesse it be done in course of law, and not by any extrajudiciall entrie, or by memorandum.

that it was upon former authorities and opinions of judges discovered by him, assented unto by the rest of the judges.

If a recoverie bee had against tenant for life without consent or covine, though it be without title, and execution be had, and tenant for

5. Aff. 3. 5. E. 3. Entre Cong. 42. Li. 1. fol. 15, 16. Sir William Pelham's case. (6. Rep. 8. b. Ant. 356. a.)

[e] 32. H. 8. cap. 31. 14. Eliz. cap. 8. (Sect. 675. 10. Rep. 49.)

[f] Lib. 3. fol. 60, 61. Lincolne College case.

(2. Roll. Abr. 23. 146.)

Sect. 691.

ITEM, si tenant en taile discontinua le taile, et mourust, et son issue port son briefe de formedon envers le discontinuee (estant tenant de franktenement del terre) et le discontinuee pleda que il n'est tenant, mes ousterment disclama de le tenancy en la terre; en cest cas le judgement serra, que le tenant alast sans jour, et apres tiel

ALSO, if tenant in taile discontinue the taile, and dieth, and his issue bringeth his writ of formedon against the discontinuee (being tenant of the freehold of the land) and the discontinuee plead that he is not tenant, but utterly disclaymeth from the tenancy in the land; in this case the judgement shall be, that the tenant goeth without day, and after such

HERE it appeareth, that upon the plea of non-tenure, or of disclaimer of the tenant in a formedon in the discender, albeit the expresse judgement be that the tenant shall goe without day, yet in judgement of law the demandant may enter according to the title of his writ, and bee seised in taile, notwithstanding the discontinuance. And here, Littleton saith, the demandant shall be adjudged in his remitter; where hee taketh remitter in a large sence: for in this case the demandant hath not two rights, but hath onely one antient right, and restored to the same by course of law; and so remitter here is taken for a recontinuance of the right.

(Doct. Pla. 133.) 5. E. 4. 1. 36. H. 6. 29. 6. E. 3. 8. 4. E. 4. 38. (3. Rep. 26.)

Non-tenure. Vide Bracton, lib. 5. fol. 431, 432. & 414. Britton, cap. 84.

Or

* dit not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

Ou le demandant ne recouvrera damages.

Here is to be observed, that in such a præcipe where the demandant is to recover damages, if the tenant pleade non-tenure or disclaim, [f] there the demandant may averre him to be tenant of the land, as his writ suppose for the benefit of his damages, which otherwise hee should lose, or pray judgement and enter. [g] But where no damages are to be recovered, as in a formedon in the descender, and the like, there hee cannot averre him tenant, but pray his judgement and enter, for thereby hee hath the effect of his suite: Et frustra fit per plura, quod fieri potest per pauciora.

Averrer. To averre or avouch, or verifie, verificare, whereof cometh averrificatio, an averment; and is so said as well in English as in French; and is two-fold, viz. generall and particular. A generall averment, which is the conclusion of every plea to the writ, or in barre of replications and other pleadings (for counts or avowries in nature of counts need not be averred) containing matter affirmative, ought to be averred, et hoc paratus est verificare, &c. Particular averments are, as when the life of tenant for life, or tenant in taile, are averred; and there, tho' this word (verificare) be not used, but the matter avouched and affirmed, it is upon the matter an averment. And an averment containeth as well the matter as the forme thereof.

Que le tenant alast sans jour, Quod tenens eat sine die. This is the entrie of the judgement in that case, that the tenant shall goe without day, that is, to be discharged of further attendance; and this is some-judgement l'issue en le taile que est demandant poit entrer en la terre, nyent contristant le discontinuance, et per tiel entrie il serra adjudge eins en son remitter. Et la cause est, pur ceo que si ascun home fust præcipe quod reddat envers ascun tenant de franktenement, en quel action le demandant ne recouvrera damages, et le tenant pledast nontenure, *ou auterment disclama en le tenancie, le demandant ne poit averrer son briefe, † et dirra que il est tenant, come le briefe suppose. Et pur cel cause le demandant apres ceo que judgement est done que le tenant alast sans jour, poit entrer en les tenements demands, le quel serra auxy graund advantage a luy en ley, sicome il avoit judgement de recouvrer envers le tenant, et per tiel entrie il est en son remitter per force del taile. Mes lou le demandant recouvrera damages envers le tenant, la le demandant poit averrer, que il est tenant, come le briefe suppose, et ceo pur l'avantage judgement the issue in the taile that is demandant may enter into the land, notwithstanding the discontinuance, and by such entrie hee shall be adjudged in his remitter. And the reason is, for that if any man sue a præcipe quod reddat against any tenant of the freehold, in which action the demandant shall not recover damages, and the tenant pleads non-tenure, or otherwise disclaime in the tenancie, the demandant cannot averre his writ, and say that hee is tenant, as the writ supposeth. And for this cause the demandant after that that judgement is given that the tenant shall goe without day, may enter into the tenements demanded, the which shall be as great an advantage to him in law, as if he had judgement to recover against the tenant, and by such entry hee is in his remitter by force of the entaile. But where the demandant shall recover damages against the tenant, there the demandant may averre, that he is tenant, as the writ supposeth, and that for the advantage

[f] 13. H. 7. 28. 36. H. 6. 29.
22. H. 6. 44. 4. E. 4. 38.
5. E. 4. 1. 6. E. 3. 8.
(7. Rep. 40.)

[g] 8. E. 3. 434. 24. E. 3. 9.
11. H. 4. 16. & 7. H. 6. 17.

5. E. 4. 1.
(5. Rep. 68. Doct. Pla. 49.)

(Ant. 303. a.)

(9. Rep. 7. Sid. 264. 310.)

* ou—mes, L. and M. and Roh.

† et dirra, not in L. and M. nor Roh.

*del demandant pur recoucoverer ses damages, ou au-auterment il ne recouveroit ses damages, queux sont * ou fueront a luy dones per la ley.*

tage of the demandant to recover his dam-mages, or otherwise
hee shall not recover
his damages, which are or were given to him by the law.

time finall for that action,
whereof Littleton here put-teth an example; and sometime temporarie, whereof Li-tleton also hath put an example: as when excommengement is pleaded in disabilitie of the plaintiffe or demandant, there the award is, that the tenant or defendant shall goe without day; and yet when

Vide Sect. 201.

(8. Rep. 68.)

the demandant or plaintiffe have purchased his letters of absolution, upon shewing them to the court, he may have a refoptions or reattachment to recontinue the cause againe. But it is to be knowne, that when judgement is given for the tenant or defendant upon a plea in barre, or to the writ, &c. the judgement is all one, viz. quod tenens, or defendens eat inde sine die, and shall have reference to the nature and matter of the plea, and so be taken either to goe in barre, or to the writ. So when judgement is given against the plaintiffe, either in barre of his action, or in abatement of his writ, &c. the judgement is all one, viz. nihil capiat per breve; and it appeareth by the record, whether the plea did goe in barre, or to the writ. And the cause of the judgement is never entred in the record in any case; for that upon consideration had of the record, it appeareth therein.

3. H. 4. s. 11.

(Ant. 135. b.)

Sect. 692.

ITEM, si home soit disseise, et le disseisor devy, son heire esteant eins per discent, ore l'entrie de le disseisee est tolle; et si le disseisee porta son brieve d'entrie sur disseisin en le per, envers l'heire, et l'heire disclaime en le tenancy, &c. le demandant poit averer son brieve que il est tenant come le brieve suppose, s'il voit, pur recoucover ses damages: mes uncore s'il voit relinquisher le averment, &c. il poit loyalment entrer en la terre per cause del disclaimer, nient obstant que son entrie adevant fuit tolle. Et ceo fuit adjudge devant mon master sir R. Danby, jades chiefe justice de la common banke et ses compagnions, &c.

ALSO, if a man be disseised, and the disseisor die, his heire being in by discent, now the entrie of the disseisee is taken away; and if the disseisee bring his writ of entrie sur disseisin in the per, against the heire, and the heire disclaime in the tenancy, &c. the demandant may averre his writ that hee is tenant as the writ suppose, if he will, to recover his damages: but yet if hee will relinquish the averment, &c. he may lawfully enter into the land because of the disclaimer, notwithstanding that his entrie before was taken away. And this was adjudged before my master sir R. Danby, late chiefe justice of the common place and his companions, &c.

(F. N. B. 192. b.
1. Roll. Abr. 631.
Doct. Pla. 133.)

(3. Lev. 330.)

ITEM, si home soit disseise, &c.

Albeit in this case, and in the case before, the entrie of the demandant is his owne act, and the demandant hath no expresse judgement to recover, yet shall he be remitted; because he in judgement of the law shall be in according to the title of his writ, and by his entrie defeat the discontinuance, and consequently is remitted to his antient estate.

36. H. 6. fol. 29

Sir Robert Danby, knight, was a gentleman of an ancient and faire descended family, and chiefe-justice of the court of common-pleas; a grave, reverend, and learned judge, of

3. E. 4. 41. 4. E. 4. 38.

* ou fueront not in L. and M. nor Roh.

of whom our author speaketh here with verie great reverence, as you may perceive. And here is to be noted how necessarie it is, after the example of our author, to observe the judgements and resolutions of the sages of the law.

Sect. 693.

29. Aff. p. 26. 43. Aff. p. 3.
11. H. 7. 20. 3. H. 6. 19.
40. E. 3. 43.
(Sec. 683.)

(Hob. 256.)

(Ant. 49. b. 350. a.)

8. R. 2. Quar. imp. 199.
19. H. 6. 30. 8. H. 6. 17.
21. H. 6. 2. 3. H. 4. 8.
14. H. 6. 15. 16. 37. H. 6. 18.
26. H. 8. 4. F. N. B. 36. f.
& 35. b.
(3. Rep. 3. b. Sect. 661.)

22. Aff. p. 32. en le case de Theobald Grunville.
(3. Rep. 3.)

13. H. 4. 5. 3. H. 4. 17.
8. H. 4. 8. 12. H. 4. 19.
35. Aff. 8. 17. Aff. 3.
29. Aff. 53. 43. E. 3. 17.
Parker's case 44. E. 3. Ettop. 10.
21. H. 6. 2. per Pollon.
8. H. 6. 17. per Confinere.
(1. Roll. Abr. 869. 878.
4. Rep. 52.)

HERE appeareth a diversitie betweene a right of entrie and a right of action; for if a man of full age having but a right of action, taketh an estate to him, hee is not remitted: but where hee hath a right of entrie and taketh an estate, he by his entrie is remitted, because his entrie is lawfull. And if the disseisor infeoffe the disseisee and others, the disseisee is remitted to the whole, for his entrie is lawfull: otherwise it is if his entrie were taken away.

Lou l'entrie est congeable. A. is disseised of a mannor, whereunto an advowson is appendant, an estranger usurpe to the advowson, if the disseisee enter into the mannor, the advowson is recontinued againe, which was severed by the usurpation. And so it is if tenant in tayle be of a mannor whereunto an advowson is appendant, the tenant in tayle discontinueth in fee, the discontinuance granteth away the advowson in fee, and dieth, the issue in tayle recontinueth the mannor by recoverie, he is thereby remitted to the advowson; and in both cases hee that right hath shall present when the church becommeth voyd.

The patron of a benefice is outlawed, and the church becommeth voyd, an estranger usurpeth, and six moneths passe, the king doth recover in a quare impedit, and remove the incumbent, &c. the advowson is recontinued to the rightfull patron. And so note a diversitie betweene a recontinuance and a remitter; for a remitter cannot be properly, unlesse there be two titles; but a recontinuance may be where there is but one.

Per fait indent, &c. Here it appeareth, that if the disseisor by deed indented make a lease for life, or a gift in tayle, or a feoffment in fee, whereunto liverie of seisin is requisite; yet the deed indented shall not suffer the liverie made according to the forme and effect of the indenture, to worke any remitter to the disseisee, but shall eslop the disseisee to claime his former estate; and if the disseisor upon the feoffment doth reserve any rent or condition, &c. the rent or condition is good: and the reason wherefore a deed indented shall conclude the taker more than the deed poll, is, for that the deed poll is only the deed of the feoffor, donor, and lessor; but the deed indented is the deed of both parties, and therefore aswell the taker as the giver is concluded.

Ou per record. As by fine, deed indented, and inrolled, and the like.

*ITEM, lou l'entrie d'un home est congeable, coment que il prent estate a luy quant il est de pleine age pur terme de vie, ou en taile, ou en fee, ceo est un remitter a luy, si tiel priseil de estate ne soit per fait indent, ou per matter de record, que * concludera ou esloppera. Car si home soit disseisee, et † represente estate de le disseiser sans fait, ou per fait poll, ceo est ‡ un remitter al disseisee, || &c.*

ALSO, where the entrie of a man is congeable, although that he takes an estate to him when hee is of full age for terme of life, or in taile, or in fee, this is a remitter to him, if such taking of the estate be not by deed indented, or by matter of record, which shall conclude or estop him. For if a man be disseised, and takes backe an estate from the disseisor without deed, or by deed poll, this is a remitter to the disseisee, &c.

S E C T.

* added L. and M. and Rob.
† &c. not in L. and M. nor Rob.

† represent—ent prent, L. and M. and Rob.

‡ as—ben, L. and M. and Rob.

Sect. 694.

ITEM, si home lessa terre pur terme de vie a un auter, le quel aliena a un auter en fee, et l'alienee fait estate a le lessor, ceo est un remitter al lessor, pur ceo que son entrie fuit congeable, * &c.

ALSO, if a man let land for terme of life to another, who alieneth to another in fee, and the alienee make an estate to the lessor, this is a remitter to the lessor, because his entrie was congeable, &c.

This is evident enough upon that which hath beene said.

Sect. 695.

ITEM, si home soit disseise, et le disseisor lessa la terre al disseisee per fait pol, ou sans fait, pur terme des ans, per que le disseisee entra, cest entre est un remitter a le disseisee. Car en tiel case lou l'entre d'un home est congeable, et un lease est fait a luy, coment que il claiama per parolx en pais, que il ad estate per force de tiel lease, ou dit overtment, que il ne claiama riens en la terre sinon per force de tiel lease, uncore ceo est un remitter a luy, car tiel † disclaimer en le pais n'est riens a purpose. Mes s'il ‡ disclaimer en court de record, que il || n'ad estate forsque per force de tiel lease, et nemy auterment, donque il est conclude, &c.

ALSO, if a man bee disseised, and the disseisor let the land to the disseisee by deed pol, or without deed, for terme of yeares, by which the disseisee entreth, this entrie is a remitter to the disseisee. (Hob. 256.) For in such case where the entrie of a man is congeable, and a lease is made to him, albeit that he claimeth by words in pais, that he hath estate by force of such lease, or saith openly, that he claimeth nothing in the land but by force of such lease, yet this is a remitter to him, for that such disclaimer in pais is nothing to the purpose. But if hee disclaime in court of record, that he hath no estate but by force of such lease, and not otherwise, then is he concluded, &c.

HERE appeareth a diversitie betweene a claime in pais of an estate, and a claime of record, for a claime in pais shall not hinder a remitter. Otherwise it is of a claime of record, because that doth worke a conclusion. (3. Rep. 25.)

Sect. 696.

ITEM, si deux joyntenaunts seifie de certaine tenements en fee, l'un

ALSO, if two joynttenants seised of certaine tenements in fee, the one being of

HERE note a diversitie (2. Inst. 308.)
worthy the observation, that where joyntenaunts or coparceners have one and the same remedie, if the one enter, the other shall enter also: but
where

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.
|| n'ad—ad, L. and M. and Roh.

† disclaimer—clayme, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ disclaimer—clayme, L. and M. and Roh.

10. H. 6. 10. 19. H. 6. 45.
31. H. 6. tit. Ent. Cong. 54.

where remedies bee severall, there it is otherwise. As if two joyntenants or coparceners joyne in a reall action, where their entrie is not lawfull, and the one is summoned and seivered, and the other pursueth and recovereth the moitie, the other joyntenant or coparcener shall enter and take the profits with her, because their remedie was one and the same. But where two coparceners be, and they are disseised, and a discent is cast, and they have issue and die, if the issue of the one recover her moitie, the other shall not enter with her, because their remedies were severall; and yet when both have recovered, they are coparceners againe. So here in this case that Littleton putteth, the two joyntenants have not equall remedie; for the infant hath a right of entry, and the other a right of action; and therefore the infant being remitted to a moitie, the other shall not enter and take the profits with her.

If A. and B. joyntenants in fee, be disseised by the father of A. who dieth seised, his sonne and heire entreth, he is remitted to the whole, and his companion shall take advantage thereof. Otherwise here in the case of Littleton, for that the advantage is given to the infant, more in respect of his person, than of his right; whereof his companion shall take no advantage. But if the grandfather had disseised the joyntenants, and the land had descended to the father, and from him to A. and then A. had died, the entrie of the other should be taken away by the first discent; and therefore he should not enter with the heire of A.

But here in the case of Littleton, if after the discent the other joyntenant had died, and the infant survived, some say that he should have entered into the whole, because hee is now, in judgement of law, solely in by the first feoffment, and he claimeth not under the discent.

*esteant de pleine age, l'auter deins age, sont disseises, * Ec. et le disseisor morust seise, et son issue entra, l'un de les joyntenants esteant adonques deins age, et apres que il vient al pleine age, l'heire le disseisor lesa les tenements a mesmes les joyntenants pur terme de leur † deux vies, ceo est un remitter (quant al moitie) a celui que fuit deins age, pur ceo que il est seise de cest moitie que affiert a luy en fee, pur ceo que son entre fuit congeable. Mes l'auter jointenaunt n'ad en l'auter moitie fors que estate pur terme de sa vie per force de le lease, pur ceo que son entre fuit tolle, Ec.*

full age, the other within age, bee disseised, &c. and the disseisor die seised, and his issue enter, the one of the joyntenants being then within age, and after that he cometh to full age, the heire of the disseisor letteth the tenements to the same joyntenants for terme of their two lives, this is a remitter (as to the moitie) to him that was within age, because hee is seised of the moitie which belongeth to him in fee, for that his entrie was congeable. But the other joyntenant hath in the other moity but an estate for terme of his life by force of the lease, because his entrie was taken away, &c.

Vide 35. Aff. pl. ultim.

CHAP. 13.

Of Warrantie.

Sect. 697.

IL est communement dit. Here by the opinion of Littleton, communis opinio is of authoritie, and stands with the rule of law, A communi observantia non est reco-

IL est communement dit, que trois garranties y sont, scilicet, garrantie lineal, gar-

IT is commonly said, that there bee three warranties, scilicet, warrantie lineall, warrantie collateral

Vide Sect. 288. 321.
(Vaughan 375.)

* Ec. not in L. and M. nor Rob.

† deux not in L. and M. nor Rob.

rantie collateral, et garrantie que commence per disseisin. Et est ascavoir, que devant l'estatute de Gloucester tous garranties queux descendent a eux queux sont heires a eux queux fesoient les garranties, fueront barres a mesmes les heires a demander ascuns terres ou tenements encounter les garranties, foreprise les garranties queux commencerent per disseisin; car tiel garrantie ne fuit unque barre al heire, pur ceo que le garrantie commence per tort, scilicet, per disseisin.

defender son tenant en sa seisin, et en auter sence signifie que si il ne defende que le garrant luy, soit tenue a esbanges, et de faire son gree a la vassallance. [d] Bracton saith, Warrantizare nihil aliud est, quam defendere et acquiescere tenentem qui warrantum vocavit in seisinam suam. [e] Fleta saith, Warrantizare nihil aliud est quam possidentem vocantem defendere et acquiescere in sua seisinam vel possessione erga petentem, &c. et tenens de re warranti excambium habebit ad valentiam.

It is to be observed, that there be two kinde of warranties; that is to say, warrantia expressa et tacita, vulgarly said warrantie in deed, because they be expressed; and warranties in law, because the law doth tacitely imply them. And this division of warranties that Littleton here speaketh of, he intendeth of warranties in deed. And of warranties in law, more shall be said hereafter in this Chapter. As for promises or contracts annexed to chattels reall or personall, they are not intended by our author in his said division, but only warranties concerning freeholds and inheritances.

Devant le statute de Gloucester. This statute was made at a parliament holden at Gloucester in the sixth year of the reign of king E. 1. and therefore it is called the statute of Gloucester.

Sont barres a mesmes les heires a demander ascuns terres, &c. For the statute, as hath beene said, being made in 6. E. 1. (was before the statute of donis conditionalibus, which was enacted 13. Edward 1.) when all states of inheritance were fee simple. But after the statute of 13. Edward 1. the heire in tayle is not barred by the warrantie of his ancestor, unless there be assents; as shall be said hereafter more largely in this Chapter.

By the statute of Gloucester foure things are enacted.

First, that if a tenant by the courtie alien with warrantie and dieth, that this shall be no barre to the heire in a writ of mordancester, without assents in fee simple; and if lands or tenements descend to the heire from the father, he shall be barred, having regard to the value thereof.

Secondly,

(1) The doctrine of warranty was formerly one of the most interesting and useful articles of legal learning; but the effect and operation of warranties having, by repeated acts of the legislature, been reduced to a very narrow compass, it is become in most respects a matter of speculation rather than of use. In some instances, however, warranties have still a powerful influence on our landed property; and there is no part of our jurisprudence to which the ancient writers have more frequently recourse to explain and illustrate their legal doctrines. Hence abstruse, and in most respects obsolete, as the learning respecting it unquestionably is, it continues to deserve the attention of every person who wishes to obtain accurate notions of those branches of our laws, which are more immediately connected with the doctrines that respect the alienation of landed property. In the civil law warranty is defined, the obligation of the seller to put a stop to the eviction and other troubles which the buyer suffers, in the property purchased. Eviction is defined to be the loss which the buyer suffers, either of the whole thing that is sold, or of a part of it, by reason of the right which a third person has to it. The other troubles are those which, without touching the property of the thing sold, diminish the right of the purchaser; as if any one pretends a right to the usufruct of the lands sold, to a rent issuing out of them, to a service, or any other thing of the like nature. The buyer being thus evicted or troubled in his possession, has his recourse to the seller to warrant him. This warranty is either in law, being that security which every seller is bound to give for maintaining the buyer in the free possession and enjoyment of the thing sold, although the sale makes no mention of it; or in deed, being that kind of particular or conventional warranty, which the seller and buyer regulate among themselves. See Domat, l. 1. tit. 2. § 10. By the practice of the Roman law, the buyer might, immediately after the eviction or trouble, give notice of it to the seller, who then, if he thought proper, might make himself a party to the action, and defend it; but till the sentence was pronounced, the buyer could not bring his action of warranty against the seller: and the action was brought before the judge of the place in which the seller was domiciliated. But the practice is different in the courts of law in France. There, the buyer, when he gives notice of the action to the seller, may bring his action of warranty against him before the judge, before whom the original action is brought; and if he cannot defend the action, the judge condemns him to indemnify the seller, by the same sentence by which he pronounces in favour of the plaintiff in the original cause. See Pothier Traité des Contrats de Vente, partie 2. c. 1. sect. 2. art. 5. § 2. The first warrantor may call upon another to warranty; he in the same manner may call upon a third. But to prevent the delays which must unavoidably ensue from multiplying warranties, a fourth warrantor is not permitted to intervene, except in particular circumstances. The degrees also must be observed. Each person must vouch his own immediate warrantor, as it is not lawful for him to vouch any of the ulterior warrantors. After the warrantor has entered into the warranty, the warrantee may either proceed in his defence jointly with the warrantor, or leave the cause to him solely. The sentence binds them both equally. If the person against whom the action is brought be evicted or troubled in his possession by the sentence of the judge, he has a claim upon the warrantor for a complete indemnification. Sometimes the precise sum to be paid by way of indemnity is fixed and agreed to by the parties upon the making of the contract; but penal obligations of this nature are greatly discountenanced by the laws of France. It is always in the breast of the judge to moderate or encrease them; but they cannot be encreased either by the express contract of the parties, or the equity of the judge, to more than double of the property evicted. See Traité des Evictions et de la Garantie Formelle, par Mous. Berthelot, 2 vol. oct. Paris, 1781.—The warranty treated of by Littleton in this Chapter, is evidently of feudal extraction, being derived from the obligation which the lord was under, dendum: and againe, Minime (1. Rep. 1.) mutanda sunt quæ certam habuerunt interpretationem.

Here our authour beginneth this Chapter with an exact division of warranties. A warrantie is a covenant reall annexed to lands or tenements, whereby a man and his heires are bound to warrant the same; and either upon voucher, or by judgement in a writ of warrantia carta, to yeeld other lands and tenements (which in old bookes is called in excambio) to the value of those that shall bee evicted by a former title, or else may bee used by way of rebutter. (1)

Rebutter is a French word, and is in Latine repellere, to repell or barre; that is, in the understanding of the common law, the action of the heire by the warrantie of his ancestor; and this is called to rebut or repell. [c] Britton saith, Gar- ranter en un sence signifie a

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

rebutter. (1)

Bract. lib. 2. fol. 37. Lib. 5. fol. 380, 381, &c. Glanvill. lib. 3. cap. 1. 2. 3. Lib. 7. cap. 2. 3. Lib. 9. ca. 4. Britton ca. 105. fol. 249, 250, &c. & fol. 88. 106. b. 196, 197. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 15. Lib. 6. cap. 23. Min. cap. 2. §. 17.

38. E. 3. 21. 45. E. 3. 18.

(Ant. 303. b. 2. Roll. Abr. 775, 776. Cro. Jac. 4.)

[c] Britton fol. 197. b.

[d] Bract. lib. 5. fol. 380.

[e] Fleta lib. 5. cap. 15.

Lib. 4. fol. 81. Noke's case, (F. N. B. 134. h.)

Vid. Sect. 733.

(2. Roll. Abr. 738. Sid. 178.

Cro. Ja. 4. Ant. 101. b.

Pol. 384. a. 1. Roll. Rep. 316.

Cro. Jac. 386. 3. Bull. 95.

Poph. 143. Bridg. 128. Owen 60.

3. Mod. 261. S. C. Shower 68.)

Gloc. cap. 3.

Vid. Sect. 724, 725. & 727, &c.

(2. Inst. 293.)

Bracton lib. 4. fol. 321. b.

Fleta lib. 5. cap. 34. 7. E. 3.

Garr. 47.

(8. Rep. 52, 53.)

Secondly, that if the heire, for want of assents at that time descended, doth recover the lands of his mother by force of this act, and afterwards assents descend to the heire from the father, then the tenant shall recover against the heire the inheritance of the mother by a writ of false judgement, which shall issue out of the record, to resummon him that ought to warrant, as it hath beene done in other cases, where the heire being vouched commeth into the court, and pleadeth that he hath nothing by descent.

Thirdly, that the issue of the sonne shall recover by a writ of cofinage, aiel, and besaiel.

And lastly, that the heire of the wife, after the death of the father and mother, shall not bee barred of his action to demand the heritage of the mother by writ of entrie, which his father aliened in the time of his mother, whereof no fine was levied in the king's court.

Concerning the first, there be two points in law to be observed.

First, albeit the statute in this article name a writ of mordancester, and after writs of cofinage, aiel, and besaiel [e]; yet a writ of right, a formedon, a writ of entry ad communem legem, and all other like actions, are within the purview of this statute; for those actions are put but for examples.

Secondly, where it is said in the said act (if the tenant by the courtesie alien), yet this release with warrantie to a disseisor, &c. is within the purview of the statute, for that it is in equall mischief; and if that evasion might take place, the statute should have beene made in vaine.

If tenant by the courtesie be of a feignorie, and the tenancie escheate unto him, and after he alieneth with warrantie, this shall not binde the issue, unless assents descend; for it is in equall mischief. But notwithstanding this statute, if feme tenant in dower had aliened in fee with warranty and died, the warranty had bound the heire untill the statute [e] of 11. H. 7. since our author wrote: by which statute the heire may enter, notwithstanding such warrantie.

But note, there is a diversitie betweene a warranty on the part of the mother, and an estoppel; for an estoppel of the part of the mother shall not binde the heire, when hee claimeth from the father: as if lands bee given to the husband and wife, and to the heires of the husband, the husband make a gift in taile, and dieth, the wife recovereth in a cui in vita against the donee, supposing that she had fee simple, and make a feoffment and dyeth, the donee dyeth without issue, the issue of the husband and wife bring a formedon in the reverter against the feoffee; and notwithstanding that he was heire to the estoppel, and the mother was estopped, yet for that he claimed the land as heire to his father, hee was not estopped. Note, that warranties are favoured in law, being part of a man's assurance; but estoppels are odious.

If a feme heire of a disseisor infeoffeth me with warrantie, and marrieth with the disseisee, if after the disseisee bring a præcipe against me, I shall rebut him, in respect of the warrantie of his wife, and yet he demandeth the land in another's right. And so if the husband and wife demand the right of the wife, a warrantie of the collateral ancestor of the husband shall barre.

If a woman had beene tenant for life, the remainder or reversion to her next heire, and the woman had aliened in fee and died, this warrantie had barred her heire in remainder or reversion; but this is partly holpen by the said act of 11. H. 7. viz. where the woman hath any estate for life of the inheritance or purchase of her husband, or given to her by any of the ancestors of the husband, or by any other person seised to the use of her husband, or of any of his ancestors, there her alienation, release, or confirmation with warrantie, shall not binde the heire.

To the authorities quoted in the margent, which may serve as commentaries upon the said statute, I will only adde two cases. The one was, [f] A man seised of lands in fee levied a fine to the use of himselfe for life, and after to the use of his wife, and of the heires males of her body by him begotten for her jointure, and had issue male, and after he and his wife levied a fine, and suffered a common recovery, the husband and wife died, and the issue male entred by force of the said statute of 11. H. 7. And it was holden by the justices of assise, (the case coming downe to be tried by nisi prius), that the entry of the issue male was lawful: and yet this case is out of the letter of the statute; for she neither levied the fine, &c. being sole, or with any other after-taken husband, but is by herselfe with her husband that made the jointure. Sed qui barret in literâ barret in cortice; and this case being in the same mischief, is therefore within the remedy of the statute, by the intendment of the makers of the same, to avoid the disherison of heires who were provided for by the said jointure, and especially by the husband himselfe that made the jointure, which (as it was said) is a stronger case than the example set downe in the statute. The other was, [g] A man is seised of lands

(Ant. 54. b.)

[e] 11. E. 2. tit. Garr. 83.
4. E. 3. Garr. 63. 18. E. 3. 51.
Pl. Com. 110. 7. E. 3. 53.
Temps E. 1. Garr. 87.

27. E. 3. 8. 9. 14. E. 4. Gar. 5.
Dier quarto Mar. 148. a.

22. Aff. 9. & 37. Temps E. 1.
Gar. 86.

[e] 11. H. 7. cap. 20.
(Post 380. a. 381. a.)

18. E. 3. 9.

(Hob. 31. 8. Rep. 54. a.)

21. R. 2. Judgement. 263.
(2. Roll. Abr. 776. 8. Rep. 53. b.
Ant. 326. a. Doct. & Stud. 44. b.
1. Leo. 261.)

11. H. 7. cap. 20. Vid. Sect. 595.
See this statute of 11. H. 7. ca. 20.
well expounded, Lib. 1. fol. 176.
in Sir Anthony Mildmay's case,
3. & 4. Ph. & Mar. Dier 146.
Lib. 3. fol. 59, 60, 61, 62. Lin-colne Coll. case. Pl. Com. fol. 56.
20. Eliz. Dier 362. Doct. & Student 55. 8. Eliz. Dier 248.
19. Eliz. Dier 354. 21. Eliz.
ibid. 362. Lib. 3. fol. 50, 51.
for George Browne's case. Lib. 5.
fol. 79. Fitzh. case. 27. H. 8. 23.
[f] Mich. 13. Jac. inter Harley & West in ejectione firmæ in Communi Banco. Lincoln.
[g] Pasch. 17. Eliz.
(4. Rep. 10. Ant. 360. a. 115. a.
Post. 369. a. 381. a. Sid. 24.
Pl. 105. a. Dyer 64. b.
Jo. 31. Hob. 332. Cro. Eliz. 2.
2. Cro. 475. Ben. 40. 2. Inst. 681.
W. Jones 13. & 254. Palm. 21.
32. 216. Cro. Car. 244. pl. 464.)

under, by that system of polity, to defend his tenant's title to the land against all claimants. If the tenant was evicted, the lord was bound to make him a recompence, by giving him lands of equal value to those evicted from him. The doctrine and practice of warranty, in the early ages of the feudal law, is thus set forth in the book of the Fiefs, tit. 25. It is there stated, that a vassal held a fief from the lord, and being disturbed in his possession of it, called upon the lord to defend him. The lord refused to appear before the judge, by which the vassal lost his cause. The vassal thereupon demanded a recompence from the lord. The lord said in answer, that the vassal never held the fief, nor received the investiture of it from him. The vassal replied, that he held the fief from the lord, and had been invested with it by him; that he had called upon the lord to defend the possession on the trial, and that the lord did not then deny the lands being held of him. All this the vassal proved by proper witnesses. Upon this case it was held, that when a vassal is disturbed in the possession of his fief, if he calls on the lord to defend him, and it appears on the trial that the lord invested him with a fief that did not belong to him, the lord is bound either to give him another fief of equal value, or the price of it in money; and that he is bound to do this as soon as it clearly appears that the vassal will be evicted of the fief. But that if the lord denies that the fief is held of him, and that the vassal, or any of his ancestors, were invested with it by him, and the vassal proves those facts, either by an instrument, properly authenticated, or by the peers of the court, the lord must give him another fief; or may be put to his oath, that neither the vassal nor any of his ancestors held the fief from, or were invested with it by him, or any of his ancestors. If the lord does this, he is to be acquitted.—Sir Martin Wright seems to question whether the lord's obligation to protect or defend the feudatory, made him anciently liable upon eviction (without any fraud or defect in him) to compensate the loss of the fief. He observes, that it can hardly be imagined that while feuds were precarious, and held at the will of the lord, or indeed, that while they were generously given, without price or stipulated render, the lord should be subject to such a loss; especially since it is likely that the lord's obligation upon eviction rather prevailed upon the reason of contracted and improper feuds, than from the nature of a pure original feud. He observes, that none of the ancient feudists make any such distinction, but that all of them suppose the lord's obligation upon eviction to have been general; yet he asserts, they must be understood to speak of the times in which they wrote, when improper feuds chiefly prevailed. See Introd. to the Law of Tenures, p. 38, 39, 40.—Upon a principle similar to that upon which this distinction is grounded, it seems to have been formerly made a question by the writers on the feudal laws of the German and Italian states, whether investiture alone, without any express promise or undertaking on the part of the lord, entitled the tenant to claim an equivalent from the lord, in case of eviction. Rosenthal, a German feudist of great authority, has stated this question, and the authorities upon which the two opposite opinions respecting it are founded. He mentions it to be his own opinion, that investiture alone, without any promise, entitled the tenant to an equivalent; and he says, that the greatest part of those who maintain the opposite opinion, admit that the lord, though he has made no promise, is bound to give an equivalent, if the fief were originally granted for lands in the right of his wife, and they two levie a fine, and the conusee grant and rendereth the land to the husband and wife in speciall tayle, the remainder to the right heires of the wife, they have issue, the husband dyeth, the wife taketh another husband, and they two levie a fine in fee, and the issue entereth, this is directly within the letter of the statute, and yet it is out of the meaning; because the state of the land moved from the wife, so as it was the purchase of the husband in letter, and not in meaning. But where the woman is tenant for life, by the gift or conveyance of any other, her alienation with warrantie shall binde the heire at this day. So if a man bee tenant for life (otherwise than as tenant by the courtesie) and alien in fee with warrantie, and dieth, this shall at this day binde the heire, that hath the reversion or remainder by the common law not holpen by any statute. But all this is to be understood, unlesse the heire that hath the reversion or remainder doth avoid the estate so aliened in the life of the ancestour; for then the estate being avoided, the warrantie being annexed unto the estate, is avoided also; whereof more shall be said in this Chapter in his proper place. And therefore it is necessary for the heire in such cases to make an entry as soone as he hath notice or probable suspicion of such an alienation.

As to the second clause of the statute of Glocester, there are two points of law to be observed.

First, that by the expresse purview of the statute, if assets doe after descend from the father, then the tenant shall have recovery or restitution of the lands of the mother. But in a formden, if at the time of the warrantie pleaded no assets be descended, whereby the demandant recovereth, if after assets descend, there the tenant shall have a scire facias for the assets, and not for the land intailed. And the reason hereof is, that if in this case the tenant should be restored to the land intailed, then if the issue in taile aliened the assets, his issue should recover in a formden; and therefore the fages of the law, to prevent future occasions of suits, resolved the said diversitie in the cases abovesaid, upon consideration and construction of the statute of Glocester, and of the statute de donis conditionalibus.

Secondly, it is to be observed, that after assets descended, the recoverie shall bee by writ of judgement, which shall issue out of the rolle of the justices, &c. And here two things are to be declared and explained. First, by what writ, &c. and that is cleere, viz. by scire facias. But the second is more difficult; and that is, upon what manner of judgement the scire facias is to be grounded: for explanation whereof it is to be understood, that if the tenant will have benefit of the statute, he must plead the warrantie, and acknowledge the title of the demandant, and pray that the advantage of the statute may bee saved unto him, and then if after assets descend, the tenant upon this record shall have a scire facias; and if assets descend but for part, he shall have a scire facias for so much. But if the tenant plead the warrantie, and plead further that assets descended, &c. and the demandant taketh issue that assets descended not, &c. which issue is found for the demandant, whereupon he recovereth, the tenant, albeit assets doe after descend, shall never have a scire facias upon the said judgement; for that by his false plea he hath lost the benefit of the said statute.

Touching the third, sufficient hath beene spoken before. For the last, it is to be observed, that if the husband be seised of lands in the right of his wife, and maketh a feoffment in fee with warrantie, the wife dieth, and the husband dieth, this warrantie shall not binde the heire of the wife without assets, albeit the husband be not tenant by the curtesie. But of this you shall reade more hereafter.

In the meane time know this, that the learning of warranties is one of the most curious and cunning learnings of the law, and of great use and consequence. (1)

A demander ascuns terres ou tenements. A warrantie may not only be annexed to freeholds, or inheritances corporeall, which passe by livery, as houses and lands, but also to freeholds or inheritances incorporeall, which lye in grant, as advowsons; and to rents, commons, estovers, and the like, which issue out of lands or tenements. And not onely to inheritances in esse, but also to rents, commons, estovers, &c. newly created. As a man (some say) may grant a rent, &c. out of land for life, in tayle, or in fee with warrantie; for although there can be no title precedent to the rent, yet there may be a title precedent to the land, out of which it issueth before the grant of the rent, which rent may bee avoided by the recovery of the land; in which case the grantee may helpe himselfe by a warrantia carte, upon the especiall matter. And so a warrantie in law may extend to a rent, &c. newly created; and therefore if a rent newly created be granted in exchange for an acre of land, this exchange is good, and every exchange implyeth a warrantie in law. And so a rent newly created may be granted for oweltie of partition.

A man

(1) Upon the alterations made by the statute law in the doctrine of warranty, see note 1. 373. b.

services done; or otherwise, in the way of remuneration. See Rosentall Tractatus et Synopsis totius Juris feudalis, Coll. Allob. 1610. vol. 1. 469, 470.—In a more recent publication, expressly on the subject of gratuitous fiefs, it is held, that the lord is bound to defend the fief, and to give the tenant an equivalent, if it is evicted from him. The author states the objection made by sir Martin Wright; and in answer to it observes, that the feudal contract and connection between the lord and tenant is such, as distinguishes it from a voluntary donation, and necessarily includes this obligation upon the lord. See Petri Schultzei Dissertatio de Feudo Gratia in Jenichen Thesaurus Juris feudalis, Francofurti ad Menum, tom. 2. 556, 567, 568. It should seem that with us anciently, every kind of homage, when received, but not before, bound the lord to acquittal and warranty; that is, to keep the tenant free from distress, entry, or other molestation, for services due to the lords paramount, and to defend his title to the lands against all others; but that in subsequent times, the implied acquittal and warranty were peculiar to that species of homage which is known by the appellation of homage ancestrel. See ant. 67. b. note 1. 105. a. note 1. In another material quality, the warranty annexed to homage ancestrel differed from expresse warranty. In the case of expresse warranty, the heir was chargeable only for those lands which he had by descent from the ancestor who created the warranty. But in the case of homage ancestrel, the tenant was not driven to recover in value only those lands which the lord had from that ancestor who created the feignory; that would be impossible, as it was essential to homage ancestrel, that the feignory should have been created before time of memory. It being therefore impossible to ascertain which lands descended from the ancestor who made the grant, the law charged all the lands. See ant. 102. b. But defence and recompence were not the only benefits which the tenant derived from the lord's warranty; it rebutted or repelled the lord from claiming the land itself, or any profit or right from it, but those which under the feudal contract were due to him as lord, according to the fundamental maxim of the doctrine of fiefs, Homagium repellit perquisitum. Such appear to be the outlines of the system of warranty in the early ages of the feudal law. The practice of subinfeudation necessarily occasioned a considerable extension of it. That practice arose, in a great measure, from the attempts, which, in every kingdom where the feudal polity has prevailed, the higher tenants or vassals have made to render themselves independent of the crown. In France, towards the end of the Carolingian race of their monarchs, the dukes or governors of provinces, the counts or governors of towns, and even the subordinate officers of state, taking advantage of the weakness of the royal authority, made hereditary in their families the lands, titles, and offices, which till then they had enjoyed for life only. They usurped the sovereign propriety of the land, with civil and military authority over the inhabitants: they granted out the lands to their immediate tenants, and these granted them over to others. By this means, though they always professed to hold their fiefs from the crown, they were in fact absolutely independent of it. They exercised in their territories every royal prerogative; they promulgated laws; they had the power of life and death; they coined money; fixed the standard of weights and measures; granted safeguards; entertained a military force; and imposed taxes, with every

Com. Banco. Latton's case, which I myselfe heard and observed.
(2. Roll. Abr. 141. Moor. 93.)

Sect. 725.
(1. Rep. 66. Post. 367. b. 388. b.
10. Rep. 95.)

Pl. Com. Fulmerstone's case,
110. a. Lib. 8. fol. 53. Sym's case.

Lib. 8. fol. 53, 54. Sym's case.
Ibid. 134. Mary Shipley's case.
(Doct. Pla. 180. 2. Cro. 15.
Ant. 33. a. 326. a.)

8. E. 2. tit. Car. 81. 18. E. 3. 51.

Vide Sect. 725.

(2. Roll. Abr. 774.
Hob. 14. 28. 2. Saund. 183.)

2. H. 4. 13. 30. H. 8. Dier. 41.
Temps E. 1. Admesurement 16.
32. E. 1. Voucher. 294. 30. E. 1.
Exchange 16. 9. E. 4.
15. E. 4. 9. 29. Aff. 13.
(F. N. B. 134.
Ante 50. b. 101. b. 308 nota.
Post. 389. a.)

Vide Sect. 741. 45. E. 3.
 Voucher 72. 9. E. 3. 78.
 18. E. 3. 55. 30. E. 3. 30.
 21. H. 7. 9. 3. H. 7. 4.
 7. H. 4. 17. 10. E. 4. 9. b.
 21. E. 4. 26. 14. H. 8
 30. H. 8. Dier. 42.
 (2. Roll. Abr. 744.)

A man seised of a rent secke issuing out of the mannor of Dalt, taketh a wife, the husband releaseth to the terre-tenant, and warranteth tenementa prædicta, and dieth, the wife bringeth a writ of dower of the rent, the terre-tenant shall vouch, for that albeit the release enured by way of extinguishment, yet the warrantie extended to it; and by warranting of the land, all rents, &c. issuing out of the land, that are suspended or discharged at the time of the warrantie created, are warranted also.

Sect. 698.

(Doct. & Stud. 155. a. b.)

GARRANTY que commence per disseisin, &c. (1) It is called a warranty that commenceth by disseisin, because regularly the conveyance whereunto the warranty is annexed doth worke a disseisin.

In this Section Littleton putteth five examples of a warrantie commencing by disseisin, viz. of a feoffment made with warranty by tenant for yeares, by tenant at will, by tenant by elegit, by tenant by statute merchant, and by tenant by statute staple: all these and the other examples that Littleton putteth of this kinde of warranties in the succeeding Sections, have foure qualities.

First, that the disseisin is done immediatly to the heire that is to be bound; and yet if the father bee tenant for life, the remainder to the sonne in fee, the father by covine and consent maketh a lease for yeares, to the end that the lessee shall make a feoffment in fee, to whom the father shall release with warrantie, and all is executed accordingly, the father dyeth, this warrantie shall not binde, albeit the disseisin was not done immediatly to the sonne; for the feoffment of the lessee is a disseisin to the father, who is particeps criminis. So it is if one brother make a gift in taylor to another, and the uncle disseise the donee, and infeoffeth another with warrantie, the uncle dieth, and the warrantie descendeth upon the donor, and then the donee dyeth without

GARRANTY que commence per disseisin est en tiel forme: sicome lou il est pier et fits, et le fits purchase terre, &c. et lessa mesme la terre a son pier pur terme d'ans, et pier per son fait ent enseoffa un auter en fee, et oblige luy et ses heires a garrantie, et le pier devy, per que le garrantie descendist al fits, ceo garrantie ne barrera my le fits; car nient obstant cel garrantie le fits poit bien enter en la terre, ou aver un assise envers l'alienee s'il voit, pur ceo que le garrantie commence per disseisin; car quant le pier que n'avoit estate forsque pur terme des ans, fist un feoffement en fee, ceo fuit un disseisin al fits del franktenement que adonques fust en le fits. En mesme le maner est, si le fits lessa a le pier la terre a tener a volunt, et puis le pier fait un feoffment ove

WARRANTIE that commences by disseisin is in this manner: as where there is father and son, and the sonne purchaseth land, &c. and letteth the same land to his father for terme of yeares, and the father by his deed thereof infeoffeth another in fee, and bindes him and his heires to warrantie, and the father dies, whereby the warrantie descendeth to the son, this warrantie shall not barre the sonne; for notwithstanding this warrantie the sonne may well enter into the land, or have an assise against the alienee if he will, because the warrantie commenced by disseisin; for when the father which had but an estate for terme of yeares, made a feoffment in fee, this was a disseisin to the sonne of the freehold which then was in the sonne. In the same manner it is, if the sonne letteth to the father garrantie,

Lib. 5. fol. 79. b. Fitzherbert's case.
 (Cro. Car. 483. 2. Roll. Abr. 741.)

31. E. 3. tit. Garrantie. 28.
 (5. Rep. 50. a.)

(2. Roll. Abr. 772, 773.
 Ant. 32. a. 56. a. 171. a. 179. a.
 F. N. B. 149. c.)

(1) As to warranties commencing by disseisin:—Lord chief baron Gilbert divides warranties into two sorts; first, those commencing by disseisin or wrong; and secondly, binding warranties. The first are where the ancestor that makes the warranty is partner to the wrong; and such warranties are not obliging, because it cannot be presumed that one who is so unjust as to do wrong, will be so just as to leave a recompence to his heir; wherefore such contracts are wholly rejected as collusive, and founded on no consideration. In the Ancien Coutumier de Normandie, ch. 96, it is said, that in a writ of nouvelle disseisine there is no vouching to warranty; because it is not to be suffered that any one should retain the possession of another, either by himself, or by the means of another, or that he should disturb it by his foolish hardihood; and whoever does so, ought to restore it.

every other right supposed to be annexed to royalty. It was even admitted, that if the king refused the lord justice, the lord might make war against him. In the ordonnances of St. Lewis, ch. 50, is this remarkable passage: "If the lord says to his liege tenant, 'Come with me, I am going to make war against my sovereign, who has refused me the justice of his court: upon this the liege-man should answer in this manner to the lord: I would willingly go to the king to know the truth of what you say, that he has denied you his court. And then he shall go to the king, saying to him in this manner: Sir, the lord in whose liegeance and fealty I am, has told me that you have refused him the justice of your court; and upon this account I am come expressly to your majesty to know if it is so; for my lord has summoned me to go to war with you. And thereupon, if the king answers that he will do no judgment in his court, the man shall return immediately to his lord, and his lord must equip him, and fit him out at his own expence; and if he will not go with him, he shall lose his fief by right. But if the king answers that he will hear him, and do justice to the lord, the man shall return to him, and shall say: Sir, the king has said to me, that he will willingly do you justice in his court. Upon which, if the lord says, I never will enter into the king's court, come therefore with me, according to the summons I have sent you; then the man should say, I will not go with you; and he shall not lose his fief for his not going." This shews how powerful and absolute the great vassals were. The same motive which induced the vassals of the crown to attempt to make themselves independent of the crown, induced their tenants to make themselves independent of them. This introduced an ulterior state of vassalage. The king was still called the sovereign lord; his immediate vassal was called the lord suzerain; and the tenants holding of him were called the arrière vassals. Hugh Capet owed the crown of France to the extreme weakness to which this system of subinfeudation had reduced the crown of France; but after he had acquired the throne, he used his utmost efforts to restore it to its antient splendour and strength. His successors pursued the same plan with undeviating attention and consummate policy. It was completed by the union of the provinces of Lorraine and Bar to the crown of France in 1735. See Abregé Chronologique des Grands Fiefs de la Couronne de France, Paris 1759. But as to the common incidents of feudality, subinfeudation still prevails in France. In some parts of France, certain portions of the fief descend on the younger children: they are said to hold them of the eldest son by parage. The eldest son, however, represents the whole fee, and does homage for it; and is therefore bound to warranty

*garrantie, &c. Et si come est dit de pier, issint poit estre dit de cheescun auter auncester, &c. En mesme le maner est, si tenaunt per elegit, tenaunt per statute merchant, ou tenant per statute de le staple, fait feoffment en fee ovesque garrantie, * ceo ne barrera my l'heire que doit aver la terre, pur ceo que tiels garranties commencerent per disseisin.*

ther the land to hold at will, and after the father make a feoffment with warrantie, &c. And as it is said of the father, so it may be said of every other ancestor, &c. In the same manner is it, if tenant by elegit, tenant by statute merchant, or tenant by statute staple, make a feoffment in fee with warranty, this shall not bar the heire which ought to have the land, because such warranties commence by disseisin.

issue, albeit the disseisin was done to the donee and not to the donor, yet the warranty shall not binde him. The father, the sonne, and a third person are joyntenants in fee, the father maketh a feoffment in fee of the whole with warrantie, and dieth, the sonne dieth, the third person shall not only avoyd the feoffment for his owne part, but also for the part of the sonne; and he shall take advantage that the warranty commenced by disseisin, though the disseisin was done to another.

The second qualitie appearing in Littleton's examples is, that the warranty and disseisin are simul et semel, both at one and the same time. [y] And yet if a man commit a disseisin of intent to make a feoffment in fee with warranty, albeit he make the

(Cro. Car. 483.)

[y] 19. H. 8. 12. Lib. 5. fol. 79. b. Fitzh. case.

(Plowd. 51. a. 3. Rep. 78. Post. 369. a. 371. a. 9. Rep. 81. a. Ant. 314. b. 5. Rep. 78.)

feoffment many yeares after the disseisin, notwithstanding because the warranty was done to that intent and purpose, the law shall adjudge upon the whole matter, and by the intent couple the disseisin and the warranty together.

The third qualitie is, that the warranty that commenceth by disseisin by all these examples (if it should binde) should binde as a collaterall warranty, and therefore commencing by disseisin shall not binde at all.

Ne barrera my le heire, &c. For by the authoritie of our author himselfe, a lessee for yeares may make a feoffment, and by his feoffment a fee simple shall passe; so as albeit as to the lessor it worketh by disseisin, yet betweene the parties the warranty annexed to such estate standeth good; upon which the feoffee may vouch the feoffor or his heires, as by force of a lineall warranty. And therefore if a lessee for yeares, or tenant by elegit, &c. or a disseisor incontinent make a feoffment in fee with warranty, if the feoffee be impleaded, hee shall vouch the feoffor, and after him his heire also; because this is a covenant reall, which binde him and his heires to recompence in value, if they have assents by descent to recompence; for there is a feoffment de facto, and a feoffment de jure: [*] and a feoffment de facto made by them that have such interest or possession as is aforesaid, is good betweene the parties, and against all men but only against him that hath right. And therefore if the lord be gardeine of the land, or if the tenant maketh a lease to the lord for yeares, or if the lord be tenant by statute merchant or staple, or by elegit of the tenancie, and make a feoffment in fee, hee hereby doth extinguish his seignorie, although having regard to the lessor it is a disseisin.

(1. Leon. 304. 305. Cro. Car. 388) Vide Sect. 611. 699.

Bract fol. 216. 223. 224.

Fleta lib. 4. cap. 17. 1. 2. Britton, cap. Disseisin,

50. E. 3. 12. b. 8. H. 7. 5.

7. E. 3. 11. 14. E. 3. Feoffments en faits 67. 18. E. 3.

Issue 36. 4. E. 2. Briefe 790.

19. E. 2. Aff. 400. 43. E. 3. 7.

17. E. 3. 41. 43. E. 3. Diff. 5.

3. E. 4. 17. 12. E. 4. 12.

10. E. 4. 18. F. N. B. 201.

Lib. 3. fol. 78. in Fermor's case.

[*] Temps E. 1. Counteplea

de Voucher 126. 50. E. 3. ibidem 124. Vide W. 1. ca. 48.

in the second part of the institutes.

(10. Rep. 95. 2. Roll. Abr. 740.)

The fourth qualitie is a disseisin; but that is put for an example; and the rather, for that it is most usuall and frequent: but a warranty that commenceth by abatement or intrusion (that is, when the abatement or intrusion is made of intent to make a feoffment in fee with warranty), shall not binde the right heire, no more than a warranty that commenceth by disseisin, because all doe commence by wrong. And so it is if the tenant dieth without heire, and an ancestor of the lord enter before the entrie of the lord, and make a feoffment in fee with warranty, and dieth, this warranty shall not binde the lord, because it commenceth by wrong, being in nature of an abatement. Et sic de similibus. (1)

Sect. 699.

IT E M, si gardein en chivalrie, ou gardein en socage,

ALSO, if a gardeine in chivalrie, or gardeine in socage, make fait

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The editor, in note 1. to page 330. a. has (he fears too prolixly) attempted to explain the difference between actual disseisin and disseisin by election, and to prove that the disseisin produced by a feoffment, however slender or tortious the estate of the feoffor may be, is an actual disseisin. It is submitted to the reader, that what he has said on that subject is confirmed by what Littleton says in this Section, and lord Coke's commentary upon it. The discussion, in the note above referred to, of the operation of a feoffment, and the discussion in note 1. p. 271. of the operation of conveyances deriving their effect from the statute of uses, will, perhaps, assist the reader in forming accurate notions of the difference in the operations and effect of feoffments, fines, common recoveries, bargains and sales, releases and wills.

ranty the younger children, from the claims of the lord for his rents and services. Subinfeudation prevails also in Germany. But it must be attended with three circumstances. 1st, It must be a real subinfeudation, and not a sale, or other transaction, under the appearance or colour of a subinfeudation. 2d, The sub-vassal must be, if not of equal, at least of suitable rank and circumstances. 3d, The conditions, so far as the lord is interested in them, must be the same as those upon which the original investiture is granted. See Dissertatio de Subfeudis Imperii, Mich. Hen. Gribnerii in Jenichen Thes. Feud. t. 1. p. 882. Dissertatio Wenceslai Xaverii Neumann de Pucholtz, quid transeat in vassallum per concessionem feudi, vel subfeudi, ibid. t. 3. 512. Rosentall Tract. & Synopsis totius Juris Feud. tom. 1. 549.—In England, the practice of subinfeudation was totally inhibited by the statute made in the 18th year of Edward I. commonly called the statute quia emptoris terrarum. In the preamble to that statute it is recited, that, by the practice of subinfeudation, the chief lords had lost their escheats, marriages, and wardships: it was therefore enacted, that it might be lawful for every free man to alien all or any part of his lands, to be held not of himself, but of the superior lord by the same services and customs by which the tenant himself held them. This statute, though evidently passed in compliance with the desires of the greater lords, and designed by them to encrease their power and extend their influence, had a very contrary effect; and was probably one of the chief causes fait un feoffment en fee, ou en fee taile, ou pur terme de vie, ouefque garrantie, &c. tiels garranties ne sont pas barres a les heires as queux les terres serront descendus, pur ceo que ils commence per disseisin. a feoffment in fee, or in fee taile, or for life, with warrantie, &c. such warranties are not barres to the heyres to whom the lands shall bee descended, because they commence by disseisin.

16. E. 3. Gar. 20. 8. Aff. 2.
43. E. 3. 7. and the books abovesaid. Vide Sect. 698.
(3. Rep. 37.)

HERE Littleton addeth the case of gardeine in chivalrie, and gardeine in socage, and gardeine because nurture is also in the same case.

Sect. 700.

A AVER et tener a eux jointment, &c.

This is to bee intended of a joynt purchase in fee; for if the purchase were to the father and the sonne, and the heires of the sonne, and the father maketh a feoffment in fee with warrantie, if the sonne entreth in the life of the father, and the feoffee re-enter, the father dieth, the sonne shall have an assise of the whole: and so is the booke of 22. H. 6. to be understood. But if the sonne had not entred in the life of the father, then for the father's moitie it had bene a bar to the sonne, for that therein he had an estate for life; and therefore the warrantie as to that moitie had bene collateral to the sonne, and by disseisin for the sonne's moitie; and so a warrantie defeated in part, and stand good in part. And this appeareth by the example that Littleton hath put. But if the purchase had bee to the father and sonne, and to the heires of the father, then the entrie of the sonne in the life of the father, as to the avoydance of the warrantie, had not availed him, because his father lawfully conveyed away his moitie. (1)

If a man of full age and an infant make a feoffment in fee with warrantie, this warrantie is not void in part, and good in part; but it is good for the whole against the man of full age, and voyd against the infant: for albeit the feoffment of an infant passing by livery of seisin be voydable, yet his warrantie, which taketh effect only by deed, is merely voyd.

*ITEM, si le pier et le fits purchase certaine terres ou tenements, a aver et tener a eux jointment, &c. et puis le pier alien * l'entier a un autre, et oblige luy et ses heires a garrantie, &c. et puis le pier devie, cel garrantie ne barrera my le fits de le moitie que a luy affiert de les dits terres ou tenements, pur ceo que quaunt a cel moitie que affiert a le fits, le garrantie commence per disseisin, &c.*

ALSO, if father and sonne purchase certaine lands or tenements, to have and to hold to them joyntly, &c. and after the father alien the whole to another, and binde him and his heires to warrantie, &c. and after the father dieth, this warrantie shall not barre the sonne of the moitie that belongs to him of the said lands or tenements, because as to that moitie which belongs to the sonne, the warrantie commences by disseisin, &c.

13. Aff. 8. 13. E. 3.
Gar. 24. 25. 37. 22. H. 6. 51.
8. H. 7. 6.

(5. Rep. 79.)

(Post. 393. 2.)

(1. Rep. 66.)

(F. N. B. 192. 2.)

Temps E. 1. Vouch. 207.
39. E. 3. 26. Joan London's case. 14. H. 6.
(8. Rep. 42. Plowd. 66. b.
5. Rep. 119.)

Sect.

* l'entier—l'entier, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It is greatly to be regretted, that sir Edward Coke has not expressed himself more fully on the subject hinted at by him in this note, the defeating of the warranty by the heir's entry or claim in the ancestor's life-time. It is thus mentioned by lord chief-baron Gilbert, Ten. 135. The heir was presumed to receive a recompence, and therefore was barred if he did not claim during the life of his ancestor; and this was the more reasonable, because such recompences were anciently in lands, which did of right descend to the heir; and if the ancestor did alien them, the heir must claim his own during the life of his ancestor, otherwise he could never claim it, inasmuch as this was the whole time of limitation for the heir to challenge his own in this case; and if he slipped that time, he was barred for ever, inasmuch as there might be secret conveyances to alien the recompence for the benefit of the heir, which might turn to the prejudice of the purchaser.

causes which prevented their acquiring that independent and almost sovereign power, which was obtained during the feudal polity by the princes of Italy, Germany, and France. Hence, though the power and influence of the nobles of England were very great, and sometimes such as overshadowed royalty itself, yet they were inferior in every respect to that of the higher nobility of foreign countries. It is evident, that Nevil, the great earl of Warwick, and the nobles of the house of Percy (the greatest subjects ever known in this country) were, neither in strength, dignity, power, or influence, or in any other point of view, equal to the dukes of Brittany or Burgundy, or the counts of Flanders. Besides the general influence of the statute quia emptores terrarum, it had a particular influence both on the practice and the doctrine of warranty. The free alienation of property which it authorized, necessarily put an end to the homage ancestral, and consequently to the implied warranty annexed to it. To remedy this, if the lord aliened, the tenants, before they attorned to the new lord, required a new warranty from him; if the tenant aliened, it was with an express clause of warranty. This gave the new tenant the benefit of the lord's obligation to warranty the old tenant; as the new tenant might vouch the old tenant, and he in his turn might deraign the lord. This subject will be pursued, and an attempt will be made to investigate and explain the grounds of the distinction between lineal and collateral warranty, in note 1, 373. b.

Sect. 701.

ITEM, si A. de B. soit seise d'un mefe, et F. de G. que nul droit ad d'entrer en mesme le meafe, clamaunt mesme le meafe, a tener a luy et a ses heires, entra en mesme le meafe, mes le dit A. de B. adonque est continualment demurrant en mesme le meafe: en cest cas le possession de franktenement serra tout temps adjudge en A. de B. et nemy en F. de G. pur ceo que en tiel case lou deux sont en un meafe, ou auters tenements, et l'un clama per l'un title, et l'auter per l'auter title, la ley adjudgera celuy en possession que ad droit d'aver le possession de mesmes les tenements. Mes si en le case avantdit, le dit F. de G. fait un feoffment a certaine barrettors et extortioners en le pais, pur maintenance de eux aver de mesme le meafe, per un fait de feoffment ove garantie, per force de quel le dit A. de B.

ALSO, if A. of B. bee seised of a mefe, and F. of G. that no right hath to enter into the same mefe, claiming the sayd mefe, to hold to him and to his heires, entreth into the sayd mefe, but the same A. of B. is then continually abiding in the same meafe: in this case the possession of the freehold shall bee alwayes adjudged in A. of B. and not in F. of G. because in such case where two bee in one house, or other tenements, and the one claimeth by one title, and the other by another title, the law shal adjudge him in possession that hath right to have the possession of the same tenements. But if in the case aforelayd, the sayd F. of G. make a feoffment to certaine barrettors and extortioners in the countrie, to have maintenance from them of the sayd house, by a deed of feoffment with warrantie, by force whereof the said

L'OU deux sont en un mefe, &c. et l'un clama per l'un title, et l'auter per auter title, &c.

For the rule is, Duo non possunt in solido unam rem possidere.

These words of our author be significant and materiall: [b] for if a man hath issue two daughters, bastard eigne and mulier puisne, and die seised, and they both enter generally, the sole possession shall not bee adjudged only in the mulier, because they both claime by one and the same title; and not one by one title, and the other by another title, as our author here saith.

[i] If the tenaunt in an assise of an house desire the plaintiffe to dine with him in the house, which the plaintiffe doth accordingly, and so they bee both in the house; and in truth one pretendeth one title, and the other another title; yet the law in this case shall not adjudge the possession in him that right hath; because our author here saith, hee claimed not his right, and it should be to his prejudice if the law should adjudge him possession; and a trespasser hee cannot bee, because hee was invited by the tenant in the assise.

Barrettors. A barrettor is a common moover and exciter, or maintainer of suits, quarrels, or parts; either in courts or elsewhere in the countrey. In courts, as in courts of record, or not of record; as in the countie, hundred, or other inferiour courts. In the countrie in three manners: first, in disturbance of the peace: secondly, in taking or keeping of possessions of lands in controverfie, not only by force, but also by subtiltie

(Ant. 191. a. 244. a. 1. Roll. Abr. 661, 662, Plowd. 233. b.)

19. H. 6. fol. 28. b. per Newton.

(Siderf. 385. a. Ant. 180. b. 181. a.)

[b] 17. E. 3. 59. 11. Aff. p. 234 (Perk. 84. 8. Rep. 101. b. Hob. 120. Ant. 189. 244. 10. Rep. Lampet's Case.)

[i] Pl. Com. 91. the Parson of Honey Lane's case. (Ant. 245. b. Plowd. 93. a. b.)

See the Inditement of a common Barrettor. W. 1. cap 18 & 32. 40. E. 3. 33. Lib. 8. fol. 36. b. Case de Barrettrie. (3. Inst. 175. Siderf. 282. 2. Roll. Abr. 351.)

(1. Roll. Abr. 353.)

33. E. 1. Stat. de Conspiracie.
Lib. 8. ubi supra.
(3. Rep. 36.)

P. Com. fol. 64.
Lib. 10. fol. 101, 102.
Beaufage's Case.
(3. Inst. 149.)

[1] W. 1. c. 26, & c. W. 1. c. 10.
42. E. 3. 5. 27. Aff. 14.
Pl. Com. 68.
(2. Roll. Abr. 32.)

(P'owd. 465. Noy. 111.
2. Roll. Abr. 32.)
23. H. 6. c. 10. 33. H. 6. 22.
21. H. 7. 17. Stanf. 49.
3. E. 3. Cor. 372.

[7] Hil. 13. Jac. Reg.

Pl. Com. in Dine and Manningham's case. Mir. cap. 5. § 1.

7. E. 4. 21.

(3. Inst. 175. 2. Inst. 212.
Dyer, 555, 556. Sid. 212, 213.
Noy. 52.)

[8] 1. E. 3. cap. 14.
20. E. 3. cap. 4. 5.

[7] Mich. 7. Ja. in the Starre-Chamber.
(Doc. Plac. 240.)

33. E. 1. Stat. 2. in fine.
Regist. 183. 6. E. 3. 33.
22. H. 6. 7. 9. H. 7. 22.
(2. Roll. Abr. 114.)

tiltie and a deceit, and most commonly in suppression of truth and right: thirdly, by false inventions, and sowing of calumniation, rumors, and reports, whereby discord and disquiet may grow betweene neighbours.

Barretor is derived of this word (barret) which signifieth not only a wrangling suit, but also such brawles and quarrels in the countrey, as are aforesaid.

Extortioners. Extortion, in his proper sense, is a great misprison, by wresting or unlawfully taking by any officer, by colour of his office, any money or valuable thing of or from any man, either that is not due, or more than is due, or before it be due; quod non est debitum, vel quod est ultra debitum, vel ante tempus quod est debitum: for this is to be knowne, that it is provided by the [1] statute of W. 1. that no sheriffe, nor any other minister of the king, shall take any reward for doing of his office, but only that which the king alloweth him, upon paine that hee shall render double to the partie, and be punished at the king's pleasure. And this was the antient common law, and was punishable by fine and imprisonment; but the statute added the aforesaid penaltie. But some latter statutes having permitted them to take in some cases; by colour thereof, the king's officers and ministers, as sheriffes, coroners, escheators, feodaries, gaolers, and the like, doe offend in most cases; and seeing this act yet standeth in force, they cannot take any thing but where and so farre as latter statutes have allowed unto them. But yet such reasonable fees as have beene allowed by the courts of justice of antient time to inferiour ministers and attendants of courts for their labour and attendance, if it be asked and taken of the subject, is no extortion.

And all this was resolved [2] by the whole court of king's bench, betweene Shurley plaintiffe, and Packer deposite of one of the sheriffes of London, in an action upon the case in the king's bench.

See the statute of 21. H. 8. cap. 5. setting downe the fees of ordinaries, registers, and other officers, in certaine cases, and many other statutes; as for example, the statute of 19. H. 7. cap. 8. against taking of shewage (that is, taking of any thing for shewing of wares and merchandises that be truly customed to the king before) and the like.

Of this crime it is said, that it is no other than robbrie: and another saith, that it is more odious than robbrie; for robbrie is apparant, and hath the face of a crime; but extortion puts on the visage of vertue, for expedition of justice, and the like; and it is ever accompanied with the grievous sinne of perjurie.

But largely extortion is taken for any oppression by extort power, or by colour or pretence of right; and so Littleton taketh it in this place. Extortio is derived from the verbe extorqueo; and it is called crimen expilationis, or concussionis: and here barretors and extortioners are put but for examples; for if the feoffment be made to any other person or persons, the law is all one.

Pur maintenance de eux aver. Maintenance, manutentia, is derived of the verbe manutene, and signifieth in law, a taking in hand, bearing up or upholding of quarrels and sides, to the disturbance or hindrance of common right; Culpa est rei se immiscere ad se non pertinenti; and it is twofold, one in the countrey, and another in the court. For quarrels and sides in the court, [4] the statutes have inflicted grievous punishments. But this kinde of maintenance of quarrels and sides in the countrey, is punishable only at the suit of the king; [5] as it hath beene resolved. And this maintenance is called manutentia, or manutentio ruralis, for example, as to take possessions, or keepe possessions, whereof Littleton here speaketh, or the like.

The other is called curialis, because it is done pendente p'acito, in the courts of justice; and this was an offence at the common law, and is threefold.

First, to maintaine to have part of the land, or any thing out of the land, or part of the debt, or other thing in plea or suit; and this is called cambipartia, champertie.

The second is, when one maintaineth the one side, without having any part of the thing in plea

* Je en added L. and M. and Roh.† Ec. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) Whether an attorney's laying out money for his client be maintenance, see Pierfon v. Hughes, Freeman 71. 81.—By the ancient Roman law, there were few cases in which a person was admitted to plead by an attorney, according to the rule, Nemo alieno nomine lege agere potest. Recourse was therefore had to a fiction at law, by which it was supposed that the property of the thing in contest was made over to the attorney. The consequence was, that the proceedings were carried on in the name of the attorney, and even the sentence passed upon him. Hence he was called the dominus litis. See Bohmer de dominio litis, l. 12. Pothier Pandectarum Institutionum, lib. 3. tit. 3. § 2.

plea, or suit; and this maintenance is two-fold, generall maintenance, and speciall maintenance; whereof you shall reade at large in our bookes, which were too long here to be inserted.

The third is when [a] one laboureth the jury, if it be but to appeare, or if he instruct them, or put them in feare, or the like, he is a maintainer, and he is in law called an embracour, and an action of maintenance lyeth against him; and if he take money, a decies tantum may be brought against him. And whether the jury passe for his side or no, or whether the jurie give any verdict at all, yet shall he be punished as a maintainer or embracour either at the suit of the king or partie.

Here in this case that Littleton putteth, the feoffment is void by the statute [a] of 1. R. 2.; for thereby it is enacted, that feoffments made for maintenance shall be holden for none, and of no value, so as Littleton putteth his case at the common law; for he seemeth to allow the feoffment, where he saith, siel feoffment fuit le cause, &c.; but some have said that the feoffment is not void betwene the feoffor and feoffee, but to him that right hath.

Now, since Littleton wrote, there is a notable statute [b] made in suppression of the causes of unlawfull maintenance (which is the most dangerous enemy that justice hath), the effect of which statute is,

First, that no person shall bargain, buy, or sell, or obtaine any pretended rights or titles. (2. Roll. Abr. 113. 114. Hob. 115.)

Secondly, or take, promise, grant, or covenant to have any right or title of any person in or to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments; but if such person which so shall bargain, &c. their ancestors, or they by whom he or they claime the same, have beene in possession of the same, or of the reversion or remainder thereof, or taken the rents or profits thereof by the space of one whole yeare, &c. upon paine to forfeit the whole value of the lands, &c. and the buyer or taker, &c. knowing the same, to forfeit also the value. (1. Leon. 167. 208. Plowd. 89. a.)

Thirdly, provided that it shall be lawfull for any person, being in lawfull possession, by taking of the yearly farme, rents or profits, to obtaine and get the pretended right or title, &c. of any lands whereof he or they shall be in lawfull possession.

For the better understanding of which statute, you must observe, that title or right may be pretended two manner of wayes:

First, when it is meere in pretence or supposition, and nothing in verity.

Secondly, when it is a good right or title in verity, and made pretended by the act of the partie; and both these are within the said statute: for example, If A. be lawfull owner of land, and is in possession, B. that hath no right thereunto granteth to, or contracteth for the land with another, the grantor and the grantee (albeit the grant be meere void) are within the danger of the statute; for B. hath no right at all, but only in pretence. If A. be disseised in this case, A. hath a good lawfull right; yet if A. being out of possession, granteth to, or contracteth for the land with another, he hath now made his good right of entrie pretended within the statute, and both the grantor and grantee within the danger thereof. A fortiori of a right in action. Quod nota.

It is further to be knowne, that a right or title may be considered three manner of wayes.

First, as it is naked and without possession. Secondly, when the absolute right cometh by release or otherwise to a wrongfull possession; and no third person hath either jus proprietatis, or jus possessionis. The third, when he hath a good right, and a wrongfull possession. As to the first, somewhat hath beene said, and more shall be said hereafter. As to the second, taking the former example, if A. be disseised, and the disseisee release unto him, he may presently sell, grant, or contract for the land, and need not tarry a yeare; for it is a rule upon this statute, that whosoever hath the absolute ownership of any land, tenements, or hereditaments (as in this case the disseisor hath), there such owner may at his pleasure bargain, grant, or contract for the land, for no person can thereby be prejudiced or grieved. And so if a man mortgage his land, and after redeeme the same; or if a man recover land upon a former title, or be remitted to an ancient right, he may at any time bargain, grant, or contract for the land, for the reason aforesaid. As to the third, if in the case aforesaid the disseisor dieth seised, and A. the disseisee entreateth, and disseise the heire of the disseisor, albeit he hath an ancient right, yet seeing the possession is unlawfull, if he bargain or contract for the land before hee hath beene in possession by the space of a yeare, he is within the danger of the statute, because the heire of the disseisor hath right to the possession, and he is thereby grieved, et sic de similibus: and albeit he that hath a pretended right (and none in verity) getteth the possession wrongfully, yet the statute extendeth unto him, as well as where he is out of possession.

Note, the words of the statute be (any pretended right), therefore a lease for yeares is within the statute; for the statute saith not (the right), but (any right), and the offendour shall forfeit the whole value of the land. And where the statute speaketh of rights in the plural number, yet any one right is within the statute. [a] But yet if a man make a lease for yeares to another to the intent to trie the title in an ejectione firma, that is out of the statute,

9 C

because

30. Aff. 5. 19. E. 4. 3.
20. H. 6. 12. 34. H. 6. 2.
11. H. 6. 11. 8. H. 5. 8.
10. E. 4. 19. W. 1. ca. 25.
28. W. 2. cap. 49. Artic. super
Cart. cap. 11. F. N. B. 171, 172.
Mirror cap. 1. § 5.
(Mo. 6. Ant. 157. Hob. 294.)
[a] 12. H. 4. 16. b. F. N. B. 171.
11. H. 6. 10. 37. H. 6. 31.

[a] 1. R. 2. cap. 9.
Vid. 27. H. 2. fol. 23.

[b] 32. H. 8. cap. 9.
(Plowd. 79. a.)

(1. Cro. 232. 233.)

Pl. Com. fol. 80, &c. Partridge's case.

Pl. Com. Partridge's case ubi sup. 6. E. 6. Brooke tit. Maintenance 38.

(Cro. Car. 388. Plowd. 89. a.)

23. Eliz. Dier 374. Pl. Com.
Partridge's case, l. 87.

[a] Mich 30. & 31. Eliz. 28112 inter Finch. & Cockham in Com.
Banc.
(Mo. 266.)

(2. Roll. Abr. 114.)

[d] Lib. 4. fol. 26. Copikold cales.6. E. 6. tit. Maintenance Brooke 38.

(5. Rep. 60.)

[c] 34. H. 8. Dier 52.

because it is in a kinde of course of law; but if it be made to a great man, or any other to fway or countenance the cause, that is within this statute.

Also the statute speakes (of any right or title to any land, &c.) [b] A customary right, or a pretence thereof to lands holden by copie, is within this statute.

The said proviso (which is rather added for explanation, than of any necessitie) extendeth only to a pretended right or title, and to a good and cleare right; and therefore without question, any that hath a just and lawfull estate may obtaine any pretended right by release or otherwise; for that cannot be to the prejudice of any: nay, as hath beene said, a disseisor that hath a wrongfull estate may obtaine a release of the disseisee, and that is not within the body of the act, and consequently standeth not in need of any proviso to protect him.

And therefore [c] if there be tenant for life, the remainder in fee by lawfull and just title, he in the remainder may obtaine and get the pretended right or title of any stranger, not only for that the particular estate and the remainder are all one, but for that it is a meane to extinguish the seeds of troubles and suits, and cannot be to the prejudice of any, as hath beene said. And where the statute saith, (being in lawfull possession by taking the yearly rent, &c.) those words are but explanatory, and put for example; for howsoever he be lawfully seised in possession, reversion, or remainder, it sufficeth though he never tooke profit. But the matter observable upon this proviso, which is worthy of observation, is, that if a disseisor make a lease for life, lives, or yeares, the remainder for life, in taylor, or in fee, he in remainder cannot take a promise or covenant, that when the disseisee hath entred upon the land, or recovered the same, that then he should convey the land to any of them in remainder, thereby to avoid the particular estate, or the interest or estate of any other; for the words of the proviso be (buy, obtaine, get, or have by any reasonable way or meane) and that is not by promise or covenant to convey the land after entry or recovery; for that is neither lawfull, being against the expresse purview of the body of the act, and not reasonable, because it is to the prejudice of a third person. But the reasonable way or meane intended by the statute, is by release or confirmation, or such conveyances as amount to as much: and this agreeth with the letter of the law, viz. the pretended right or title of any other person; and rights and titles are by release or confirmation, as by reasonable wayes and meanes lawfully transferred and extinct: and the words of promise or covenant, &c. which are prohibited by the body of the act, are omitted in the proviso.

(2. Rep. 31. Ant. 43. b.)

Relinquit le possession, &c. This must be understood, that before livery of seisin upon the feoffment, A. de B. departed out of the house; for otherwise the livery and seisin should be void, because A. de B. was in possession. And Littleton here saith, per un fait de feoffment, so as albeit the deed were made before the departure it is not materiall; but the departure must be before the livery of seisin, for that doth worke the disseisin. And yet that which Littleton saith is true, that the feoffment was the cause that he relinquished his possession; for otherwise he would not have done it.

But admit that A. de B. had departed for any other cause, yet if F. de G. enter and en-feoffe certaine barretors or extortioners, or any other with warrantie, this is a warrantie that commenceth by disseisin, for that the feoffment worketh a disseisin.

Sect. 702.

See before in the Chapter of Releases.
(5. Rep. 79.)

46. E. 3. 6.

THIS doth explaine that which hath beene said before. And albeit Littleton useth the words (and incontinently thereof make a feoffment); and that in this case of Littleton the disseisin and feoffment were made (quasi uno tempore);
yet if the disseisin were made to the intent to make a feoffment with warrant-tie, albeit the feoffment be long after, this (as hath beene said) is a warrantie

ITEM, si home que
nul droit ad d'entrer en auters tenements, entra en mesmes les tenements, et incontinent ent fait un
feoffment as auters per son fait ove gar-rantie, et deliver a eux
seisin, cel garrantie
commence per dissei-

A L S O, if a man which hath no right to enter into other tenements, enter into the same tenements, and incontinently make a feoffment therof to others by his deed with warranty, and deliver to them seisin, this warranty commence by seisin,

fin, pur ceo que le disseisin et le feoffement furent faits quasi uno tempore. Et que ceo est ley, poiez veier en un plee *M. 11. Ed. 3. en un brieve de forme-don en le reverter.

by disseisin, because the disseisin and feoffment were made as it were at one time. And that this is law, you may see in a plee M. 11. E. 3. in a writ of formedon in the reverter.

that commenceth by disseisin.

Mich. 11. E. 3.

This is mistaken, and should be [d] 31. E. 3. and so is the original, which case you shall see in Master Fitzherbert's Abridgement, for there is no booke at large of that year. Hereby you may perceive that learned men looke not only to the cases reported, but unto records, as you may see Littleton did; for Fitzherbert put this case in print long after, as elsewhere hath beene shewed.

[d] 31. E. 3. tit. Garr. 28.

Sect. 703.

GARRANTY lineal est, lou home seisse de terres en fee, † fait feoffement per son fait a un autre, et oblige luy et ses heires a garranty, et ad issue et morust, et le garrantie descendist a son issue, ceo est lineal garranty. Et la cause pur ceo que ‡ est dit lineal garrantie, n'est pur ceo que le garrantie descendist de le pier a son heire; mes la cause est, pur ceo que si nul tiel fait ove garranty fuisse fait per le pier, donque le droit de les tenements descenderoit al heire, et l'heire conveyeroit le discent de son pier, &c.

WARRANTY lineal is, where a man seised of lands in fee, maketh a feoffment by his deed to another, and bindes himselfe and his heires to warrantie, and hath issue and die, and the warranty descend to his issue, that is a lineal warranty. And the cause why this is called lineal warrantie, is not because the warrantie descendeth from the father to his heire; but the cause is, for that if no such deed with warranty had beene made by the father, then the right of the tenements should descend to the heire, and the heire should convey the discent from his father, &c.

GARRANTY lineal, (1. Rep. 1.)

&c. A warrantie lineal is a covenant reall annexed to the land by him which either was owner, or might have inherited the land, and from whom his heire lineal or collateral might by possibilitie have claimed the land as heire from him that made the warranty; whereof Littleton himselfe putteth divers cases, which shall be explained in their proper places. And in this case put in this Section, Littleton (once for all) sheweth, that the reason of the example here put, is because if no such alienation with warranty (for so is Littleton to be intended) had beene made, the very lands had descended to the heire, so as the case being put of lands in fee simple, the alienation without the warranty had barred the heire. And note, that it is called a lineal warrantie (1), not because it must descend upon the lineal heire; for be the heire lineal or collateral, if by possibility he might claime the land from him that made the warrantie, it is lineal; having regard to the war-

(Post. 371. a. 375. a.)

(3. Rep. 59.)
35. E. 3. Garr. 73.

tie, and title of the land. And also it is called lineal, in respect that the warranty made by him that had no right or possibility of right to the land, is called collateral, in regard that it is collateral to the title of the land. And it is also to be observed, that in all the cases that Littleton hath put, or shall put, the lineal or collateral warranty doth binde the heire; and therefore the successor claiming in another right, shall not be bound by the warrantie of any naturall ancestor. For which cause [c] in a juris utrum brought by a parson of a church, the collateral warrantie of his ancestor is no barre, for that he demandeth the land in the right of his church in his politike capacite, and the warrantie descendeth on him in his naturall capacite. [d] But some have holden, that if a parson bring an assise, that a collateral warranty of his ancestor shall binde him; and their reason is, for that

[c] 27. H. 6. Garr. 48.

[d] 34. E. 3. Garr. 71.

* M. 11.—anno xxxi. L. and M. and Roh.
|| son—L. and M. and Roh.

† et added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ ceo added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) As to the distinction between lineal and collateral warranty:—By the definitions given in this place of lineal warranty, it appears to be distinguished from collateral warranty chiefly by this circumstance, that he on whom it descends might possibly have claimed the land as heir to him that made the warranty, and whether he claims as heir lineal or as heir collateral, the warranty is equally lineal. But he must claim as heir; for if an estate is limited to the sons of any person successively in tail, and the eldest son aliens with warranty, and dies without issue, the second son is heir at law to the eldest son: he does not however claim as heir, but as purchaser, and therefore the warranty is collateral to him. So if an estate is limited to the father for life, and after his decease to his sons successively in tail, and the father aliens with warranty and dies, the warranty descends on his eldest son and heir; but as he claims as purchaser, not as heir, the warranty is collateral to him. But though he must claim as heir, it is not necessary he should make his title immediately as heir to him, (see Sect. 706.) neither is it necessary he should derive from him alone. See Sect. 714.—An attempt will be made, note 2, page 372, b. to explain the real distinction between lineal and collateral warranty.

Lib. 3. Cap. 13. Of Warrantie. Sect. 704, 705.

that the assise is brought of his possession and seisin, and he shall recover the meane profits to his owne use: but seeing he is seised of the freehold, whereof the assise is brought in jure ecclesie, which is in another right than the warrantie, it seemeth that it should not be any barre in the assise. The like law is of a bishop, archdeacon, deane, master of an hospitall, and the like, of their sole possessions, and of the prebend, vicar, and the like.

[2] 45. Aff. 6. 6. B. 3. 56.
Pl. Com. 234. & 553, 554.
18. Rep. 1. Ant. 19. b.)

Vide 27. H. 6. Carr. 48.
34. E. 3. Carr. 71.

Vide Sect. 711. 712.
(Hob. 339. 9. Rep. 132. b.
Vaug. 379.)

Et oblige luy et ses beires. * King H. 3. gave a mannor to Edmund earle of Cornwall, and to the heires of his body, saving the possibilitie of reverter, and died: the earle, before the statute of W. 2. cap. 1. de donis conditionalibus, by deed gave the said mannor to another in fee with warrantie in exchange for another mannor, and after the said statute in the 28. yeare of E. 1. dieth without issue, leaving assets in fee simple; which warrantie and assets descended upon king E. 1. as cosin germaine and heire of the said earle, viz. son and heire of king Henry the third, brother of Richard earle of Cornwall, father of the said earle Edmund. And it was adjudged, that the king, as heire to the said earle Edmund, was by the said warrantie and assets barred of the possibilitie of reverter, which he had expectant upon the said gift, albeit the warrantie and assets descended upon the naturall body of king E. 1. as heire to a subject; and king E. 1. claimed the said mannor, as in his reverter in jure corone in the capacity of his body politike, in which right he was seised before the gift. In this case, how by the death of the said earle Edmund without issue, the king's title by reverter, and the warrantie and assets came together, and that the warrantie was collaterall, yet the king shall not be barred without assets, as a subject shall be; and many other things are to be observed in this case, which the learned reader will observe. (1)

Sect. 704, 705.

(8. Rep. 64.)

*CAR si soit pier et fits, et le fits purchase * terres en fee, et le pier de ceo disseisist son fits, et † aliena a un auter en fee per son fait, et per mesme le fait oblige luy et ses beires a garranter mesmes les tenements, &c. et le pier morust; ore est le fits barre d'aver les dits tenements; car il ne poit per ascun suit, ne per auter meane de la ley, aver mesmes les terres per cause del dit garrantie. Et ceo est un collateral garranty; et uncore le garranty descendist lyncalment de le pier a le fits.* FOR if there be father and sonne, and the sonne purchase lands in fee, and the father of this disseiseth his sonne, and alieneth to another in fee by his deed, and by the same deed binde him and his heires to warrant the same tenements, &c. and the father dieth; now is the son barred to have the said tenements; for he cannot by any suit, nor by other meane of law, have the same lands by cause of the said warrantie. And this is a collateral warrantie; and yet the warrantie descendeth lineally from the father to the sonne.

Sect. 705.

MES pur ceo que si nul tiel fait ove garrantie ust estre fait, le fits en nul maner puissoit conveyer le tittle que il ad a les tenements de son pier a luy, entant que son pier n'avoit ascun BUT because if no such deed with warrantie had beene made, the sonne in no manner could convey the title which hee hath to the tenements from his father unto him, inasmuch as his father estate

* terres—tenements, L. and M. and Roh.

† ceo added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The king was in this case barred of the possibility of reverter descending to him in jure corone, by warranty and assets from a subject descending on his body natural; for in all likelihood those lands will descend to the same person to whom the crown will descend, and consequently will be a good recompence for the loss of the crown lands; but in the case of the parson, his successor can have no benefit of what the predecessor has in his natural capacity. Hawk. Abr. 474.

estate en droit en les tenements ; ther had no estate in right in the pur ceo tiel garrantie est appel lands ; wherefore such warrantie collateral garrantie, entant que is called collateral warrantie, in celuy que fist le garrantie est col- asmuch as he that maketh the war- lateral a le title de les tenements : rantie is collateral to the title of et ceo est a tant a dire, que cestuy the tenements : and this is asmuch a que le garrantie descendist, ne to say, as hee to whom the warran- pouvoit a luy conveyer le title que tie descendeth, could not convey il ad de les tenements per my to him the title which hee hath in cestuy que fist le garrantie, en the tenements by him that made cas que nul tiel garrantie fuit the warrantie, in case that no such fait. warrantie were made.

HERE Littleton putteth an example, proving that it is not called lineall, because it descendeth lineally from the father to the son ; for in this case the warrantie descendeth lineally, and yet is a collateral warrantie. In this example you must intend that the disseisin was not of intent to alien with warrantie to barre the sonne ; but here the disseisin being done to the sonne, without any such intent, the alienation afterwards with warrantie doth barre the sonne ; because that albeit the warrantie doth lineally descend, yet seeing the title is collateral, that is, that the sonne claimeth not the land as heire to his father, therefore in respect of the title it is a collateral warrantie. And thus doth Littleton agree [e] with the authoritie of our bookes. So as the diversities do stand thus. First, where the disseisin and feoffment are uno tempore, and where at severall times. Secondly, where the disseisin is with intent to alien with warrantie, and where the disseisin is made without such intent, and the alienation with warrantie afterwards made.

5. E. 3. 14. 46. E. 3. 6.
19. H. 8. 12. 8. R. 2. Gar. 100.
Vid. Sect. 716.

[e] 46. E. 3. 6. 5. E. 3. 14.
19. H. 8. 12.

Sect. 706.

ITEM, si soit aiel, pier, et fits, et le aiel soit disseisne, en que possession le pier releas per son fait ove garrantie, &c. et mourust, et puis l'ail mourust ; ore le fits est barre d'aver les tenements per le garrantie del pier. Et ceo est appel lineal garrantie, pur ceo que si nul tiel garrantie fuit, le fits ne pouvoit conveyer le droit de les tenements a luy, ne monstre coment il est heire al aiel for-

ALSO, if there bee grandfather, father, and son, and the grandfather is disseised, in whose possession the father releaseth by his deed with warrantie, &c. and dieth, and after the grandfather dieth ; now the son is barred to have the tenements by the warranty of the father. And this is called a lineal warrantie, because if no such warrantie were, the son could not convey the right of the tenements to him, nor

HERE Littleton putteth an example where the son must claime the land as heire to his grandfather ; and yet because hee cannot make himselfe heire to his grandfather but by his father, it is lineall.

And it is to bee observed, that the warrantie in this case descended upon the son, before the discent of the right, which happened by the death of the grandfather, in whom the right was. Vide Littleton Cap. de Releases, and after in this Chapter, Sect. 707. and 741.

Pier release per son fait ove garrantie.

[f] It is to be knownen, that upon everie conveyance of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, as upon fines, feoffments, gifts, &c. releases and confirmations made to the tenant

1. H. 4. 33. 35. E. 3. Gar. 73.

(3. Rep. 59. Ant. 265. a. Post. 386.)

[f] 14. E. 3. Voucher 108.
16. E. 3. ibid. 87.
18. E. 3. ibid. 6. 10. E. 3. 52.
21. E. 3. 27. 11. H. 4. 22.
44. E. 3. Cont. de Vouch. 22.
12. H. 7. 1.
Vide Sect. 733. 738. 745.

(Post. 385. a.)

tenant of the land, a warrantie may bee made, albeit hee that makes the release or confirmation, hath no right to the land, &c.; but some doe hold, that by release or confirmation, where there is no estate created, or transmutation of possession, a warrantie cannot be made to the assignee.

que per meane del shew how hee is heire to the grandfather but by means of the father.

Sect. 707.

*ITEM, si home ad issue deux fits et est disseise, et l'eigne fits releffa al disseisor per son fait ove garranty, &c. et morust sans issue, et apres ceo le pier morust, ceo est un lineall garranty al puisne fits, pur ceo que coment que l'eigne fits morust en la vie le pier, uncore pur ceo que per possibilitie il puissoit estre, que il puissoit conveyer a luy le title del terre per son eigne frere, si nul tiel garranty fuisset. Car il puissoit estre, que apres la mort le pier l'eigne frere entroit en les tenements et morust sans issue, et donque le puisne fits conveyera a luy le title per l'eigne * fits. Mes en tiel cas, si le puisne fits releffe ove garranty a le disseisor, et morust sans issue, ceo est un collateral garranty al eigne † fits, pur ceo que de tiel terre que fuit al pier, l'eigne per nul possibilitie poit conveyer a luy le title per meane de le puisne ‡ fits.*

ALSO, if a man hath issue two sonnes and is disseised, and the eldest sonne release to the disseisor by his deed with warrantie, &c. and dies without issue, and afterwards the father dieth, this is a lineall warrantie to the younger sonne, because albeit the eldest sonne died in the life of the father, yet by possibilitie it might have beene, that hee might convey to him the title of the land by his elder brother, if no such warrantie had beene. For it might bee, that after the death of the father the elder brother entred into the tenements and died without issue, and then the yonger sonne shall convey to him the title by the elder son. But in this case, if the younger sonne releaseth with warrantie to the disseisor, and dieth without issue, this is a collateral warrantie to the elder son, because that of such land as was the father's, the elder by no possibilitie can convey to him the title by meanes of the younger son.

35. E. 3. Gar. 73. 11. II. 4. 31.
(1. Rep. 66.)

HERE Littleton putteth an example, where the heire that is to be barred by the warrantie, is not to make his descent by him that made the warrantie, as in the case before; and yet because by possibilitie he might have claimed by the eldest sonne, if he had survived the father, and died without issue, and so the younger brother might by possibilitie have beene heire to him, the warrantie is lineall.

And here it is to be noted, that the warrantie of the eldest sonne descended before the right descended; whereof more shall be said hereafter, Sect. 741.; and the opinion of Littleton in this case is holden for law, against the opinions in 35. E. 3. Gar. 73.

9. E. 3. 16. 38. E. 3. 21.
46. E. 3. 26. 8. R. 2. Gar. 101.
(2. Roll. Abr. 773.)

Mes en tiel case le puisne fits releffe ove garranty, &c. This warrantie in this case is collateral to the eldest sonne, and to the issues of his bodie; but if the eldest sonne dieth without issue of his bodie, then the warrantie is lineall to the issues of the bodie of the youngest; and so the warrantie that was collateral to some person, may become lineall to others.

Sect.

* fits not in L. and M. nor Rob.

† fits not in L. and M. nor Rob.

‡ fits not in L. and M. nor Rob.

Sect. 708.

ITEM, si tenant en le taile ad issue trois firs, et discontinue le taile en fee, et le mulnes firs releffa per son fait al discontinuee, et oblige luy et ses beires a garrantie, &c. et puis le tenant en le taile morust, et le mulnes firs morust sans issue, ore l'eigne firs est barre d'averascun recoverie per brieſe de formedon, pur ceo que le garrantie del mulnes frere est collateral a luy, entant que il ne poit per nul manner conveyer a luy per force del taile ascun discent per le mulnes, et pur ceo c'est un collateral garrantie. Mes en cest cas si l'eigne firs devie sans issue, ore le puisne frere poit bien aver un brieſe de formedon en le discenter, et recouvrera mesme le terre, pur ceo que le garrantie del mulnes est lineal al firs puisne, pur ceo que il puissoit estre que per possibilitie le mulnes puissoit estre seise per force del taile apres la mort son eigne frere, et

ALSO, if tenaunt in taile hath issue three sonnes, and discontinue the taile in fee, and the middle son release by his deed to the discontinuee, and binde him and his heires to warrantie, &c. and after the tenant in taile dieth, and the middle son dieth without issue, now the eldest sonne is barred to have any recoverie by writ of formedon, because the warrantie of the middle brother is collateral to him, inasmuch as hee can by no meanes convey to him by force of the taile any discent by the middle, and therefore this is a collateral warrantie. But in this case if the eldest sonne die without issue, now the youngest brother may well have a writ of formedon in the discenter; and shall recover the same land, because the warrantie of the middle is lineal to the youngest son, for that it might bee that by possibilitie the middle might bee seised by force of the taile after the death of his eldest

HEREBY it also appeareth, that a warrantie that is collateral in respect of some persons, may afterwards become lineal in respect of others. Whereupon it followeth, * that a collateral warrantie doth not give a right, but bindeth only a right so long as the same continueth: but if the collateral warrantie be determined, removed, or defeated, the right is revived. [f] And yet in an assise the plaintiff hath made his title by a collateral warrantie.

Barre is a word common aswell to the English as to the French, of which commeth the nowne, a bar, barra. It signifieth legally a destruction for ever, or taking away for a time of the action of him that right hath. And barra is an Italian word, and signifieth barre, as we use it; and it is called a plea in barre, when such a barre is pleaded. Here Littleton putteth an example of a barre of an estate taile by a collateral warranty. It is to be observed, that in some cases an estate taile may be barred by some acts of parliament made since Littleton wrote; and in some cases an estate taile cannot be barred, which might when Littleton wrote have been barred. For example, if tenant in taile levie a fine with proclamations according to the statute, this is a barre to the estate taile, but not to him in reversion or remainder, if hee maketh his claim, or pursue his action within five yeares after the state taile spent.

[b] If a gift be made to the eldest sonne, and to the heires of his bodie, the remainder to the father and to the heires of his bodie, the father dieth, the eldest sonne levie a fine with proclamations, and dieth without issue; this shall barre

(Dr. and Stud. 153. b.)

8. R. 2. Garr. 101.

[*] 43. Aff. 44. 24. H. 3. tit. Taile Br. 7. H. 5. 6. tit. Aff. 359. 34. E. 3. Droit. 29. 19. H. 6. 59. 21. H. 7. 40. 5. H. 7. 29. 3. H. 7. 9. b.

[f] 16. Aff. p. 16. 27. Aff. 74. 29. Aff. 50. 43. Aff. 8. 14. H. 4. 13. 19. H. 6. 60.

(Doc. Plac. 54.)

(Dr. and Stud. 56. a.)

4. H. 7. c. 24. & 31. H. 8. c. 36.

(10. Rep. 43.)

[b] Dalison a. El. & 7. El. Vide lib. 3. fol. 84. le case de Fines.

(3. Leon. 19.)

(Ant. 120. b. 9. Rep. 104.
Plowd. 374. a. 375. a.
Cro. Eliz. 898. Noy 46.
Dyer, 3. b. 133. a.)

[1] 26. H. 8. cap. 13.
33. H. 8. cap. 20. 5. E. 6. c. 11.
Stant. Pl. Coron. 18.

[c] 12. E. 4. 19. Taltarum's case.
[d] Vide devant Sect. 620.
Vid. Lib. 3. fol. 5. Cuppledick's case, & fol. 94. 97. 106.
Lib. 1. fol. 62. Capet's case.
Lib. 2. fol. 16. 52. 74. 77.
Lib. 6. fol. 41. 42.
Lib. 10. fol. 37. Marie Porting-
ton's case.
(Ante 335. a.)
[e] 38. H. 8. tale Br. 41.
Pl. Com. fol. 553. 29. H. 8.
Dier 52.
[f] 34. H. 8. cap. 20.

[g] Trin. 23. Eliz. inter Dively & Alston resolved in the Court of Wards.
Lib. 2. fol. 15. & 16. in Wise-man's case.

Lib. 8. fol. 77. 78. the Lord
Stafford's case.
(2. Roll. 394.)

Lib. 2. fol. 15. 16. Wiseman's case. Lib. 2. fol. 52. Cholmley's case.

(Mo. 115. 195. 2. Rep. 15. b.
1. Cro. 430.)

Lib. 2. fol. 16. Wiseman's case.

the second sonne, for the remainder descended to the eldest.

If tenant in taile be dis-seised, or have a right of action, and the tenant of the land levie a fine with proclamations, and five yeares passe, the right of the estate taile is barred.

[4] If tenant in taile in possession, or that hath a right of entrie, bee attainted of high-treason, the estate taile is barred, and the land is forfeited to the king; and none of these were barred when Littleton wrote. A lineall warrantie and affets was a barre to the estate taile when Littleton wrote; whereof more shall be said hereafter.

[c] A common recoverie with a voucher over, and a judgement to recover in value, was a barre of the estate taile when Littleton wrote. [d] And of common recoveries there bee two sorts, viz. one with a single voucher, and another with a double voucher, and that is more common and more safe: there may be more vouchers over.

[e] If the king had made a gift in taile, and the donee had suffered a common recoverie, this should have barred the estate taile in Littleton's time, but not the reversion or remainder in the king. And so if such a donee had levied a fine with proclamations after the statute of 4. H. 7. this had barred the estate taile, although the reversion was in the king. (1) [f] But since Littleton wrote, a common recoverie had against tenant in taile of the king's gift, or such a fine levied by him, the reversion continuing in the crowne, is no barre to the estate taile by the statute of 34. H. 8. (2) And where the words of the statute be (whereof the reversion or remainder at the time of such recoverie had, shall be in the king) these ten things are to be observed upon the construction of that act. (3)

First, that the estate taile must bee created by a king, and not by any subject, albeit the king be his heire to the reversion; for the preamble speakes of gifts made to subjects, and none can have subjects but the king. And also in the preamble it is said (for service done to the kings of the realme) and the body of the act referreth to the preamble. [g] And therefore if the duke of Lancaster had made a gift in taile, and the reversion descended to the king, yet was not that estate taile restrained by that statute; and so of the like.

Secondly, if the king grant over the reversion, then a recoverie suffered will barre the fe taile, because the king had no reversion at the time of the recoverie.

Thirdly, if the king make a gift in taile, the remainder in taile, or grant the reversion in taile, keeping the reversion in the crowne, a recoverie against tenant in taile in possession shall neither barre the estate taile in possession by the expresse purview of the statute, nor by consequence the state in remainder or reversion; for that the reversion or remainder cannot be barred, but where the estate taile in possession is barred.

Fourthly, if a subject make a gift in taile, the remainder to the king in fee, albeit the words of the statute be, (whereof the reversion or remainder of the same, &c.) yet seeing the estate in taile was not created by a king, as hath beene said, the estate taile may bee barred by a common recoverie.

Fifthly, if Prince Henrie, sonne of Henrie the Seventh, had made a gift in taile, the remainder to Henrie the Seventh in fee, which remainder by the death of Henrie the Seventh had descended to Henrie the Eighth, so as he had the remainder by descent; yet might tenant in taile, for the cause aforesaid, barre the estate taile by a common recoverie.

Sixthly, the word (remainder) in the statute is no vaine word; for the words of the preamble be, the king hath given or granted, or otherwise provided to his servants and subjects. The word (reversion) in the body of the act hath reference to these words (given or granted); and (remainder) hath reference to these words (otherwise provided.) As if the king in consideration of money, or of assurance of land, or for other consideration by way of provision, procure a subject by deed indented and inrolled, to make a gift in taile to one of his servants and subjects for recompence of service, or other consideration, the remainder to the king in fee, and all this appeare of record; this is a good provision within the statute, and the tenant in taile cannot by a common rec verie barre the estate taile. So it is, if the remainder be limited to the king in taile; but if the remainder bee limited to the king for yeares, or for life, that is no such remainder as it is intended by the statute, because it is of no remainder of continuance, as it ought to be, as it appeareth by the preamble; and it ought to have some affinity with a reversion, wherewith it is joyned.

Seventhly, where a common recoverie cannot barre the state taile by force of the said statute, there a fine levied in fee, in taile, for lives, or yeares, with proclamations according to the statutes, shall not barre the state taile, or the issue in taile, where the reversion or remainder

(1) 29. H. 8. Dy. 32. accord. tail barred, but not discontinued, because the reversion is in the king: so note the issue is barred by
4. H. 7. Hob. 382. for 32. H. 8. cap. 36. was not then made. Note also, that 32. H. 8. cap. 36. excepts tenant in tail by gift of the king. Lord Nott. MSS.

(2) Upon this act see Mr. Cruise's Essay on Recoveries, 2d ed. 255.

(3) Nota, 34. H. 8. is not of force in Ireland, therefore the knowledge of the common law in these points is necessary there.—
B. being tenant in tail by gift of king H. 8. of the manor of T. an. 14. Eliz. contracted with A. to convey it to him and his heirs in consideration of a sum of money, and the manner of assurance was this: queen Eliz. in May, 14. Eliz. grants her reversion to C. and D. and their heirs; June 14. Eliz. B. suffers a recovery to the use of C. and D. and their heirs; and in the same term B. and A.
levy a fine of T. to C. and D. which they grant, and render to A.; and afterwards, in the same term, convey the reversion by fine, &c. to queen Eliz. And now whether this estate to A. was a gift in tail ex provisione from the queen, within the statute of 34. H. 8.
c. 20. was the question between E. heir of the body of A. and F. who claimed by the fine levied by the father of the said E. whose daughter he had married; and it was held by Berkeley that it was not, 1st, because the grant of the reversion to C. expresses no intent of the queen to create an estate tail to A.: 2d, when the estate tail of B. was docted by the recovery, and upon the fine levied C.
rendered the tail to A. he might have rendered the fee simple if he had willed; and he was the donor of the estate tail, not the queen, except of the reversion afterwards reconveyed: 3d, this reversion reconveyed was not in the queen her original reversion, but a new reversion expectant upon the tail of A. (for the former tail was docted) wherefore A. cannot bar the reversion in the queen, but he may bar his own issue notwithstanding 34. H. 8.: 4th, because altho' gift in tail by a subject may be a provision of the king within the statute, nevertheless the intent should appear, which is not the case here. Hales made two questions. 1. What shall be said a provision by the king within this statute, and this is question of law. 2. Whether this shall be said to be such a provision, which is matter of fact.
To the first it seems, that if the queen be merely instrumental in procuring an estate tail to be settled, but that the estate itself does not proceed either from the charge, or from the bounty of the crown as a reward for service, it is no provision within this statute; and therefore it is to be seen, if in this case the entail was upon contract between subject and subject, and if the queen were merely instrumental to perfect the conveyance and serve her own reversion, which is the second question, and a question of fact. To the second, that this is not such a provision there are these presumptions. 1st, Nothing appears of record that such provision was intended, which by Coke is here held to be necessary (but Hales doubted hereof.) 2d, No land, money, or other consideration, moved the queen to procure B. to grant this estate tail to A.: 3d, it does not appear that the queen took notice of any service done by A. or of any favour intended by her to him. 4th, If the queen had intended a provision within the statute, she might have caused C. to convey the fee simple first to herself, and then have granted to A. in tail. 5th, If it was intended that A. should have an entail, which should not be a provision within the statute, no one can contrive any other way than this to effect it. 6th, It appears that A. was to purchase, and that the queen should not be prejudiced, nor any other person mainder is in the king, as is aforesaid, by reason of these words in the said act (the said recovery, or any other thing or things hereafter to be had, done, or suffered by or against any such tenant in taile to the contrary notwithstanding), which words include a fine levied by such a donee, and restraineth the same.

Eighthly, but where a common recovery shall barre the estate taile, notwithstanding that statute, there a fine with proclamations shall barre the same also.

Ninthly, where the said latter words of the statute be (had, done, or suffered by or against any such tenant in taile), the sense and construction is, where tenant in taile is partie or privie to the act, be it by doing or suffering that which should worke the barre, and not by meere permission, he being a stranger to the act. (1)

As if tenant in taile of the gift of the king, the reversion to the king expectant, is disseised, and the disseisor levie a fine, and five yeares passe, this shall barre the estate taile (2): and so if a collateral ancestor of the donee release with warrantie, and the donee suffer the warrantie to descend without any entry made in the life of the ancestor, this shall binde the tenant in taile, because he is not party or privie to any act, either done or suffered by or against him.

Tenthly, albeit the preamble of the statute extend onely to gifts in taile made by the kings of England before the act (viz. hath given and granted, &c.), and the body of the act referreth to the preamble (viz. that no such feined recovery hereafter to be had against such tenant in taile), so as this word (such) may seeme to couple the body and the preamble together; yet in this case (such) shall be taken for such in equall mischief, or in like case; and by divers parts of the act it appeareth, that the makers of the act intended to extend it to future gifts; and so is the law taken at this day without question.

A recovery in a writ of right against tenant in taile without a voucher, is no barre of any gift in taile.

If tenant in taile the remainder over in fee cesse, and the lord recover in a cessavit, this shall not barre the estate taile, for the issue shall recover in a firmesdon; neither were either of these barres when Littleton wrote. But let us now heare Littleton.

So resolved Pasch. 31. Eliz. Rot. 1645. in Notley's case in Communi Banco.

(8. Rep. 77.)

(3. Cro. 430. Cro. Eliz. 595. Sid. 166. 4. Leon. 40. Moor 467.)

So holden Trin. 39. Eliz. Rot. 1914 inter Stratford & Dover in Communi Banco.

(Hob. 332. 2. Roll. Abr. 773.)

33. E. 3. Judgement. 252.

3. H. 6. 55. 10. H. 6. 5.

14. E. 4. 5. b. 15. E. 4. 8.

F. N. B. 124. b. Pl. Com. 237.

28. E. 3. 95. F. N. B. 28. l.

Sect. 709.

ITEM, si tenant en taile discontinue le taile, et ad issue et devy, et l'uncle del issue releffa al discontinuee ove garrantie, &c. et morust sans issue, ceo est collateral garrantie al issue en taile, pur ceo que le garrantie descendist sur l'issue, le quel ne poit joy conveyer a le taile per meane de son uncle.

ALSO, if tenant in taile discontinue the taile, and hath issue and dieth, and the uncle of the issue release to the discontinuee with warrantie, &c. and dieth without issue, this is a collateral warranty to the issue in taile, because the warranty descendeth upon the issue, that cannot convey himselfe to the entaile by meanes of his uncle.

THE reason wherefore the warrantie of the uncle having no right to the land entailed shall barre the issue in taile is, for that the law presumeth that the uncle would not unnaturally disherit his lawfull heire, being of his owne blood, of that right which the uncle never had, but came to the heire by another meane, unlesse hee would leave him greater advancement. Nemo præsumitur alienam posteritatem suæ prætulisse. And in this case the law will admit no prooffe against that which the law presumeth. And so it is of all other collateral warranties: for no man is presumed to doe any thing against nature.

P. Com. fol. 307. a. in Sharrington's case.

(2. Roll. Abr. 745.)

(Post. 371. b.)

(3. Rep. 59.)

(Ante 6. b.)

[k] And the like holdeth in some other cases: as if a rent be behinde for twentie yeares, and the lord make an acquittance for the last that is due, all the rest are presumed to be paid; and the law will admit no prooffe against this presumption (3). [l] So if a man be within the foure seas, and his wife hath a childe, the law presumeth that it is the childe of the husband; and against this presumption the law will admit no prooffe. (4)

[m] If a man that is innocent be accused of felony, and for feare flieth for the same, albeit

[k] 11. H. 4. 55. 10. Eliz.

Dier 271.

[l] 7. H. 4. 9.

[m] 3. E. 3. Corone Stanf.

(1) 11. Car. Cro. obiter in Wyat's case, tenant in tail, reversion in the king, is disseised, entry of the issue is barred; which perhaps is so here, because in both cases the tail is not barred.—Lord Nott. MSS.

(2) Cro. Car. 430. Jones cited the case according to the report in this place; but it seems he was misled by this book. See the note immediately following.—It seems to some that the case of Stratford and Dover above quoted is not law; for in 2. Rep. 11. Magd. Coll. case, it is adjudged, that the fine does not bar the college, not being parties, because the 13. Eliz. makes void all acts which it suffers, and such sufferance extends to the act in which they are not parties, by Sir Or. B.—And Sir F. Moore 467. reports the same case: and there by Walmesley it is said, that this issue is only bound in the time the fine is levied, but no other issue, and this by 34 H. 8.; hence it seems, that Sir F. Moore or Lord Coke have misreported the case, for they are contrary to each other. Note, Mr. Palmer told Hen. Finch, afterwards Lord Nottingham and Chancellor, that he attended Walker Chief Baron upon a reference, and that Walker denied the above case, and said, that the roll was contra, and the judgment there contra to this report, and that he and Palmer went to the house of Lord Coke, then living, and shewed him the roll contra to his report in this place, and that he acknowledged it, and said, that he trusted to Serjeant Bridgman's report: whence it appears, that Sir F. Moore's report is the better, and there he reports it to have been, 39. Eliz. Ro. 1914.—Lord Nott. MSS.

(3) This is to be understood of an acquittance under hand and seal, which is an estoppel; for if it be not under seal, the law will admit of proof to the contrary: but an avowry for the last day's rent is no discharge for the former; for by the avowry the avowant says so much is due, but discharges nothing, no other rent being mentioned in the avowry, but that for which he acknowledges the taking the goods. See 1. Sid. 44. 1. Lev. 43. 1. Saund. 285, 286. Latw. 1173. Note to the 11th edition.

(4) But see ant. 214. a. note 2.

which is effected.—Note, At the common law, if the king grant lands in fee simple conditional, it was doubted if donee post prolem fuscitatem might have aliened to bar his issue, Riley 438. supra 19. b. but clearly not to bar possibility of reverter in the king; no, not though the alienation were with warranty collateral, unless assents descended to the king. Ante 19. b. and 370. in margin. And unde alienation without warranty or assents bars subject donor, 4 H. 6. Rot. Parl. n. 51. Common: petition that feoffees who buy lands of the king, tenant in tail may enjoy them against the king. Resp. de roy s'aviser. — Note also, after Westm. 2. and before 34 H. 8. recovery or fine barred the tail of gift by the king, not the reversion to the king; so that by the wisdom of the common law, where the king raised the family, a kind of perpetuity was intended; for every man was discouraged to purchase from the donee, for no act of his could bar the king's reversion or possibility of reverter, which was a good way to preserve the memory of the king's bounty. When this would not do, upon the dissolution of monasteries, the crown having much land to bestow, began now to provide by 34 Hen. 8. that no alienation should bar the entail; for there needed no law for the reversion, and no other way could preserve the memory, &c.: and yet this is often eluded by a temporary grant of the reversion by the king, and a reconveyance, &c.—Lord Nott. MSS.

Bracton lib. 1. cap. 9.

[x] Rot. Parliament 50. E. 3. num. 77.

beit he judicially acquitteth himselfe of the felonie, yet if it be found that he fled for the felonie, he shall, notwithstanding his innocencie, forfeit all his goods and chattels, debts and duties; for as to the forfeiture of them, the law will admit no prooffe against the presumption in law grounded upon his flight: and so in many other cases. But yet the generall rule is, Quod statuitur presumptioni donec probetur in contrarium; but, as you see, it hath many exceptions.

[y] It hath beene attempted in parliament, that a statute might be made, that no man should be barred by a warrantie collaterall, but where assents descend from the same ancestor (1); but it never tooke effect, for that it should weaken common assurances. (2)

Sect. 710.

5. F. 2. Carr. 78. Lib. 8. fol. 41. Sym's case.

(10. Rep. 95.)

(Ante 367. b.)
(2. Cro. 217, 218.)

(Ant. 189. a. 243. b.)
See before in the Chapter of Discent, Sect. 398.

AD issue deux files.

If husband and wife, tenants in especiall tayle, have issue a daughter, and the wife die, the husband by a second wife hath issue another daughter, and discontinueth in fee and dieth, a collaterall ancestor of the daughters releaseth to the discontinuee with warranty and dieth, the warrantie descendeth upon both daughters, yet the issue in taile shall bee barred of the whole; for in judgement of law the entire warrantie descendeth upon both of them.

Et l'eigne enter en l'entiertie, et ent fait un feoffement,

Ec. Here it is to bee understood, that when one coparcener doth generally enter into the whole, this doth not devert the estate which descendeth by the law to the other, unless shee that doth enter claimeth the whole, and taketh the profits of the whole; for that shall devert the freehold in law of the other parcener.

Otherwise it is after the parceners be actually seised, the taking of the whole profits, or any caine made by the one, cannot put the other out of possession without an

ITEM, si le tenant en tayle ad issue deux files et morust, et l'eigne entra en le entiertie, et ent fait un feoffement en fee ove garrantie, Ec. et puis l'eigne file morust sans issue;

en cest cas le puisne file est barre quant al un moitie, et quant al autre moitie el n'est pas barre. Car quant a la moitie que affiert a le puisne file, el est barre, par ceo que quant a cel part el ne poit conveyer le discent per my le maine de son eigne soer, et pur ceo quant a cel moitie, ceo est un collateral garrantie. Mes quant al autre moitie, que affiert a son eigne soer, le garrantie n'est pas barre a le puisne soer, pur ceo que el poit conveyer son discent quant a cel moitie que affiert a son eigne soer per mesme le eigne soer, issint quant a cest moitie que affiert al eigne soer, le garrantie*

ALSO, if the tenant in tayle hath issue two daughters and dieth, and the elder entreth into the whole, and thereof maketh a feoffement in fee with warrantie, &c. and after the elder daughter dieth without issue; in this case the younger daughter is barred as to the one moitie, and as to the other moitie shee is not barred. For as to the moiety which belongeth to the younger daughter, shee is barred, because as to this part shee cannot convey the discent by meanes of her elder sister, and therefore as to this moitie, this is a collaterall warrantie. But as to the other moitie, which belongeth to her elder sister, the warrantie is no bar to the younger sister, because she may convey her discent as to that moitie which belongeth to her elder sister by the same elder sister, so as to this moitie which be-

* part—moitie que affiert a luy, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) However, it hath been effected in our days; for by 4 Ann. cap. 16. sect. 21. all warranties since the first day of Trinity Term, anno dom. 1705, by any tenants for life, of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, coming or descending to any person in reversion or remainder, are void and of no effect; and all collateral warranties made since then of any lands, tenements or hereditaments, by any ancestor who had no estate of inheritance in possession, the same is void against the heir. Note to the 11th edition.

(2) The reader will recollect, that, previously to the statute de donis, all estates were held either in fee simple, in fee simple conditional, for life, or for years; and that estates tail, in the light in which we now consider them, had not then an existence. If a person seised in fee simple aliened his estate, the alienation was certainly binding both upon his lineal and his collateral heirs; his warranty therefore had effect so far as it entitled the alienee to vouch the heir of the warrantor, and, in case of eviction, to claim a recompence from him, if any real assents descended upon him from the ancestor; but with respect to the repelling or rebutting of the claim of the heir to the estate itself, as the alienations of tenant in fee simple bound the heirs as effectually without the warranty as with it, the warranty, in that respect, could have no operation.—As to the warranties of persons seised of estates held in fee simple conditional, it has been observed before, p. 326. b. note 1, that the condition from which that estate took its appellation did not suspend the fee from vesting in the donee immediately by the gift; and therefore if he aliened before he had issue, it not only was no forfeiture, but if afterwards he had issue, it was a bar to them. Hence the warranty of a tenant in fee simple conditional had the same effect with respect to his issue, as the warranty of tenant in tail in fee simple had upon those who claimed from him; that is, with assents, it entitled the warrantee to vouch the issue as heirs at law of the ancestor; but in other respects it had no operation, as the issue was bound by the alienation of the ancestor, as effectually without warranty, as with it. With respect to the donor or reversioner, the alienations of tenant in fee simple conditional could not be binding on him without assents, because he claimed to be in by title paramount.—As to the alienations of tenant for life or for years: in most cases they must have been void, as commencing by disseisin. In those cases where they were not void upon that account, it is to be observed, that before the statute of uses an estate of freehold could not be created without livery of seisin; and that as the livery of seisin of tenant for life or for years was a forfeiture of the estate, the reversioner or remainder-man might enter immediately for the forfeiture; but if he did not enter during the life of the person aliening, the warranty stopped him from entering afterwards. The reader will recollect, that if a disseisor, abator, or intruder, died in the possession of the estate, his heirs so far acquired a presumptive title to the estate, that the disseisee could no longer restore his possession by entry, but was reduced to his action. By analogy to this reasoning, and a rational extension of the principles on which it was founded, the law supposed that the remainder-man or reversioner would have entered for the forfeiture of the tenant for life or years, if an equivalent were not given him: it was therefore presumed, that if he did not enter during the life of such particular tenant, he had received from him an equivalent; and this presumption being admitted, he could not afterwards, with any colour of justice, be allowed to claim the estate itself. Such were the effects and operation of warranty at the common law. The first material alteration in it was by the statute of Gloucester, 6. E. 1. ch. 3. by which it was enacted, that the warranty of the father, tenant by the courtesy, either in the life of his wife or afterwards, should not be a bar to the heir without assents. The next statute which made any material alteration upon the tie est lineal al puisne longeth to the elder sister, the warrantie is lineal to the younger sister.

Sect. 711.

ET nota, que quant a celuy que demanda fee simple per ascun de ses auncesters, il serra barre per warrantie lineal que descendist sur luy, sinon que soit restraine per ascun estatute.

AND note, that as to him that demandeth fee simple by any of his ancestors, he shall be barred by warrantie lineall which descendeth upon him, unless he be restrained by some statute.

Sect. 712.

MES ilque demande fee taile per brieve de formedon en descender, ne serra my barre per lineal garrantie, sinon que il ad assets per discent en fee simple per mesme l'auncester que fist le garrantie. Mes collateral garrantie est barre a celuy que demanda fee, et auxy a celuy que demanda fee taile sans ascun auter discent de fee simple, sinon en cases queux sont restraines per les estatutes, et auters cases pur certaine causes, come serra dit en apres.

BUT hee that demandeth fee taile by writ of formedon in descender, shall not be barred by lineall warrantie, unless hee hath assets by discent in fee simple by the same ancestor that made the warrantie. But collateral warrantie is a barre to him that demandeth fee, and also to him that demandeth fee taile without any other discent of fee simple, except in cases which are restrained by the statutes, and in other cases for certaine causes, as shall be said hereafter. (1)

her. And thus is the booke in the 21. Assise [n] to be intended, the case being no other in effect; but A. disseiseth one to the use of himselfe and B. B. agreeth; by this he is joyntenant with A. [n] 21. Ass. p. 19. (Aut. 180.)

Et

(1) The observations of Lord Vaughan on this Section and the comment upon it, deserve attentive perusal. See Vaugh. 375.

effect and operation of warranty, was the statute de donis. An attempt has been made in note 1, page 326. b. and notes 1 and 2 to page 327. a. to explain in what manner, and by what construction of law, estates tail derived their origin from that statute. It is obvious, that if the warranty of tenant in tail, without assets, had been permitted to be a bar of the estate tail, it would have been in the power of every tenant in tail to have evaded that statute, and barred his issue. By a kind of analogy, therefore, to what the legislature had done in passing the stat. of Gloucester, the judges, in their construction of the statute de donis, held, that the warranty of tenant in tail, without assets, should not bind his issue; but by the same analogy, and to prevent the circuitry which would arise if the issue had been permitted to recover the estate from the alienee, and the alienee to recover the assets from the issue, they held, the issue bound by warranty with assets. — With respect to those in remainder or reversion — it is to be observed, that the statute de donis extends only to the alienations of tenants in tail; the alienations, therefore, of tenants for life with warranty, remained as they did at the common law, and therefore bound all upon whom the warranty descended, either with or without assets. Neither did the statute de donis restrain the alienations of tenant in tail, except so far as they prevented the land descending upon the issue at his death, or reverting to the donor for want of issue in tail. There is nothing in it which, either directly or indirectly, restrains the tenant in tail from barring a remainder-man in tail, by his warranty descending on him. As to a remainder-man in tail, therefore, the operation of warranty in rebutting the heir, remained as it was before the statute: it barred him both with and without assets. This is laid down and explained with great learning and force of argument by lord chief justice Vaughan, in his argument in Bole v. Horton. See his Reports, p. 360. The case there was, that William Vesey devised to John Vesey, his eldest son, and the heirs male of his body; and for want of such issue, to Wm. Vesey, another of his sons, and the heirs male of his body; and for want of such issue, to his own right heirs. John, upon his father's death, entered and died, leaving issue only two daughters: Wm. then entered and aliened with warranty, and died without issue. The question was, whether the warranty rebutted the daughters. Lord chief justice Vaughan was of opinion, that the warranty, not being accompanied with assets, would not have barred his own issues in tail, if there had been any, or the two daughters, who claimed the reversion, both issues in tail and the reversioners being protected by the statute de donis; but he admitted, that if there had been any intermediate remainder in tail, the warranty would have rebutted all who claimed under that remainder, a remainder in tail not being under the protection of the statute. The only point before the court in this case was, upon the operation of the warranty to rebut the reversioners. Upon this the court was divided: the chief justice and justice Archer were for the demandant; and justice Wyld and justice Atkins, for the tenant. — The next statute which restrained the operation of warranty, was 11 Henry 7. ch. 20. by which the warranty of the wife of her husband's lands, either with or without her succeeding husband, was held to be void. The last statute which has been enacted for the purpose of restraining the operation of warranty, is the 4 and 5 Ann. ch. 16. by which all warranties of tenant of life are declared void; and all collateral warranties of any ancestor who has not an estate of inheritance in possession, are declared void against the heir. But this statute does not extend to the alienation of tenant in tail in possession. The consequence is, that even at this day, if a tenant in tail in possession discontinues his estate with warranty, it is a bar with assets to his issue, and without assets to those in remainder. Supposing, therefore, the common case of a limitation to the first and other sons successively in tail male; if the first actually putting out or disseisin. And in this case of Littleton, when one coparcener entred into the whole, and maketh a feoffment of the whole, this devesteth the freehold in law out of the other coparcener.

Now seeing the entrie in this case of Littleton devesteth not the estate of the other parcener, if no further proceeding had beene, then it is to be demanded, that seeing the feoffment doth worke the wrong, and bee the wrong either a disseisin, or in nature of an abatement, how can the warrantie annexed to that feoffment that wrought the wrong be collateral, or binde the youngest sister for her part? To this it is answered, that when the one sister entred into the whole, the possession being void, and maketh a feoffment in fee, this act subsequent doth so explaine the entry precedent into the whole, that now by construction of law, she was only seised of the whole, and this feoffment can bee no disseisin, because the other sister was never seised; nor any abatement, because they both made but one heire to the ancestor, and one freehold and inheritance descended to them. So as in judgement of law the warrantie doth not commence by disseisin or by abatement, and without question her entrie was no intrusion.

Tenant in taile hath issue two daughters, and discontinueth in fee, the youngest disseiseth the discontinuee to the use of herselfe and her sister, the discontinuee ousteth her, against whom she recovereth in an assise, the eldest agreeth to the disseisin, as she may, against her sister, and become joyntenant with

Fl. Com. 543.
(5. Rep. 51. Post. 377. a.)

(Sect. 398. Post. 393. b.)

3. E. 3. 22. 4. E. 3. 28. 50.
6. E. 3. 56. 7. E. 3. 51. 57.
9. E. 3. 16. 10. E. 3. 14.
15. E. 3. Gar. 27. 20. E. 3.
Ibid. 39. 25. E. 3. 5.
27. E. 3. 83. 41. E. 3. Garr. 16.
Mich. 38. E. 3. Coram Rege
Abbot de Colchester's case.
45. Aff. 6. Pl. Com. 554.
19. E. 4. 10. Vid. Sect. 703. 747.

(Moore, 96. accord. Vaugh. 382. contra. See Vaug. 365.)

Fleta lib. 2. ca. 63. Britton 185.
4. E. 3. Garr. 63. 16. E. 3.
Aff. 4. 43. E. 3. 9. 7. H. 6. 3.
11. H. 4. 20.
(2. Roll. Abr. 774, 775.)

24. E. 3. 47.

(6. Rep. 56.)

[a] 31. E. 3. Aff. 5. 13. E. 3.
Recoverie in value 17. Lib. 3.
fol. 31. Butler & Baker's case.

[b] 14. E. 3. Mefne 7.
Registrem 293.

[c] Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 65.
Britton fol. 185. Extent. manerii.
5. H. 7. 37. 32. H. 6. 21.
33. E. 3. Garr. 102.

Et nota, que quant a celui que demanda fee simple, &c. In these two Sections there are expressed foure legall conclutions :

First, that a lineall warrantie doth binde the right of a fee simple.
Secondly, that a lineall warrantie doth not binde the right of an estate taile, for that it is restrained by the statute of donis conditionalibus.

Thirdly, that a lineall warranty and assents is a barre of the right in taile, and is not restrained (as hath beene said) by the said act.

Fourthly, that a collateral warrantie made by a collateral ancestor of the donee, doth binde the right of an estate taile, albeit there be no assents ; and the reason thereof is upon the statute of donis conditionalibus, for that it is not made by the tenant in taile, &c. as the lineall warrantie is.

To this may be added, that the warranty of the donee in taile, which is collateral to the donor, or to him in remainder, being heire to him, doth binde them without any assents. For though the alienation of the donee after issue doth not barre the donor, which was the mischief provided for by the act, yet the warranty being collateral doth barre both of them ; for the act restraineth not that warranty, but it remaineth at the common law, as Littleton after faith : and in like manner the warranty of the donee doth barre him in the remainder.

Assents, (id est) quod tantundem valet, sufficient by descent.

Note, assents requisite to make a lineall warranty a barre must have six qualities. First, it must be assents (that is) of equall value or more at the time of the descent. Secondly, it must be of descent, and not by purchase or gift. Thirdly, as Littleton here faith, it must be assents in fee simple, and not in taile, or for another man's life. Fourthly, it must descend to him as heire to the same ancestor that made the warranty, as Littleton also here faith. Fifthly, it must be of lands or tenements, or rents, or services valuable, or other profits issuing out of lands or tenements, and not personall inheritances, as annuities, and the like. Sixthly, it must be in state or interest, and not in use or right of actions or rights of entry, for they are no assents until they be brought into possession. [a] But if a rent in fee simple issuing out of the land of the heire descend unto him whereby it is extinct, yet this is assents, and to this purpose hath in judgement of law a continuance.

[b] A feignory in fee almoigne is no assents, because it is not valuable, and therefore not to be extended ; and so it seemeth of a feignory of homage and fealty. But an advowson is assents, whereof [c] Fleta faith ; Item de ecclesiis que ad donationem domini pertinent quot sunt, et que, et ubi, et quantum valeat que liber ecclesia per annum secundum veram ipsius estimationem, et pro marca solent extendatur, ut si ecclesia centum marcas valeat per annum, ad centum solidos extendatur, advocatio per annum. (1) And herewith agreeth Britton, and others have reckoned a shilling in the pound ; and Pritton addeth further, mes si la advowson duiest estre vendue, adonques seroit le reasonable price selonque le value en un an a cel extent. Wherein it is to be observed, that antiquitie did ever reckon by markes.

Sect. 713.

ITEM, si terre soit done a un home et a les heires de son corps engendres, le quel prent feme, et ont issue firs enter eux, et le baron discontinua le taile en fee et devy, et puis la feme releffa al discontinuee en fee ove garrantie, &c. et morust, et le garrantie descendist a le firs, ceo est un collateral garrantie.

ALSO, if land be given to a man, and to the heires of his bodie begotten, who taketh wife, and have issue a son betweenethem, and the husband discontinues the taile in fee and dieth, and after the wife releaseth to the discontinuee in fee with warrantie, &c. and dieth, and the warranty descends to the son, this is a collateral warrantie.

THIS case standeth upon the same reason that divers other formerly put by our author doe, viz. that because the heire claimeth only from the father per formam doni, and nothing from the wife, that therefore the warrantie of the wife is collateral, and the warrantie made by any ancestor male or female of the wife bindeth ; and here the warrantie descendeth after the descent of the right.

Sect.

(1) Bro. Assents per Descent 21. contra.

son, when in possession, levies a fine, that is a discontinuance of the remainders to the other sons ; and by reason of the warranty contained in the concord, it is a bar to them, even without assents. It is the same if he executes a feoffment, and accompanies it with a warranty. It remains to observe, that no warranty extends to bar any estate, either in possession, reversion, or remainder, unless before, or, at least, at the time that the warranty is made, it is divided or displaced. See Seymour's case, 10. Rep. 96. These, it is presumed, are the general outlines of the doctrine of warranty. The reader will observe, by what has been said on that subject, that at common law, the operation of a warranty to rebut the heir could hold in no case where the heir claimed the estate warranted from the ancestor by descent ; for, at the common law, wherever the ancestor had the inheritance, he could alien it from the issue ; therefore the warranty, as to the purpose of rebutter, was perfectly inoperative. The statutes have made no alteration in these respects. Had it been held that the statute de donis did not restrain the effect of the warranty to rebut the issue, this principle would have been broken into, as the heir in that case would have been rebutted by his ancestor's warranty from an estate which he claimed to take from him by descent ; but as the contrary construction was received, the principle remains as it did at the common law. The consequence is, that without assents the ancestor's warranty never did, and does not now bind the heir in any case, except where he takes by purchase ; and that when he does take by purchase, it binds him, either with or without assents, in every case where the contrary has not been enacted by statute. Upon enquiry it will be found, that the cases where the operation of warranty still prevails are reduced to two ; the first, that by the construction of the statute de donis, the ancestor's warranty binds the issues in tail with assents ; the other, that, at common law, the warranty of the ancestor, tenant in tail in possession, still continues to bar those in remainder without assents. It is observable, that all warranties are collateral, so far as they are extraneous to the estate, and by way of contradistinction to those rights, incidents, or qualities, which by their nature are inherent in, annexed to, or issuing out of the estate which they accompany. In this sense the word collateral frequently occurs in our law books. Thus, 1. Rep. 121. b. an use at common law is said to be a trust or confidence, not issuing out of land, but a thing collateral, annexed in privity to the estate. In the same sense it is used in the well-known distinction between those powers which are said to be relating to the land, and collateral powers. Thus, whether the warranty descends lineally or collaterally, whether the estate and the warranty descend from the same person or from different persons, and whether the warranty is considered as to its operation of rebutting the heir, or of entitling the alliance to vouch the warrantor, it is, in its nature, collateral to the estate which it accompanies. If in some cases it bars the heir from claiming, and in others it does not, it is only because the statute law has said, that in some cases where by the common law it would have operated as a bar, it shall no longer have that operation ; and if, by the statute de donis, the warranty of tenant

Sect. 714.

*MES si tenements soyent donnees a le baron et a sa feme, et a les beires de leur deux corps engendres, queux ont issue fits, et le baron discontinua le taile et morust, et puis la feme releffa ove garrantie et morust, cest garrantie n'est forsque un lineal garrantie a le fits; car le fits ne serra barre en ceo cas de fuer son breve de formedon, sinon que il ad assets per discent en fee simple per sa mere, pur ceo que leur issue en brieve de formedon covient conveyer a luy le droit come heire a son pere et a sa mere de leur * deux corps engendres per forme del done; et issint en tiel case, le garrantie de le pere et le garrantie de la mere ne sont forsque lineal garrantie al heire, &c.*

BUT if lands be given to the husband and wife, and to the heires of their two bodies begotten, who have issue a son, and the husband discontinue the taile and dieth, and after the wife release with warrantie and dieth, this warrantie is but a lineall warrantie to the son; for the sonne shall not be barred in this case to sue his writ of formedon, unlesse that hee hath assets by discent in fee simple by his mother, because their issue in the writ of formedon ought to convey to him the right as heire to his father and mother of their two bodies begotten per formam doni; and so in this case the warrantie of the father and the warrantie of the mother are but lineall warrantie to the heire, &c.

(9. Rep. 143. a. Ant. 187. a.)

HERE is a point worthy of observation, that albeit in this case the issue in taile must claime as heire of both their bodies, yet the warrantie of either of them is lineall to the issue; and yet the issue cannot claime as heire to either of them alone, but of both.

(2. Roll. Abr. 741.

If lands be given to a man and to a woman unmarried, and the heires of their two bodies, and they entermarrie, and are disseised, and the husband release with warrantie, the wife dieth, the husband dieth, albeit the donees did take by moities, yet the warrantie is lineall for the whole, because, as our author here saith, the issue must in a formedon convey to him the right as heire to his father and his mother of their two bodies engendred; and therefore it is collateral for no part.

Ant. 187. a. Sect. 25.)

Sect. 715.

ET nota, que en chescun cas ou home demanda tenements en fee taile per brieve de formedon, si ascun del issue en le taile que avoit possession, ou que n'avoit ascun possession, fait un garrantie, &c. si celui que suist le brieve de formedon pouvoit per ascun possibilitie, per matter que pouvoit estre en fait, conveyer a luy, per my celui que fist le gar-

AND note, that in everie case where a man demandeth lands in fee taile by writ of formedon, if any of the issue in taile that hath possession, or that hath not possession, make a warrantie, &c. if hee which sueth the writ of formedon might by any possibilitie, by matter which might be en fait, convey to him, by him that made the warrantie per formam doni, this is a li-rantie

* deux not in L. and M. nor Roh.

nant in tail did not bar the issue without assets, but barred it with assets, this is not from any pre-established distinction between lineal and collateral warranty, but because the judges, upon the construction of the statute de donis, held the issues in tail and the reversioner should not be deprived of the estate by the indirect and circuitous operation of warranty, when that statute had declared they should not be deprived of it by the direct alienation of common-law conveyances.—The chief part of the observations offered to the reader in this note, are grounded on what was said by lord Vaughan in the argument above referred to: he concludes it by saying, "The doctrine of the binding of lineal and collateral warranties, or their not binding, is an extraction out of men's brains and speculations many scores of years after the statute de donis.—And if Littleton (whose memory I much honour) had taken that plain way in resolving his many excellent cases in his Chapter of Warranty, of saying the warranty of the ancestor doth not bind in this case, because it is restrained by the statute of Gloucester, or the statute de donis; and it doth bind in this case, as at the common law, because not restrained by either statute (for when he wrote there were no other statutes restraining warranties, there is now a third, 11 H. 7.) his doctrine of warranties had been more clear and satisfactory than now it is, being intricated under the terms of lineal and collateral; for that in truth is the genuine resolution of most, if not of all his cases; for no man's warranty doth bind, or not, directly, and a priori, because it is lineal or collateral; for no statute restrains any warranty under those terms from binding, nor no law institutes any warranty in those terms; but those are restraints by consequent only from the restraints of warranties made by statutes." Vaugh. 375.—Lord Holt is also reported to have said, "The true reason of collateral warranty was the security of purchasers, and for their encouragement; as also, for the establishing and settling the estates of such as were in by title, or descent cast; and this was the only security such persons could have at common law. And because the estate of such persons as are in by title are much favoured in law, these covenants that were for strengthening of them were favoured likewise. And in those days there was no need of lineal warranty; but, however, the force of that is taken away by the statute of donis, and common recovery is not upon the supposition of recompence in value, and never was within the statute, but always as much out of it as if it were so mentioned by express words." And this, he said, was my lord Hale's opinion. 12. Mod. 512.

rantie performe del done, ceo estun neall warrantie, and not collatelineal garrantie, et nemy collateral. rall.*

35. E. 3. Gar. 73.

OF this sufficient hath beene said before, sed nunquam nimis dicitur quod nunquam satis dicitur; for it is a point of great use and consequence.

Sect. 716.

(Vaugh. 377.)

(8. Rep. 51.)

ITEM, si home ad issue trois fits, et il dona terre al eigne fits, a aver et tener a luy et a les heires de son corps engendres, et pur default de tiel issue, le remainder al mulnes fits, a luy et a les heires de son corps engendres, et pur default de tiel issue † del mulnes, le remainder al puisne fits, et les heires de son corps engendres; en cest cas, si l'eigne ‡ discontinua le taile en fee, et oblige luy et ses heires a garrantie, et morust sans issue, ceo est un collateral garrantie al mulnes fits, et serra barre a demaunders mesme la terre per force del remainder; pur ceo que le remainder est son title, et son eigne frere est collateral a cel title, que commence per force del remainder. En mesme le maner est, si le mulnes fits avoit mesme la terre per force del remainder, pur ceo que son eigne frere ne fist aucun discontinuance, mes morust sans issue de son corps, et puis le mulnes fait un discontinuance ove garrantie, &c. et morust sans issue, ceo est un collateral garrantie a le puisne fits. Et auxy en cest case, si aucun de les dits fits soit disseisie, et le pere que fist le done, &c. releffa a le disseisor tout son droit § ove garrantie, ¶ ceo est un collateral garrantie a celui fits sur que le garrantie descendist, causâ quâ supra.

(Vaugh. 367. 377.)

ALSO, if a man hath issue three sonnes, and giveth land to the eldest sonne, to have and to hold to him and to the heires of his bodie begotten, and for default of such issue, the remainder to the middle sonne, to him and to the heires of his bodie begotten, and for default of such issue of the middle sonne, the remainder to the youngest son, and to the heires of his bodie begotten; in this case, if the eldest discontinua the taile in fee, and binde him and his heires to warrantie, and dieth without issue, this is a collateral warrantie to the middle son, and shall be a bar to demand the same land by force of the remainder; for that the remainder is his title, and his elder brother is collateral to this title, which commenceth by force of the remainder. In the same manner it is, if the middle son hath the same land by force of the remainder, because his eldest brother made no discontinuance, but died without issue of his bodie, and after the middle make a discontinuance with warrantie, &c. and dieth without issue, this is a collateral warrantie to the youngest son. And also in this case, if any of the said sonnes be disseised, and the father that made the gift, &c. releaseth to the disseisor all his right with warrantie, this is a collateral warrantie to that son upon whom the warrantie descendeth, causâ quâ supra.

Sect.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† del mulnes not in L. and M. not Roh.
¶ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ fits added in L. and M. and Roh.

Sect. 717.

ET sic nota, que lou home AND so note, that where a que est collateral a le title, man that is collateral to the  et ceo release ove garrantie,* title, and releaseth this with war-&c. ceo est un collateral gar- rantie, &c. this is a collateral rantie. warrantie.

HERE it appeareth, that it is not adjudged in law a collateral warrantie, in respect of the blood, for the warrantie may be collateral, albeit the blood be lineall; and the warrantie may be lineall, albeit the blood be collateral, as hath beene said. But it is in law deemed a collateral warrantie, in respect that he that maketh the warrantie is collateral to the title of him upon whom the warrantie doth fall; as by the example which Littleton here putteth, and by that which hath beene formerly said, is manifest.

8. R. 2. Car. 101. Vi. Sect. 704.

Sect. 718.

ITEM, si pier do- ALSO, if a father na terre a son giveth land to his eigne fits, a aver et eldest son, to have and tener a luy et a les to hold to him and to beires males de son the heires males of his corps engendres, le re- body begotten, the remainder a le second mainder to the second fits, &c. si l'eigne fits sonne, &c. if the eldest alienast en fee oveſque sonne alieneth in fee garrantie, &c. et ad with warranty, &c.
issue female, et mo- and hath issue female,
rust sans issue male, and dieth without issue ceo n'est pas collate- male, this is no collaterall garrantie al se- rall warranty to the second fits, † car il ne cond son, for he shall serra barre de son ac- not bee barred of his tion de formedon en action of formedon in le remainder, pur ceo the remainder, because que le garrantie dis- the warranty descend-cendist al file del eigne ed to the daughter of fits, et nemy al se- the elder son, and not cond fits: car ches- to the second sonne:
cun garrantie que for every warrantie discendist, discendist which descends, dea celuy que est beire scendeth to him that is a luy que fist le gar- heire to him who made rantie, per le common the warrantie, by the
ley. common law.

HERE is rehearsed a maxime of the common law, that every warrantie doth descend upon him that is heire to him that made the warrantie, by the common law, as by this example it ap-peareth.

Vid. Sect. 3. 603. 735. 736. 737.
(Ant. 329. a. Cro. Eliz. 72.)

*A celuy que est beire
 a luy que fist le garrantie per le common ley, &c.*

Hereupon many things worthy to be knowne are to be understood.

[a] First, that if a man in-feoffeth another of an acre of ground with warrantie, and hath issue two sons, and dieth seised of another acre of land, of the nature of burrough
 English, the feoffee is impleaded, albeit the warrantie de-scendeth onely upon the eldest sonne, yet may he vouch them both; the one as heire to the warrantie, and the other as heire to the land: for if he should vouch the eldest son only, then should he not have the fruit of his warranty, viz.
 a recoverie in value; the youngest son only he cannot vouch, because he is not heire at the common law, upon whom the warrantie descendeth. (1)

[a] 40. E. 3. 14.

(Mod. Rep. 96. 2. Cro. 218.)

[b] So it is of heires in gavelkind, the eldest may bee vouched as heire to the warranty,

[b] 22. E. 4. 10. 4. E. 3. 55.
27. H. 6. 1. 2. 11. E. 3. Dec. 7.
(8. Rep. 8. b.)

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† car il ne serra barre—ne luy ledera, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) 38. E. 3. 22. 43. E. 3. 19. 48. Aff. 41. 4. E. 3. 55. 21. E. 3. 46. 21. E. 3. 36. 11. H. 7. 12. 6. H. 7. 2. Hale's MSS.

[c] 49. Aff. 4. 38. E. 3. 22.
(Hob. 25.)

[d] 32. E. 3. Vouch. 94.
35. H. 6. 33.

Pl. Com. 515.

(2. Cro. 218.)

[e] 17. E. 2. t. Recover in value 33. 1. E. 3. 12. 33. E. 3.
Judgm. 222. 14. E. 3. ib. 160.
10. E. 3. 52. 18. E. 3. 51.
Lib. 1. fol. 96. Sarileye's case.

[f] 32. E. 3. Vouch. 94.
per Greene.
(Plowd. 11. a. Manxel's Case.)

[g] Vide Pl. Com. fol. 514.
(3. Rep. 5. 10. Rep. 35.
Dr. and Stud. 41. b.
8. Rep. 101. b. See Cro. Eliz. 670.)

[h] 17. E. 3. 59. 20. E. 3.
Vouch. 129. 32. E. 3. Vouch. 94.
5. H. 7. 2.

[i] 11. H. 7. 12. 11. E. 3.
tit. Det. 7. Dy. 5. El. 238.
(Moor. 74.)

[k] 11. H. 7. 12.
(2. Cro. 25. b. 218.
1. Suderl. 238. 272. 420.
Hob. 25.)

ranty, and the other sonnes in respect of the inheritance descended unto them. [c] And in like sort, the heire at the common law, and the heire of the part of the mother, shall be vouched: but the heire at the common law may be vouched alone in both these cases, at the election of the tenant: et sic de similibus. [d] In the same manner if a man dieth seised of certaine lands in fee, having issue a sonne and a daughter by one venter, and a sonne by another, the eldest sonne entreth and dieth, the land descends to the sister; in this case the warrantie descendeth on the sonne, and he may be vouched as heire, and the sister, as heire of the land: in which and the other case of burrough English, the sonne and heire by the common law having nothing by descent, the whole losse of the recoverie in value lieth upon the heires of the land, albeit they be no heires to the warrantie. Then put the case that there is a warrantie paramount, Who shall deraigne that warrantie? and to whom shall the recompence in value goe? Some have said, that as they are vouched together, so shall they avouch over, and that the recompence in value shall enure according to the losse; and that the effect must pursue the cause, as a recoverie in value by a warrantie of the part of the mother shall goe to the heire of the part of the mother, &c.

Some others hold, that it is against the maxime of law, that they that are not heires to the warrantie should joyne in voucher, or to take benefit of the warrantie which descended not to them; but that the heire at the common law, to whom the warrantie descended, shall deraigne the warrantie, and recover in value; and that this doth stand with the rule of the common law.

Others hold the contrarie, and that this should be both against the rule of law, and against reason also; for by the rule of law [e] the vouchee shall never sue to have execution in value, untill execution be sued against him. But in this case execution can never be sued against the heire at the common law, therefore he cannot sue to have execution over in value. Secondly, it should be against reason, that the heire at the common law should have totum lucrum, and the speciall heires totum damnum. I finde in our bookes, [f] that this reason is veiled, that the speciall heire should not be vouched only; for (say they) if the speciall heires should be vouched only, then could not they deraigne the warrantie over; which should be mischievous, that they should lose the benefit of the warrantie, if they should be vouched only. But if the heire at the common law were vouched with them, (as by the law he ought) all might be saved; and therefore studie well this point how it may be done.

[g] If tenant in generall taile be, and a common recoverie is had against him and his wife, where his wife hath nothing, and they vouch, and have judgement to recover in value, tenant in taile dieth, and the wife surviveth; for that the issue in taile had the whole losse, the recompence shall enure wholly to him; and the wife, albeit she was partie to the judgement, shall have nothing in the recompence, for that she loseth nothing.

[h] If the bastard eigne enter and take the profits, he shall be vouched only, and not the bastard and the mulier; because the bastard is in appearance heire, and shall not disable himselfe.

[i] If a man be seised of lands in gavelkinde, and hath issue three sonnes, and by obligation bindeth himselfe and his heires and dieth, an action of debt shall be maintainable against all the three sonnes, for the heire is not chargeable unlesse he hath lands by descent.

[k] So if a man be seised of land on the part of his mother, and binde himselfe and his heires by obligation, and dieth, an action of debt shall lie against the heire on the part of the mother, without naming of the heire at the common law. And so note a diversitie betwene a personall lien of a bond, and a reall lien of a warrantie.

Sect. 719.

[l] 24. E. 3. 36. 27. E. 3. age 108.
34. E. 3. 26. 40. E. 3. 9.
37. H. 8. Br. Notare. 1. & 40.
& m. Done & Rem. 61.

(Ant. 17. b. 22. b.
2. Roll. Abr. 417.
1. Roll. Abr. 627, 628.)

HERE it appeareth, that [l] whenever the ancestor taketh any estate of freehold, a limitation after in the same conveyance to any of his heires, are words of limitation, and not of purchase, albeit in words it be limited by way of remainder; (1) and therefore here the remainder, to the heires females, vesteth in the tenant in taile himselfe.

* NOTA, si terre soit done a un home, et a les heires males de son corps engendres, et par default de tiel issue, le remainder ent a ses heires females de son corps engendres, et puis le

NOTE, if land bee given to a man, and to the heirs males of his bodie begotten, and for default of such issue, the remainder thereof to his heirs females of his body begotten, and after the donee

* Nota—Item, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In a late very distinguished publication it is observed, that "where there is a gift to A. and his heirs for ever, or to A. and the heirs of his body begotten, the first words (to A.) create an estate for life; the latter (to his heirs, or the heirs of his body) create a remainder in fee, or in tail, which the law, to prevent an abeyance, refers to and vests in the ancestor himself, who is thus tenant for life, with an immediate remainder in fee or in tail; and then by the conjunction of the two estates, or the merger of the less in the greater, he becomes tenant in fee, or tenant in tail in possession." See for Wm. Blackstone's argument in the case of Perrin v. Blake, published by Mr. Hargrave among his Tracts, fol. 500. This exposition of the expression in question he afterwards applies, with great ability, in his investigation of the rule in Shelley's case. He lays it down as the great fundamental maxim upon which the construction of every devise must depend, that the intention of the testator shall be fully and punctually observed, so far as the same is consistent with the established rules of law, and no farther. He makes a distinction between those rules of law which are to be considered as the fundamental rules of the property of this kingdom, and are therefore of that essential, permanent and substantial kind, which cannot be exceeded or transgressed by any intention of a testator, however clearly or manifestly expressed; and those rules of a more arbitrary, technical, and artificial kind, which the intention of a testator may controul. He then supposes that there is a third class of rules, of a still more flexible nature. Among the rules of the first class he reckons these: that every tenant in fee simple, or fee tail, shall have the power of alienating his estates, by the several modes adapted to their respective interests; that no disposition shall be allowed, which in its consequence tends to a perpetuity; that lands shall descend to the eldest son or brother alone, or to all the daughters or sisters in partnership. Among the rules of the second class he reckons those rules of interpretation by which the courts invariably construe particular modes of expression to denote a particular intention in the testator. Thus, says he, if a man devises his land, being freehold, to another generally, without specifying the duration of his estate, the courts consider it as evidence that he intended the devise should be only tenant for life; but if he devises, in like manner, a chattel interest, the courts consider it to be evidence of his intention that the devisee should have the total property. Among the rules of the third class he reckons the rule in Shelley's case. Having admitted that the second and third class of rules allow of exceptions, when it appears to be the testator's intention that the operation of his devise should be different from that which the legal operation of the words in which it is penned would be, he adds, that this intention shall not have this effect, unless it is manifest and certain; so that if his intention that his words should operate contrary to their technical and legal import, does not appear by express words, or by necessary implication, the legal operation of the words must take effect. He applies this rule to the case of Perrin v. Blake. He argues, that it does not appear by any evidence that the testator intended his words should not have their legal operation: he donee en le taile fait feoffment en fee ovesque garrantie accor-dant, et ad issue fits et file et morust,

cel garrantie n'est
forsque lineal gar-rantie a le fits a demaunder per brieve
de formedon en le discender; et auxy il
n'est forsque lineall a le file, a demaunder mesme la terre per brieve de formedon
en le remainder, si-
non * frere deviaist sans issue male, pur ceo que el claime come beire female de la corps son pere engen-dres. Mes en cest
cas, si son frere en sa vie releasast al discon-tinuee, &c. ove gar-rantie, &c. et puis
morust sauns issue, ceo est un collateral gar-rantie a le file, pur ceo que el ne poit con-veyer a luy le droit que el ad per force
de le remaynder per ascun meane de dis-
cent per son frere, † pur ceo ‡ que le frere
est collateral a le title
sa soer, et pur ceo son garrantie est collateral, &c.

donee in tayle maketh
a feoffment in fee
with warrantie accordingly, and hath issue
a son and a daughter and dieth, this warrantie is but a lineall warrantie to the sonne to demand by a writ of formedon in the discender; and also it is but lineall to the daughter, to demand
the same land by writ of formedon in the remaynder, unlessse the brother dieth without issue male, because shee claimeth as heire female of the bodie of her father ingendred.
But in this case, if her brother in his life release to the discon-
tinuee, &c. with warrantie, &c. and after dieth without issue, this is a collateral warranty to the daughter,
because shee cannot convey to her the right which shee hath by force of the remainder by any meanes of dis-
cent by her brother,
for that the brother is collateral to the title of his sister, and therefore his warranty is collateral, &c.

knowne, that for learning fake, and to find out the reason of the law, these limitations to the heires males of the bodie, and after to the heires females of the bodie may be put: but it is dangerous to use them in conveyances, for great incon-veniencies may arise therupon; for if such a tenant in tayle hath issue divers sons, and they have issue divers daughters, and likewise if tenant in tayle hath issue divers daughters, and each of them hath issue sonnes, none of the daughters of the sons, nor the sonnes of the daughters, shall ever inherite to either of the said estates tayle: and so it is of the issues of the issues, for that (as hath beene said) the issues inheritable must make their claime eyther onely by males, or onely by females, so as the females of the males, or males of the females, are wholly excluded to bee inheritable to eyther of the said estates tayle: but where the first limitation is to the heires males, let the limitation be, for default of such issue, to the heires of the bodie of the donee, and then all the issues, be they females of males, or males of females, are inheritable.

If a man give lands to a man, to have and to hold to him and the heires males of his bodie, and to him and to the heires females of his bodie, the estate to the heires
females is in remaynder, and the daughters shall not inherit any part, so long as there is issue male; for the estate to the heires males is first limited, and shall be first served; and it is as much to say, and after to the heires females, and males in construction of law are to be preferred.

1. H. 6. 4. 11. H. 6. 13. 14.
28. H. 6. Devif. 18. Statham.
Devife. Pl. Com. 414.
20. H. 6. 43. Vid. Litt. ca. Taile, Sect. 24. 37. H. 8. Br. done &
rem. 61. & tit. nofme 1. & 40.

(Ant. 25. a. b.)

(Vaugh. 358. g. 376. Ant. 374. a.)

Sect.

* finon—fi son, L. and M. Roh. Pinson, Redman, and MSS. This reading, which materially alters the sense of the above passage of Littleton, was much relied on by lord Vaughan as above cited, and is also accordingly confirmed by edit. 1577, by R. Tottel; 1594, by C. Yettsweirt; and by that of 1639. It is however observable, that the text stood as above in the first edition of Coke upon Littleton 1628, and in all the editions to the 9th inclusive. † et added L. and M. and Roh. ‡ que not in L. and M. nor Roh.

he says, the question is not whether the testator intended the ancestor should or should not have a power of alienating the lands devised to him, or should have only an estate for his life. He admits it to be clear, that he intended the ancestor should not have a power of alienating the lands, and that he should take only an estate for his life: but the real question, he says, is, how the heirs were intended to take, whether as descendants or purchasers. If the testator intended they should take as purchasers, the ancestor remained tenant for life; if he meant they should take by descent, or had formed no intention about the matter, then, says he, by operation and consequence of law the inheritance is vested in the ancestor. He says, that in the case of Perrin and Blake, it is neither clearly expressed nor manifestly to be implied from any part of the testator's will, that he intended the heirs should take as purchasers: he therefore concludes, that the words in question should be construed according to their legal operation; and consequently, that in conformity to the rule laid down in Shelley's case, they should operate not as words of purchase, but as words of descent, and the ancestor therefore take an estate in tail.—Mr. Hargrave, in his observations concerning the rule in Shelley's case, remarks, that those who wish to avoid the rule avow, that they consider it as subordinate to the intention of the testator, as a rule of interpretation, as merely a technical construction of words, which yields to the intention whenever they are opposed to each other; that as soon as they discover that it is not the testator's intention that the first taker should have a power of barring the entail to his heirs, they think the victory over the rule is complete. On the other hand, those who wish to support the rule insist, that it is a rule of interpretation, established on decrees of the most authoritative decisions, which cannot be departed from without levelling the great land marks, by which the titles to real property are ascertained, and establishing in their room a monstrous latitude of uncertain and arbitrary construction. He says, he finds something to approve, and something to condemn on both sides of these discordant comments upon the rule; and that in both there is one common error. To the opponents of the rule he admits, that where the rule would disappoint a lawful intention sufficiently expressed, it ought not to be effected. But he asks, whether the intention is lawful. The rule, as he considers it, is a conclusion of law upon certain principles—so absolute, as not to have any thing to say to the intention, if these premises really belong to the case; and these premises, he insists, are an intention by heirs of the body, or other words of inheritance, to comprehend the whole line of heirs to the tenant for life, and so to build a succession upon his preceding estate of freehold. This being so, if in such cases the word heirs is used in that its large and proper sense, it is a contradiction to the rule, to intend that the remainder to the heirs shall operate by purchase, and such intent is not lawful; so that it is incumbent on those who oppose this application of the rule, to shew, that the word heirs is used in a qualified sense, and intended merely to describe certain persons, who, at the death of the tenant for life, may answer that description, and to give a succession of heirs to them: this being shewn, the rule, he says, no longer applies. But nothing less than

Sect. 720.

(9. Rep. 127.)

(Plowd. 403. a.)

ITEM, jeo ay oye dire, que en temps le roy Richard le second, il y fuit un justice del common banke, demurrant en Kent, appel Richel, que avoit issue divers fits, et son entent fuit, que son eigne fits averoit certaine terres et tenements a luy, et a les heires de son corps engendres; et pur default d'issue, le remainder a le second fits, &c. et issint a le tierce fits, &c. et pur ceo que il voile que nul de ses fits alieneroit, ou ferroit garrantie pur barrer ou leder les auters queux serront en le remainder, &c. il fist faire tiel indenture a tiel effect, c'estasca-voir, que les terres et tenements fueront dones a son eigne fits sur tiel condition, que si l'eigne fits aliena en fee, ou en fee taile, &c. ou si ascun de ses fits alienast, &c. que adonque lour estate cessera et ferroit void, et que adonque mesmes les terres et tenements immediate remaindront a le second fits, et a les heires de son corps engendres, * et sic ultra, le remainder as auters de ses fits, et livery de seisin fuit fait accordant.

ALSO, I have heard say, that in the time of king Richard the second, there was a justice of the common place, dwelling in Kent, called Richel, who had issue divers sonnes, and his intent was, that his eldest sonne should have certaine lands and tenements to him, and to the heires of his bodie begotten; and for default of issue, the remainder to the second sonne, &c. and so to the third sonne, &c. and because he would that none of his sons should alien, or make warrantie to bar or hurt the others that should be in the remainder, &c. he causeth an indenture to be made to this effect, viz. that the lands and tenements were given to his eldest son upon such condition, that if the eldest son alien in fee, or in fee taile, &c. or if any of his sons alien, &c. that then their estate should cease and be void, and that then the same lands and tenements immediately should remain to the second son, and to the heires of his body begotten, et sic ultra, the remainder to his other sonnes, and livery of seisin was made accordingly.

21. H. 6. f. 33. L. 6. f. 42. b.
fir Anthony Mildmaye's case.

(1. Rep. 84.)

[m] 2. H. 4. f. 21. in Action
sur le case.

JEO ay oye dire, &c. Those things that one hath by credible hearefay, by the example of our author, are worthy of observation. This invention, devised by justice Richel in the reigne of king Richard the second, who was an Irishman borne, and the like by Thirning, chiefe-justice in the reigne of Henry the fourth, were both full of imperfections; for Nihil simul inventum est et perfectum, and Saepe viatorem nova non vetus orbita fallit; and therefore new inventions in assurances are dangerous. And hereby it may appeare, that it is not safe for any man (be he never so learned) to be of counsell with himselfe in his owne case, but to take advice of other great and learned men.

Non profunt dominis quae profunt omnibus, artes.

And the reason hereof is, in suo quisque negotio hebetior est, quam in alieno.

[m] And the same judge, in his owne name, &c. brought an action upon his case against others, and obtained a verdict. so as the right of the cause was tried on his side; yet for that upon his owne shewing in his count the action did not lye, ex assensu omnium iudiciorum praeter querentem Richel, judgement was given against him: but let us now leave this judge for example to others, and let us return to our author.

Sect.

* ceo sur mesme condition, scilicet, que si le second fits alienast, &c. que adonques son estat cessera, et que adonques mesmes les terres et tenements remaindront al tierce fits, et a les heires de son corps engendres, added L. and M. and Roh.

than its appearing, that by the heirs of the body or heirs general, the whole line and succession of heirs to the tenant for life, or, in other words, the whole of his inheritable blood was not meant, can deliver the case from the rule. He says, that the genuine rule in Shelley's case, is part of an ancient policy of the law to guard against the creation of estates of inheritance, with qualities, incidents, or restrictions, foreign to their nature. Thus it is one of the properties of an estate in fee simple, that it may be alienated by the party seised, so that a condition not to alien is void at law. Thus curtesy and dower are incidents to estates of inheritance, and inseparably annexed to them; that these known examples of incidents, inseparable from inheritance, lead to a discovery of a foundation for the rule, which in a moment renders it paramount to, and independent of private intention. It is one branch of a policy of law, adopted to prevent annexing to a real descent the qualities and properties of a purchase, and so is calculated to render impossible the creation of an amphibious species of inheritance; that is, an estate of freehold, with a perpetual succession to heirs, without the other properties of inheritance; in other words, an inheritance in the first ancestor, with the privilege of vesting in the heirs by purchase the succession of one to another, without the legal effects of a descent, a compound of descent, and purchase.—Such a commixture would, he says, have put an end to all those lines of distinction by which we so easily and certainly discriminate inheritances from mere estates of freehold. It would have been a continual source of fraud upon feudal tenure. When the heir came into the tenure by descent, the lord was entitled to those grand fruits of military tenure, wardship and marriage; but if he took by purchase, only the trifling acknowledgment of relief was due to the lord. If the heir were allowed to succeed by purchase, it would defeat the specialty creditors of the ancestor; it would have suspended all actions for the inheritance of land. If private intention had been permitted to annex to real heirship the contradiction of taking by purchase, what principle of our law would have remained to resist stripping the title by succession of all the other effects and consequences legally appropriated to it? Why might it not have given to purchase the qualities of descent? It is a positive rule of our law, that a man cannot raise a fee simple to his own right heirs as purchasers, either by legal conveyance, or by conveyance to uses. By this it is meant, that where the ancestor wills that at his death his heirs shall, by gift from him, come to that very inheritance which the law of descent and succession throws upon them, it is construed as a vain and fruitless attempt to give that to the heirs which the law vests in them. It amounts to a prohibition upon the ancestor against making his heirs purchasers, by giving at his death what the law confers without his aid. But this rule applies only to the acts of the ancestor; it was there-

Sect. 721.

MES il semble per reason, que tous
tielx remainders en la forme avantdit
sont voides et de nul
value, et ceo pur
trois causes. Un cause
est, pur ceo que ches-cun remainder que
commence per un fait,
il covient que le remainder soit en luy a que le remainder est
tayle per force de mesme le fait, avant
liverie de seisin est
fait a luy que ave-
ra le franktenement;
car en tiel case le nessance et le estre de le remainder est per le livery de seisin a celuy que avera le frank-tenement, et tiel remainder ne fuit al second fts al temps
de livery de seisin
en le cas avantdit,
&c.

BUT it seemeth by reason, that all such remainders in the forme aforefaid are void and of no value,
and that for three causes. One cause is,
for that every remainder which beginneth
by a deed, it behooveth that the remainder be in him to whom the remainder is entailed by force of the same deed, before the livery of seisin is made to him which shal
have the freehold; for in such case the growing and the being of the remainder is by the livery of seisin to him that shall have the freehold, and such remainder was not to the second sonne at the time of the livery of seisin in the case aforefaid, &c.

HERE our authour is of opinion, that these remainders in the forme aforefaid, are void and of no value for three causes.

Un cause est, &c.

Here hee setteth downe a rule concerning remainders, viz.
every remainder which commenceth by a deed ought to vest in him to whom it is limitted, when livery of seisin is made to him that hath the particular estate.

First, Littleton saith by deed, [n] because if lands bee granted and rendred by fine for life, the remainder in taile, the remainder in fee, none of these remainders are in them in the remainder, untill the particular estate be executed.

Secondly, that the remainder bee in him, &c. at the time of the livery. This is regularly true; but yet it hath divers exceptions. First, un-lesse the person that is to take the remainder be not in rerum natura; [o] as if a lease for life be made, the remainder to the right heires of I. S.
I. S. being then alive, it suf-ficeth that the inheritance passeth presently out of the lessour, but cannot vest in the heire of I. S. for that living his father he is not in rerum natura, for non est hæres vi- ventis; so as the remainder

(Plowd. 25. a. 29. a.
a. Cro. 360.)

[n] 7. R. a. Scire facias,
(Ant. 354. b.)

(Cro. Eliz. 360.)

(a. Roll. Abr. 419.)
[o] 32. H. 6. tit. Feoffments & Falls, 99. 27. E. 3. 87.
11. R. 2. Detinue, 46.
2. H. 7. 13. 12. H. 7. 27.
12. E. 4. 2. 21. H. 7. 11.
7. H. 4. 23. 11. H. 4. 74.
18. H. 8. 3. 27. H. 8. 42.
38. E. 3. 26. 30. Aff. 47.
6. R. 2. qu. Jur. clam. 20.
(1. Rep. 94.)

is good upon this contingent, viz. if I. S. die during the life of the lessee.

[p] And so it is if a man make a lease for life to A. B. and C. and if B. survive C. then the remainder to B. and his heires. Here is another exception out of the said rule; for albeit the person be certaine, yet inasmuch as it depends upon the dying of B. before C. the remainder cannot vest in C. presently. And the reason of both these cases in effect is, because the remainder is to commence upon limitation of time, viz. upon the possibilitie of the death of one man before another, which is a common possibilitie.

A man letteth lands for life upon condition to have fee, and warranteth the land in forma prædictâ, afterward the lessee performeth the condition whereby the lessee hath fee, the warranty shall extend and increase according to the state. And so it is in that case if the lessor had died before the performance of the condition, the warrantie shall rise and increase according to the estate, and yet the lessor himselfe was never bound to the warrantie, but it hath relation from the first livery. And by this it appeareth that a warranty being a covenant reall executory, may extend to an estate in futuro, having an estate, whereupon it may worke in the beginning. But if a man grant a feignorie for yeares upon condition to have fee with

[p] Pl. Com. Colthirst's case, fol. 25. 29.
(3. Rep. 20. 2. Rep. 57. a. b.)

(8. Rep. 73.)

(Hob. 130. 131.)

therefore requisite to have a like barrier as to acts between persons not standing in that relation towards each other. This is effected by the rule in Shelley's case. Thus explained, says he, the rule in Shelley's case can no longer be treated as a medium for discovering the testator's intention. The ordinary rules for the interpretation of deeds should be first resorted to. When it is once settled that the donor or testator has used words of inheritance, according to their legal import; has applied them intentionally to comprize the whole line of heirs to the tenant for life; has made him the terminus, by reference to whom the succession is to be regulated; then the rule in Shelley's case applies, and the heir shall not take by purchase. But if it shall be decided that the testator or donor did not mean to involve the whole line of heirs to the tenant for life; did not mean to ingraft a succession on his estate, and to make him the ancestor or terminus; but instead of this, intended to use the word heirs in a limited, restrictive, and qualified sense; intended to point at that individual person who should be the heir at the moment of the ancestor's decease; intended to give a distinct estate of freehold to such single heir, and to make his or her estate of freehold the ground-work of a succession of heirs; to construe him or her the ancestor, terminus, or stock, for the succession to take its course from:—in every one of these cases, the premises are wanting upon which the rule in Shelley's case interposes its authority, and the rule therefore becomes extraneous matter.—Previously to Mr. Hargrave's publication, the rule in question had been discussed, with infinite learning and ability, by Mr. Fearne, in his Essay on Contingent Remainders. In this justly celebrated work, Mr. Fearne observes, that the rule in Shelley's case is supposed to have been originally introduced to prevent frauds upon the tenure; and that if such a limitation had been construed a contingent remainder, the ancestor might, in many cases, have destroyed it for his own benefit: if not, he might have let it remain to his heirs in as beneficial manner as if it had descended to him, at the same time that the lord would have been deprived of those fruits of the tenure, which would have accrued to him upon a descent. He then minutely and accurately examines all the cases upon the subject, which had come before the courts of law and equity, and investigates very fully the principles upon which they were determined. He says, "that in the case of Perrin and Blake, the question is not whether the words, heirs of the body, may not, under certain circumstances, be taken as words of purchase; but whether those words, standing perfect, independent, and unexplained, and preceded by a limitation of the legal freehold to the ancestor in the same will, have ever been construed as words of purchase." To this he replies, "that not one of the cases, till that of Perrin and Blake, can fairly be urged in support of an affirmative answer to that question." The three very masterly performances referred to in this note, will make the reader fully acquainted with the general merits of the case in question, and of the several points of legal learning, upon the discussion of which it either immediately or incidentally depends. But as the subject is necessarily of a very abstruse and intricate nature, and the arguments used in support of the different opinions respecting it are necessarily complicated and interwoven with one another, the following discrimination of the leading points upon which the decision of the case must ultimately turn, will, perhaps, be useful to those who wish to obtain an accurate knowledge of the doctrine in dispute.—1. Let us first suppose, that after a devise to a man for life, and a subsequent devise to the heirs of his body, the testator with a warranty in formā prædictā, and after the condition is performed, this shall not extend to the fee, because the first estate was but for yeares, which was not capable of a warranty. And so it is, if a man make a lease for yeares, the remainder in fee, and warrant the land in formā prædictā, he in the remainder cannot take benefit of the warranty, because he is not partie to the deed; and immediately he cannot take, if he were partie to the deed, because he is named after the habendum, and the estate for yeares is not capable of a warrantie. And so it is if land be given to A. and B. so long as they joyntly together live, the remainder to the right heires of him that dieth first, and warrant the land in formā prædictā; A. dieth, his heire shall have the warrantie; and yet the remainder vested not during the life of A. for the death of A. must precede the remainder, and yet shall the heire of A. have the land by descent.

1. Rep. 17.)

Sect. 722.

S I le primer fits alienast, &c. By the alienation of the donee two things are wrought:

First, the franktenement and fee is in the alienee.

Secondly, the reversion is devested out of the donor.

[7] 21. H. 7. 11. 27. H. 8. 24.

[7] 6. R. 2. quid juris clam. 20. (Perk. Sect. 729. fol. 275. 276. Dyer 209. a. Plowd. 487.)

Argumentum ex absurdo. (5. Rep. 8.2.)

[7] 20. H. 8. Presentments al. Equites. Br. 52. 33. H. 8. ib. 55. 29. H. 8. Dicr. 35. 11. Eliz. 282. 283. (5. Rep. 56.)

[7] 15. H. 7. 7. 19. E. 3. quar. imp. 154. (3. Cro. 790. 791.)

[7] And therefore by the alienation that transferreth the freehold and fee simple to the alienee, there can no remainder be raised and vested in the second sonne. [7] As if a man make a lease for life upon condition that if the lessor grant over the reversion, that then the lessee shall have fee; if the lessor grant the reversion by fine, the lessee shall not have fee; for when the fine transferreth the fee to the conusee, it should bee absurd, and repugnant to reason, that the same fine should worke an estate in the lessee; for one alienation cannot vest an estate of one and the same land to two severall persons at one time.

In a man's owne grant, which is ever taken most forcibly against himselfe, the reason of Littleton doth hold; for it hath beene resolved by the justices, [7] that if a man seised of an advowson in fee by his deed granteth the next presentation to A. and before the church becometh void, by another deed grant the next presentation of the same church to B. the second grant is void, for A. had the same granted to him before; and the grantee shall not have the second avoydance by construction, to have the next avoydance, which the grantor might lawfully grant, for the grant of the next avoydance doth not import the second presentation. [7] But if a man seised of an advowson

L E second cause est, si le primer fits alienast les tenements en fee, adonques est le franktenement et le fee simple en l'alienee, et en nul autre; et si le donour avoit ascun reversion, per tiel alienation le reversion est discontinue: adonques coment per ascun reason poit ceo estre que tiel remainder commencera son estre et son nessance immediate apres tiel alienation fait a un estrange, que ad per mesme l'alienation franktenement et fee simple, &c. Et auxy si tiel remainder serroit bone, adonques purroit il enter sur l'alienee, lou il n'avoit ascun maner de droit avant l'alienation, que serra inconvenient.*

T HE second cause is, if the first sonne alien the tenements in fee, then is the freehold and the fee simple in the alienee, and in none other; and if the donor had any reversion, by such alienation the reversion is discontinued: then how by any reason may it be, that such remainder shall commence his being and his growing immediately after such alienation made to a stranger, that hath by the same alienation a freehold and fee simple, &c.? And also if such remainder should bee good, then might hee enter upon the alienee, where he had no manner of right before the alienation, which should bee inconvenient.

* ceo not in L. and M. nor Roh.

in expresse words declares it to be his intention, that by the devises in question he means to give the ancestor the estate for his life only, and to give an estate in fee by purchase to his heirs: Is the rule in question of that very rigid and forcible nature, as to be unaffected and uncontroled by these expresse words?—II. If the answer to this question is, that the expresse declaration of the testator will, in this case, controul the legal operation of the words, heirs of the body, the next question is, Can any words short of an expresse declaration have this effect? or, in other language, Can that rule be controulled by words of implication?—III. If the answer is in the affirmative, the next enquiry is, Whether, to form such an implication as will controul the rule, it is sufficient that it appears to be the testator's intention that the ancestor should take an estate for his life only?—IV. Or, Must it also appear to be his intention that the heirs should take, not as descendants, but as purchasers?—V. Must it also appear how or what estates he intends the heirs to take?—VI. And how and what estates may the heir take by the law of England, his ancestor taking by the same instrument an estate for his life only?—Such, perhaps, will be the process of enquiry, if it is admitted, that there are cases where, in devises of this nature, the heirs will take by purchase; but if that is not admitted; if it is asserted, that where a testator has once devised to a man for life, and afterwards to the heirs of his body, no other words, however positive and expresse, shall controul the legal operation of the words, heirs of his body; it will then remain to inquire into the ground of the supposed inflexibility and rigidity of the rule.—1. Is it that it is against the law of the land, that lands should be conveyed to the ancestor for life with such estate or estates in remainder to the heirs of his body, as those heirs must be supposed to take, if they take as purchasers?—To resolve this question with accuracy, it should first be settled what estate or estates the heirs of the body would take under this construction; and then it should be supposed that such estate or estates are devised by the most accurate and scientific legal expressions: if devises so worded would be held contrary to law, the necessary conclusion is, that the object intended to be effected by the testator is against law.—II. If it appears that such estate or estates are not contrary to the law, but it still is contended that a devise to one for life, and after his decease to the heirs of his body, shall make the heirs take by descent, contrary to the testator's intention, the only remaining ground to support that conclusion is, that to make the heirs take by descent in devises of this nature, is a point of construction so fixedly and unalterably settled by judicial determination, that it is not now in the breast of any court to deviate from it. By investigating the rule in question under the above heads of enquiry, a regular and distinct view may, it is conceived, be obtained of the different points of law which relate to it, and of the different grounds upon which an opinion upon it may be framed.—It is greatly to be lamented that there should be so much uncertainty and difficulty in the application of a rule of law, to which resort must be so often had on the construction of wills. All parties agree that the rule has an existence; but from the liberality which is allowed in the construction of wills, it has been contended that it does not extend to those devises to which it cannot be applied, without son in fee take wife; now by act in law is the wife intitled to the third presentation, if the husband die before. The husband grant the third presentation to another, the husband die, the heire shall present twice, the wife shall have the third presentation, and the grantee the fourth; for in this case it shall be taken the third presentation, which he might lawfully grant: and so note a diversitie betweene a title by act in law, and by act of the partie; for the act in law shall worke no prejudice to the grantee.

(2. Cro. 691. contra Winch 94. a. c. Hob. 120. Ant. 189. a.)

Auxi si tiel remainder ferroit bone, &c. The force of this argument is, that seeing the estate of the alienee (albeit the words of the condition be, that the state should cease and be void) being an estate of inheritance in lands or tenements, cannot cease or be void before the state be defeated by entrie; then if this remainder should be good, then must it give an entrie upon the alienee to him that had no right before, which should be against the expresse rule of law, viz. that an entrie cannot be given to a stranger to avoid a voydable act, as before hath beene said in the Chapter of Conditions.

(Ant. 214. b. 218. a.)

Lequel serra inconvenient. Here note three things. First, that whatsoever is against the rule of law is inconvenient. Secondly, that an argument ab inconvenienti is strong to prove it is against law, as often hath beene observed. Thirdly, that new inventions (though of a learned judge in his owne profession) are full of inconvenience, Periculosum est res novas et inusitatas inducere.

Vide Sect. 87, &c.

Eventus varios res nova semper habet.

Sect. 723.

LA tierce cause est, quant la condition est tiel, que si l'aigne fits alienast, &c. que son estate cessera ou ferroit void, &c. donques apres tiel alienation, &c. poit le donor enter per force de tiel condition †, coment il semble; et issint le donor ou ses beires en tiel case doivent puis tost aver la terre que le second fits, que n'avoit ascun droit devant tiel alienation; et issint il semble que tielx remainders en le cas avantdit sont voides ‡.

THE third cause is, when the condition is such, that if the elder sonne alien, &c. that his estate shall cease or bee void, &c. then after such alienation, &c. may the donor enter by force of such condition, as it seemeth; and so the donor or his heires in such case ought sooner to have the land than the second sonne, that had not any right before such alienation; and so it seemeth that such remainders in the case aforesayd are void.

HERE it is to bee observed, that part of the condition that prohibiteth the alienation made by tenant in taile is good in law, with such distinction as hath beene before said in the Chapter of Conditions. And the consequent of the condition, viz. that the lands should remaine to another, &c. is void in law, and by the opinion of Littleton the donor may re-enter for the condition broken; for Utile per inutile non vitiatur: which being in case of a condition for the defeating of an estate, is worthy of observation.

(1. Rep. 48. 62. 120. 10. Rep. 35. 9. Rep. 127. 6. Rep. 40. 2. Rep. 50. Ant. 224. a.)

And it is to bee noted, that after the death of the donor, the condition descendeth to the eldest sonne, and consequently his alienation doth extinguish the same forever; wherein the weaknesse of this invention appeareth: and therefore Littleton here saith, that it seemeth that the donor may re-enter, and speaketh nothing of his heire. A man hath issue two sonnes, and maketh a gift in taile to the eldest, the remainder in fee to the puisne, upon condition, that the eldest shall not make any discontinuance with warrantie to barre him in the remainder; and if he doth, that then the puisne sonne and his heires shall re-enter, the eldest make a feoffment in fee with warrantie, the father dieth, the eldest sonne dieth without issue, the puisne may enter; but if the discontinuance had beene after the death of the father, the puisne could not have entred. In this case foure points are to be observed. First, as Littleton here saith the entrie for the breach of the condition is given to the father, and not to the puisne sonne. Secondly,

(1. Roll. Abr. 408.)

(10. Rep. 40. b.)

(10. Rep. 109.)

that

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

without defeating the intention of the testator. It is certain, that no rule of law has a more ancient origin, or is more generally established, than that if a testator expresses his intention defectively, either by not using technical and artificial terms, or by using them improperly, yet if his intention can be collected from his will, the law, however defective his language may be, will construe his words according to his intention; and if the object of it is warranted by the established rules of law and equity, will admit its full operation and effect. It is equally certain, on the other hand, that if the testator's intention appears to be to effect that which the rules of law and equity do not admit, neither the courts of law nor the courts of equity can allow its operation. The first thing, therefore, to be ascertained, is, what the object of the testator is; the next, whether it is such as the rules of law and equity admit. To determine the last point, as soon as it is settled what the testator's intention is, let him be supposed to have expressed it, not in the words actually made use of by him, but in the most accurate and scientific language. If, when so expressed, its operation will be allowed, both at law and in equity, it must be admitted on all hands that it should have its operation and effect, notwithstanding any inaccuracy or impropriety used by the testator in his method of expressing it. But if, when expressed in artificial and scientific language, the law will not give it effect, it must equally be admitted, that it is no longer in the power of the courts to give it an operation; the fault of the testator's will being, not that he has expressed his intention inaccurately, but that the object of his intention is unlawful. To apply this reasoning to the case of Perrin v. Blake, what was the testator's intention? Supposing the heirs in that case to take by purchase, there are, it is conceived, but three constructions to be put upon such a devise. The first is, to suppose that the devise to the heirs of the body of the ancestor, to whom the life estate is limited, gives estates to his sons successively in tail, with remainders over in tail to his daughters as tenants in common. Devises of this nature are, unquestionably, conformable to law. They are the modifications of property most frequently introduced in the settlements of real estates. It follows, that if the words of the testator are construed in this sense, they are unobjectionable in point of law. But the courts of law have not thought themselves warranted to construe them in this sense; this construction, therefore, must be laid aside. The second construction is to suppose, that the testator's intention is to give the ancestor an estate of freehold, and to vest the inheritance in the person who, at the time of the ancestor's decease, should be the heir of his body, and to make that person the stock of the inheritance. It must be admitted, that this is perfectly lawful; and there is no doubt but a disposition of this nature, if framed in proper language, would be good, not only in a will, but in a deed. The question then will be, Whether that was the intention of the testator? It is obvious, that by the words heirs of the body, the testator means to comprehend all the heirs of the body of the devisee; but if the construction

41. E. 3. fol.

Vid. Sect. 446.

(10. Rep. 95.)

(Plowd. 413. Ant. 282. b.)

[*] 31. E. 3. Gager deliverance 5.
 22. Alf. 12. 38. E. 3. 1.
 2. H. 4. 18. &c.
 [a] 1. E. 3. cap. 15. stat. 3.
 18. E. 3. cap. 1. & 6.
 4. H. 4. ca. 2. 11. H. 6. c. 23.
 12. E. 4. cap. 8. &c.

that by the death of the father the condition descends to the elder sonne, and is but suspended, and is revived by the death of the eldest sonne without issue, and descendeth to the youngest sonne. Thirdly, that the feoffment made in the life of the father cannot give away a condition that is collateral, as it may doe a right. Fourthly, that a warrantie cannot binde a title of entrie for a condition broken (as hath beene said); but if the discontinuance had beene made after the death of the father, it had extinct the condition: which case is put to open the reason of our author's opinion. (1)

In these last three Sections our author hath taught us an excellent point of learning, that when any innovation or new invention starts up, to trie it with the rules of the common law (as our author here hath done); for these be true touchstones to sever the pure gold from the dross and sophistications of novelties and new inventions. And by this example you may perceive, that the rule of the old common law being soundly (as our author hath done) applied to such novelties, it doth utterly crush them and bring them to nothing; and commonly a new invention doth offend against many rules and reasons (as here it appeareth) of the common law; and the ancient judges and sages of the law have ever (as it appeareth [*] in our bookes) suppressed innovations and novelties in the beginning, as soone as they have offered to creepe up, lest the quiet of the common law might be disturbed: and so have [a] acts of parliament done the like, whereof by the authorities quoted in the margent, you may in stead of many others, upon this occasion take a little taste. But our excellent author, in all his three bookes, hath said nothing but Ex veterum sapientium ore et more.

Sect. 724.

(2. Inst. 293. cap. 3.)

ITEM, a le common ley, devant l'estatute de Gloucester, si tenant per le curtesie uft alien en fee ovesque garrantie, apres son decease ceo fuit un barre al heire†, sicome appiert per les parols de mesme l'estatute: mes il est remedy per mesme l'estatute, que le garrantie de le tenant per le curtesie ne ferroit my bar al heire, sinon que il y ad assets per discent per le tenant per le curtesie; car devant le dit estatute, ceo fuit un collateral garrantie al heire, pur ceo que il ne pouvoit conveyer ascun title de discent a les tenements per le tenant per le curtesie, mes tant seulement per sa mere, ou auters de ses ancestors‡; et ceo est le cause pur que il fuit collateral garrantie.*

ALSO, at the common law, before the statute of Gloucester, if tenant by the curtesie had aliened in fee with warrantie, after his decease this was a barre to the heire, as it appeareth by the words of the same statute: but it is remedied by the same statute, that the warrantie of tenant by the curtesie shall bee no barre to the heire, unlesse that hee hath assets by discent by the tenant by the curtesie; for before the sayd statute, this was a collateral warrantie to the heire, for that hee could not convey any title of discent to the tenements by the tenant by the curtesie, but only by his mother, or other of his ancestors; and this is the cause why it was a collateral warrantie.

Sect. 725.

MES si home enheritor prent feme, les queux ont § fits enter eux, et le pier devie, et le

BUT if a man inheritor taketh wife, who have issue a sonne betweene them, and the father di-fits

* accord added L. and M. and Roh.
 § issue added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) In some of the former notes, there has been found occasion to anticipate many of the observations which otherwise would have occurred upon this and the three preceding Sections. See ante 203. b. n. 1. 216. a. n. 2. 223. b. n. 1. and particularly 327. a. n. 2.— Some further observations on the subject of these Sections will be found at the foot of page 381. a. ¶ here contended for be admitted, only a particular series or line of such heirs will be admitted. None will be admitted but the person who happens at the time of the ancestor's decease to be the heir of his body, and the heirs of the body of that person; all the other heirs of the body of the ancestor will be utterly excluded. Thus, supposing him to have several sons, the eldest son would, at the time of the testator's decease, answer to the description of heir of his body; he, therefore, would take an estate by purchase, he would be the stock of the inheritance, and from him the lands would descend upon all his issue. But the devise would reach no farther; it would not comprehend the other sons of the ancestor, or their issue. Thus, if this construction should be received, the intention of the testator will be, to a great degree, absolutely defeated. If there are no ulterior limitations or devises after the devise to the heirs of the body of the tenant for life, the reversion in fee will descend on the eldest son; and he may, consequently, dispose of it from his brothers and their issue. If there are any such ulterior limitations or devises, the persons claiming under them would take before, and to the total disinherison of the other brothers and their issue. Of the second construction, therefore, must be repeated what was said of the first, that it is unobjectionable in point of law, but that it is not conformable to the intention of the testator. The third construction is, to suppose that the inheritance will first vest in the person answering, at the time of the decease of the ancestor, to the description of heir of his body; and that, on failure of issue of that person, it will vest in him who answers that description at the time of such failure of issue, and so on, while there are any such heirs remaining. This construction is conformable in some respects to the case of John de Mandeville, mentioned by Sir Edward Coke, ante 26. b. and see note in p. 488. of Mr. Douglas's Reports. The question then is, Whether there is any thing unlawful in this intention? To ascertain this, let it be tried by the test above mentioned, that is, let us suppose it expressed in the most accurate and technical language, that after the decease of the tenant for life, the lands shall go to the heirs of his body severally and successively, and the heirs of their several and respective bodies. This will give the first son or his issue, at the time of the ancestor's decease, an estate tail; and upon failure of that line of issue, the lands will vest for an estate tail in the person who, at the time of the failure of the issue of the first taking heir, will answer the description of heir of the body *fits entra en la terre, et endowa sa mere, et puis le mere alien ceo que el ad en sa dower, a un autre en fee ove garrantie accordant, et puis morust, et le garrantie descendist a le fits, ore le fits serra barre a demaunder mesme la terre per cause de la dit garrantie; pur ceo que tiel collateral garrantie de tenaunt en dower n'est pas remedie per aucun estatute. Mesme la ley est, lou tenaunt a terme de vie fait un alienation ovesque garrantie, &c. et morust, et le garrantie descendist a celui que avoit le reversion ou le remainder , ils seront barres per tiel garrantie †.

eth, and the sonne entreth into the land, and endow his mother, and after the mother alieneth that which shee hath in dower, to another in fee with warrantie accordant, and after dieth, and the warrantie descendeth to the sonne, now the son shall be barred to demand the same land by cause of the sayd warrantie; because that such collateral warrantie of tenaunt in dower is not remedied by any statute. The same law is it, where tenant for life maketh an alienation with warrantie, &c. and dieth, and the warranty descendeth to him which hath the reversion or the remainder, they shall be barred by such warrantie.

OF this and the subsequent Section sufficient hath beene sayd before in this Chapter, Sect. 697. (11. H. 7. cap. 20. Ant. 365. b.)

N'est pas remedie per aucun estatute. But by a statute made since, this case is remedied, as you see before, Sect. 697.

Sect. 726.

ITEM, en le dit case, si issint fuit que quant le tenant en dower alienast, ‡ &c. son heire fuit deins age, et auxy al temps que le garrantie descendist sur luy il fuit deins age; en cest cas l'heire poit apres enter sur l'aliennee, nient contristeant le garrantie descendist, &c. pur ceo que nul lacheffe serra adjudge en l'heire deins age, que il n'entra pas sur l'aliennee en la vie le tenant en dower. Mes

ALSO, in the case aforefaid, if it were so that when the tenant in dower aliened, &c. his heire was within age, and also at that time that the warrantie descended upon him hee was within age; in this case the heire may after enter upon the aliennee, notwithstanding the warrantie descended, &c. because no lacheffe shall be adjudged in the heire within age, that hee did not enter upon the aliennee in the life

HERE note this diversitie: if the heire bee within age at the time of the descent of the warrantie, he may enter and avoyd the estate either within age, or at any time after his full age: and Littleton saith well, that the infant in this case may enter upon the aliennee; for if he bring his action against him, he shall be barred by this warrantie, so long as the state whereunto the warrantie is annexed continue, and be not defeated by entrie of the heire: but if hee be within age at the time of the alienation with warrantie, and become of full age before the descent of the warranty, the warranty shall barre him for ever. Our author putteth his cases where the entrie of the infant is lawful; [a] for where the entrie of the infant is not lawful when the warrantie descendeth, 18. E. 4. 13. 35 H. 6. 63. 28. Aff. 28. 32. E. 3. Car. 30. (1. Rep. 120. 140.) (2. Roll. Abr. 773.) 35. H. 6. 63. [a] 3. H. 7. 9. 35. H. 6. 63. Br. tit. War. 54. 33. H. 8. tit. War. Br. 84. Lib. 1. fol. 67. a. in Archer's case, & 140. Chudley's case.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

body of the tenant for life, and soon till all the heirs of his body, and all their issue, are exhausted.—It is obvious, that a limitation of this nature differs materially from the limitations adopted in the first construction, viz. to the sons successively in tail male, with remainder to the daughters; for in that case the estate vests immediately in the first taker, and the other sons, and all the daughters, take vested remainders in tail. But according to the construction we are now speaking of, all after the first taker must be considered as taking per formam doni; supposing even that they take by purchase, all the estates after that of the first taker must be contingent. In fact, it is not very easy to ascertain how they would take. But certainly none of the other children, or their heirs, if this construction should be received, would take vested estates during the life of the first taker, or the continuance of issue of his body: for, till the events in question happened, it must be uncertain who, at the particular times in question, would answer to the description of heir of the body of the tenant for life; whereas, according to the first construction, all the children would answer the description under which they are designed, immediately upon their respective births. Such is the effect of this third construction.—Is there any thing in the devise, construing it in this manner, supposing it to be properly and accurately framed, that combats with any known rule of law? It is certain that such a limitation would be good, if the life estate, instead of being limited to the ancestor of the persons to whom the inheritance is afterwards limited, were limited to a stranger; as in the common case of a devise to A. for life, remainder to the right heirs, or the heirs of the body of I. S.—Why should its being a devise to the ancestor make a difference? It may even be contended, that a limitation and devise of this nature have been allowed in equity. In the case of Tipping v. Coffin, Cluth. 272, there was a limitation; and in lady Jones v. lady Say and Sele, 8. Vin. 262, there was a devise of a trust estate to the ancestor for life, with a legal remainder after his decease to the heirs of his body. In both cases it was admitted, that on account of the different qualities of their estates, the freehold being equitable, and the inheritance legal, they did not coalesce so as to be within the rule in Shelley's case; but it was allowed to be a good remainder in tail, in the heirs of the body of the ancestor; and in the former of these cases the verdict was for the person claiming the remainder. It may be answered (and certainly with a great appearance of reason) that on account of the different nature and quality of the estates, the mischief intended to be obviated by the rule in Shelley's case could not follow from admitting the heirs to take in these cases by purchase. Considering it with respect to the feudal principles, which are supposed to have given occasion to the rule, the lord would not have lost the fruits of his tenure, nor would the fee have been put into abeyance. This case, therefore, proves nothing in favour of the legality of the estates to be raised by the construction here contended for. This point is exhausted by Mr. Hargrave's treatise upon it. If the reader is convinced by it that the estates to be raised by this third construction are not such as the law admits, it follows, that supposing the devise in question

(1. Rep. 66.)

[w] 18. E. 3. 3.
(F. N. B. 192. g. 2. Infl. 483.)[g] 20. E. 3. Audit. quer. 27.
F. N. B. 104. k. 6. E. 3. 39.
17. E. 3. 76. 17. Aff. 53. 17.
21. E. 2. 4. 13. E. 3. Audit. quer. 26.
18. E. 3. Infant. 61.
16. H. 7. 5. 15. E. 4. 5.
8. H. 6. 30. 1. H. 7. 15.
(10. Rep. 43. Siderf. 321. 322.
F. N. B. 104. k. Moor. 76. 460.
9. Rep. 3. b. 12. Rep. 122. 123.)
6. H. 8. Saver de default Br. 50.
3. H. 6. 10. 1. Mar. Dy. 104.
(Ant. 131. a. Noy. 16.)

(Cro. Jac. 59. Yelv. 88. contra.)

[*] Pasch. 13. Ja. R. in the king's bench.(Ante 171. b. 246. a. 337. b.
35. b.)[y] Pl. Com. Stowel's case, 355.
etc.
(2. Rep. 44. Moor. 92.
4. Rep. 4. b. 9. Rep. 85.)

scendeth, the warrantie doth binde the infant, as well as a man of full age; and the reason thereof is, because the state whereunto the warrantie was annexed, continueth and cannot be avoided but by action, in which action the warrantie is a barre: and for the same reason likewise it is of a feme covert, if her entrie be not lawful, a warrantie descending on her during the coverture, doth bind her. [w] And albeit the husband be within age at the descent of the warrantie, yet if the entrie of the wife be taken away, the warrantie shall binde the wife.

[g] And herein a diversitie is to bee observed betweene matters of record done or suffered by an infant, and matters in fait; for matters in fait he shall avoid either within age, or at full age, as hath beene said: but matters of record, as statutes merchants and of the staple, recognizances knowledged by him, or a fine levied by him, recoverie against him by default in a reall action (saving in dower) must be avoyded by him, viz. statutes, &c. by audita querela, and the fine and recoverie (1) by writ of error during his minority, and the like. And the reason thereof is, because they are judiciall acts, and taken by a court or a judge, therefore the nonage of the partie, to avoyd the same, shall be tried by inspection of judges, and not by the countrey. And for that his nonage must be tried by inspection, this cannot be done after his full age: and so is the law clerely holden at this day, though there be some difference in our bookes. But if the age be inspected by the judges, and recorded that he is within age, albeit he come of full age before the reverfall, yet may it be reversed after his full age. * And so was it resolved by the whole court of king's bench in the case of Kekewich.

If lands had beene given to the husband and wife and their heires, and the husband had made a feoffment to another, to whom a collateral ancestor of the wife had releafed and died, and the husband died, (and this had beene before the statute of 32 H. 8.) this warrantie had so bound her waivable right, as she could not waive her estate, and claime dower. Otherwise it is of an estate determined: for if a disseisor make a lease to the husband and wife during the life of the husband, and the husband dieth, she may disagree to this estate determined, to save herselfe from dammages. And so note a diversitie betweene an estate determined, and an estate bound by warrantie.

Nul laches serra adjudge en le heire deins age. Laches, or laches, is an old French word for slacknesse, or negligence, or not doing. And the rule (that no negligence shall be adjudged in an infant) is true, where he is thereby to be barred of his entrie in respect of a former right, as by a descent; or of his former right, (as Littleton doth here put an example) by a warrantie where his entrie is congeble. But otherwise it is of conditions, charges and penalties going out of or depending upon the originall conveyance, for the laches or negligence shall be adjudged in those cases aswell in the infant as in any other. [y] Vide Pl. Com. Stowel's case per totum. And see further there, where an infant being tenant for life or yeares, shall be punished for doing or suffering of waste; and where he claimeth by purchase, a cessavit shall lie against him, if he pay not his rent by two yeares. And some have said, if he have the tenancie by descent, and he himselfe cesse, a cessavit doth lie, and he shall not have his age because it is of his owne cesse, 31. E. 3. Age 54. But other bookes (as some conceive them) be against that: Vide 9. Edw. 3. 50. 28. E. 3. 99. 14. E. 3. Age 88. 2. E.

(1) Since our author wrote, the law seems to be otherwise understood; for 'tis now the common practice for infants, having obtained a privy seal for that purpose, to suffer common recoveries; and the law seems to have been so settled ever since Blunt's case, which is reported in Hobart's Reports, page 196; which recovery was afterwards held good on a writ of error brought, and infancy assigned for error; as may be seen in W. Jones 318. Cro. Car. 357, where the case is reported under the names of the earl of Newport v. Sir Henry Mildmay. See Salk. 567. Note to the 11th edition.

to operate so as to give the heirs an estate by purchase, it must be construed in one of the three modes above mentioned. Now the two first of these modes are not reconcileable with what is acknowledged to be the general scope and object of the testator's intention; and the third is not reconcileable with the laws of the land. The consequence is, that the devise must be left to its legal operation, and the heir must take by descent. But if the reader should be of opinion that the estates which, if the third construction is admitted, will be created by the testator's will, are such as the law allows, still there will remain a formidable objection to the admission of that construction. It will appear, that by a series of adjudications, from the 18 Ed. II. to the case of Coulson v. Coulson, 17 Geo. II. inclusively, devises of the nature in question have been construed to vest the inheritance in the ancestor. Admitting therefore that the reason or foundation of the construction in question is not now discoverable, there still is great reason to contend that it is binding on the courts. This is by no means peculiar to the rule in Shelley's case. There are many other rules of construction received by the courts, which are arbitrary, and some of them not reconcileable to plain reason. Still, being adopted as rules of construction, the courts (sometimes even with an avowed reluctance) consider themselves to be bound to submit to them. It remains to observe, that the observations here offered to the reader, are intended to apply only to the devises of legal estates, and to those devises only in which the argument to except them from the rule in Shelley's case depends at the most on the two following circumstances: 1st, that it evidently appears to be the testator's intention to give the ancestor an estate for his life only; and 2^d, that it also evidently appears to be his intention that the heirs of his body should take by purchase. If the testator's intention appears to be to give the ancestor an estate for life only, and to give an estate by purchase to the heirs of his body; and if, besides this, his intention is, that by the devise to the heirs the inheritance should vest in that individual heir who, at the time of the decease of the tenant for life, shall be the heir of his body, and the heirs of the body of that person, and that the devise should reach no farther; or his intention is that the inheritance should descend upon the sons of the tenant for life successively in tail, with or without remainders to the daughters; and this ulterior intention appears from any other part of the will, either by plain declaration, or clear implication; then, as there is nothing unlawful in this disposition of his property, there is no rule of law or equity stands in the way of such construction.—But this ulterior construction is not to be implied from the mere circumstances of an estate for life only being given to the ancestor, and its appearing either by express words or implication, that it was his intention to give an estate by purchase to the heirs.—It may be said this brings the matter to as much uncertainty as attended it before: but surely that is not the case. Numberless as the cases respecting the point in question are, there are few indeed in which this ulterior explanation of the words, heirs of the body, occurs. See those cited by Mr. Justice Blackstone in Mr. Hargrave's Tracts, 502, 506.

si l'heire fuit deins age of tenant in dower. al temps del alienation, &c. et puis il devient al pleine age en la vie de le tenant en dower, et issint esteant de pleine age il n'entra pas sur l'aliennee en la vie de le tenant en dower, et puis le tenaunt en dower morust, &c. la peradventure l'heire serra barre per tiel garrantie; pur ceo que il serra recte sa follie, que il esteant de pleine age ne entra pas en la vie de le tenaunt en dower, &c. But if the heire were within age at the time of the alienation, &c. and after he commeth to full age in the life of tenant in dower, and so being of full age he doth not enter upon the aliennee in the life of tenant in dower, and after the tenant in dower dieth, &c. there peradventure the heire shall bee barred by such warrantie; because it shall bee accounted his folly, that he being of full age did not enter in the life of tenant in dower, &c.

and others, which books doe not prove that the cessavit doth not lye in that case, but the contrary, that hee shall have his age to the end, hee may at his full age certainly know what to plead, or what arrerages to tender; for the land was originally charged with the feignorie and services.

* Sect. 727.

MES ore per l'estatute fait 11. H. 7. cap. 10. il est ordeine, si ascun feme discontinue, alien, release, ou confirme ove garrantie ascun terres ou tenements que el tient en dower pur terme de vie, ou en tayle del done sa primer baron, ou de ses ancesters, ou del done d'ascun auter seisie al use le primer baron, ou de ses ancesters, que touts tiels garranties, &c. ferront voides; et que bien lirroit a cestuy que avoit ceux terres ou tenements, apres la mort de mesme la feme d'entrer.

BUT now by the statute made (Ant. 52. b. 395.)
11. H. 7. cap. 10. it is ordained, if any woman discontinue, alien, release, or confirme with warrantie any lands or tenements which she holdeth in dower for terme of life, or in taile of the gift of her first husband, or of his ancestors, or of the gift of any other seised to the use of the first husband, or of his ancestours, that all such warranties, &c. shall be void; and that it shall bee lawfull for him which hath these lands or tenements, after the death of the same woman to enter.

THIS is an addition to Littleton, and therefore to be passed over. And hereof sufficient hath beene said before, Sect. 697.

Sect. 728.

ITEM, il est parle
en le fine de le dit
estatute de Gloucester, que parle del alienation ovesque garrantie fait per le tenant per le curtesie en cest forme. Ensement, en
mesme le manner, ne
soit l'heire le feme a-pres la mort la pere et le mere barre d'action, s'il demanda l'heritage ou le mariage
sa mere per brieve
d'entre, que son pere aliena en temps sa
mere, dont nul fine est
levy en la court le

ALSO, it is spoken in the end of the said statute of Gloucester, which speaketh of the alienation with warrantie made by the tenant by the courtesie in this forme. Also, in the same manner, the heire of the woman after the death of the father and mother shall not bee barred of action, if hee demandeth
the heritage or the marriage of his mother by writ of entry,
that his father aliened
in his mother's time,

DONT nul fine est
levy en le court le roy, &c. Here are three (Ant. 115. a. 360. a. 365. b. 369. a.) things worthy of observation concerning the construction of statutes. First, that [a] it is the most naturall [a] Pl. Com. f. 75.

and genuine exposition of a 7. E. 3. 39.
statute to construe one part of the statute by another (3. Rep. 31. 59. part of the same statute, 4. Rep. 50. b. 58. 76.)
for that best expresth the meaning of the makers. As here the question upon the generall words of the statute is, whether a fine levied onely by a husband seised in the right of his wife with warranty shall bar the heire without assents. And it is well expounded by the former part of the act, whereby it is enacted, that alienation made by tenant by the courtesie with warrantie shall not bar the heire, unlessse assents descend,

Vide Bracton lib. 4. f. 321.
Fle a lib. 5. cap. 31.

(6. Rep. Gregory's case.
5. Rep. 60. 7. Rep. 37.
8. Rep. 20. 118. 138.
Plowd. 204, 205, 206. a. 465.
487. a. 11. Rep. 62. b.)

* This Section not in L. and M. nor Roh.

[Continuation of note to 379. b.]

The attempt mentioned in the Sections to which this note refers, is one of the many attempts which have been made at different times to prevent the exercise of that right of alienation which is inseparable from the estate of a tenant in tail. The chief of them are stated in a very pointed manner by Mr. Knowler, 1. Burr. 84. He observes, that the power to suffer a common recovery is a privilege inseparably incident to an estate tail: it is a potestas alienandi, which is not restrained by the statute de donis, and has been so considered ever since Taltarum's case [12. E. 4. 14. b. p. 16.]. And this power to suffer a common recovery cannot be restrained by condition, limitation, custom, recognizance, statute, or covenant. That it cannot be restrained by condition, appears by Co. Litt. 223. b. 224. a. and Sunday's case, 9. Rep. 128.—That it cannot be restrained by limitation, appears by Cro. Jac. 696. Foy v. Hinde, and by Sunday's case, and other books.—That it cannot be ascertained by custom, appears by the case of Taylor and Shaw, in Carter 6. and 22.—That it cannot be restrained by recognizance, or by statute, appears by Pool's case, cited in Moore 810.—That it cannot be restrained by covenant, appears by the case of Collins v. Plummer, 1. Peere Wms. 104.—That an attempt to suffer a common recovery cannot be restrained, appears by Cobbet's case, in the 1. Rep. 83. Mildmay's case, in the 6. Rep. 40. and the case of Pierce v. Wife, in 1. Vent. 321. And that a conclusion to suffer a recovery cannot be restrained, appears by Mary Portington's case, in the 10. Rep. 55.—One of the last attempts to establish a perpetuity was made in the will of John duke of Marlborough, where a power was given to trustees, on the birth of the sons of the several persons therein mentioned, to revoke the uses limited to those sons in tail male; and in lieu thereof, to limit the estates to the use of such sons for their lives, with immediate remainders to the respective sons of such sons severally and successively in tail male. Lord Northington, in 1759, declared this clause, as it tended to a perpetuity, and was repugnant to the estate limited, was void and of no effect. There was an appeal from this decree to the lords. After hearing counsel upon it, the judges were ordered to attend, and their opinion was asked, "Whether by the rules of law an estate tail limited to the use of persons unborn by any deed or will, can, by virtue of any power given by such deed or will to trustees, be revoked upon the births of such persons, and a new estate limited to such persons for their lives respectively, with remainder to their issue successively in tail male." The lord chief-justice of the common pleas delivered the unanimous opinion of the judges in the negative. The utmost stretch towards a perpetuity which the courts have hitherto allowed, is through the medium of an exercise of a power of appointment limited in a deed or will. If the objects of the powers be not restrained to any particular description of persons, but designed generally to be such persons as the party to whom the power is given shall appoint, there is no question but he may appoint life estates, with remainders over, in the descend. And therefore it should be inconvenient to intend the statute in such manner, as that he that hath nothing but in the right of his wife should by his fine levied with warrantie barre the heire without assets. And this exposition is ex visceribus actus.

Secondly, the words of an act of parliament must be taken in a lawfull and rightfull sense; as here the words being (whereof no fine is levied in the king's court) are to be understood, whereof no fine is lawfully or rightfully levied in the king's court. And therefore [b] a fine levied by the husband alone, is not within the meaning of the statute, for that fine should worke a wrong to the wife; but a fine levied by the husband and wife is intended by the statute, for that fine is lawfull and worketh no wrong. [c] So the statute of W. 2. cap. 5. saith (It. quod episcopus ecclesiam conferat) is construed, Ita quod episcopus ecclesiam legitime conferat; and the like in a number of other cases in our bookes. And generally the rule is, Quod non præstat impedimentum quod de jure non sortitur effectum.

Thirdly, that construction must be made of a statute in suppression of the mischief, and in advancement of the remedie, as by this case it appeareth. For a fine levied by the husband only is within the letter of the law; but the mischief was, the heire was barred of the inheritance of his mother, by the warrantie of his father without assets: and this act intended to apply a remedie, viz. that it should not barre unlesse there were assets, and therefore the mischief is to be suppressed, and the remedie advanced. Et qui hæret in literâ, hæret in cortice, as often before hath beene said.

*roy: et issint per force de mesme l'estatute, si le baron del feme aliena l'heritage ou mariage sa feme en fee ove garrantie, &c. per son fait en pais, ceo est clere ley, que cest garrantie ne barrera my l'heire, sinon que il n'ad assets per discent.

wherof no fine is levied in the king's court: and so by force of the same statute, if the husband of the wife alien the heritage or mariage of his wife in fee with warrantie, &c. by his deed in the countrey, it is cleere law, that this warranty shall not bar the heire, unlesse hee hath assets by discent.

(10. Rep. 43.)

[b] Pl. Com. 246. b. Seignior Barkley's case. Li. 9. fol. 26. in case del Abbot de Strata mercella.

[c] 11. H. 4. 80. 9. E. 4. 12.

21. H. 6. 28. 4. E. 4. 31.

12. H. 4. Formedon 15.

(6. Rep. 20.)

Sect. 729.

MES le doubt est, si le baron alienast l'heritage sa feme per fine levy en la court le roy ovesque garrantie, &c. si ceo barrera l'heire sans ascun discent en value. † Et quant a ceo, jeo voile icy dire certaine raisons, que jeo ay oye dit en cest matter. Jeo ay oye mon master sir Richard Newton, jades chiefe justice de common banke, dire un foits en mesme le banke, que tiel garrantie que le baron fait per fine levie en le court le roy barrera l'heire, coment que il ‡ ad riens per discent, pur ceo que l'estatute dit (dont nul fine est levy en le court le roy) ||; et issint per son

BUT the doubt is, if the husband alien the heritage of his wife by fine levied in the king's court with warrantie, &c. if this shall barre the heire without any discent in value. And as to this, I will here tell certaine reasons, which I have heard said in this matter. I have heard my master sir Richard Newton, late chiefe-justice of the common pleas, once say in the same court, that such warrantie as the husband maketh by fine levied in the king's court shall barre the heire, albeit hee hath nothing by discent, because the statute saith (whereof no fine is levied in the king's court); and so by his opinion

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
|| &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ ad—n'ad, L. and M. and Roh.

same manner as he might do by a substantive original conveyance, notwithstanding the persons to whom the life estates are appointed were not in existence at the time of the execution of the conveyance in which the power is contained. But it seems to be otherwise, if the objects of the power are restrained to any particular description of persons, as to the children of the appointor. See Alexander v. Alexander, 2. Vez. 640. and Robinson v. Hardcastle, in Mr. Brown's Rep. of Cases determined in Chancery during the 26th Year of his present Majesty's Reign, p. 22.—In note 2, to page 216, it was contended, that the estates created by the exercise of powers of appointment preceded from the time of their coming into existence, all the uses limited to take effect in default of appointment, and all the rights and incidents annexed to them; and consequently, that in the cases where estates are limited to such uses as a person shall appoint, and for want of appointment, to the use of his right heirs, the appointment will be good against the wife's right of dower; but in the same note it is observed, that there are reasons why such appointments should not always be depended upon. The modes generally used to prevent the wife's dower seem open to objection. Sometimes the estate is limited to a purchaser and a trustee and their heirs, but as to the estate of the trustee and his heirs in trust for the purchaser and his heirs. This exposes the purchaser to the chance of the trustee's dying in his life; in which case the right of dower will attach upon the estate. Sometimes the estate is limited to the purchaser and a trustee, and the heirs of the trustee, but in trust for the purchaser. Sometimes it is limited immediately to the trustee and his heirs, in trust for the purchaser and his heirs; but all these modes are objectionable, as they keep the legal fee from the purchaser, and expose him to all the inconvenience of its escheating to the crown for want of heirs of the trustee, or of its becoming vested in infants, married women, or persons residing at a distance, not easily discoverable, or not willing to join in the conveyances required to be made of it. Sometimes even it may be considered to pass in the general devise of the trustee's will, and by that means become settled at law to uses in strict settlement, and therefore not to be regained but by a fine or common recovery, and till the existence of a tenant in tail not to be regained without the aid of parliament. It cannot therefore be desirable that the legal fee should be outstanding in a trustee. To prevent this, the estates may be first limited to such uses as the purchaser shall by deed or will appoint, and for want of appointment, to the use of a trustee, his heirs and assigns, during the life of the purchaser, in trust for him, and subject thereto to the use of the purchaser, his heirs and assigns. If this method be adopted, no doubt will remain of the wife's right of dower being effectually prevented; the purchaser during his life will have the absolute command of the legal fee, and at his death it will descend upon his heir.

*opinion cel garrantie per fine * demurt uncore un collateral garrantie, come il fuit a le common ley, nient remedy per le dit estatute, pur ceo que le dit estatute except alienations per fine ove garrantie.*

opinion this warrantie by fine remaineth yet a collateral warrantie, as it was at the common law, not remedied by the said statute, because the said statute excepteth alienations by fine with warrantie.

Sect. 730.

ET ascuns auters ont dit, et uncore diont le contrarie, et ceo est lour prooffe, que come per mesme le chapitre de dit estatute il est ordeine, que le garrantie le tenant per le curtesie ne serra my barre al heire, sinon que il ad assets per discent, &c. coment que le tenant per le curtesie levie un fine de mesmes les tenements oveque garrantie, &c. auxy fortment come il poit faire, uncore cel garrantie ne barrea my l'heire, sinon que il ad assets per discent, &c. Et jeo croy que ceo est ley; et pur ceo ils diont, que serroit inconvenient d'entender l'estatute entiel forme, que un home que n'ad riens forsque en droit sa feme purroit per fine levie per luy † de mesmes ‡ les tenements queux il ad forsque en droit sa feme ove garrantie, &c. barre l'heire de mesmes les tenements sans ascun discent de fee simple, &c. lou le tenant per le curtesie ceo ne puit faire.

AND some others have said, and yet doe say the contrary, and this is their prooffe, that as by the same chapter of the said statute it is ordained, that the warrantie of the tenant by the courtesie shall be no barre to the heire, unlesse that he hath assets by discent, &c. although that the tenant by the courtesie levie a fine of the same tenements with warrantie, &c. as strongly as hee can, yet this warrantie shall not barre the heire, unlesse that hee hath assets by discent, &c. And I beleieve that this is law; and therefore they say, that it should be inconvenient to intend the statute in such maner, as a man that hath nothing but in right of his wife might by fine levied by him of the same tenements which he hath but in right of his wife with warrantie, &c. barre the heire of the same tenements without any discent of fee simple, &c. where the tenant by the courtesie cannot doe this.

Sect. 731.

MES ils ont dit, que le statute serra entend selonque cel forme, scilicet, lou le statute § dit, dont nul fine est levie en court le roy, ceo est a dire, dont nul loial

BUT they have said, that the statute shall bee intended after this manner, scilicet, where the statute saith, whereof no fine is levied in the king's court, that is to say, fine

(Plowd. 57. b. Ant. 115 a. 360. a. 369. a. 381. b.)

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
§ dit—parte, L. and M. and Roh.

† mesme added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ mesmes not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(10. Rep. 43. Ant. 381. b.)

*fine est droiturement levy en la court le roy. Et ceo est, dont nul fine de le baron et sa feme soit levie en le court le roy, car al temps de le fesans del dit estatute, chescun estate de terres ou tenements que ascun home ou feme avoit, que discenderoit a son beire, fuit fee simple sans condition, ou sur certaine conditions en fait ou en ley. Et pur ceo que adonques tiel fine poit droiturement estre levie per le baron et sa feme, et les beires le baron garronteront, &c. tiel garrantie barrera l'beire, * et issint ils dient que cest l'entendement de l'estatute, car si le baron et sa feme fieront un feoffement en fee per fait en pais, son beire apres le decease le baron et sa feme avera brieve d'entre sur cui in vitâ, &c. nient obstant le garrantie de le baron, donque si nul tiel exception fuit fait en l'estatute de le fine levie, &c. donque l'beire averoit le brieve d'entre, &c. nient obstant le fine levie per le baron et sa feme, pur ceo que les parolx de l'estatute devant l'exception de fine levie, &c. sont generals, &c. c'est a sçavoir, que l'beire la feme apres le mort le pere et la mere ne soit barre d'action, s'il demaund l'heritage ou le mariage sa mere per brieve d'entre, que son pere aliena en temps sa mere, et issint coment que le baron et la feme alienent per fine, uncore ceo est voier, que le baron aliena en temps la mere, et issint il serroit en case de l'estatute, sinon que tielx parolx fueront, scilicet, dont nul fine est levie en la court le roy; et issint ils dient, que ceo est a entendre, dont* whereof no lawfull fine is rightfully levied in the king's court. And that is, whereof no fine of the husband and his wife is levied in the king's court, for at the time of the making of the said statute, every estate of lands or tenements that any man or woman had, which should descend to his heire, was fee simple without condition, or upon certain conditions in deed or in law. And because that then such fine might rightfully be levied by the husband and his wife, and the heires of the husband should warrant, &c. such warrantie shall barre the heire, and so they say that this is the meaning of the statute, for if the husband and his wife should make a feoffement in fee by deed in the countree, his heire after the decease of the husband and wife shall have a writ of entrie sur cui in vitâ, &c. notwithstanding the warrantie of the husband, then if no such exception were made in the statute of the fine levied, &c. then the heire should have the writ of entrie, &c. notwithstanding the fine levied by the husband and his wife, because the words of the statute before the exception of the fine levied, &c. are generall, viz. that the heire of the wife after the death of the father and mother is not barred of action, if he demand the heritage or the marriage of his mother by writ of entrie, that his father aliened in the time of his mother, and so albeit the husband and wife aliened by fine, yet this is true, that the husband aliened in the time of the mother, and so it should bee in that case of the statute, unlesse that such

nul

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

*nul fine per le baron et sa feme est levie en la court le roy, lequel est loialment levie en tiel case;
car si les justices ont conusans, que home que n'ad riens forfque en droit sa feme, voile levier un fine en son nosme solement, ils ne voylont, ne * unque de-voyent prender tiel fine d'estre le-vie per le baron solement sans † sa feme, &c. Ideo quare de cest matter, &c. ‡*

words were, viz. whereof no fine is levied in the king's court; and so they say, that this is to be understood, (2. Inst. 394.) whereof no fine by the husband and his wife is levied in the king's court, the which is lawfully levied in such case; for if the justices have knowledge, that a man that hath nothing but in the right of his wife, will levie a fine in his name onely, they will not, neither ought they to take such fine to be levied by the husband alone without his wife, &c. Ideo quare of this matter, &c.

JEO ay oye mon maister sir R. Newton, &c. who was a gentleman of an ancient family; in Latine, de nova villa; in French, de neuve ville; and a reverend learned judge, and worthily advanced to be chiefe-justice of the court of common pleas, whom our authour remembers with great reverence, as by his words you may perceive, calling him his master, and citeth his opinion delivered once in the court of common pleas, which our authour heard and observed (whose example therein it is necessary for our student to follow); but the latter opinion (as hath beene before observed) being Littleton's owne, is against the opinion of the lord Newton [d], and the law is holden cleerely with our authour at this day; and our authour (as in all other cases) hath good authoritie in law to warrant his opinion: Nullius hominis auctoritas tantum apud nos valere debet, ut meliora non sequeremur si quis attulerit.

Car si les justices ont conusance, &c. Hereby it appeareth [e] that the judge, if hee knoweth it, ought not to take knowledge of a fine that worketh a wrong to a third person.

Que serroit inconvenient. Argumentum ab inconuenienti, is very forcible in law, as often hath beene observed.

Of the rest of these three Sections sufficient hath beene said before.

Sect. 732.

ITEM, est ascarvoir, que en ceux parolx, ou l'heire demande l'heritage, ou le mariage sa mere, cest parol (ou) est un disjunctive, et est autant a dire, si l'heire demande le heritage sa mere, scilicet, les tenements que sa mere avoit en fee simple per discent ou per purchase, ou si l'heire demaund le mariage sa mere, c'est ascarvoir, les tenements

ALSO, it is to be understood, that in these words, where the heire demands the heritage, or the marriage of his mother, this word (or) is a disjunctive, and is asmuch to say, if the heire demand the heritage of his mother, viz. the tenements that his mother had in fee simple by discent or by purchase, or if the heire demaund the marriage of his mother, that is que

* unque not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† nosme added L and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

[d] Bracton 341. Fleta lib. 5. cap. 34. 8. E. 2. Gar. 81. 18. E. 3. 51. 7. E. 3. 84. Pl. Com. 57. (3. Rep. 77.) Sect. 731. [e] 33. H. 6. 52. 5. E. 3. 56. 2. Eliz. Dier 178. 1. H. 7. 9. 1. Mar. 89. 4. E. 3. 41. 7. Eliz. Dier 246. Vide Sect. 87, &c.

que fueront dones a sa mere en frankmariage. to say, the tenements that were given to his mother in frankmariage.

(Ant. 16. 2.)
Vide Seēt. 9.

SOME doe expound heritage of the mother to be the lands which the mother hath by discent; and that construction is true, but the statute, by the authoritie of Littleton, extendeth also where the mother hath it by purchase in fee simple; for so saith Littleton himselfe, that this word (inheritance) is not only intended where a man hath lands by discent, but where a man hath a fee simple by purchase, because his heires may inherit him. And albeit it be true, that the statute extendeth to an estate in frankmariage acquired by purchase, yet doth it extend also to all estates in taile, aswell by discent as by purchase; for that frankmariage is put but for an example.

Seēt. 733.

EGO et hæredes mei warrantizabimus, et imperpetuum defendemus.

Wherein three things are to be observed. First, that hæredes mei are words of necessity, for otherwise the heires are not bound. [a] Secondly, though in the clause of the warrantie it bee not mentioned to whom, &c. yet shall it be intended to the feoffee. [b] Thirdly, that the feoffor may by expresse words warrant the land for the life of the feoffee, or of the feoffor, &c. but the recoverie in value shall bee in fee. [c] Of this Bracton writeth in this manner: Et ego et hæredes mei warrantizabimus tali et hæredibus suis tantum vel tali et hæredibus et assignatis et hæredibus assignatorum, vel assignatis assignatorum, et eorum hæredibus, et acquietabimus et defendemus eos totam terram illam cum pertinentiis, contra omnes gentes, &c. Per hoc autem quod dicit (ego et hæredes mei) obligat se et hæredes ad warrantiam propinquos, et remotos, presentes et futuros, et succedentes in infinitum. Per hoc autem quod dicit (warrantizabimus) suscipit in se obligationem ad defendendum suum tenementum in possessione rei data et assignatos suos et eorum hæredes et omnes alios, &c. Per hoc autem quod dicit (acquietabimus) obligat se et hæredes suos ad acquietandum si quis

*ITEM, come est move + en divers faits ceux parolx en Latyne, Ego et hæredes mei * warrantizabimus et imperpetuum defendemus; il est a veier quel effect ad cel parol, defendemus, en tiels faits; et il semble que il n'ad pas l'effect de garrantie, ne emprent en luy + la cause de garrantie; car s'il issint serroit, que il prent effect ou cause de garrantie, donques il serroit + mettre en ascuns fines levies en la court le roy: et home ne veiet || ceo unque que cest parol defendemus fuit en ascun fine, mes tantsolement cest parol warrantizabimus; per que semble, que cest parol § et verbe warrantizo, ¶ fait la garrantie, et est la cause de*

ALSO, where it is contained in divers deedes these words in Latine, Ego et hæredes mei warrantizabimus et imperpetuum defendemus; it is to be seene what effect this word (defendemus) hath in such deedes; and it seemeth that it hath not the effect of warrantie, nor comprehendeth in it the cause of warranty; for if it should be so, that it tooke the effect or cause of warrantie, then it should bee put into some fines levied in the king's court: and a man never saw that this word (defendemus) was in any fine, but only this word (warrantizabimus); by which it seemeth, that this word and verbe (warrantizo) maketh the warrantie, and is the cause of warrantie, and

gar-

+ move—mote, L. and M. and Roh.
mote, L. and M. and Roh.
ded L. and M. &c. only added in Roh.

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
|| ceo not in L. and M. nor Roh.

+ la not in L. and M. nor Roh.
§ et verbe not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† mitte—
¶ as, &c. ad-

[a] 6. E. 2. Vouch. 238.
12. E. 2. ib. 262. 14. H. 4. 15.

[b] 38. E. 3. 14.

[c] Bract. fol. 37. 238. & Lib. 5. 380, 381. Brit. fol. 106. b. Flet. lib. 5. cap. 15. & Lib. 6. cap. 23. 35. H. 8. 8. Gar. 90. F. N. B. 134. b.

Brit. ubi sup. Flet. ubi sup.
11. H. 6. 48. 6. E. 2. Gar. 262.

garrantie, et nul au- no other word in our ter verbe en nostre law.
ley.

plus petierit servitii vel aliud servitium quam in carta dona-tionis continetur. Per hoc autem quod dicit (defendimus) obligat se et heredes suos ad defendendum si quis velit servitutem ponere rei datæ contra formam suæ donationis. [d] Hereby it appeareth, that neither defendere nor acquietare doth create a warrantie, but warrantizare only. And as Ego et heredes mei warrantizabimus, &c. in Latine doe create a warrantie; so, I and my heires shall warrant, &c. in English, doth create a warrantie also.

[e] If a man be bound to A. in an obligation to defend such lands to A. whereof the obligor had infeoffed him for twelve yeares, &c. in this case if he be ousted by a stranger without being impleaded, the obligation is forfeit: but if he be bound to warrant the land, &c. the bond is not forfeited, unlesse the obligee be impleaded, and then the obligor must be readie to warrant, &c.

Donques il serra mit en ascuns fines, &c. Here Littleton draweth an argument from the forme and words of a fine; and his reason is this: that seeing that a fine is the highest and surest kinde of assurance in law, if defendimus had the force of a warrantie, it would have beene contained in fines: and on the other side, seeing this word warrantizo is contained in fines to create a warrantie, that therefore that word doth imply a warrantie, and not the other.

Et nul auter verbe en nostre ley. Here it appeareth, that no other verbe in our law doth make a warrantie, but warrantizo only, which is only appropriated to create a warrantie.

But, Qui bene distinguit bene docet; and here of necessitie you must distinguish, [*] first, betweene a warrantie annexed to a freehold or inheritance, (whereof Littleton here speaketh) and a warrantie annexed to a ward, which is a chattell reall; for there, grant, demise, and the like, doe make a warrantie. And of warranties annexed to freeholds and inheritances, some be warranties in deed, and some be warranties in law. A warrantie in deed, or an expresse warrantie, (whereof Littleton here speaketh) is created only by this word warrantizo; but warranties in law are created by many other words; they be therefore called warranties in law, because in judgement of law they amount to a warrantie without this verbe warrantizo. [f] As dedi is a warrantie in law to the feoffee and his heires during the life of the feoffor, but concessi in a feoffment or fine implyeth no warrantie. (1) But before the statute of quia emptores terrarum, if a man had given lands by the word dedi, to have and to hold to him and to his heires, of the donor and his heires, by certain services, then not only the donor but his heires also had beene bound to warrantie: but if before that statute a man had given lands by this word dedi, to a man and to his heires for ever, to hold of the chiefe lord, there the feoffor had not beene bound to warrantie but during his life, as at this day he is.

And albeit the words of the statute of bigamis be, in cartis autem ubi continentur (dedi et concessi, &c.) yet if dedi be contained alone, it doth import a warrantie; for the statute doth conclude, ipse tamen feoffatur in vita sua ratione proprii doni sui tenetur warrantizare; so as dedi is the word that implyeth warrantie, and not concessi. Also where the words of the statute bee further, sine clausula quæ continet warrantiam, the meaning of the statute is, that dedi doth import a warrantie in law, albeit there bee an expresse warrantie in the deed.

For if a man make a feoffment by dedi, and in the deed doth warrant the land against I. S. and his heires, yet dedi is a generall warrantie during the life of the feoffor; and so was the statute expounded in both points, [g] Hil. 14. El. in the court of common pleas, which I myselfe heard and observed. [h] And if a man make a lease for life reserving a rent, and adde an expresse warrantie, here the expresse warrantie doth not take away the warrantie in law, for he hath election to vouch by force of either of them. And in Nokes' case note a diversitie betweene a warrantie that is a covenant reall, and a warrantie concerning a chattell. [i] Also this word excambium doth imply a warrantie.

Also a partition implyeth a warrantie in law, as in the Chapter of Parceners appeareth. And homage auncestrell doth draw to itselfe warrantie, as hath beene said in the Chapter of Homage Auncestrell.

And it is to be observed, that the warrantie wrought by this word dedi, is a speciall warrantie, and extendeth to the heires of the feoffee during the life of the donor only. But upon the exchange and homage auncestrell the warrantie extendeth reciprocally to the heires, and against the heires of both parties: and in none of the cases the assignee shall vouch by force

[d] 46. E. 3. 28. 11. H. 4. 41.
6. E. 2. Vouch. 262.
2. E. 4. 15. 2.
(Moor. 175.)

[e] 2. E. 4. 15. tit. Det. 71.
(2. Roll. Abr. 396. Cro. Car. 5.
Dyer 255. a. Ant. 201. b.
4. Rep. 80. 9. Rep. 61.)

46. E. 3. 28. Vide Sect. 1.

Sect. 697.

[*] 31. E. 3. Vouch. 24.
12. Rich. 2. tit. Cont. de Vouch. 35. 29. E. 3. 48.
30. E. 3. 6. b. Symken Symons' case. 8. E. 3. 61. 12. E. 3.
Vouch. 27. Temps E. 1.
Vouch. 302. 3. H. 6. 17.

[f] Lestat. de Bigamis, c. 6.
2. H. 7. 7. 6. H. 7. 2.
48. E. 3. 2. 31. E. 1. tit.
Vouch. 200. Fitz. N. B. 134. b.
6. E. 2. Vouch. 258.
(Vaugh. 118.)

(F. N. B. 134. b.)

[g] Hil. 14. El. in Com. Banc.
[h] Lib. 4. fol. 80. in Nokes' case.
8. E. 3. 69. 9. E. 3. 15. 10. E. 3. 11.
20. E. 3. Cont. de Gar. 7.
31. E. 3. Vouch. 280.
32. E. 3. ib. 102. 43. E. 3. 3.
2. E. 3. tit. Cui in vita 17.
3. E. 3. Formedon 44.
[i] 4. E. 2. Vouch. 245.
22. E. 3. 3. 14. H. 6. 2.
20. H. 6. 14. Lib. 4. fol. 122.
in Bustard's case. 15. E. 3.
Bar. 255. 43. E. 3. 3.
Lib. 1. f. 96. Lib. 5. fol. 17.
Spencer's case. Lib. 8. fol. 75.
Sr. Stafford's case.

(1) What is said by sir Edward Coke in this place, and the determination of the judges in Nokes' case, 4. Rep. 80, and lord chief justice Vaughan's argument in Hayes v. Bickerstaff, in his Reports, page 126, should remove the scruples too often entertained on the part of trustees, respecting the propriety of their conveying by the word grant. From the passages here referred to, it most clearly appears, that the word grant, when used in the conveyance of an estate of inheritance, does not imply a warranty; and that if it did, the insertion of any expresse covenant on the part of the grantor, would qualify and restrain its force and operation within the import and effect of that covenant, as the law, when it appears by expresse words how far the parties designed the warranty should extend, will not carry it farther by construction. There is therefore no reasonable ground for trustees objecting to convey by the word grant; but serious objections may be raised in some cases to purchasers taking a conveyance from them without it. These are stated in the following passage from Bridgman's Complete Conveyancer, vol. 1. 323.—“Sir Jeffrey Palmer's resolution concerning the words give and grant in a conveyance. “Sir, I conceive that care ought to be taken in a conveyance, of what nature soever it be, that there be not therein give and grant; for they imply a general warranty, and shall not be qualified by the special warranty following; as hath of late been thrice adjudged. H. 1.”—Sir Jeffrey Palmer's answer. “Give implies a personal warranty, and so is not always used. The word grant, in a lease for years, is a covenant in law; or (as you may call it) a general warranty, if it be not qualified by a covenant or warranty in fact: but if there be a covenant or warranty in fact, then it is restrained to the words of the covenant subsequent. But in an estate of inheritance where the fee passeth, there the word grant is neither a covenant in law, nor warranty. For if it should be a covenant in law, or warranty in itself, it would be there restrained and qualified by the warranty and covenants in fact. And a deed to pass an inheritance where common is, cannot be without it; for if it be common in gross, it cannot pass by the livery, but must pass by the word grant. And I never yet saw a feoffment without it. Jeffrey Palmer.”—How a covenant shall be expounded with regard to the context, or to synonymous or other words, see Com. Dig. Cov. (D.) Vin. Abr. Covenant (L. 4.)

[k] 28. Aff. 33. 14. H. 4. 5.
 18. E. 3. 18. 4. E. 2. Avowr.
 2. 1. & 202. 19. E. 3.
 Avowr. 201, 202. 11. E. 3.
 Avowr. 100. 30. H. 6. 7.
 33. H. 8. Dyer 51.
 10. H. 7. 11. b. F. N. B. 163. a.
 [l] 6. E. 2. Cont. de Vouch. 105.
 5. E. 3. 67. 4. E. 2. ibid. 102.
 6. E. 3. 11. 50. 7. E. 3. 6.
 18. E. 3. 8. 22. E. 3. 3.
 3. H. 7. 13. 6. H. 7. 2. 14. E. 3.
 Garr. 32. F. N. B. 134. g.
 5. E. 3. 87. 20. E. 3.
 tit. Counterplea de Gar. 7.
 [m] 4. E. 3. 36. 31. E. 3.
 tit. Cont. de Vouch. 122.
 43. Aff. 32. 50. E. 3. 7.
 F. N. B. 149. m.
 [n] 14. H. 6. 2. 15. E. 3.
 Bar. 255.
 [o] 38. E. 3. 22, 23, 24.
 13. E. 3. Gar. 35.

[p] 16. E. 3. Age 45.
 18. E. 3. 8. 31. E. 3. Gar. 29.

(1. Rep. 10.)

Vide lib. 4. fol. 121. Buftard's cafe.

[q] 45. E. 3. 20. b.

[r] 14. E. 3. Gar. 33.
 13. E. 1. Gar. 83.

Lib. 5. fol. 17. b. in Spenfer's cafe. 38. E. 3. 21.

[s] 12. E. 2. Vouch. 263.
 19. E. 2. Gar. 85. 13. E. 1.
 ib. 93. Lib. 5. fol. 17. Spenfer's cafe. 7. E. 3. 34. 10. E. 3. 9.
 14. E. 3. Garr. 33.
 Bract. ubi sup. 9. E. 2.
 Garr. de Chart. 30. 36. E. 3.
 Gar. 1. 4. H. 8. Dy. 1.
 F. N. B. 135.
 [t] 43. E. 3. 23. 26. E. 3. 68.
 (Ante 174. a. b. Post. 390. a.)
 40. E. 3. 14. 24. E. 3. 36.
 11. H. 4. 94. 30. E. 3. 17.
 5. E. 3. Age 19. Pl. Com. 418.

[u] 42. E. 3. b. per Finchden.

force of any of these warranties, but in the case of the exchange and dedi, the assignee shall rebutt, but not in the case of homage ancestrell.

[k] And so no man shall have a writ of contra formam collationis, but only the feoffee and his heires which be privie to the deed; but an assignee may rebutt by force of the deed.

[l] If a man make a gift in taile, or a lease for life of land, by deed or without deed, reserving a rent, or of a rent service by deed, this is a warrantie in law, and the donee or lessee being impleaded, shall vouch and recover in value. And this warrantie in law extendeth not only against the donor or lessor, and his heires, but also against his assignees of the reversion; and so likewise the assignee of lessee for life shall take benefit of this warrantie in law.

[m] When dower is assigned there is a warrantie in law included, that the tenant in dower being impleaded, shall vouch and recover in value a third part of the two parts whereof she is dowable. (1)

And it is to be understood, that a warrantie in law and affets is in some cases a good bar.

[n] In a formedon in the descender the tenant may plead, that the ancestor of the demandant exchanged the land with the tenant for other lands taken in exchange, which descended to the demandant, whereunto he hath entred and agreed; or if he hath not entred and agreed unto the lands taken in exchange, then the tenant may plead the warrantie in law, and other affets descended.

[o] If tenant in taile of lands make a gift in taile, or a lease for life, rendring a rent, and dieth, and the issue bringeth a formedon in the descender, the reversion and rent shall not barre the demandant; because by his formedon he is to defeat the reversion and rent, Et non potest adduci exceptio ejusdem rei, cujus petitur dissolutio.

[p] But if other affets in fee simple doe descend, then this warrantie in law and affets is a good barre in the formedon.

Here foure things are to be observed: first, that no warrantie in law doth barre any collateral title, but is in nature of a lineall warrantie: wherein the equitie of the law is to be observed.

Secondly, that an expresse warrantie shall never binde the heires of him that maketh the warrantie, unlesse (as hath beene said) they be named: as for example, Littleton here saith (Ego et heredes mei); but in case of warranties in law, in many cases the heires shall bee bound to warrantie, albeit they be not named.

Thirdly, that in some cases warranties in law doe extend to execution in value, of speciall lands, and not generally of lands descended in fee simple, as you may see at large in my Reports.

[q] Fourthly, that warranties in law may be in some cases created without deed, as upon gifts in taile, leases for life, exchanges, and the like

And seeing somewhat hath beene said out of Bracton and other antient authors, concerning assignees, it is necessarie to shew who shall take advantage of a warrantie, as assignee by way of voucher, to have recompence in value.

[r] If a man infeoffe A. and B. to have and to hold to them and to their heires, with a clause of warrantie, prædictis A. et B. et eorum heredibus et assignatis: in this case if A. dieth, and B. surviveth and dieth, and the heire of B. infeoffeth C. he shall vouch as assignee, and yet he is but the assignee of the heire of one of them; for in judgement of law the assignee of the heire is the assignee of the ancestor, and so the assignee of the assignee shall vouch in infinitum, within these words, (his assignes.)

[s] If a man infeoffeth A. to have and to hold to him, his heires and assignes; A. infeoffeth B. and his heires, B. dieth, the heire of B. shall vouch as assignee to A.: so as heires of assignees, and assignees of assignes, and assignees of heires are within this word (assignes); which seemed to be a question in Bracton's time. And the assignee shall not only vouch, but also have a warrantia cartæ.

If a man doth warrant land to another without this word (heires), his heires shall not vouch: and regularly if he warrant land to a man and his heires, without naming assignes, his assignee shall not vouch. [t] But if the father be infeoffed with warrantie to him and his heires, the father infeoffeth his eldest son with warrantie and dieth, the law giveth to the sonne advantage of the warrantie made to his father, because by act in law the warrantie betweene the father and the sonne is extinct.

But note, there is a diversitie betweene a warrantie that is a covenant reall, which bindeth the partie to yeeld lands or tenements in recompence, and a covenant annexed to the land, which is to yeeld but dammages, for that a covenant is in many cases extended further than the warrantie. As for example:

[u] It hath beene adjudged, that where two coparceners made partition of land, and the one made a covenant with the other, to acquite her and her heires of a suit that issued out

(1) Tenant by the curtesy shall not vouch, because he shall not recover in value, 10. H. 7. 10. b. but he may pray in aid of him in the reversion. Hob. Rep. 21.

out of the land the covenantee aliened. In that case the assignee shall have an action of (5. Rep. 18. a. in Spencer's case.) covenant; and yet he was a stranger to the covenant, because the acquittal did runne with the land.

[x] A. seised of the mannor of D. whereof a chappell was parcell. a prior with the assent of his covent covenanteth by deed indented with A. and his heires to celebrate divine service in his said chappell weekly, for the lord of the said mannor, and his servants, &c. In this case the assignees shall have an action of covenant, albeit they were not named, for that the remedie by covenant doth runne with the land, to give dammages to the partie grieved, and was in a manner appurtenant to the mannor. [y] But if the covenant had beene wth a stranger to celebrate divine service in the chappell of A. and his heires, there the assignee shall not have an action of covenant; for the covenant cannot be annexed to the mannor, because the covenantee was not seised of the mannor. See in Spencer's case before remembred, divers other diversities betweene warranties and covenants which yeeld but dammages.

And here it is to be observed, that an assignee of part of the land shall vouch as assignee. [*] As if a man make a feoffment in fee of two acres to one, with warrantie to him, his heires and assignes, if he make a feoffment of one acre, that feoffee shall vouch as assignee; for there is a diversitie betweene the whole estate in part, and part of the estate in the whole, or of any part. As if a man hath a warrantie to him, his heires, and assignes, and he make a lease for life, or a gift in taile, the lessee or donee shall not vouch as assignee, because he hath not the estate in fee simple whereunto the warranty was annexed; but the lessee for life may pray in aide, or the lessee or donee may vouch the lessor or donor, and by this meanes hee shall take advantage of the warranty. But if a lease for life, or a gift in taile be made, the remainder over in fee, such a lessee or donee shall vouch as assignee, because the whole estate is out of the lessor, and the particular estate and the remainder doe in judgement of law to this purpose make but one estate.

[a] If a man infeoffe three with warrantie to them and their heires, and one of them release to the other two, they shall vouch; but if he had released to one of the other, the warrantie had beene extinct for that part, for he is an assignee.

[b] If a man doth warrant land to two men and their heires, and the one make a feoffment in fee, yet the other shall vouch for his moitie. If a man at this day be infeoffed with warrantie to him, his heires, and assignes, and he make a gift in taile, the remainder in fee, the donee make a feoffment in fee, that feoffee shall not vouch as assignee, because no man shall vouch as assignee, but he that commeth in, in privitie of estate; but he must vouch his feoffor, and he to vouch as assignee, but such an assignee may rebutte. If the warrantie be made to a man and his heires without this word (assignes), yet the assignee, or any tenant of the land may rebutte. And albeit no man shall vouch or have a warrantia carte, either as partie, heire, or assignee, but in privitie of estate, yet any that is in of another estate, be it by disseisin, abatement, intrusion, usurpation, or otherwise, shall rebutte by force of the warrantie, as a thing annexed to the land, which sometime was doubted [c] in our bookes. But herein is a diversitie to be observed, when in the cases aforesaid he that rebutteth claimeth under the warrantie; and when he that would rebutte claimeth above the warranty, for there he shall not rebutte. And therefore if lands be given to two brethren in fee simple, with a warranty to the eldest and his heires, the eldest dieth without issue, the survivor albeit he be heire to him, yet shall he neither vouch nor rebutte, nor have a warrantia carte, because his title to the land is by relation above the fall of the warrantie, and he commeth not under the estate of him to whom the warrantie is made, as the disseisor, &c. doth.

[d] If a man make a gift in taile at this day, and warrant the land to him, his heires and assignes, and after the donee make a feoffment and dieth without issue, the warrantie is expired as to any voucher or rebutter, for that the estate in taile whereunto it was knit is spent: otherwise it is, if the gift and feoffment had beene made before the statute of donis conditionalibus; for then both the donee and feoffee had a fee simple; and so are our bookes to be intended in this and the like cases.

[e] If A. be seised of lands in fee, and B. releaseth unto him or confirmeth his estate in fee with warrantie to him, his heires and assignes; all men agree this warrantie to be good: but some have holden, that no warrantie can be raised upon a bare release or confirmation without passing some estate or transmutation of possession. [f] But the law, as it appeareth by Littleton himselfe, is to the contrary, and that both the party, and (as some doe hold) his assignee shall vouch; but he that is vouched in that case must be present in court, and ready to enter into the warranty and to answer, and the tenant must shew forth the deed of release or confirmation with warrantie, to the intent the demandant may have an answer thereunto, and either deny the deed, or avoid it; for that at the time of the confirmation made, he to whom it was made, had nothing in the land, &c. for otherwise the demandant may counterplead the voucher by the statute of W. 1. viz. that neither vouchee nor any of his ancestors had any seisin

[x] 42. F. 3. 3. a. Laur. Pakenham's case. a. H. 4. 6. 6. H. 4. 1 & 2. Ralfie Brabson's case. Lib. 5. fol. 17, 18. Spencer's case.

[y] a. H. 4. 6. Hen. Horne's case. 6. H. 4. 1. Lib. 5. fol. 17, 18. Spencer's case.

[*] 18. E. 3. 52. 10. E. 3. 58. 5. E. 3. 40. 12. E. 3. Counterplea de Vouch. 42. 14. E. 3. Voucher 108. 5. E. 3. ibid. 178. 13. E. 3. ibid. 119. 20. E. 3. 22. 41. E. 3. Vouch. 69. & 100. 32. E. 3. ibid. 96. (Hob. 25.)

And this diversitie was agreed Hill. 14. Eliz. in Commun Banco, which I heard and observed.

[a] 40. E. 3. 14. 40. Aff. 5. 33. H. 6. 4. 37. H. 8. Alienation sans licence 32. 8. H. 4. 8.

[b] 11. R. 2. Detin. 46. 7. E. 3. 35. 46. E. 3. 4.

(See Vaugh. 388.)

[c] 38. E. 3. 21. 26. E. 3. 56. Lib. 10. fo. 96. b. Seymour's case. 7. E. 3. 34. 35. 8. E. 3. 10. 46. E. 3. 4. 10. E. 3. 42. 45. E. 3. 18. 10. Aff. 5. 35. Aff. 9. 22. Aff. 39. 88. 31. Aff. 13.

[d] Lib. 3. fol. 62, 63. Lincoln College case.

[e] 14. E. 3. Garr. 108. 12. H. 7. 1.

[f] 11. H. 4. 22. 10. E. 3. 52. 21. E. 3. 27. Vid. Sect. 706. 728. & 745.

W. 1. cap. 40.

Vide 20. E. 1. Statute de vocat. ad warrant.

[g] 22. H. 6. 15. 19. H. 6. 73.
20. H. 6. 73. 2. H. 4. 13.
41. E. 3. Garr. 15. 43. E. 3. 17.
43. Aff. 42. 12. Aff. 17.
12. E. 3. taile 3. 22. E. 4. 16. b.
44. E. 3. 40. 44. Aff. Basingborn's. Aff. lib. 10. fol. 97.
Seymour's case.

[h] Lib. 3. fo. 63. Lincolne College case.

[i] 29. E. 3. 70. 17. E. 2.
Joinder in action 1. 11. E. 4. 8.

[4] 14. H. 4. 3.

(Ant. 20. b.)

feisin whereof he might make a feoffement. And this is ground upon the said statute of W. 1. the words whereof be, S'il neit son garrantor en present, (1) que luy voile garranter de son gree, et maintenant enter en respons, otherwise the tenant must be driven to his warrantia cartæ.

[g] But a warrantie of it selfe cannot enlarge an estate; as if the lessor by deed release to his lessee for life, and warrant the land to the lessee and his heires, yet doth not this enlarge his estate.

[b] If a man make a feoffement in fee with warrantie to him, his heires and assignes by deed (as it must be), and the feoffee enfeoffeth another by paroll, the second feoffee shall vouch, or have a warrantia cartæ (as hath beene said) as assignee, albeit he hath no deed of the assignment, because the deed comprehending the warrantie, doth extend to the assignees of the land; and he is a sufficient assignee, albeit he hath no deed.

[i] If a man infeoffe two, their heires and assignes, and one of them make a feoffement in fee, that feoffee shall not vouch as assignee. (2)

If a man make a feoffement in fee to A. his heires and assignes, A. infeoffeth B. in fee, who re-infeoffeth A. he or his assignes shall never vouch, for A. cannot be his own assignee. But if B. had infeoffed the heire of A. he may vouch as assignee; for the heire of A. may be assignee to A. inasmuch as he claimeth not as heire.

[k] If a man make a feoffement by deed of lands to A. to have and to hold to him and his heires, and bind him and his heires to warrant the land in formâ prædictâ; this warrantie shall extend to the feoffee and his heires: but if he had warranted the land to the feoffee, the warrantie had not extended to his heires, except the words had beene to him and his heires.

If a man letteth lands for life, the remainder in taile, the remainder eâdem formâ, this is a good estate taile, quia idem semper refertur proximo præcedenti. (3)

Sect. 734.

*ITEM, si tenant en taile soit seisie des * terres devisables per testament solongue le custome,
Ec. et le tenant en taile alien † mesmes les tenements a son frere en fee, et ad issue, et de-vie, et puis son frere devisa per son testament mesmes les tenements a un auter en fee, et oblige luy et ses beires a garrantie, Ec.
et morust sans issue; il semble que cest garrantie ne barrera my l'issue en taile, s'il voit sues son brieve de formedon, pur ceo que cest garrantie ne discendera my al issue en le taile, entant que le uncle del issue ne fuit my oblige a le garrantie en sa vie: ne ‡ que il ne puisse garranter les tenements en sa vie, entant que le devise ne puisse prendre ascun execution ou effect, forsque apres son decease. Et entant que le uncle en son vie ne fuit tenu de garran-ter, tiel garrantie ne poit discen-*

*ALSO, if tenant in taile be seised of lands devisable by testament after the custome, &c. and the tenant in the taile alieneth the same tenements to his brother in fee, and hath issue, and dieth, and after his brother deviseth by his testament the same tenements to another in fee, and bindeth him and his heires to warrantie, &c.
and dieth without issue; it seemeth that this warrantie shall not barre the issue in the taile, if hee will sue his writ of forme-don, because that this warrantie shall not descend to the issue in taile, in so much as the uncle of the issue was not bound to the same warrantie in his lifetime: neither could hee warrant the tenements in his life, insomuch as the devise could not take any execution or effect until after his decease. (4) And insomuch as the uncle in his life was not der*

* terres—tenements, L. and M. and Roh.

† mesmes not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ que il ne not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) i. e. if he have not his warrantor present.

(2) The other may vouch for his moiety, as is observed in the preceeding page: but if they make partition, both have lost it. Hob. 25.

(3) A man enfeoffeth three by deed, and warranteth the land to them, et cuilibet eorum, this is a joint warranty, because the estate or interest was joint; but if the estates were several, the warranty would be several. 5. Rep. 19.

(4) Upon a similar principle it was held, that a person could not devise land in frankmarriage, because the donee could not hold of the donor. Ant. 21. b.

der de luy al issue en le tayle, held to warrantie, such warrantie &c. car nul chose poit discen- may not descend from him to the der del auncester a son heire, issue in the tayle, &c. for nothing sinon que mesme ceo fuit en l'aun- can descend from the ancestour to cester. his heire, unlesse the same were in the ancestour. (1)

HERE our author declareth one of the maxims of the common law, that the heire shall never be bound to any expresse warrantie, but where the ancestor was bound by the same warranty; for if the ancestor were not bound, it cannot descend upon the heire, which is the reason here yeelded by Littleton. [1] If a man make a feoffment in fee, and binde his heires to warrantie, this is void by the warrant of this maxime, as to the heire, because the ancestor himselfe was not bound. Also, if a man binde his heires to pay a summe of money, this is void. And of the other side, if a man binde himselfe to warranty, and binde not his heires, they be not bound; for he must say, as it appeareth before, Ego et heredes mei warrantizabimus, &c. [m] And Fleta saith, Nota quod heres non tenetur in Angliâ ad debita antecessoris reddenda, nisi per antecessorem ad hoc fuerit obligatus, præterquam debita regis tantum: A fortiori in case of warrantie, which is in the realtie.

But a warrantie in law may binde the heire, although it never bound the ancestour, and may be created by a last will and testament. [n] As if a man devise lands to a man for life or in taile reserving a rent, the devisee for life or in taile shall take advantage of this warrantie in law, albeit the ancestor was not bounden, and shall binde his heires also to warrantie, although they be not named. Also an expresse warrantie cannot be created without deed, and a will in writing is no deed, and therefore an expresse warrantie cannot be created by will.

(6. Rep. 33. 2. Cro. 579.
10. Rep. 95.)

[1] 31. E. 1. Grant. 85.
(Hob. 130. Ant. 213. b.)

Bracton li. 2. fo. 37. 238.
Britton, fol. 106. b.

[m] Fleta, lib. 2. cap. 55.
Britton, fol. 65. b. 11. H. 6. 48.
(4. Rep. 80. Ante 209. a.)

[n] 18. E. 3. 8.

Sect. 735.

AUXY, un garrantie ne poit
 aler * selonque la nature
 des tenements per le custome, &c. mes tantselement selonque le forme del common ley. Car si le tenant en taile soit seisie des tenements en burgh English, lou le custome est, que tous les tenements deins mesme le borough devoyent discender a le fits puisne, et il discontinua le tayle ove garrantie, &c. et ad issue deux fits, et morust seisie des auters terres ou tenements en mesme le burgh en fee simple a le value ou plus de les tenements tailed, &c. uncore le puisne fits avera un formedon de les † terres tailed, et ne serra my barre per le garrantie son pere, coment que assets a luy descendist en fee simple de mesme le pere, selonque

ALSO, a warranty cannot goe according to the nature of the tenements by the custome, &c. but onely according to the forme of the common law. For if the tenant in taile be seised of tenements in borough English, where the custome is, that all the tenements within the same borough ought to descend to the youngest sonne, and hee disconti-nueth the taile with warranty, &c.
 and hath issue two sonnes, and dyeth seised of other lands or tenements in the same borough in fee simple to the value or more of the lands entailed, &c. yet the youngest sonne shall have a formedon of the lands tailed, and shall not bee barred by the warrantie of his father, albeit assets descended to him in fee simple from his said father le

* selonque—sans, L. and M. and Roh.

† terres—tenements, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) It is a general rule, that the heir cannot take any thing by descent when the ancestor is secluded from taking. Ant. 99. b.—
 If a father and his heir apparent join in a warranty, the heir is doubly bound, by his own warranty, and as heir to his father.
 Moor. 20,

*le custome, &c. pur ceo que le garrantie descendist a son eigne frere que est en pleine vie , et nemy sur le puisne. † Et en mesme le maner est de collaterall garrantie fait de tiels tenements, lou le garrantie descendist sur l'eigne fits, &c. ceo ne barrera my le puisne fits, &c.

according to the custome, &c. because the warranty descendeth upon his elder brother who is in full life, and not upon the youngest. And in the same manner is it of collaterall warranty made of such tenements, where the warranty descendeth upon the eldest sonne, &c. this shall not barre the younger son, &c.

Sect. 736.

EN mesme le maner est de tenements en le countie de Kent, queux sont appellees gavelkind, les queux tenements sont departibles enter les freres, &c. solonque la custome ‡; si ascun tiel garrantie soit fait per son auncester, tiel garrantie descendra tantsolement al heire que est beire al common ley, § c'estascavoir, al eigne frere, solonque la consufans del common ley, et nemy a tous les heires queux sont heires de tiels tenements solonque le custome ||.

IN the same manner is it of lands in the county of Kent, that are called gavelkinde, which lands are dividable betweene the brothers, &c. according to the custome; if any such warrantie be made by his ancestor, such warrantie shall descend onely to the heire which is heire at the common law, that is to say, to the elder brother, according to the consufance of the common law, and not to all the heires that are heires of such tenements according to the custome.

(8. Rep. 86.)

Vid. Sect. 603. 718. & 737.

(2. Rep. 25.)

[a] 11. E. 3. Det. 7.

11. H. 7. 12.

[c] 17. E. 3. Joint. 41.

16. H. 7. 13. 29. E. 3. 46.

12. H. 7. 3. 22. E. 3. 1.

17. E. 3. 8. 30. E. 3. 40.

19. H. 6. 55. Lib. 3. fol. 14.

Matthew Herbert's case.

(1. Leon. 322. March. 125.

Allen 41. Savil. 692. Clay. 3.)

HEREUPON a diversite is to be observed betweene the lien reall, and the lien personall; for the lien reall, as the warrantie, doth ever descend to the heire at the common law; [a] but the lien personall doth binde the speciall heires, as all the heires in gavelkind, and the heire on the part of the mother. as hath beene said.

[c] If two men make a feoffment in fee with a warranty, and the one die, the feoffee cannot vouch the survivor only, but the heire of him that is dead also; (1) but otherwise, if two joyntly binde themselves in an obligation, and the one die, the survivor only shall be charged.

Sect. 737.

ITEM, si tenant en le taile ad issue deux files per divers venters, et morust, et les files entrent, et un estrange eux disseist de mesmes les tenements, et l'un de ¶ eux releffa per son fait a le disseisor tout son droit, et oblige luy et ses heires a garrantie, et morust sans issue: en cest cas la

ALSO, if tenant in taile hath issue two daughters by divers venters, and dieth, and the daughters enter, and a stranger disseiseth them of the same tenements, and one of them releaseth by her deed to the disseisor all her right, and binde her and her heires to warrantie, and die without issue: in this case the

joer

* &c. added L. and M. and Roh. † Et not in L. and M. nor Roh. ‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh. § c'estascavoir al eigne frere, solonque la consufans del common ley, not in L. and M. nor Roh. || &c. added L. and M. and Roh. ¶ eux—les filles, L. and M. and Roh.

(1) This seems to be contradicted in Moore 20, where it is said, that if two are vouched, and one of them makes default, the grand cape ad valentiam shall issue against him who made the default; and if one of them dies, the heir and the survivor of them may be vouched, or the survivor of them only, at the election of him who hath the warranty.

foer que survesquist poit bien enter et ouster le disseisor de tous les tenements, pur ceo que tiel garrantie n'est pas discontinuance ne collateral garrantie a la foer que survesquist, pur ceo que ils sont de demy sanke, et l'un ne poit estre beire a l'auter, solonque le cours del common ley. Mes auterment est, lou y sont files del tenant en taile per un mesme venter.

sister which surviveth may well enter, and oust the disseisor of all the tenements, because such warrantie is no discontinuance nor collateral warrantie to the sister that surviveth, for that they are of halfe blood, and the one cannot be heire to the other, according to the course of the common law. But otherwise it is, where there bee daughters of tenant in taile by one venter.

THE reason of this is in respect of the halfe blood, whereof sufficient hath beene said in the first booke, in the Chapter of Fee Simple.

Two brothers be by demy venters; the eldest releaseth with warrantie to the disseisor of the uncle, and dieth without issue, the uncle dieth, the warrantie is removed, and the younger brother may enter into the land. (Ante 12. a. 14. 2.)

Sect. 738.

ITEM, si tenant en taile lessa les tenements a un * home pur terme de vie, le remainder a un auter en fee, et un collateral auncester confirma le state del tenant a terme de vie, et oblige luy et ses beires a garrantie pur terme de vie del tenant a terme de vie, et morust, et le tenant en taile ad issue et devie; ore l'issue est barre a demander les tenements per briefe de formedon durant le vie le tenant a terme de vie, per cause del collateral garrantie descendu sur le issue en le taile. Mes apres le decease de le te-

ALSO, if tenant in taile letteth the lands to a man for terme of life, the remainder to another in fee, and a collateral ancestor confirmeth the state of the tenant for life, and bindeth him and his heires to warrantie for terme of the life of the tenant for life, and dieth, and the tenant in taile hath issue and dies; now the issue is barred to demand the tenements by writ of formedon during the life of tenant for life, because of the collateral warrantie descended upon the issue in taile. But after the decease of the tenant for life,

HERE it appeareth, that a warrantie may be raised by a confirmation which transferreth neither estate nor right, whereof sufficient hath beene said before. (Ant. 385.)

A garrantie pur terme de vie, &c. [p] [p] 38. E. 3. 14. 16. E. 3. Vouch. 87. This proveth that a warrantie may be limited, and that a man may warrant lands aswell for terme of life or in taile, as in fee. (1)

If tenant in fee simple that hath a warrantie for life, either by an expresse warrantie or by dedi, be impleaded and vouch, hee shall recover a fee simple in value, albeit his warrantie were but for terme of life, because the warrantie extended in that case to the whole estate of the feoffee in fee simple; (2) but in the case that Littleton here putteth, the tenant for life shall recover in value but an estate for life, because the warrantie doth extend to that estate only. (4. Rep. 80. Ant. 383. Hob. 156.) (2. Cro. 453.)

Un briefe de formedon, &c. (F. N. B. 211. b. 217. b. 219. c.) Here is implied, that a collateral warrantie giveth no right, but

* home not in L. and M. nor Roh.

(1) From this it appears, that the warranty ceases on the expiration of the estate to which it is annexed. In Smith v. Tyndal, Salk. 685, 686, it was resolved, that no warranty extinguishes a right, but only binds or bars it so long as the warranty continues in force; for if the warranty be released, the ancient right revives.

(2) Though the warrant be temporary, yet the thing warranted and to be recovered is perpetual; for it is a warranty of a fee, tho' not a warranty in fee. Hob. 126.

but shall barre only for life, and after the partie is restored to his action.

It is also to bee observed, that a warrantie may descend to the heires of him that made it during the life of another.

tenant a terme de vie, the issue shall have *l'issue avera un * brieve* a writ of formedon, de formedon, &c. &c.

Sect. 739.

(9 Rep. 120.)

ET sur ceo jeo aye oye un reason, que cel case provera un autre case, scilicet, si un home lessa ses terres a un autre, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires pur terme d'auter vie, et le lessée morust vivant celui a que vie, &c. et un estrange enter en la terre que le heire le lessée luy poit ouster, † &c. pur ceo que en le case procheine avantdit, entant que home poit obliger luy et ses heires a garrantie al tenant a terme de vie tantseulement, durant la vie le tenant a ‡ terme de vie, et cel garrantie descendist al heire celui que fist le garrantie, lequel garrantie n'est pas garrantie d'enheritance, mes tantseulement pur terme d'auter vie: per mesme le reason lou tene-ments sont lessés a un home, a aver et tener a luy et a ses heires pur terme d'auter vie, si le || lessée morust vivant celui a que vie, son heire avera les tene-ments, vivant celui a que vie, &c. Car ont dit, que si home grant un annuitie a un autre, a aver et perceiver a luy et a ses heires pur terme d'auter vie, si le grantee morust, &c. que apres § son mort son heire avera l'annuitie durant la vie celui a que vie, &c. Quare de ista materiâ.

AND upon this I have heard a reason, that this case will prove another case, viz. if a man letteth his lands to another, to have and to hold to him and to his heires for terme of another's life, and the lessée dieth living celuy a que vie, &c. and a stranger enteth into the land that the heire of the lessée may put him out, &c. because in the case next aforesaid, inasmuch as a man may binde him and his heires to warrantie to tenant for life only, during the life of the tenant for life, and this warrantie descendeth to the heire of him which made the warrantie, the which warrantie is no warrantie of inheritance, but only for terme of another's life: by the same reason where lands are let to a man, to have and to hold to him and his heires for terme of another's life, if the lessée die living celuy a que vie, his heires shall have the lands, living celuy a que vie, &c. For they have said, that if a man grant an annuitie to another, to have and to take to him and his heires for terme of another's life, if the grantee die, &c. that after his death his heire shall have the annuitie during the life of celuy a que vie, &c. Quare de ista materiâ.

Jeo

* brieve de not in L. and M. nor Roh.

|| lessée-pier, L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

§ son mort not in L. and M. nor Roh.

‡ terme not in L. and M. nor Roh.

FEO ay eye un reason. Here our student is taught after the example of our author, to observe everie thing that is worth the noting.

Si un home lessa terres a un auter, &c. This case is without question, [q] that the heire of the lessee shall have the land to prevent an occupant. And so it is (as Littleton here saith) in case of an annuitie, or of any other thing that lieth in grant, whereof there can be no occupant. And of this somewhat hath beene said in the Chapter of Descents. (1)

[q] 17. E. 3. 48. 18. E. 3. 12.
11. H. 4. 42. 7. H. 4. 46.
8. H. 4. 15. Dy. 8. El. 253.
18. H. 8. 3. 27. H. 8. 21. H. 8.
tit. Estat. Br. 50. 19. E. 3.
tit. Account. 56. 33. Aff. p. 17.
22. H. 6. 33. 39. E. 3. 37.
Vide Sect. 387.
(Ant. 41. L.)

Sect. 740.

MES lou tiel lease
ou grant est fait a un home et a ses beires pur terme d'ans, en cest case
l'beire le lessee ou
le grantee n'avera
unques apres la mort le lessee ou le grantee ceo que est issint lessee ou grant, pur ceo que est chattel
real, et* chateuxrealx per le common ley
viendra al executors del grantee, ou
del lessee, et nemy al
beire. †

BUT where such lease or grant is made to a man and to his heires for terme of yeares, in this case the heire of the lessee or the grantee shall not after the death of the lessee or the grantee have that which is so let or granted, because it is a chattell reall, and chattels realls by the common law shall come to the executors of the grantee,
or of the lessee, and
not to the heire.

HERE is a generall rule, that chattels reals afwell as chattels personals
shall goe to the executors or administrators of the lessee, and not to his heires.
For as estates of inheritance or freehold descendi-ble shall goe to the heire, so chattels, aswell reall as personall, shall goe to the executors or administrators.

[r] But if the king's tenant by knight's service in capite be seised of a man-nor, whereunto an advowson is appendant, and the church become void, the tenant dieth, his heire within age, the king shall present to the church, and not the executor or administrator:
but if the land be holden of a common person, in that case the executor shall present, and not the gardeine.

11. E. 3. tit. Aff. 88.
11. Aff. 21. 10. El. Dy. 276.

(9. Rep. 86. 5. Rep. 25. 33.)

[r] 24. E. 3. 26. F. N. B. 33. b.
F. N. B. 34. a.
(Ant. 90. Sect. 125.)

[f] 40. E. 3. 14.

[r] 9. H. 6. 58. 11. H. 4. 7.

[f] If a bishop hath a ward fallen and dieth, the king shall not have the ward nor the successor, but the executor and the ward shall be assets in his hands. So it is of heriot, releefe, and the like. [r] But if a church become void in the life of a bishop, and so remaine untill after his decease, the king shall present thereunto, and not the executor or administrator; for nothing can be taken for a presentment, and therefore it is no assets.

Sect. 741.

ITEM, en ascuns
cases il poit estre, que coment que un
collaterall garrantie
soit fait en fee,
&c. uncore tiel gar-rantie poit estre defeat et anient. Si-come tenant en taile

ALSO, in some cases it may bee, that albeit a collaterall war-
rantie be made in fee,
&c. yet such a warrantie may be defeated and taken away.
As if tenant in taile
discontinue the taile

ET morust sans issue, &c. Here (as before in this Chapter hath been noted) the collaterall warrantie doth descend upon the issue in taile, before any right doth descend unto him, wherein this diver-sitie is to bee observed.

Where the right is in esse in any of the ancestors of the heire, at the time of the dis-cent

Vide Sect. 707.

* tous added L. and M. and Roh.

† &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) But several alterations have been made in the law of occupancy, by statutes passed since sir Edward Coke's time. See ant. 41.
b. note 5.

(10. Rep. 95.)

[u] 7. E. 3. 48. 30. H. 8. 42.

(10. Rep. 95.)

[w] Lib. 1. fol. 67. Archer's case.

[y] Temps E. 1. Voucher 296.
 31. Aff. 13. 22. Aff. 36.
 41. Aff. 6. 23. E. 3. 101. G. 17.
 74. Lib. 10. fol. 97. E. Seymour's case.
 (9. Rep. 106.)

[z] 45. E. 3. 31. 21. H. 7. 11.

Vide Sect. 698.

[a] 21. E. 4. 26. 21. H. 7. 9.
 3. H. 7. 4. 7. H. 4. 17.
 30. H. 8. Dier 42.
 30. E. 3. 30. 9. E. 3. 78.
 45. E. 3. Voucher 72.
 1. N. B. 125. 14. H. 8. 6.
 (Ant. 366. b. Moor. 56.)

cent of the collateral warrantie, there albeit the warrantie descend first, and after the right doth descend, the collateral warrantie shall binde, as here in this case of our author expressly appeareth. But where the right is not in esse in the heire, or any of his ancestors, at the time of the fall of the warrantie, there it shall not binde.

[u] As if lord and tenant be, and the tenant make a feoffment in fee with warrantie, and after the feoffor purchase the feignorie, and after the tenant esse, the lord shall have a cessavit; for a warrantie doth extend to rights precedent, and never to any right that commenceth after the warrantie; whereof more shall be said in this Section. Also a warrantie shall never barre any estate that is in possession, reversion or remainder, that is not devested, displaced, or turned to a right before, or at the time of the fall of the warrantie.

[w] If a lease for life be made to the father, the remainder to his next heire, the father is disseised and releaseth with warrantie and dieth; this shall barre the heire, although the warrantie doth fall, and the remainder commeth in esse at one time.

[y] If there be father and sonne, and the sonne hath a rent service, suit to a mill, rent charge, rent secke, common of pasture, or other profit appender out of the land of the father, and the father maketh a feoffment in fee with warrantie, and dieth, this shall not barre the sonne of the rent, common, or other profit appender, quomvis clausula specialis warrantie vel acquietancie in cartis tenentium inferatur, quia in tali casu transit terra cum onere: and he that is in seisin or possession need not to make any entrie or claime: and albeit the sonne after the feoffment with warrantie, and before the death of the father, had bene disseised, and so being out of possession, the warrantie descended upon him, yet the warrantie should not binde him, because at the time of the warrantie made, the sonne was in possession. [*] So if my collateral ancestor release to my tenant for life, this shall not binde my reversion or remainder, because that the reversion or remainder continued in me. But if he that hath a rent, common, or any profit out of the land in taile, disseise the tenant of the land, and maketh a feoffment of the land, and warrant the land to the feoffee and his heires; [a] regularly the warrantie doth extend to all things issuing out of the land, that is to say, to warrant the land in such plight and manner, as it was at in the hand of the feoffor, at the time of the feoffment with warrantie; and the feoffee shall vouch, as of lands discharged of the rent, &c. at the time of the feoffment made.

A woman that hath a rent charge in fee entermarrieth with the tenant of the land, an estranger releaseth to the tenant of the land with warrantie; he shall not take advantage of this warrantie either by voucher or warrantia cartae; for the wife, if her husband die, or the heire of the wife living the husband, cannot have an action for the rent upon a title before the discontinue le taile en fee, et le discontinuee est disseisee, et le frere del tenant en le taile releffa per son fait a le disseisor tout son droit, &c. ove garranty en fee, et mourust sans issue, et le tenant en le taile ad issue et devie; ore l'issue est barre de son action per force del collateral garranty descendue sur luy. Mes si apres ceo le discontinuee enter sur le disseisor, donques poit l'heire en le taile aver bien son action de formedon, &c. pur ceo que le garranty est aniente et defeate, car quant garranty est fait a un home sur estate que adonques il avoit, si l'estate soit defeat le garranty est defeat.

in fee, and the discontinuee is disseised, and the brother of the tenant in taile releaseth by his deed to the disseisor all his right, &c. with warrantie in fee, and dieth without issue, and the tenant in taile hath issue and die; now the issue is barred of his action by force of the collateral warrantie descended upon him. But if afterwards the discontinuee entreth upon the disseisor, then may the heire in taile have well his action of formedon, &c. because the warrantie is taken away and defeated, for when a warrantie is made to a man upon an estate which hee then had, if the estate be defeated, the warrantie is defeated. (1)

(1) In the former cases put by Littleton, the warranty determined, upon the natural expiration of the estate to which it was annexed: here it determines by the estate being defeated. But if an estate be bound by a warranty, and afterwards the estate to which the warranty is annexed be defeated as to a particular estate only, the warranty shall not be defeated. As if tenant for life, remainder to A. be disseised, and an ancestor of A. releases to the disseisor with warranty and dies, and afterwards tenant for life enters or recovers, yet the remainder will be bound by the warranty. See 2. Roll. Abr. 740. l. 40. 741. l. 5. And see Com. Dig. vol. 3. 434, 435.

the warrantie made; for if the heire of the wife bring an affise of mordancester, this action is grounded after the warrantie, whereunto, as hath beene said, the warrantie shall not extend.

So it is if the grantee of the rent grant it to the tenant of the land upon condition, which maketh a feoffement of the land with warrantie, this warrantie cannot extend to the rent, altho it the feoffement was made of the land discharged of the rent; for if the condition be broken, and the grantor be intituled to an action, this must of necessity be grounded after the warrantie made. (Ant. 366. b.)

But in the case aforesaid, when the woman grantee of the rent marrieth with the tenant, and the tenant maketh a feoffement in fee with warrantie, and dieth, in a cui in vita brought by the wife (as by law she may), [b] the feoffee shall vouch as of lands discharged at the time of the warranty made, for that her title is paramount: so if tenant in taile of a rent charge purchase the land, and make a feoffement with warrantie, if the issue bring a formedon of the rent, the tenant shall vouch causa qua supra. (Ant. 202.)

[] But some doe hold, that a man shall not vouch, &c. as of land discharged of a rent service. [] 10. E. 4. 9. b. 18. E. 3. 55. 44. E. 3. 19.

[c] Also, no warrantie doth extend unto meere and naked titles, as by force of a condition with clause of re-entry, exchange, mortmain, consent to the ravisher and the like, because that for these no action doth lye; and if no action can be brought, there can be neither voucher, writ of warrantia cartæ, nor rebutter, and they continue in such plight and essence as they were by their originall creation, and by no act can be displaced or devested out of their originall essence, and therefore cannot be bound by any warrantie. [c] Lib. 10. fol. 97. E. Sty more's case. 22. Aff. pl. 38. 31. Aff. p. 13. 41. Aff. p. 6. 33. E. 3. Gar. 74. (2. Cro. 593. Dyer 224. a. 3. Inst. 216. 10. Rep. 98. b. Ant. 205. a. Plowd. 363. b.)

[d] And albeit a woman may have a writ of dower to recover her dower, yet because her title of dower cannot be devested out of the originall essence, a collateral warrantie of the ancestor of the woman shall not barre her. So it is of a feoffement causa matrimonii (4. Rep. Vernon's case.)

[e] A warrantie doth not extend to any lease, though it be for many thousand yeares, or to estates of tenant by statute staple, or merchant, or eleger, or any other chattle, but only to freehold or inheritances, as it appeareth in all Littleton's cases which he putteth in this Chapter. And this is the reason, that in all actions which lessee for yeares may have, a warrantie cannot be pleaded in barre, as in an action of trespass, or upon the statute of 5. R. 2. and the like. But in those actions when the freehold or inheritances doe come in question, there the warrantie may be pleaded: but in such actions which none but a tenant of the freehold can have, as upon the statute of 8. H. 6. affise, or the like, there a warrantie may be pleaded in barre. (1) [e] 21. E. 4. 18. 82. 1. H. 7. 12. 22. 11. H. 7. 15. 16. 20. H. 7. 2. b. 14. H. 7. 22. 43. E. 3. 25. per Finch. in quar. Imp. 15. H. 7. 9. Lib. 10. fol. 97. (Ant. 101. 366. Hob. 14. 28. 2. Saund. 180.)

Quant garrantie est fait a un home sur estate, que adonques il avoit, si l'estate soit defeat, le garrantie est defeat. Here it appeareth, that although a collateral warrantie be descended, [f] yet if the state whereunto the warrantie was annexed be defeated, albeit it be by a meere stranger (as in this case that Littleton here puts by the discontinuance), the warrantie is defeated; and although the discontinuance remaine, and no remitter wrought to the heire, yet the warrantie is defeated, and barre removed, so as the issue in taile may have his formedon, and recover the land. Sublato principali tollitur adjunctum. (2) [f] 3. H. 7. 9. b. 16. E. 3. tit. Continual Claim 10. 9. H. 4. 8. Pl. Com. 158. (10. Rep. 95)

Sect. 742.

EN mesme le manner est, si le discontinuance fait feoffement en fee, reservant a luy un certaine rent, et pur default de payment un re-entry, &c. et un collateral * garrantie de ancestor est fait a celuy feoffee que ad estate sur condition, &c. et morust sans issue, coment que cel garrantie descenderoit sur l'issue en taile, uncore si apres le rent soit aderere, et le

IN the same manner it is, if the discontinuance make a feoffement in fee, reserving to him a certain rent, and for default of payment a re-entry, &c. and a collateral warrantie of the ancestor is made to the feoffee that hath the estate upon condition, &c. and dieth without issue, albeit that this warranty shall descend upon the issue in taile, yet if after the rent be behind, and the dis-

* garrantie de ancestor est fait—ancestor releffu, in L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The feoffee with warranty cannot take any advantage of the warranty, unless he be tenant of the land. 26. II. 6. 3. b.

(2) If a man makes a feoffment with warranty, non feoffment is a good plea; for if the feoffment be avoided, the warranty also is avoided, for that depends upon the feoffment. But if the man makes a lease for yeares, and covenants that he will warrant and defend the land to the lessee; if the lessee be ousted, whether it be by one that hath or that hath not title, he shall have a writ of covenant. Brownlow Rep. part 2. fol. 165.

*discontinuee entra en la terre , adonques averal'issue en taile son recovery per brieve de formedon, pur ceo que le collateral garranty est defeat. Et issint si ascun tiel collateral garranty soit pleder envers l'issue en le taile, en son action de formedon, il poit montrer le matter come est avantdit, coment le garranty est defeat, &c. et issint il poit bien maintenir son action, † &c. discontinuee enter into the land, then shall the issue in taile have his recovery by writ of formedon, because the collateral warranty is defeated. And so if any such collateral warranty be pleaded against the issue in taile, in his action of formedon, he may shew the matter as is aforesaid, how the warrantie is defeated, &c. and so hee may well maintaine his action, &c.

(10. Rep. 95.)

HERE Littleton putteth another case upon the same ground and reason, viz. where the state whereunto the warrantie is annexed is defeated, there the warrantie it selfe is defeated also, which is one of the maximes of the common law.

Sect. 743.

ITEM, si tenant en taile fait un feoffement a son uncle, et puis l'uncle fait un feoffement en fee ovesque garrantie, &c. a un auter, et puis le feoffee del uncle enseoffa areremaine l'uncle en fee, et puis l'uncle enseoffa un estrange en fee sans garrantie, et morust sauns issue, et le tenant en taile morust, si issue en le taile voyle porte son breve de formedon envers l'estrange que fuit le darrein feoffee, ‡ et ceo per l'uncle, l'issue ne serra unque barre per le garrantie que fuit fait per le uncle al dit primer feoffee de son uncle, pur ceo que le dit garrantie fuit defeat et anient, pur ceo que l'uncle a luy || reprist cy grand estate de son § primer feoffee a que le garrantie fuit fait, sicome mesme le feoffee avoit de luy. Et la cause pur que le garrantie est anient en ceo cas est ceo, scilicet, que si le garrantie estoieroit en sa force, donque l'uncle garrantera a luy mesme, que ne poit estre.

ALSO, if tenant in taile make a feoffement to his uncle, and after the uncle make a feoffement in fee with warranty, &c. to another, and after the feoffee of the uncle doth re-enseoffe againe the uncle in fee, and after the uncle enseoffeth a stranger in fee without warrantie, and dieth without issue, and the tenant in taile dieth, if the issue in taile will bring his writ of formedon against the stranger that was the last feoffee, and that by the uncle, the issue shall not be barred by the warranty that was made by the uncle to the first feoffee of his uncle, for that the said warrantie was defeated and taken away, because the uncle tooke backe to him as great an estate from his first feoffee to whom the warrantie was made, as the same feoffee had from him. And the cause why the warranty is defeated is this, viz. that if the warrantie should stand in his force, then the uncle should warrant to himselfe, which cannot be.

Here

* &c. added L. and M. and Rob.
|| reprist—prist, L. and M. and Rob.

† &c. not in L. and M. nor Rob.
§ dit: added in L. and M. and Rob.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Rob.

HERE Littleton putteth another case where a warrantie may be defeated, as when the uncle taketh backe as large an estate as he had made, the warrantie is defeated, because he cannot warrant land to himselfe. [g] And so it is if the uncle had made the warrantie to the feoffee, his heires and assignes, and taken backe an estate in fee, and after infeoffed another, yet the warrantie is defeated, for that he cannot be assignee to himselfe, and a man shall not regularly vouch himselfe as assignee of a fee simple, and the law will not suffer things inutile and unprofitable. [h] And yet if the father be infeoffed with warrantie to him and his heires, the father infeoffeth his heire apparant in fee and dieth, he (as it hath beene said) shall vouch himselfe, and the heire in borow English, by reason the act in law determined the warrantie betweene the father and the sonne.

[i] But if a man maketh a feoffment in fee with warrantie to the feoffee, his heires and assignes, and the feoffee re-enfeoffeth the feoffor and his wife, or the feoffor and any other stranger, the warrantie remaineth still; or if two doe make a feoffment with warrantie to one and his heires and assignes, and the feoffee re-enfeoffe one of the feoffors, the warrantie doth also remaine.

(Vaugh. 389.)

[g] Temps E. 1. Voucher 265.

40. E. 3. 14. 44. E. 3. 38.

25. E. 3. 41. b. 26. E. 3. 68.

14. E. 3. Vouch. 106.

16. E. 3. Voucher 87.

19. E. 3. Vouch. 122.

17. E. 3. 73. 74. 20. H. 6. 29.

(2. Roll. Abr. 739.)

[h] 40. E. 3. 41. 2. 41. E. 3. 25. 2.

(Ant. 384. Roll. Abr. 98. a.)

[i] 11. H. 4. 20. 42.

17. E. 3. 47. 59. 18. E. 3. 56.

29. E. 3. 46. 39. E. 3. 9.

(Vaugh. 389.)

Sect. 744.

MES si le feoffee fesoit estate al uncle pur terme de vie, ou en taile, savant le reversion, &c. ou que il fait done en taile al uncle, ou un leas pur terme de vie, le remainder ouster, &c. en cest cas le garrantie n'est pas tout ousterment anient, mes est mis en suspence durant l'estate que l'uncle ad. Car apres ceo que l'uncle est mort sans issue, &c. donques celui en le reversion, ou celui en le remainder, barreroit l'issue en taile en son brieve de formedon per le collateral garranty en tiel cas, &c. Mes autrement est lou l'uncle avoit auxy graund estate en la terre de le feoffee, a que le gar-

BUT if the feoffee had made an estate to his uncle for terme of life, or in taile, saving the reversion, &c. or a gift in taile to the uncle, or a lease for terme of life, the remainder over, &c. in this case the warrantie is not altogether taken away, but is put in suspence during the estate that the uncle hath. For after that that the uncle is dead without issue, &c. then he in the reversion, or he in the remainder, shall barre the issue in taile in his writ of formedon by the collateral warranty in such case, &c. But otherwise it is where the uncle hath as great estate in the land of the feoffee to whom the warrantie was made, as the feoffee

PUR terme de vie, ou en taile. Here

it appeareth [k] that by taking a [l] lease for life, or a gift in taile, the warrantie is suspended.

A man infeoffeth a woman with warrantie, they intermarry and are impleaded, upon the default of the husband, the wife is received, she shall vouch her husband, &c. notwithstanding the warranty was put in suspence. [m] And so on the other side, if a woman infeoffe a man with warrantie, and they intermarry and are impleaded, the husband shall vouch himselfe and his wife by force of the said warrantie.

[n] An infant en ventre sa mere may be vouched if God give him a birth, and if not, such a one heire to the warrantie; but he cannot be vouched alone without the heire at the common law, for proces shall be presently awarded against him.

Mes est mise en suspence. [o] Tenant in taile maketh a feoffment in fee with warrantie, and discontinue the discontinuee, and dyeth seised, leaving assets to his issue. Some hold that in respect of this suspended warrantie and assets, the [k] 16. E. 3. Vouch. 87.

44. E. 3. 38. 26. E. 3. 56.

17. E. 3. 47. 10. E. 3. 39.

12. E. 3. Counterplea de vouch.

41. 14. E. 3. ib. 12.

(4. Rep. 52.)

[l] 6. E. 2. Vouch. 257.

3. E. 3. ib. 201. 5. E. 3. ib. 172.

18. E. 3. 52. 14. E. 3. Vouch. 109.

31. E. 3. ibid. 25.

43. E. 3. 7. 44. E. 3. 38.

32. E. 3. Voucher 102.

[m] 4. E. 2. Voucher 243. 246.

(Ant. 348. a.)

[n] Temps E. 1. Gard. 153. 31. E. 1.

Buete 873. 8. E. 2. Vouch. 237.

11. E. 3. ibid. 13.

11. E. 3. quer. imp. 158.

38. E. 3. 7. & 29. 41. E. 3. in Dower. 9. H. 6. 24. Pl. Com.

Stowel's case per. Saunders & Browne.

[o] 21. E. 3. 36. 2. & b.

38. E. 3. 21. 41. E. 3. 26.

45. E. 3. Taile 32. 44. E. 3. ib. 31.

33. E. 3. ib. 4.

(3. Leon. 20. Cro. Car. 145.)

* pas not in L. and M. nor Rob.

+ &c. added L. and M. and Rob.

issue in taile shall not be remitted, but that the discontinuee shall recover against the issue in taile and he take advantage of his warrantie, if any hee hath, and after in a formedon brought by the issue, the discontinuee shall barre him in respect of the warrantie and assents; and so every man's right saved. (1)

rantie fuit fait, come hath himselfe. Causa le feoffee avoit de luy. patet.
Causa patet.

Sect. 745.

Sect. 733. 706.

OU release fait per luy ove garrantie.

Note a warrantie grounded upon a release. Hereof you shall reade before in this Chapter.

Soit attain de felony, ou utlage, &c.

8. E. 2. Voucher 237. (Plowd. 397. a.)

Note, according to Littleton here, there be two manner of attainders: the one is after appearance, and that in three manners; by confession, by battell, or by verdict: the other upon proces to bee outlawed, which is an attainder in law. But (as hath beene said) there is a great diversitie, as to the forfeiture of land, betweene an attainder of felony by outlawry upon an appeale, and upon an inditement: for in the case of an appeale the defendant shall forfeit no lands, but such as he had at the time of the outlawrie pronounced; but in case of inditement, such as hee had at the time of the felony committed. And the reason of this diversitie is evident; for that in the case of appeale there is no time alleaged in the writ when the felony was done, and therefore of necessitie it must relate in that case only to the judgement of the outlawry: but in the case of inditement there is a certain time alleaged, and therefore in that case it shall relate to the time alleaged in the inditement when the felony was committed. But in the case of the inditement there is also a diversitie to be observed; [e] for, as hath beene said, it shall relate to the time alleaged in the inditement for avoyding of estates, charges, and incumbrances, made by the felon after the felony committed; but for the meane profits of the land it shall relate only to the judgement, aswell in this case of outlawrie as in other cases. And where Littleton saith, (attain de felony) if a man be convicted of felony by verdict, and delivered to the ordinary to make purgation, [p] hee cannot be vouched, for that the time of his purgation (if any should be) is uncertaine, and the demandant cannot be delayed upon such an uncertaintie; but the tenant is not without remedie, for hee may have his warrantia cartæ.

(5. Rep. 109. Ant. 13. a. b.)

[e] 33. E. 3. Forfeiture 30. 38. E. 3. 31. 3. E. 4. 25. 19. E. 4. 2. Pl. Com. 488. b.

[p] 8. E. 2. Voucher 237. Vid. 38. E. 3. 29. b. Simile.

Attaint. Of this word hath beene spoken in the second Booke in the Chapter of Villenage.

[*] Dame Hale's case in Pl. Com. fol. 262.

Upon severall attainders of felonies, there lye three severall writs of escheate, viz. [*] first, when he hath judgement to be hanged: secondly, when he is outlawed: thirdly, when he abjureth the realme.

[q] 8. E. 3. Judgement 225.

[q] The defendant in an appeale of death did wage battell, and was slaine in the field, yet judgement was given that he should be hanged; and the justices said, that it is altogether necessarie that such a judgement be given, for otherwise the lord could not have a writ of escheate. [r] And in cire it hath been seene, that a man hath beene attainted after his death by presentment, &c. (2) The difference betweene a man attainted and convicted is, that a man is said convict before hee hath judgement; as if a man bee convict by confession, verdict, or recreancie. And when he hath his judgement upon the verdict, confession, or recreancy,

(1) But clearly, if the warranty were never executed, as in the case of fine sur render with warranty and assents, there shall be a remitter. Lord Hale's MSS.

(2) In Lambarde's Justice of Peace, ch. 10. it is said, that if a man be attainted of murder or felony, it is needles to arraign him of new of any other felony, because it is needles to condemn him who already is attainted, except in special cases, either for the advantage of the king, or the commodity of the subject. The author then proceeds to state several examples of both the exceptions. In 4. Rep. fol. 57, sir Edward Coke observes, that though a man be killed in rebellion, he shall not forfeit his lands nor goods; but if the chief-justice (sovereign coroner of England) upon the view of the body, make record thereof, and return it into the king's bench, he shall forfeit lands and goods, as Fineux, chief-justice, did temp. H. 7.

recreancie; or upon the outlawrie, or abjuration, then is he said to be attaint. And thus is the law taken at this day, notwithstanding [f] some diversitie of opinions in our bookes.

If a felon be convicted by verdict, confession, or recreancie, he doth forfeit his goods and chattels, &c. presently. [r] For where a reason hath beene yeilded in our bookes, that the praying of his clergie was a refusall of the judgement of the law, and a flight in law, and for that cause he forfeited his goods and chattels, that doth not hold; for if a man be convicted of petite treason, or murder, or any other crime, for which he cannot have his clergie, yet by the verie conviction he forfeiteth his goods and chattels before attainer. And [u] Stanford (speaking of a felon convicted by verdict) saith, that he shall forfeit his goods which he had at the time of the verdict given, which is the conviction in that case; and by the statute of 1 R. 3. cap. 3. no sheriffe, bailiffe, &c. shall seise the goods of a felon before hee bee convicted of the felony; whereby it appeareth, that the goods may be seised as forfeit after conviction. And the [x] old statute is worthy of noting: Provisum est in curia nostrâ coram iusticiariis nostris, quod de cetero nullus homo captus pro morte hominis vel aliâ felonâ pro quâ debet imprisonari, disseisetur de terris et tenementis vel catallis suis quousque convictus fuerit. Soas by a conviction of a felon, his goods and chattels are forfeited; but by attainer, that is by judgement given, his lands and tenements are forfeited, and his blood corrupted, and not before.

[y] If the partie upon his arraignment refuse to answer according to law, or say nothing, he shall not be adjudged to be hanged, but for his contempt, to peine fort et dure, which worketh no attainer for the felony, nor forfeiture of his lands, or corruption of blood. But in case of high-treason, if the partie refuse to answer according to law, or say nothing, hee shall have such judgement by attainer, as if he had beene convicted by verdict or confession. (1)

Felony. (*) Ex vi termini significat quodlibet capitale crimen felleo animo perpetratum, in which sense murder is said to be done per feloniam, and is so appropriated by law, as felonice cannot be expressed by any other word. [a] And in antient times this word (felonice) was of so large an extent as it included high-treason; and therefore in our antient bookes, by the pardon of all felonies, high-treason, or counterfeiting of the great seal, and of the king's coine, &c. was pardoned. [b] But afterwards it was resolved, that in the king's pardon or charter, this word (felonie) should only extend to common felonies, and that high-treason should not be comprehended under the same, and therefore ought to be specially named. And yet that a pardon of all felonies should extend to petite treason; wherefore by the law at this day under the word (felony) in commissions, &c. is included petite treason, murder, homicide, burning of houses, burglary, robbery, rape, &c. chance-medly, se defendendo, and petite larceny. [c] For such of these crimes for the which any shall have this judgement, to be hanged by the necke till he be dead, he shall forfeit all his lands in fee simple, and his goods and chattels: for felony by chance-medly, or se defendendo, or petite larceny, he shall forfeit his goods and chattels, and no lands of any estate of freehold or inheritance. And all felonies punishable according to the course of the common law, are either by the common law, or by statute. There is also a felony punishable by the civill law, because it is done upon the high sea, as pyracie, robbery, or murder, whereof the common law did take no notice, because it could not be tried by twelve men. If this pyracie be tried before the lord admirall in the court of the admiraltie, according to the civill law, and the delinquent there attainted, yet shall it worke no corruption of blood, nor forfeiture of his lands; otherwise it is if he be attainted before commissioners by force of the statute of [d] 28. H. 8. By the expresse purview of that statute, about the end of the reigne of queene Elizabeth, certaine English pyrats, that had robbed on the sea merchants of Venice, in amitie with the queene, being not knownen, obtained a coronation pardon, whereby, amongst other things, the king pardoned them all felonies. It was [e] resolved by all the judges of England upon conference and advisement, that this did not pardon the pyracie; for seeing it was no felonie whereof the common law tooke consance, and the statute of 28. H. 8. did not alter the offence, but ordaine a triall and inflict punishment, therefore it ought to be pardoned specially, or by words which tant amount, and not by the generall name of felony; and according to this resolution the delinquents were attainted and executed.

Pyrata cometh of the word πυράτης, which signifieth a rover at sea. Attainer of heresie or præmunire worketh no corruption of blood, nor heresie, forfeiture of lands; but in case of præmunire, forfeiture of lands in fee simple, but not of lands in taile, as formerly hath been said. [f] By some statutes it is said, sur forfeiture de corps et de avoir, or sub forisfactura omnium quæ in potestate suâ obtinet, or to be at the king's will, body, lands, and goods, and the like, these are not extended to the losse of life or member, but to imprisonment, lands and goods. [g] But if an act of parliament saith, Ecce judgement de vie et member, or subeat iudicium vitæ vel membrorum, in that case judgement of death shall be given, as in case of felonie, viz. that he be hanged

[f] 40. E. 3. 12. 3. E. 3. Corone 365. 8. E. 2. ibid. 293.

21. H. 7.

[r] Dame Hale's case, ubi sup.

8. H. 4. 2.

(12. Rep. 121. 9. Rep. 129)

[u] Stanf. Pl. cor. fol. 192.

Lib. 3. fol. 110. Foxley's case.

Vide 7. H. 4. 11. 1. R. 3. cap. 3.

(3. Infl. 228.)

[x] Statute de catallis felonum

vet. Magna Carta, fol 66. 2. part.

[y] Stanf. Pl. Cor. 139. 185.

(3. Rep. 10. b.)

[a] Glanvil. lib. 14. ca. 15.

Marlbr. ca. 25. W. 1. c. 15.

[b] 3. E. 4. 14. 18. E. 4. 10.

23. Aff. 49. 1. E. 3. 13.

Stanf. Pl. Cor. 102. E. 8. H. 4. 2.

[c] 23. Aff. 49.

(3. Infl. 47. 4. Rep. 40, 41, 42.

44.)

[d] Stanf. præ. 45. 16. E. 7.

Coron. 116. & 3. E. 3. Coron. 302.

(5. Rep. 120. 9. Rep. 65.)

(Vide Ant. 74. 3. Infl. 112.

1. H. P. C. 354, 355. Vol. 2. 12.

368. Salk. 85. contra.)

[e] 28. H. 8. cap. 15.

(3. Infl. 112.)

[f] Hill. 2. Jac. Regis.

Vide Mich. 7. & 8. Eliz. Dier 241.

14. Eliz. Dier 308.

(4. Rep. 43.)

[g] Statute de Magna moneta tempore E. 1. 35. E. 1. de Carliffe. 20. E. 3. cap. 4.

(Doc. & Stud. 115.)

[h] W. 2. cap. 34. Rot. Parl.

25. E. 1. 1. E. 2. de frang. prisonam. 14. E. 3. cap. 10. Stanf.

Pl. Coron. 30, 31. 3. E. 3. Co-ron. 153. Brooke tit. Coron. 203.

9. E. 4. 26.

(11. Rep. 2. 23. H. 8. 25. H. 8.

48. H. 6. by 18. Eliz. 25. Ed. 3.)

(1) On the peine forte et dure, see Mr. justice Blackstone's Commentaries, vol. 4. c. 25.

(11. Rep. 291. 4. Infl. 123.
4. Mod. 128. Show. 353.)
[4] Bract. lib. 4. fol. 248.
4. E. 3. 3. 13. R. 2. cap. 2.
Rot. Parl. 21. R. 2. nu. 19.
1. H. 4. c. 1. 13. H. 4. 4. & 5.
37. H. 6. 21. Rot. Parl. 8. R. 2.
nu. 31. Fortesc. cap. 32. Rot.
Parl. 2. H. 4. 74. 11. H. 4. 24.
20. H. 6. 6. Stanf. Pl. Cor. 65.
Stat. de Assiznat. 4. E. 1. Br.
Cor. 196. Rot. Parl. 2. H. 6.
nu. 9. Rot. Parl. 5. H. 4. nu. 39.
Rot. Vase. 9. H. 4. nu. 14.
8. H. 6. nu. 38. 21. E. 4. 17. b.
Catesby. 10. H. 7. per Vavalor.
18. E. 2. Quar. Imp. 175.
6. E. 3. 41. Pafe. 14. E. 3. in Scac. le Count. de Kent's case,
p. 39. E. 3. cor. Reg. Rot. 49.
le Count. de Lanc. case. Rot. Parl.
28. E. 2. nu. 8. Mortimer's case.
Rot. Parl. 28. E. 3. nu. 13. le Countee de Arundel's case.
[*] Stanf. lib. 3. Pl. Cor. 195. b.
27. E. 3. 77. 13. H. 4. 8. Vid.
Lit. lib. 1. in the Chap. of Dover.
(3. Infl. 240.)

hanged by the necke till he be dead. and consequently his blood is corrupted (as our author here saith) and shall forfeit as in case of felonie.

[6] There is also a court of the constable and marshall, who have conuance of contracts of deeds of arme, and of warre out of the realme and also of things touching warre within the realme, which may not be determined or discuted by the common law, and also all appeales of offences done out of the realme. and they proceed according to the civill law: but these things more properly pertaine to another kind of treatise, and therefore I shall speake no more thereof in this place, but only for the satisfaction of the studious reader, to quote some authorities of law touching the jurisdiction of that court, that hee may have some taste thereof.

In the same manner it is, if a man be attainted of high-treason, the warrantie is also defeated.

Le sanke est corrupt enter eux, &c. [*] Aptly is a man said to be attainted, attinens, for that by his attainder of treason or felonie his blood is so stained and corrupted, as, first, his children cannot be heires to him, nor to any other ancestor, and therefore the warrantie cannot binde; for thereby heires only, are to be bound.

Secondly, if he were noble or gentle before, he and all his children and posteritie are by this attainder made base and ignoble in respect of any nobilitie or gentrie which they had by their birth.

Thirdly, this corruption of blood is so high, that regularly it cannot be absolutely salved but by authoritie of parliament: all which is implied in the same (&c.). (1)

Sect. 746.

LE issue en taile poit enter. And the reason is, for that by the attainder of the father, it is now in judgement of law but a release without warrantie; for albeit the warrantie at the time of the release was effectually, yet it worketh no discontinuance unless it descendeth upon the issue in taile; so as if it be defeated, extinct, or determined in the life of the tenant in taile, then no discontinuance is wrought; and so it is if tenant in taile hath issue, and releaseth to the disseisor with warrantie, and after is attainted of felonie, and after obtaineth his pardon and dieth, the issue in taile may enter; [*] for the pardon doth not restore the blood as to the warrantie, nor maketh the issue in that case inheritable to the warrantie. But if the issue in taile in that case had been attainted of felonie in the life of his father, and obtained his charter of pardon, and then his father had died, the issue cannot enter into the

*ITEM, si tenant en taile soit disseise, et puis fait release al disseisor ove garrantie en fee, et puis le tenant en taile est attaint, ou utlage de felony, et ad issue et morust; en cest case l'issue en taile poit enter sur le disseisor. Et la cause est pur ceo, que * rien fait discontinuance en cest case forsque le garrantie, et garrantie ne poit descendre al issue en taile, pur ceo, que le sanke est corrupt perenter celuy que fist le garrantie et issue en taile.*

ALSO, if tenant in taile bee disseised, and after make a release to the disseisor with warrantie in fee, and after the tenant in taile is attaint, or outlawed of felony, and hath issue and dieth; in this case the issue in taile may enter upon the disseisor. And the cause is for this, that nothing maketh discontinuance in this case but the warrantie, and warrantie may not descend to the issue in taile, for this, that the blood is corrupted between him that made the warrantie and the issue in taile.

(Plowd. 252. a. 3. Infl. 241.)

[*] 27. E. 3. 77. 1. E. 3. 4.
6. E. 3. 55. 9. H. 5. 9. 31. E. 1.
Discent. 17. 46. E. 3. Petit. 20.
26. Aff. 2. 49. Aff. 4. 29. Aff. 11.
13. H. 4. 8. 13. H. 7. 17. Pl.
Com. in Walsingham's case.
3. E. 2. Discent. Br. 64. Stanf.
Pl. Cor. 195, 196. See in the Chapter of Tenant by the Curtesie, touching this matter.

(Plowd. 557. b. Ante 8. a.)

Sect.

* null added L. and M. and Roh.

(1) The policy and justice of our laws of forfeiture in this respect are most ably discussed in Mr. Yorke's celebrated Considerations on the Law of Forfeiture.

Sect. 747.

*CAR le garranty tous foits demurt a le common ley, et la common ley est, * ove quant home est attaint ou utlage de felonie, quel utlagarie est un attainder en ley, que le sanke perenter luy et son firs, et tous autres queux ferra dits ses heires, est corrupt, issint que † riens per discent poit disceder a ascun que poit estre dit son heire per le common ley. Et la feme de tiel home que issint est attaint de felonie, ne ferra jammes endow de les tenements sa baron issint attaint. Et la cause est, pur ceo que homes plus eschuerent de faire ascuns felonies. ‡ Mes l'issue en tayle quant a les tenements tailed n'est pas en tiel cas § barre, pur ceo que || est enberite per force de le statute, et nemy per le course de common ley: et pur ceo tiel attainder de son pier ou de son ancestor en le tayle ¶, ne luy ouster de son droit per force de le taile, &c.*

FOR the warrantie alwayes abideth at the common law, and the common law is such, that when a man is attaint or outlawed of felony, which outlawrie is an attainder in law, that the blood betweene him and his sonne, and all others which shall bee said his heires, is corrupt, so that nothing by discent may descend to any that may bee said his heire by the common law. And the wife of such a man that is so attaint, shal never be endowed of the tenements of her husband so attainted. And the cause is, for that men should more eschew to commit felonies. But the issue in taile as to the tenements tailed is not in such case barred, because hee is inheritable by force of the statute, and not by the course of the common law: and therefore such attainder of his father or of his ancestour in the taile, shall not put him out of his right by force of the taile, &c.

land in respect of the corruption of blood upon the attainder of himselfe. [b] And it is a generall rule, that having respect to all those whose blood was corrupted at the time of the attainder, the pardon doth not remove the corruption of blood neither upward nor downward. As if there be grandfather, father, and sonne, and the grandfather and father have divers other sonnes, if the father bee attainted of felonie and pardoned, yet doth the blood remaine corrupted not onely above him and about him, but also to all his children borne at the time of his attainder. But in the case of Littleton, if tenant in taile at the time of his attainder had no issue, and after the obtaining of his pardon had issue, that issue should have beene bound by the warrantie; for by the pardon he was as a new creature, tangquam filius terræ, whose blood upwards remaine corrupted; but for the issue had after the pardon, hee is inheritable to his father; and if his father had issue before the pardon, and had issue also after and dieth, nothing can descend to the youngest, for that the eldest is living and disabled. But if the eldest sonne had died in the life of the father without issue, then the youngest should inherit.

Le garrantie demurt al common ley.

The collateral warrantie is not restrained by the statute of donis conditionalibus, but a lineall warrantie is restrained by the statute, unless there be assets; as formerly at large hath beene said.

Et la feme de tiel home que issint est attaint, &c. ne ferra jammes endow, &c.

It is to be observed, that the judgement against a man for felonie is, that he be hanged by the neck untill he be dead; but implicative, (as hath beene said) he is punished

[b] Bract. lib. 3. fol. 132, 133. 276. & lib. 5. 374. Britt. fol. 215. b. Flet. lib. 1. cap. 28.

(1. Cro. 435. Ant. 8. 2.)

Vid. Sect. 711, 712.

(8. Rep. 171. Ante 31. 2. 37. 2. 41. 2.)

(Lamb. 275, 276.)

* tiel added L. and M. and Roh.
§ barre not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† null added L. and M. and Roh.
|| il added L. and M. and Roh.

‡ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.
¶ &c. added L. and M. and Roh.

(3. Inst. 17. 47. Ant. 41. a.)

[i] 5. E. 3. 14. 9. E. 3. 22.

[4] 7. H. 4. 32. 19. H. 6. 71.
See Lit. lib. 1. cap. Dow. Sect. 55.

(7. Rep. 11.)

[f] 26. H. 8. cap. 13.

33. H. 8. cap. 20. 5. E. 6. ca. 11.

[m] Stanf. Pl. Cor. 195.

[n] 1. E. 6. ca. 13. 5. E. 6. c. 11.

5. El. ca. 1. & 11. 18. El. cap. 1.

12. H. 4. 3. Vide Sect. 55.

(3. Rep. 171.)

[o] 6. H. 4. 1. 45 E. 3. Vouch. 72.

Pl. Com. 292. 16. E. 3. Age 46.

18. H. 3. Vouch. 281. 23. E. 3.

Garr. 77. See in the Chapter of Villanage, Sect. 200.

first in his wife, that she shall lose her dower. Secondly, in his children, that they shall become base and ignoble; as hath been said. Thirdly, that he shall lose his posterity, for his blood is stained and corrupted, that they cannot inherit unto him or any other ancestor. Fourthly, that he shall forfeit all his lands and tenements which he hath in fee, and which he hath in tail, for terme of his life. And fifthly, all his goods and chattels. And thus severe it was at the common law; and the reason hereof was, that men should feare to commit felonie: Ut pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat. And it is truly said, Esse meliores sunt quos ducit amor, tamen plures sunt quos corrigit timor. And so it is a fortiori in case of high-treason. But some acts of parliament have altered the common law in some of these points: first, by the statute of donis conditionalibus, lands intailed were not forfeited neither for felonie nor for treason, but for the life of tenant in tail. This act was made by king Edward the first, who (as our bookes [i] speake) was the most sage king that ever was: [4] and the cause wherefore this statute was made, was to preserve the inheritance in the blood of them to whom the gift was made, notwithstanding any attainder of felonie or treason. And this act in historie is called gentilitium municipale; for that by this act the families of many noblemen and gentlemen were continued and preserved to their posterities. And this law continued in force from the thirteenth yeare of king Edward the first, untill the [f] twentieth yeare of king Henry the eighth, when by act of parliament estates in tail are forfeited by attainder of high-treason. But as to felonies (whereof our author here speaketh) the statute of donis conditionalibus doth yet remaine in force, so as for attainder of felonie, lands or tenements entailed are not forfeited, but only (as hath been said) during the life of tenant in tail, but the inheritance is preserved to the issues.

[m] The wife of a man attainted of high treason or petit treason shall not be received to demand dower, unlesse it be in certaine cases specially provided for. But the wife of a person attainted of misprision of treason, murder, or felonie, is dowable since our author wrote, [n] by the statute in that case made and provided, which is more favourable to the woman than the common law was.

[o] If a feignorie be granted with warrantie, and the tenancie escheat, the feignorie whereunto the warrantie was annexed is extinct, and consequently the warrantie defeated, and it shall not extend to the land; et sic in similibus.

If a collateral ancestor release with warrantie, and enter into religion, now the warrantie doth binde; but if after he be deraigned, now it is defeated.

Sect. 748.

(1. Rep. 112. b.)

(5. Rep. 71. a.)

Vide Lib. 8. fol. 153, 154. Altham's case. 46. E. 3. 2.

45. E. 3. 23. Vid. before in the Chapter of Releases. Sect. 508.

(Ant. 291. b.)

[7] 14. Aff. pl. 2.

3. Eliz. Dyer. 188. 9. E. 4. 52. b.

(Plowd. 2. b. Manxel's case)

Ant. 319. b. 20. a. 6. Rep. 7.)

LITTLETON having spoken in what cases warranties may be defeated and extinguished by matter in law, now he sheweth how a warrantie may be discharged or defeated by matter in deed: and hereupon he putteth an example of a release in three severall manners:

First, by a release of all warranties.

Secondly, by a release of all covenants reall.

And thirdly, by a release of all demands.

[7] If a man make a gift in tail with warrantie, this warrantie is also intailed, and therefore a release made by tenant in tail of the warrantie, shall not bar the issue, no more than his release shall bar the issue to bring an attainder upon a false verdict, or a writ of error upon an erroneous

ITEM, si tenant en le taile enseoffa son uncle, le quel enseoffa un auter en fee ove garrantie, &c. si apres le feoffee per son fait releffa a son uncle tous manners des garranties, ou tous manners de covenants reals, ou tous manners de demandes, per tiel release le garrantie est extinct. Et si le garrantie en cel case soit pleade envers le heire en taile, que porta son brieve

ALSO, if tenant in taile infeoffe his uncle, which infeoffes another in fee with warrantie, if after the feoffee by his deed release to his uncle all manner of warranties, or all manner of covenants realls, or all manner of demands, by such release the warrantie is extinct. And if the warrantie in this case be pleaded against the heire in taile that bringeth his writ of formede

*de formedon, pur barrer le heire de son action, si l'heire avoit * le dit releas et ceo pledast, il defetere le plee en
barre, &c. Et mults autres casés et matters
y sont, per queux home
poet defeater garrantie,
&c.*

don, to barre the heire
of his action, if the heire have and plead the said release, &c. he shall defeat the plee in barre, &c. And many other casés and matters there be, whereby a man may defeat a warrantie, &c.

judgement given against the father, nor his gift can barre the issue of the deed that create the estate taile, nor of any other deed necessary for defence of the title.

Après le feoffee relessa.

Littleton here put-teth his case where one is bound to warrant: put the case [r] then that two make a feoffment in fee, and warrant the land to the feoffee and his heires, and the feof-
(5. Rep. 70.)
[r] 45. E. 3. 23.
(3. Rep. 14.)

fee release to one of the feoffors the warrantie, yet he shall vouch the other for the moytie.
And so it is if one infeoffe two with warrantie, and the one release the warrantie, yet the other shall vouch for his moytie.

Si le heire avoit le dit releas, &c. Here it appeareth, that the release being made to the uncle being his ancestor, the deed doth after the decease of the uncle belong to him, and therefore he cannot plead it, unlesse he sheweth it forth.

Et mults autres casés et matters y sont, per queux home poet defeater (Vaugh. 387.)
garrantie, &c.

As namely by a defeasance, as other things executorie may. Also a warrantie may lose his force by taking benefit of the same. In a præcipe the tenant voucheth, and at the sequatur sub suo periculo, the tenant and the vouchee make default, whereupon the demandant hath judgement against the tenant. And afterwards the demandant brings a scire facias against the tenant to have execution; in this case the tenant may have a warrantia cartæ. And if in that case a stranger had brought a præcipe against the tenant, hee might have vouched againe, for by the judgement given against the tenant, the warranty lost not his force; but if the tenant had judgement to recover in value against the vouchee, hee should never vouch againe by reason of that warrantie, because hee had taken advantage of the warrantie. And it is to be observed, that upon the proces of summonas ad warrantizandum, if the sherife returne the vouchee summoned, and he make default, the tenant shall have a capias ad valentiam; but if he returne that the vouchee had nothing, then after the scire facias and plures a sequatur sub suo periculo shall issue; and there if the vouchee make default, the tenant shall not have judgement to recover in value, for he was never summoned; and it appeareth of record that he hath nothing, but in the capias ad valentiam it appeareth that he had assets, and he had beene summoned before: but in some speciall casés there shall be two recoveries in value upon one warrantie. As if a disseisor give lands to the husband and wife, and to the heires of the husband, the husband alieneth in fee with warrantie and dieth, the wife bringeth a cui in vita, the tenant vouches and recovereth in value, if after the death of the wife the disseisor bring a præcipe against the alienee, he shall vouch and recover in value againe.

[f] So it is where the wife bringeth a writ of dower against the alienee, he shall recover in [f] 45. E. 3. Voucher 72.
value, and after her death he shall recover in value againe, upon the same warrantie.

In the same manner it is if a man be seised of a rent by a defeasible title, and releaseth to the tenant of the land all his right in the land, and warranteth the land to him and his heires, if he be impleaded for the rent, he shall vouch and recover in value for the rent; and if after he be impleaded for the land, he shall vouch and recover in value againe for the land: but in these and the like casés, the reason is in respect of the severall estates recovered, but for one and the same estate he shall never recover but once in value; and though the land recovered in value be evicted, yet shall he never take benefit of that warrantie after.
And as warranties may be defeated in the whole, so they may be defeated as to part of the benefit that may be taken of the same. [r] As he that hath a warrantie may make a defeasance not to take any benefit by way of voucher; in the like manner that he shall take no advantage by way of warrantia cartæ, or by way of rebutter.

(Ant. 367. b.)

[r] 7. H. 6. 43. 13. Aff. 8.
13. E. 3. Garr. 24, 25, 37.
22. H. 6. 51. 8. H. 7. 6.

* le dit releas et ceo pledast—et pledast le dit releas, &c. in L. and M.

Seēt. 749.

HERE Littleton sheweth, that in the same manner that a collateral warrantie may be defeated by matter in deed, or by matter in law, so may to all intents and purposes a lineall warrantie, whereof hee putteth an example of a lineall warrantie and assents.

Et un lineal garrantie, &c. ovesque ceo que assents a luy discendist, &c. Here it appeareth by Littleton, that a lineall warrantie and assents is a good plea in a formedon in the discender; wherein it is to be knowen, that if tenant in taile alieneth with warrantie, and leave assents to descend; if the issue in taile doth alien the assents, and die, the issue of that issue shall recover the land, because the lineall warrantie descendeth only to him without assents; for neither the pleading of the warrantie without the assents, nor the assents without the warrantie is any barre in the formedon in the discender. But if the issue to whom the warrantie and assents descended had brought a formedon, and by judgement had beene barred by reason of the warrantie and assents; in that case, albeit he alieneth the assents, yet the estate taile is barred for ever; for a barre in a formedon in the discender, which is a writ of the highest nature that an issue in taile can have, is a good barre in any other formedon in the discender, brought afterwards upon the same gift.

ET est ascavoir, que en mesme le manner come garrantie collateral poit estre defeat per matter en fait ou en ley; en mesme le manner poit lineal garrantie estre defeat, &c. Car si l'heire en taile porta brieve de formedon, et un lineal garrantie de son ancestor enheritable per force de le taile, soit plede envers luy, ove ceo, que assents a luy discendist de fee simple, † que il ad per mesme l'auncestor que fist le garrantie; si l'heire que est demandant poit adnuller et defeater le garrantie, ceo suffist a luy: car le discent des auters tenements de fee simple ne fait riens pur barrer l'heire sans le garrantie, &c.*

AND it is to be understood, that in the same manner as the collateral warrantie may be defeated by matter in deed or in law; in the same manner may a lineall warrantie be defeated, &c. For if the heire in taile bringeth a writ of formedon, and a lineall warrantie of his ancestor inheritable by force of the taile, be pleaded against him, with this, that assents descended to him of fee simple, which hee hath by the same ancestor that made the warrantie; if the heire that is demandant may adnull and defeat the warrantie, that sufficeth him: for the discent of other tenements of fee simple maketh nothing to barre the heire without the warrantie, &c.

Temps E. 1. Car. 89. 34. E. 1. ibid. 88. 11. E. 2. ibid. 83. 4. E. 3. 24. 5. E. 3. 14. 40. E. 3. 9. 14. H. 4. 39. 24. H. 8. taile Br. 33. 4. Mar. Dier 139. Lib. 10. fol. 37, 38. in Mary Portington's case.

(8. Rep. 51.)

(Ant. 374. a. b.)

(10. Rep. 38. Plowd. 440. a. b. Hob. 40. Moor. 55.)

A TOY, mon fitz, &c. Here our author calleth (as many times in these bookes he hath done) not only his sonne Richard, but everie student of the law to be accounted his son, and worthily; for that seeing our author had the honour to be in his time the father of the law, and all good students in the law justly account themselves the sonnes of the law (for otherwise they are not worthy of the profession), our author, as a carefull and provident father, as it hath manifestly appeared, gave excellent instructions in these his bookes, both to his owne sonne, and to his adopted sonnes, to make them from age to age the more apt and able to understand the arguments and reasons of the law.

ORE jeo ay fait a toy, mon fits, trois livres.

NOW I have made to thee, my sonne, three bookes.

Le

* &c. not in L. and M. nor Roh.

† que il ad not in L. and M. nor Roh.

Le primer Livre est de Eſtates que homes ont en terres * ou tenements : c'eſtaſcavoir,

The firſt Book is of Eſtates which men have in lands and tenements : that is to ſay,

De Tenant en fee ſimple	†† Cap. 1
De Tenant en fee taile	2
De Tenant en † fee taile apres poſſibilitie d'iſſue extinct	3
De Tenant per le curteſie d'Engleterre	4
De Tenant en dower	5
De Tenant a terme de vie	6
De Tenant pur terme des ans	7
De Tenant a volunt per le common ley	8
De Tenant a volunt per cuſtome del mannor	9
‡ De Tenant per le verge	10

Le Second Livre. §

De Homage	Cap. 1
De Fealtie	2
De Eſcuage	3
De Service de Chivaler	4
De Socage	5
De Frankalmoigne	6
De Homage Aunceſtre	7
De Grand Serjeantie	8
De Petit Serjeantie	9
De Tenure en Burgage	10
De Tenure en Villenage	11
De Rents	12

Et ceux deux petits Livres jeo ay fait a toy pur le melior entender de certaine Chapters de les an-tient Livre de Tenures.

And theſe two little Books I have made to thee for the better underſtanding of certaine Chapters of the antient Booke of Tenures.

Meliour entendre, &c. And theſe Inſtitutes have I collected and publiſhed to the end that theſe three Bookes of our author may be the better underſtood of the ſtudious reader.

Antient Livre des Tenures. This booke may well be accounted antient, for it was compoſed in the raigne of king Edward the third, (as juſtice Fitzherbert ſaith) by a Fitz. in his Preface to his N. B. grave and diſcreet man.

Le Tierce Livre. ¶

De Parceners  ſolouque le courſe del common ley	Cap. 1
	De

* ou—r, L. and M. and Roh. † fee—le, L. and M. and Roh. ‡ De tenant per le verge not in L. and M. nor Roh.
§ eſt added L. and M. and Roh. || Rents—iii. maners de rentes, ſcilicet, rent ſervice, rent charge, et rent ſekke, L. and M.
and Roh. ¶ eſt added L. and M. and Roh.  ſolouque le courſe del common ley added L. and M. and Roh.
†† The numbers of the Chapters as above are not enumerated either in L. and M. or Roh.

Epilogus.

* De Parceners solongue le custome	Cap. 2
De Jointenants	3
De † Tenants en common	4
De Estates de terres et tenements sur condition	5
De Discent que tollent entries	6
De Continual Claime	7
De Releases	8
De Confirmations	9
De Attornements	10
De Discontinuances	11
De Remitters	12
De Garranties. ‡	13

¶ Epilogus.

JE O ne voile enprender ne presumer,

Ec. Here observe the great modestie and mildnesse of our author, which is worthy of imitation; for Nulla virtus, nulla scientia locum suum et dignitatem conservare potest sine modestia. And herein our author followed the example of Mosis, who was a judge, and the first writer of law; for he was mitissimus omnium hominum qui fuit in terris, as the holy historie testifieth of him.

Les arguments et les raisons del ley, Ec.

Ratio est anima legis; for then are we said to know the law, when we apprehend the reason of the law; that is, when we bring the reason of the law so to our owne reason, that wee perfectly understand it as our owne; and then, and never before, we have such an excellent and inseparable propertie and ownership therein, as wee can neither lose it, nor any man take it from us, and will direct us (the learning of the law is so chained together) in many other cases. But if by your studie and industrie you make not the reason of the law your owne, it is not possible for you que tu croies, que tout ceo que jeo ay dit en les dits livres soit ley, car jeo ne ceo voile enprender ne presumer sur moy. Mes de tiels choses que ne sont pas ley, enquires et apprendres de mes sages masters apprises en la ley.

ET saches, mon fits, que jeo ne voile

Nient meins coment que certaines choses queux sont motes et specifies en les dits livres, ne sont pas ley, uncore tielx choses ferra toy plus apt et able de entendre et apprendre les arguments et les raisons del ley, Ec. Car per les arguments et les raisons en la ley, home plus tost aviendra a le

AND know, my son, that I would not have thee beleieve, that all which I have said in these bookes is law, for I will not presume to take this upon me. But of those things that are not law, inquire and learne of my wise masters learned in the law. Notwithstanding albeit that certaine things which are moved and specified in the sayd bookes, are not altogether law, yet such things shall make thee more apt, and able to understand and apprehend the arguments and the reasons of the law, &c. For by the arguments and reasons in the law, a man more sooner shall come to the certaincer-

* De parceners solongue le custome not in L. and M. nor Roh. garrantie lyncall, garrantie collaterall, et garrantie que comence per disseisin, added L. and M. and Roh. M. nor Roh.

† Tenants—tenements, L. and M. and Roh.

‡ scilicet,

¶ Not in L. and certaintie et a la co- tie and knowledge of nusans de la ley. the law.

Lex plus laudatur quando ratione probatur.

argumentari et ratiocinari are many times taken for one. And that our author may not speake anything without authority, (which in these Institutes we have as we take it manifested) his opinion herein also agreeth with that of the learned and reverend chiefe justice of the court of common pleas, sir Richard Hankford, [y] Home ne scavera de quel mettal un campane est, si ne soit bien bate, ne le ley bien conus sans disputation. And another saith, [*] Jeo aye dispute cest matter pur la apprender la ley. So as our author hath made a most excellent epilogue or conclusion with a grave advice and counsell, together with the reason thereof, which all good students are to know and follow; and with scire and sequi I will conclude our author's epilogue.

long to retaine it in your memorie. And wel doth our author couple arguments and reasons together, Quia argumenta ignota et obscura ad lucem rationis proferunt et reddunt splendida: and therefore [y] 11. H. 4. 37.

[*] 41. E. 3. 22. Kitor.
Vid. Sect. 377.

Lex plus laudatur quando ratione probatur.

This is the fourth time that our author hath cited verses.

Vid. Sect. 384. 443. 550.

When I had finished this worke of the first part of the Institutes, and looked backe and considered the multitude of the conclusions in law, the manifold diversities between cases and points of learning; the varietie almost infinite of authorities, antient, constant and moderne, and withall their amiable and admirable consent in so many successions of ages; the many changes and alterations of the common law, and additions to the same, even since our author wrote, by many acts of parliament, and that the like worke of Institutes had not been attempted by any of our profession whom I might imitate, I thought it safe for me to follow the grave and prudent example of our worthy author, not to take upon me, or presume that the reader should thinke that all that I have said herein to be law: yet this I may safely affirme, that there is nothing herein but may either open some windowes of the law, to let in more light to the student by diligent search to see the secrets of the law, or to move him to doubt, and withall to inable him to inquire and learne of the sages, what the law, together with the true reason thereof, in these cases is: or lastly, upon consideration had of our old bookes, lawes, and records, (which are full of venerable dignitie and antiquitie) to finde out where any alteration hath beene, upon what ground the law hath beene since changed; knowing for certaine, that the law is unknownen to him that knoweth not the reason thereof, and that the knowne certaintie of the law is the safetie of all. I had once intended, for the ease of our student, to have made a Table to these Institutes; but when I considered that Tables and Abridgements are most profitable to them that make them, I have left that worke to everie studious reader. And for a farewell to our jurisprudent, I wish unto him the glad-some light of jurisprudence, the loveliness of temperance, the stabilitie of fortitude, and the soliditie of justice.

F I N I S.

P R F F A C E
TO THE
T A B L E*.

To the R E A D E R.

COURTEOUS READER,

ALTHOUGH I have ever observed true, what our Honourable and grave Author intimates in the conclusion of this worke, That Tables and Abridgements are most profitable to the makers, which indeed first gave life to my endeavours in this task, yet the confidence that they are not altogether unserviceable to others, together with the undeniable importunitie of some especiall friends, hath now wrested that to the publike view, what only was intended for private use. I hope the largeness of the Volume will apologize for the length of the Table, and its language speake somewhat in excuse of its prolixitie. And because of the smalnesse of the print, together with the much matter couched in every line, I have observed some notes or figures for your more speedie direction to what you are

* The Table to which this Preface was originally prefixed appears to have been first printed in 1629. It is here printed from the improved edition of it annexed to the 11th and 12th editions of this work.

P R E F A C E T O T H E T A B L E.

are inquisitive. Divide each page with your eye into three parts, and where you meet with this note (+) it directeth to the upper part, this note () to the middle part, and this (¶) inviteth you to the lower part of the page, so that you may easily at the first view finde what you desire, without the tedious reading over the whole page : and if you chance to misse what you seeke for in the comment, the text will supply it unto you, or else the Printer shall be much to blame. Thus requesting you to weigh these my labours in the even balance of your indifferent judgement, I submit them to your censure, and take my leave.*

From the Inner Temple.

Prodesse non obesse.

Illud ex animo fiet, hoc præter voluntatem accidet.

A Table

A

T A B L E

OF THE

H E A D S

CONTAINED IN THE

F O L L O W I N G T A B L E.

A.

A BATEMENT. of Writs. Vide
Writs.
 Abbot. Vide Corporation.
 Abciance.
 Abettors.
 Ability. Vide Capacity.
 Abjuration and Exile.
 Abridgment.
 Acceptance.
 Accessory.
 Acre.
 Accompt.
 Acquittal.
 Acquittance.
 Actions.
 Administrator. Vide Executor.
 Admeasurement.
 Admiral.
 Admission.
 Advowson.
Æquivocum.
 Alliance.
Affinis.
 Age.
 Agent and Patient.
 Agreement. Vide Disagreement.
 Aid.

Alien.
 Alienation.
 Allegiance.
Allodium, Allodialii.
Alnetum.
 Amerciament.
 Ancestor.
 Annuity.
 Appeal.
 Appearance.
 Appellant.
 Appendant.
 Apportionment.
Approbatio.
 Appropriation.
 Appurtenant.
 Archdeacons.
 Argument.
 Arms and Armories.
 Arraignment.
 Array.
 Arrearages.
 Assets.
 Assignment.
 Assize.
 Attainder.
 Attaint.
 Attornment.
 Attorney.
Audita Querela.
 Aversment.

Aumone.
 Aunceller.
 Avowry.
 Authority.
 Ayel.

B.

Bail.
 Bailment.
 Bailiff.
 Bank.
 Bankrupt.
 Bar.
 Bargain and Sale.
 Baron and Barony.
 Baron and Feme.
 Barretor.
 Bastardy.
 Bedell.
Bemmerth.
Berevica & Berewit.
Barquarium.
 Bishop.
 Blood.
 Bokland.
Bona.
Bordarii & Borduanni.
Boscus.
 Bote.

Bovata

A TABLE OF THE HEADS

Bovata Terra.
Briga.
Brucra.
 Burgage.
 Burgebote.
 Burgh English. Vide Custom.
Bye and Byan.

C.

Capacity.
 Caille.
 Castle-guard.
Causa Matrimonii prolocuti.
 Certainty.
 Certificate. Vide Trial.
Cessavit.
 Challenge.
 Champerty.
 Charge and Discharge.
 Charters.
 Chase. Vide Forest.
 Chattels.
 Chevaage.
 City.
 Claim. Vide Continual Claim.
 Clergy.
Colberti.
 Collusion. Vide Covin.
 Combe.
 Commote.
 Commission.
 Common.
 Conclusion. Vide Ekoppel.
 Condition.
 Confirmation.
 Consanguinity.
 Constable. Vide Marshal.
 Continual Claim.
 Contract.
 Conuſance of Pleas.
 Cope.
 Copyhold.
 Cornage.
 Corody.
 Corporation.
 Corruption of Blood.
 Coſinage.
 Coſts. Vide Damages.
Cottagium.
Cotterelli.
 Covenant.
 Coverture.
 Covin and Fraud.
 Count.
 Court.
Cui in Flid.
 Curtesy of England.
 Customs.

D.

Damages.
 Day.
 Dean and Chapter.
 Debt.
Decies tantum.
 Deeds.
 Default.
 Deſeafance.
 Deſence.
 Deſorcement.
 Degrees.
 Demand.
 Demurrer.
Dene and Denne.

Denizen.
 Departure.
 Deraignment.
 Detinue.
 Devife.
 Dilapidations.
 Difability.
 Diſceit.
 Diſcent.
 Diſc aimer.
 Diſcontinuance.
 Diſparagement.
 Diſſeiſee and Diſſeiſor.
 Diſſeiſin.
 Diſtreſs.
 Divorce.
 Donative.
 Double Plea.
 Dower.
Drenchs.
Duna, Dun.
Droit. Vide Right.
Dum ſuit infra ætatem.
Dum non compos mentis.

E.

Eire.
 Election.
Erexit.
 Elopement.
 Emblements.
 Embracery.
 Entry Congeable.
 Error.
 Eſcheat.
 Eſcheator.
 Eſcuage.
 Eſſoin. Vide Protection.
 Eſpices.
 Eſtates.
 Ekoppel.
 Ekovers.
 Etymologies.
 Evidence.
 Exchange.
 Excommunication.
 Execution.
 Executors.
 Exposition of Words.
 Extent.
 Extinguiſhment.
 Extortion.
 Ey.

F.

Falsifying of Recoveries.
 Fealty.
 Fee ſimple.
 Fees.
 Felony.
 Feoffment.
Ferdwiz.
Ferlingus.
 Fines to the King.
 Fines of Lands.
Firma.
 Folkland.
 Forcible Entry.
 Foreſt, Park, Chase, Warren.
 Forfeiture.
 Forejudger.
 Formedon.
 Frankalmoign.
 Frankmarriage.
Fraſſetum.

Freebank.
 Freehold.
Friib.
Fruſum Terra.

G.

Gavelkind.
 Glyn.
 Grange.
 Grand Serjeanty. Vide Serjeanty.
 Grants.
Grava.
 Guardian.
Gu'ges.

H.

Habendum.
Haga.
Haugh and Hough.
 Heir.
 Heirloom.
 Herbage.
 Hereſy.
 Heriot.
Hida Terra.
 Hirſt and Hurſt.
 Holm and Halmus.
 Holt.
 Homage.
 — Auncestrel.
 Hope.
 Horngeld.
Hors de ſon Fee.
 Hoſpital.
 Hotchpot.
Howe and Hoo.

J. I.

Jampna.
 Ideot.
 Imprisonment.
 Incident. See Appendant.
 Indenture.
 Indictment.
 Infant.
 Infranchiſement.
 Inheritance.
 Inrollments.
 Instant.
 Inſtitution.
 Intention of the Parties.
Interſſe Termini.
 Interest.
 Intruſion.
 Jointenants.
 Jointure.
Ireland.
 Issue.
 Judgment.
Jugum Terra.
Juncaria & Joncaria.
Juris utrum.
 Juror.
 Juſtices.

K.

King.
 Knight.

Knight's

CONTAINED IN THE FOLLOWING TABLE.

Knight's Service.
Knot.

L.

Laches.
Lagaman.
Lannimanni.
Lapfe. Vide Quare Impedit.
Law.
Lea and Ley.
Leases, Lessor, Lessee.
Lectures.
Leper.
Lefives.
Librata Terræ.
Licence. Vide Authority.
Ligeance.
Limitation.
Livery out of the Hands of the King.
Livery and Seisin.

M.

Machecollare.
Mailhem.
Maintenance.
Manor.
Manumission.
Marches.
Marchet.
Maremium.
Marijcus & Mera.
Marriage.
Marshall.
Maxim.
Mayor and Commonalty. See Corporation.
Meafon.
Merchant.
Mefne.
Messuagium.
Minera.
Miscontinuance.
Mife.
Monasteries.
Money.
Monk.
Monfter.
Mortdaneftor.
Mortgage.
Mortmain.
Mulier.
Murder.
Mute. See Treafon.

N.

Name.
Nief.
Nobility.
Nonage.
Non compos, &c. See Dum non compos.
Nonfuit.
Notice.
Nufance.

O.

Obligation.
Occupant.
Occupation.
Office and Officer.

Office or Inquisition.
Ordinary.
Oufier le main. See Livery.
Outlawry.
Oxgang.

P.

Panel.
Papifts.
Pardon.
Park. See Forest.
Parliament.
Parol demur.
Parfon and Patron.
Partition and Parceners.
Pafcuum & Pafcura.
Patents. See Grant, King.
Payment.
Per quæ Servitia.
Pew.
Piracy. See Attainder, Felony.
Pleas and Pleadings.
Plenary.
Plough-land.
Poffeffion.
Poffibility.
Pound.
Præcipe.
Præmunire.
Præfumptio.
Prerogative.
Prefcription.
Prefentation.
Primer Seifin.
Privies and Privity.
Profeflion.
Property.
Proprietate probandâ.
Protection.
Proteftation.
Pudzeid.
Purchase.
Purprefure.

Q.

Quare Impedit.
Quarentena.
Queen.
Que Eftate.
Quid Juris clamat.
Quod ei deforceat.

R.

Radmans & Radchemiftres.
Ranfom.
Rape.
Rationabili parte honorum.
Ravifhment of War.
Rebutter.
Reclufe.
Record.
Recovery.
— in Value.
Rediffeifin.
Register of Writs.
Relation.
Releafes.
Relief.
Remainder.
Remitter.
Rents.
Replevin.

Report.
Requeft.
Refceit.
Refcous.
Refervation.
Refponfalis.
Refummons.
Retraxit.
Reve.
Reverfion.
Reviver. See Extinguifhment.
Revocation.
Right.
Riot.
Robbery.
Rufcaria.

S.

Saliva.
Scire facias.
Scutagium.
Seals.
Seifin.
Solia.
Solio Terræ.
Sequatur fub fuo periculo.
Serjeanty.
Services.
Shaw.
Sheriff.
Shire.
Simony.
Socage.
Sokemans and Sokmanni.
Solinum & Solinus Terræ.
Stadium.
Stagnum.
Stanlaw.
Statutes in General.
Statutes Mag. Chart.
Statute Merchant and Staple. See Execution, &c.
Steiba & Stede, quid.
Steward.
Stowe.
Summons and Severance.
Surrender.
Suspence.

T.

Tail.
Tail after Poffibility of Ifue extinct.
Tanni & Tainland.
Tallage.
Tenant.
Tenant at Will and Sufferance.
— in Common.
Tender and Refufal.
Tenellare.
Tenure.
Testament.
Testimonies.
Tillage.
Time.
Tithes.
Title.
Town.
Traverie.
Treafon.
Trefpafs.
Trial.
Twite.

V. Vac

A TABLE OF THE HEADS, &c.

V.	Usurpation.	W.	Way.
Uaccaria.			Wera & Were.
Valuation.			Wit sen Wita.
Ventre.			Witness. See Testimony.
Ventre inspiciendo.	Wager of Law.		Woodgeld.
Verdict.	Wales.		Words.
Vestura Terra.	War.		Worset.
Village.	Wardship.		Worth.
Villénage and Villein.	Wardwite.		Writs.
Virgata Terra.	Warranty.
Visitor.	Warreccum sen Warreccum Terra.		Y.
Voucher.	Warren. See Forest.
Uses.	Waste.		Year and a Day.

A TABLE

A

T A B L E

TO THE

F I R S T P A R T

OF THE

I N S T I T U T E S

OF THE

L A W S O F E N G L A N D.

Abatement. See Writs.

THE etymology of the word, 134 b †
 The divers acceptations of the word, and what it properly signifies, ibid. 277 a *
 The difference between an Abatement, Disseisin, Intrusion, Deforcement, Usurpation, and Purpresture, 277 a ¶, b †

Abbot. See Corporation.

Abeance.

The signification and derivation of the word, 342 a ¶, b †
 Where the freehold and inheritance of lands, &c. shall be in abeance, 342 b * ¶
 Where an estate of lands, &c. in abeance may be aliened, or charged, and where not, 343 a * ¶
 Where by the grant of tenant in tail of all his estate or right, to a disseisor, the right of the title shall be in abeance, 345 a b ¶
 Where an entry or claim by one that hath no right, shall gain an inheritance by wrong, which is in abeance, 263 b †
 The fee-simple of the glebe in abeance, by the alienation of the parson, and during the vacancy of the parsonage, 341 a † *
 When by attainder, 345 a * b

Abettors.

Where the defendant in an appeal shall recover damages against the plaintiff, and where not, 138 b *, 139 b *
Vide Stat. W. 2. cap. 12.

Ability. See Capacity.

Abjuration and Exile.

How a person abjured or exiled is esteemed in law, 133 a *
 Where the wife of such person may sue and be sued without naming her husband, 142 b ¶, 133 a
 What banishment shall be said in law a civil death, and what not, 133 a * Abridgment. See Condition, Confirmation.

Acceptance. See Arrearage, Avowry, Condition, Dower, Escheat, Remitter, Surrender, Waste.

Acceptance of Rent will not make a void estate good, 215 a †
 Where the acceptance of a rent shall dispense with a condition broken for non-payment, and where not, 211 b ¶, 215 a †
 Where the acceptance of another thing in satisfaction shall be a good bar in debt, upon an obligation, and where not, 212 b * ¶, 213 a †
 Where the acceptance of a lesser sum in satisfaction shall be a good bar, and where not, 212 b ¶
 Where the acceptance of homage or fealty shall bar the lord of his escheat, 268 a ¶
 Where the acceptance of rent shall bar the lord of his escheat, and where not, 264 a ¶, b †
 Where the acceptance of the services by the hands of the tenant after forejudger of the mesne, shall conclude the lord paramount of the arrearages incurred before, and where not, 296 b ¶

a

Ac.

T H E T A B L E.

Accessory.

Accessorium sequitur, non ducit suum principale, 152 a *
In what offences there may be accessories, in what not, 57 a ¶

Accompt. See Guardian, Socage.

The several kinds of writs of accompt, and against what persons such writ lieth, and against what not, 172 a * ¶, 200 b †, 87 b ¶, 90 b *
Where in an accompt against one as receiver he shall have allowance of expences and charges, and where not, 172 a ¶
Where an accomptant shall have allowance of goods stolen and miscarried, and where not, 89 a ¶
Where an accompt lieth by and against an executor or administrator, and where not, 89 b *, 90 b † *
Where an accompt lieth by one jointenant or tenant in common against his companion, and where not, 172 a ¶, 186 *, 200 b *
A release of all duties no bar in an accompt, 291 a ¶
Where in an accompt as receiver, the defendant may wage his law, and where not, 295 a * ¶. Vide tit. Wager of Law.
Where and against whom a capias lieth in accompt, and where and against whom not, 89 a. Vide Stat. W. 2. c. 1.
Against whom it lies, 398 b ¶

Acquittal.

The signification and derivation of the word, 100 a †
The several kinds of acquittals, ibid.
To what tenure acquittal is incident, and to what not, 100 a †, 101 a *

Acquittance.

Where if given for the whole, tho' but part paid, 'tis good, 212 b ¶
For rent due the last day, when it shall discharge all before, 373 a ¶

Acre.

Its quantity and contents, 5 b ¶

Actions.

The definition of an action, 285 a †
The division of actions, 284 b ¶, 285 a †
The difference between an action and a writ, 289 a †
The difference between an action and an execution, 298 a *
A feint action { what, 361 a ¶
A false action {
In what places and counties actions shall be brought, 282 a ¶, b per tot. pag.
Where and what actions shall be brought in confinio comitatibus, and where and what not. Vide tit. Assize.
Where in actions for things transitory, the place or county is traversable, and where not, 282 a ¶, b † *
In actions transitory the day and time not traversable, if the act be done before the writ brought, 283 a ¶
Where by a release of all actions, causes of actions be released, but within a submission of all actions to arbitration causes of actions are not contained, 285 a †
When they lie quia timet, 100 a *
Cannot be altered by the party's own act, 285 a *
When they continue, though part of the cause is determined by the act of God, 285 a *
On the case for dilapidations, 398 a †

Admeasurement.

Admeasurement of dower, where it lieth by the guardian in chivalry, and where by the heir, 39 a *

Administrator. Vide tit. Executor.

Admiral.

The etymology of the word, 260 b *
How called anciently, and how at this day, 260 b *
The jurisdiction of the admiral's court, and from what antiquity, and according to what law they proceed, 260 a ¶, b †, 391 a *

Admission.

The description and form of an admission and institution of a clerk, 344 a ¶

Advowson.

Advocatio quid, & unde, 17 b ¶, 119 b * ¶
The antiquity of the word, 17 b ¶
How advocatio medietatis, and medietas advocacionis differ, 17 b ¶, 18 a *
Where an advowson lies in tenure, 85 a ¶
Where in grant, and not in livery, 332 a *, 335 b *
Where the disseisee or issue in tail after discontinuance, may present to an advowson before recontinuance of the manor, to which, &c. and where not, 307 a †, 333 b *
Where and what act shall put the patron out of possession of an advowson, and where and what not, 344 b *
Is a thing of trust, 17 b *, 89 a †

Æquivocum quid, & quotuplex, 154 b ¶

Affiance.

Affiance, and Affidare, quid, 34 a ¶

Affinis, 34 a ¶, 157 a *

Age. See Infant.

Age to alien or contract, what our law requires, and what other laws, 78 b †, 172 b ¶. Vide tit. Infant.
Age to do knights service. Vide tit. Knights Service.
The several ages of a man to divers purposes, 78 b ¶, 79 a ¶
The divers ages of a woman to several purposes, 78 b *
Age to be professed in religion. Vide tit. Profession.
Where one parcener being an infant, shall have her age, notwithstanding the full age of her sister, 164 a †. Vide tit. Parol demurre.
A lease to one and his heirs pur auter vie, the heir of the lessee shall not have his age, 139 a ¶
Where a bastard shall have his age, 244 b †
Where the heir upon a descent by reason of the profession of his ancestor in religion shall have his age, 248 b ¶
No elegit upon judgment, or recognizance, shall be sued, that lands descended to an infant, 200 a ¶
Where tenant for life surrenders to him in the reversion within age, he shall not have his age, 338 b †, 381 a †
If the heir within age endow his mother, no elegit shall be sued against her during his minority, ibid. & ubi supra.
Where the heir shall have his age in a cessavit, 380 b ¶, 381 a †

Agent and Patient. See Executor, Voucher, Remainder.

Where a woman may endow herself de la plus beale, 39 a ¶, b †

Agreement and Disagreement. See Acceptance, Attornment, Coverture, Damages, Dower, Election, Remitter, Warranty.

Where an infant or his heirs may disagree to his own purchase, 2 b ¶
The heir of an idiot or madman to that of his ancestor, ibid.
The husband or the wife herself after coverture to the purchase of the wife, 3 a †
Where an agreement to the entry or act of a stranger shall be as available or prejudicial to the party as his own act or entry, and where not, 180 b * ¶, 007 a †, 245 a *
Where the agreement to a conveyance whereby an estate is after cast upon the disseisee or issue in tail shall hinder a remitter, 359 b †
Where a feme covert may disagree to an estate determined to save herself from damages, 380 b *

Aid. See Knight Service, Parceners, Stat. W. 1. cap. 6. & Stat. 21 H. 3. cap. 19.

Where a parson, vicar, &c. shall have aid of his patron, and ordinary, 341 b *

Where,

Where, upon an avowry at this day for services, aid is grantable of any man, 312 a †
Where a bishop, abbot, &c. shall not have aid of the King, otherwise of a dean collative, 341 b ¶

Alien. See Challenge, Denizen, Dower, Ligeance, Release, Wager of Law.

The etymology of the word, 118 b, 128 b ¶
The description of an alien, 129 b *
The sons of an alien born within the ligeance of the King, not inheritable either to other, 8 a †
Where an alien may be capable of lands, &c. to his own use, and where only to the use of the King, 2 b †
Where and by what means he may be made to inherit, and where and by what not, 8 a †, 129 a *
If a prior may sue in right of his house, 129 a
What actions an alien may or may not bring in his own right, 129 a Alien enemy may not have any action, 129 ibid.
Where an alien may wage his law, 295 a *
Where a reversion is granted to an alien, and after denization the tenant attorns, the King upon office found, shall have the land, 310 b ¶

Alienation.

The derivation of the word, 118 b †
What shall be said an alienation to divers purposes, and what not, 118 b † *
When licence for alienation first began, how and when taken away, 43 per tot pag.

Allegiance.

How such oath first began, and where, and when to be taken, 68 b †, 172 b †
How it differeth from the oath of fealty, 68 b †

Allodium, Allodiarit.

Quid & qui, 1 b †, 5 a *

Alnetum.

What, 4 b *
What passes by this name, ibid.

Amerciament. See Pardon.

Amerciament what, and whence so called, 126 b ¶
How it differeth from a fine, 127 a. Vide tit. Fines
The causes of amerciaments in actions real and personal, 126 b ¶, 127 a †
Where an amerciament shall be due for the abatement of a writ, and where not, 127 a †
How an amerciament anciently was called, 127 a *
Where in debt for an amerciament the defendant shall wage his law, and where not, 295 a *
Where issues and amerciaments shall be levied upon the lands which the jurors or parties non suit had at the time of the panel returned, or finding of pledges, and where not, 102 b †
Who shall be amerced, and who not, 127 a †
By whom it ought to be assessed, 126 b ¶
Nocepiatur lies for one, 126 b ¶
When land is liable for it, 102 b †

Ancestor.

The derivation of the word, 78 b *
How it differeth from predecessor, ibid.

Annuity. See Grant, Parson, Rent, Reservation.

The description of an annuity, 144 b *
Where the heir of the grantor shall not be charged in an annuity without naming, 144 b ¶
Where the heir of the grantee and his assignee may have a writ of annuity, 144 b *
Where and for what rent a writ of annuity lieth against the grantor, and where and for what not, 144 b † ¶
Where it lieth not for a rent reserved by indenture upon a feoffment in fee, 144 a †
Where two joining in a grant of an annuity the grantee may have two several writs, and where but one, 144 b *

Where it lieth not against an heir by prescription, 162 a *
How created, 144 b per tot. 147 a *, 146 per tot.
Annuity, pro consilio, &c. where grantable over, and where not, 144 a †

What shall be said a sufficient act to determine the election of the grantee of a rent-charge to make it an annuity or a rent, and what not, 144 b ¶, 145 a ¶, b ¶

Where the rent-charge being determined, the grantee notwithstanding shall have an annuity, and where not, 148 a *, 150 a †, 349 a ¶

Where the cause of the grant of an annuity shall amount to a condition, and the one ceasing, the other shall determine, 204 a *

Annuity granted in F.b. payable at Mich. and the Annunciation shall be construed to be at the Annunciation and Mich. 217 b †

Where in a writ of annuity, the annuity determineth hanging the writ, the arrearages are become irrecoverable, 285 a ¶

A release of actions real or personal, a good bar in an annuity, ibid.

Where the annuity is not arrear, a release of all actions is no bar, 192 b ¶

Appeal. See Abettors, Outlawry, Release.

The description and derivation of an appeal, 123 b *, 287 b † *

The several sorts of appeals, 287 b *

What shall be said a good plea in bar of an appeal of murder or felony, and what not, 287 b † ¶, 288 a † *

Where the wife shall have an appeal of the death of her husband, and where not, 33 b †

Where the wife shall have an appeal, and yet shall not be endowed, & converso, ibid.

Where the heir shall have an appeal of the death of his ancestor, where the party by whom he conveyeth his descent could not by possibility, 14 a ¶, 25 b †

Within what time it ought to be brought, 254 b ¶

Where in an appeal the parties ought to maintain the combat in proper person, otherwise in a writ of right, 294 b

When to be brought before the constable and marshal, 74

Appearance. See Default.

Appellant, who, 123 b ¶, 287 b *

Appendant, Parcel, Incident. See Acquittal, Distress, Fealty, Grants, Manor, Prerogative.

Appendant, what, and why so called, 121 b *

The difference between appendants and appurtenances, 121 b *

What things may be appendant to other, and what not, 49 a *, 121, 122 b

Where an advowson at one turn may be appendant, and at another in gross, 122 a †

Where a remitter to the principal shall be a remitter to the appendant, notwithstanding severance by the discontinuance, 349 b *, 363 b *

Where a remitter shall not be to a thing appendant before recontinuance of the principal, 349 b *

How they pass, 56 *, 121 b *, 305 b *

Where a thing being totally disappendant, may be appendant again by a grant in as ample manner, 121 b ¶

What properly said to be an incident, 151 b †

The several sorts of incidents, 93 a †

What services incident to other, 69 a †

Rent and services incident to the reversion, and shall pass by grant of reversion, but not converso, 151 b, 152 a, 317 a *, 324 a ¶, b ¶

Incidents to the blood, not forfeitable or transferrable over, 99 a ¶ Apportion, Apportionment. See Damages, Extinguishment, Rent, Revocation, Warranty.

What and whence derived, 147 b ¶

Where part of the land out of which, &c. coming to hands of a grantee of a rent-charge, the rent shall be apportioned, and where not, 147 b ¶, 149 b *, 150 a †

Where a rent-charge may be apportioned by the act of the party, and where not, 148 a †, 149 b ¶, 150 a † *

Where by the eviction of part of the land, the rent issuing thereout shall be apportioned, and where not, 148 b * ¶

Where by purchase or surrender of part of the land, or alienation of part of the reversion, a rent-service shall be apportioned, 148 a ¶

Where

The T A B L E.

Where a rent charge shall be apportioned, albeit the grantee claimeth part of the land out of which, &c. under the grantor, and where not, 148 b ¶
 Where a condition may be apportioned, and where not, 215 a ¶
 Where notwithstanding a discent of part of the land to a commoner, the entire common shall remain, and where it shall be apportioned, 149 a †
 By purchase of part of the tenancy by the lord, what services shall be apportioned, and what not, 149 a ¶, b †

Approbatio.

Quid, 295 b ¶

Appropriation.

Where the appropriation of a church to a house of religion shall be mortmain, 304 a ¶ Appurtenant. See Appendant.

What, 121

Archdeaconries.

How divided, 95 a *

Argument.

The several sorts of arguments, and what shall be said a good argument or proof in law, 11 a * ¶, b † *

Arms and Armory.

The course of discent of arms, and how it differeth from other inheritances, 27 a *, 140 b †
 The arms of England and France, when first united, 7 a *
 When the Kings of England began first to seal their charters with a seal of arms, 7 a *

Arraignment.

The signification and derivation of the word, 156 a †, 262 b ¶
 To arraign an assise, what, ibid.
 Arraignment of a prisoner, what, 263 a †

Array. See Challenge.

The signification and derivation of the word, 156 a †

Arrearages. See Acquittance, Acceptance, Avowry, Annuity, Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 37.

Where an acquittance for rent due the last day, shall be a discharge of all the arrearages incurred before, 236 a ¶

Assets.

What shall be said assets in the hands of an executor or administrator, and what not, 41 b ¶, 113 a *, 117 a *, 124 a ¶, 236 a ¶
 What shall be said sufficient assets to make a lineal warranty a bar to an estate-tail, and what not, 374 b *
 Where a rent extinct shall be said assets, 374 b *
 Where an advowson shall be assets, and how valued, ibid.
 A feignory of homage or fealty, or in frankalmoign, no assets, 374 b *

Assignment, Assigns. See Annuity, Dower, Executor, Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 34. Warranty.

The derivation of the word, 8 b ¶
 The several sorts of assigns, ibid.
 Where an assignee shall take advantage of a condition, and where not, 214 b † *, 215 a †, b ¶
 Where an assignee shall take advantage of a covenant real, without being named in the deed; otherwise of a warranty, 384 b ¶, 385 a †

Assise. See Disseisor, Stat. 2 R. 2. c. 10. Attornment.

The derivation and proper signification of the word, 153 b ¶

The several acceptations in law of the word assise, ibid. 154 *, b ¶, 155 a b, 159 b †
 The several sorts of writs of Assises, and why so called, 155 a †, 159 a ¶, b †
 Assise of novel disseisin, and whence so called, 153 b ¶
 Where an assise in confinio comitatus lay at the common law, and where at this day, 154 a †. Vide Stat. 2 R. 2. c. 10.
 What shall be said a good plea in bar of an assise, and what not, 228 b, 229 a †, 285 a ¶, b *
 Where the conusee of a reversion by fine upon a lease for years being disseised, shall have an assise before attornment, 320 a *
 Assise of novel disseisin lies against the coadjutors, as well as against the tenant, 180 b ¶

Attainder. See Felony, Treason.

Attainder, Quid 294 b *, 390 b *
 The several sorts of attainders, 390 b *
 The several writs of escheat upon attainders, 390 b ¶
 How it differs from conviction, 390 b ¶
 Attainder commences by the pronouncing the judgment, 390 b * ¶
 Where a man may be attainted after his death 390 b ¶
 By discent of the crown upon a person attainted, the attainder is instante void, 26 a †
 The difference between a person attainted and convicted, 390 b ¶, 391 a †
 What a felon forfeits by conviction before attainder, 391 a † Judgment to peine fort et dure upon refusal to answer according to law, or saying nothing, no attainder, 391 a *
 Where the defendant in any appeal waging battel is slain, he shall have judgment to be hanged, 390 b ¶
 Where attainder in the admiral's court (by proceeding according to the civil law) for piracy, murder, &c. upon the sea, shall work no corruption of blood, or forfeiture of lands; otherwise of an attainder before commissioners by the statute 28 H. 8. Vide Stat. 28 H. 8. cap. 15.
 Attainder of heresy, or in a præmunire, no corruption of blood, 391 a ¶, 8 a *
 In what manner and degree the blood is said to be corrupted by attainder, 391 b †
 Where a person attainted hath issue, and after pardon hath issue, the youngest is not inheritable during the life of the eldest, or his issues, 8 a *, 392 a *
 Where the sons of a person attainted, born before the attainder, shall inherit each to other; secus of sons born after the attainder, 8 a * Attainder of treason or felony disables one from bringing any action, 130 a † ——— disables one from being heir, 8 a, per tot.
 ——— how it affects the blood, and how it may be restored, 8 a, per tot.
 What tenant in tail forfeits by attainder of felony or treason, 392 b †

Attaint. See Conusance, Release, Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 3.

The derivation of the word, 294 b *
 Where such writ lieth, ibid.
 The judgment in attaint, 294 b *
 No superfedeas grantable upon an attaint, 227 b †
 A release of all actions, a good bar in an attaint, 289 a †
 No attaint lieth upon a verdict in waste, quale jus, or other inquest of office, 355 b *
 Where it lieth upon a verdict in an assise, 355 b *
 Where an attaint lieth upon a verdict, where the witnesses are joined to the inquest for trial of the deed, and where not, 6 b *

Attorney. See Livery, Wager of Law.

The signification of the word, 51 b ¶
 The several kinds of attorneys, ibid.
 What persons may be attorneys in the King's court, and what not, 128 a *
 The difference between an attorney and a responsalis in ancient times, 128 a *
 Where an idiot or lunatick ought to sue in person, and not by attorney, 135 b ¶
 Where livery of seisin by an attorney shall be good, and when one acts merely as such, he cannot thereby prejudice his own interest, 52 a * Attornment. See Alien, Condition, Infant, Notice, Prerogative, Pleading, Quid Juris clamat, Per quæ Servitia.

The definition of an attornment, 309 a †
 The division of attornments, 309 a * Attornment, why requisite, ibid.

T H E T A B L E.

What act or words shall amount to an attornment, 310 a
 Where it ought to be in the life of the parties, and where it shall be good to the heir, 309 a ¶, b ¶, 315 a ¶
 In what conveyances requisite upon passing a reversion, &c. at this day, and in what not, 309 b ¶, 314 b *, 321 b * ¶
 Where the mesne grants over his mesnalty, and the lord paramount releases to the tenant, attornment by the tenant after shall be sufficient to pass the rent-seck by surplussage, 309 b ¶
 Where after a grant of the reversion of two acres, the lessor levies a fine of one, an attornment after to the grantee shall pass the other acre, 309 b ¶
 Where an attornment for part of the rent shall be good for the whole, 369 b ¶, 314 a ¶, b *
 Where an attornment to one jointenant shall be good to both, and one dying, an attornment to the survivor good, 310 a ¶ Attornment to him in the remainder after the death of grantee for life, void, 310 a ¶
 Where an assent in the absence of the grantee shall be a sufficient attornment, 310 a *
 Where two grants are made of the same things, an attornment to the second shall be a frustration of the first, 310 a ¶
 Where the enlargement or alteration of the particular estate, after grant of the reversion, shall be a countermand of the attornment, 310 a ¶
 Where a feme grants a reversion, the taking of a husband shall be a countermand of the attornment, 310 b ¶
 To what purposes an attornment shall have relation to the first grant, and to what not, 310 b *
 Where a reversion is granted to a man and a feme, by an attornment to them after marriage, they have no moieties, 310 a ¶
 Where the intermarriage of a feme grantor with the grantee shall be a good attornment in law, 310 a ¶
 Where an attornment to cestuy que use shall vest the reversion in the grantee, 310 a ¶
 Where an attornment to the grantee for life of a reversion shall be good to all in the remainder, 310 a *
 Where a reversion is granted for life, and after to the same grantee for years, an attornment to both grants void, 310 b ¶
 Where a feignory is granted to a bishop and his heirs, and after to him and his successors, attornment to both grants void, 310 b ¶
 Where a reversion is granted of Black Acre, or White Acre, an attornment to the grant shall vest the estate in the grantee upon his election, 310 b ¶
 Where upon the feoffment of a manor nothing of the services pass until attornment of the free tenants, 110 b * ¶
 Where in pleading such a feoffment the attornment of the tenants need not be alledged, 510 b ¶
 Where the tenant attorns to a lease for years of the manor, the attornment after of the lessee shall be sufficient to pass the reversion, 311 a ¶
 Where to the grant of a feignory, &c. the attornment only of the immediate tenant in privity requisite, 311 a * ¶, b ¶, 312 a ¶, b ¶, 313 b ¶
 Where to the grant of a rent-charge or seck, the attornment only of the tenant of the freehold requisite, 311 b per tot. pag.
 Where such rent is granted for life, and the tenant attorns, the attornment after of the grantee shall be sufficient to pass the reversion, 311 b ¶
 Where upon grant of such rent issuing out of the reversion, the attornment only of him in the reversion requisite, 311 b ¶
 Where, and to what kind of inheritances granted, attornment is requisite, and where, and to what not, 312 a *
 Where an attornment to the grantee for life of a feignory shall be good to him in the remainder to distrain, and where not, 312 b ¶, 320 b ¶
 Where the acceptance of a grant of the feignory by the baron seised of tenancy in the right of his wife, shall be a good attornment to bind the wife after coverture, 312 b ¶
 Where a feignory is granted to the tenant and a stranger, the acceptance of the tenant shall be a sufficient attornment to extinct his moiety, and vest the other in the grantee, 313 a ¶
 Where the acceptance of a grant of the feignory to the wife by the husband being tenant, shall be a good attornment, 313 a *
 Where the acceptance of a grant of the feignory by a lessee for life of the tenancy shall be a good attornment to vest the feignory in himself, 313 a ¶, b ¶
 Where, in a scire facias upon a fine, judgment to recover part of the services shall be a good attornment in law for the whole, 314 b *
 Attornment by one jointenant good for all, 314 a *, 319 a ¶

Where a man deaf and dumb may attorn; factis of a non compos mentis, 315 a ¶
 Where upon grant of reversion, tenant by statute merchant, &c. or executors having the land till the debts be paid, shall be compelled to attorn, 315 b ¶
 Where tenants in dower, or by the court's, after assignment of their estates shall attorn, and where the attornment of the assignee shall be sufficient, 316 a ¶
 Where the attornment of an assignee of the particular estate upon condition shall be sufficient to pass the reversion, 316 a *
 Where an attornment by tenant in tail shall be good, and where he shall be compelled to attorn, and where not, 316 a ¶, b ¶
 Where the attornment of lessee for years, or him in the remainder for life expectant, shall be sufficient to pass the reversion in fee, 316 b ¶, 317 a ¶
 Where the acceptance of a lessee for life of a confirmation of his estate, the remainder over, shall be a good attornment to vest the remainder, 317 a ¶
 Where by the release of one jointenant to his companion, he shall distrain for the whole, and have an action of waste against the lessee without attornment, 318 a ¶
 Where the re-entry of the lessee upon the feoffee of his lessor shall be a good attornment to settle the reversion in the feoffee, 318 b * ¶
 Whether the recovery in an assize by the lessee for life against such feoffee shall be an attornment, Quare, 319 a ¶
 Where a reversion is granted for life upon a lease for life, and the lessee attorns, and the lessor disseises the lessee, and make a feoffment, the regreis of the lessee shall be no attornment of the grantee for life, 319 a ¶
 Where a feignory or reversion is granted by fine, what advantages the conusee may take before attornment, and what not, 319 b ¶, 320 a and b per tot. pag.
 Where by a general attornment without any saving, the tenant for life shall lose his privilege, and where not, 320 a *, b
 Where one that claimeth under a conusee by fine may distrain or maintain any action, albeit no attornment made to the conusee or him that hath his estate, and where not, 309 b *, 321 a and b, per tot. pag.
 Where the devisee of a reversion may distrain or have any action without attornment, 322 a, b ¶
 Where an attornment upon condition shall be good, and where not, 274 b ¶
 Attornments taken away by 4 & 5 Annae, 402 a ¶

Audita Querela. See Executor, Release.

Where for matter of discharge happening since the judgment, the party shall have an audita querela before execution, 290 b *
 A release of all actions personal, a good bar in an audita querela, 289 a ¶ Averment. See Pleadings.

Averment, what, 362 b *
 The several kinds of averments, 362 b * ¶
 What pleas ought to be averred, and what not, ibid. 303 a ¶
 Where in a præcipe the tenant pleads non-tenure, or disclaims, the demandant notwithstanding may aver him tenant, and where not, 362 b ¶, 363 a ¶

Aumone.

What aumone is, 97 a ¶

Avowry. See Acceptance, Aid, Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 19. 32 H. 8. c. 37.

The several forms and kinds of avowries for rents and services, 296 a ¶, b ¶
 Where the lord shall be compelled to avow upon the feoffee or grantee of his tenant, and where not, 269 b ¶ ¶, 321 a *
 Notice to the lord to change his avowry not sufficient without tender of his arrearages, 269 b ¶
 Where the lord by his avowry upon the feoffee of his tenant shall lose the arrearages incurred in the time of the feoffor, and where not, 269 b *
 Where the tenant being disseised shall compel the lord to avow upon him, and where not, 268 a ¶, b ¶
 Where the avowry of the donor upon his own donee in tail shall be good notwithstanding a discontinuance, 77 a ¶, 269 a ¶
 Where the donor in tail, having but one reversion, shall make two several avowries upon his donee, 23 a *
 Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where the lord at this day may avow upon the lands and tenements holden without naming any person in certain, 262 b † ¶
 Avowry for rent don't discharge rent due or antecedent to the time mentioned in the avowry, 402 a ¶

Authority. See Apportionment.

Where the performance of the substance shall be a good pursuit of an authority, and where it ought to be strictly pursued, 49 b †, 52 a *, b †, 303 b †
 Where by the execution of the authority of another concerning lands, a man shall prejudice his own interest, and where not, 52 a ¶
 Where a man may do less than his authority warrants, and where not, 52 a ¶, b †, 258 a ¶, 259 a †
 Where the death of the party shall be a countermand of his licence and authority, and where not, 52 b * ¶
 Where an authority shall survive, and where not, 181 b †
 Where an authority is given to three or four jointly or severally, the act done by two shall be good, and where not, 181 b *
 Where a man doing more than his authority warrants, it shall be good for all; and where good for that which is warranted, and void for the rest, 258 a *

Ayel.

Where a writ of ayel lies, 160 a *

Bail.

Whence derived, 61 b *
 How they are bound, 265 b *

Bailiff. See Accompt, Socage, Stat. Magna Charta, cap. 28.

The signification and derivation of the word, 61 b *, 168 b † *, 172 a †
 The office and duty of a bailiff, 62 a †, 168 b †
 Where and for what things a bailiff chargeable in an accompt, 172 a *, 89
 Bailiff shall not be charged as receiver, 172 a *

Bailment.

Where the bailee shall satisfy for the goods stolen or otherwise mis-carried, and where not, 89 a ¶, 398 b ¶

Bank.

The signification of it, 71 b †
 The antiquity of the court of common bank, ibid.
 The style of the courts of the king's-bench and common-pleas, 71 b †

Bankrupt.

When he shall be discharged of a bond, 401 b *

Bar. See Pleadings.

The signification of the word, 372 a *

Bargain and Sale. See Attornment, Reservation.

What estate the bargainor shall be said to have in him before inrollment, 147 b *
 To what purposes a bargain and sale after inrollment shall relate to the first delivery, and what not, 147 b *, 186 a *
 Where the bargainee of a feignory or reversion shall distress, or have an action of waste before attornment, 309 b †, 321 b ¶

Baron and Barony. See Bishop, Challenge.

How barons anciently were created, and how at this day, 9 b *, 16 b † *
 The first creation of a baron by patent, 9 b *
 The estate and livelihood of a baron, 69 a * ¶, 83 b †
 The relief of a baron, 69 b †, 23 b †
 Where a man called by writ dieth before he sits in parliament, no baron; 16 b †
 The form of such writ, ibid.
 Issue of baron, &c. or no baron, how triable, 16 b *
 What monasteries and bishopricks in England were and are held by barony, 79 a *
 Where a barony may be entailed, 20 a *
 How they were originally held, 396 a †

Baron and Feme. See Coverture, Fine, Jointenants, Marriage, Partition, Remitter, Resceit, Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 37. Waste, Wager of Law.

To what purposes baron and feme are said to be one person in law, 112 a *, 187 b †
 What things of the wife are given to the husband by the marriage, and what not, 119, 170, 300, 351 a per tot. pag. and b †
 Where the husband shall have the chattels real of his wife, and where not, 46 b *, 185 b *, 299 b ¶, 300 a †, 351 a * ¶
 What act of the husband shall be a disposition or alteration of the term of his wife, and what not, 46 b *, 251 a *
 Where upon an execution against the husband the sheriff shall sell the term of the wife, 351 a *
 Where the charge of the husband upon the chattel of the wife shall not bind the wife surviving, ibid.
 Where the husband surviving shall have the chattels of his wife consisting in action, and where not, 351 a ¶, b †
 Where the wife and her heirs shall be bound by her's and her husband's lease, and where not, 344 a ¶
 What, and how the husband may convey to his wife, 112 b †, 132 b ¶, 133 per tot. pag. 297.
 What, and how the wife may convey to her husband, 112 a and b
 What act, and when the wife may do with her husband, 132 b ¶, 352 b †, 353 a † *
 When the feme may vouch the husband, 590 a *
 The acts of the husband and wife shall be accounted his, 352 b †, 356 a †, b *, 357 a †
 By what means the husband in his life may pass an estate in lands to the wife, and by what not, 112 a *
 Where a sale of lands by the wife to the husband shall be good, and where not, 112 a ¶, 187 b ¶
 Where a protection cast for the husband shall be good also for the wife, 130 b *
 Where the husband may be an attorney to deliver seisin to his wife, 52 a *, 187 b ¶
 Where the grant of acquittal to the husband and his heir shall extend to the wife after his death, 241 a *
 Where the laches of the husband shall prejudice his wife, and where not, 246 a ¶, b † *
 Where by attainder of the wife the lord by escheat shall oust the husband before issue, 351 a *
 What estate the king gaineth by attainder of the husband during coverture, ibid.
 Where a devise by the husband to the wife shall be good, but not e contra, 112 a *, b †

Barretor. See Warranty.

The derivation of the word, 368 b †
 The description of a barretor, 368 a ¶

Bastardy. See Age, Mortdancestor, Partition.

The etymology of the word (Bastard) 243 b ¶, 244 a †
 The several kinds of bastards, 244 a †
 Bastard, of what esteem in law, 3 b †, 123
 By what names he may purchase lands, and what not, 3 b †
 Bastard, no child within the statute of 32 and 34 H. 8. Of Wills, 78 a ¶, 123 b †
 No consideration to raise an issue, 123 a ¶
 A bastard brother, &c. no principal challenge, 127 a *
 Issue born after nine months or forty weeks of the husband's decease, a bastard, 123 b †
 Where the issue born within marriage shall be reputed a bastard, and where not, 244 a *, 40 a †
 How to be tried, 74 a *
 In what law, and to what purposes a bastard-eigne is esteemed a mulier, 245 a †
 Where the dying seised of the bastard-eigne without interruption shall bar the right of the mulier, 243 b ¶, 244 a †, b *
 Where such dying seised without a discent shall be no bar, 244 a *
 What seisin by the bastard during life shall be sufficient to bar the mulier, and what not, 15 a ¶
 Where an entry by the bastard, and a discent after the death of the mulier, his wife being præmuntur enfeint, shall bar the son born after, 244 a *
 Where the bastard dies, his wife enfeint, the entry of the mulier shall bar the issue born after, 244 a *
 Where the discent to the issue of the bastard before entry shall bar the mulier, 244 a *

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where such dying seised of the bastard shall bar an infant or feme covert mulier, ibid.

Where such descent of services, rents, reversion, &c. shall bar the mulier, 244 a ¶

Where such descent shall bind the mulier, notwithstanding the wife of the bastard be endowed, 244 a ¶

Where such descent upon the profession of the bastard in religion shall be a like bar, 244 a ¶, 248 b ¶

Where the collateral heir shall as well be bound by such descent as the mulier, 244 a ¶

Where two daughters, a bastard and mulier, enter generally upon the death of the bastard, her issue shall inherit a moiety, 244 a ¶, 368 a †

Where the entry and dying seised of the son of the bastard shall bar the mulier, 244 b †

The entry of what persons shall avoid the estate of the bastard, and of what not, 245 a * ¶

Where the agreement of the mulier to the entry of a stranger shall be a good claim to avoid the estate of the bastard, 245 a ¶

What act shall be said an interruption of the possession of the bastard, and what not, 245 b † *

Where the bastard after his entry shall be vouched only by reason of the warranty of his ancestor, 376 b *

Bedell.

The derivation of the word, 235 b *

The oath and office of bedell, ibid.

Beneth.

The signification of it, 86 a †

Berewica and Berewit.

The meaning of the words, 116 a †

Berquarium seu Bercaria.

The meaning of those words, 5 b *

Bishop. See Aid, Confirmation, Corporation, Ordinary.

How all the bishopricks in England and Wales are of the king's foundation and patronage, and held by barony, 97 a * ¶, 134 a *, 344 a *

The number of them, and which are of ancient continuance, and which of later foundation 94 a *

How anciently they were donative, and by what means they became elective, 134 a ¶, 344 a *

Who may write to the bishop to certify bastardy, mulierty, &c. and who not, 134 a ¶

Where, and as to what acts, the privation or translation of a bishop shall amount to a death, and where and as to what not, 329 a *

When he did or did not pay relief, 70 b *

Blood. See Attainder, Heir, Inheritance.

The several bloods which a man is said to have in him, 12 a *, b *, 14 a *

Who shall be said next of blood as to several purposes, 10 b per tot. pag. 88 b *

What blood shall be said more worthy than other, and shall inherit before other, 12 b per tot. pag. 14 a per tot. pag.

Bokeland.

What it is, 6 a ¶, 58 a †

Bona.

What the word signifies, 118 b *

How divided, ibid.

Bordarii and Borduanni.

Who are said to be so, 5 b *

Bofus.

Quid, and what passeth by it, 4 b * ¶

Bote.

The signification of the word, 127 a *

Bovata Terre.

What it is, 5 a ¶

Briga.

The meaning of it, 3 b ¶

Bruera.

Quid, unde, and what passes by it, 5 b ¶, 5 a †

Burgage. See Knights Service and Socage.

The etymology of the word, 108 b ¶, 109 a ¶

The description of a tenure in burgage, 108 b ¶, 109 a †

Of what person such tenure may be, 109 a *

Burgebote.

What it is, 109 a †, 127 a *

Burgh-Engliff. See Custom.

Bye and Byan.

What they are, 5 b *

Capacity. See Alien, Attorney, Challenge, Coverture, Feoffment, Infancy, Juror, Office, Purchase, Queen, Socage.

Mutus, surdus et cæcus, of what things capable in law, and of what not, 8 a *

What persons capable of offices of state, or which concern the common-weal, and what not, 107 b per tot. pag.

Of what things a monk is capable, and of what not, 132 b *

Castle. See Dower, Knights Service.

What things shall pass by the grant of a castle, 5 a *

What castle may be built by a subject, and what not, ibid.

What castle may be divided in a partition between parceners, and what not, 165 a ¶ Castleguard. See Knights Service.

Where such tenure remains tho' the castle is ruined, 83 a *

Causa Matrimonii prælocuti. See Warranty.

Where a man gives land to a woman causa, &c. though he marry her, or the woman refuse, he shall retain the land for ever, but not converso, 204 a *

Where the feme in pleading may aver such gift to be causa matrimonii, &c. without shewing a deed, ibid. 226 a * Certainty. See Estoppel, Pleading.

The several kinds of certainty, 303 a *

Where there may be a certainty in an uncertainty, 96 a * Certificate. See Trial.

Cessavit. See Age, Stat. Westm. 2. c. 21.

Where it lieth against the heir within age, 380 b ¶

Where the tenant holdeth lands in several counties by one service, no cessavit lieth, 154 a † Challenge. See Juror, Stat. 2. H. 5. c. 3. 27. El. c. 6. W. 2. c. 38. Artic. super Chart. c. 9. Trial, Verdict.

The signification and derivation of the word, 155 b ¶

The several sorts of challenges, 156 a †

What shall be said a principal cause of challenge to the array of the panel, and what not, 156 a † *

What shall be said a sufficient challenge to the array for favour, and what not, 156 b ¶

Where such challenge may be made, the king being party, and where not, 156 a ¶

Where the party, notwithstanding his challenge to the array found against him, shall have his challenge to the polls, 156 b †

Challenge

T H E T A B L E.

Challenge to the polls, what, and the several kinds of such challenges, 156 a †

Challenge peremptory, what, where admitted, and what number the party might challenge at the common law, and what at this day, 156 b † *

The several sorts of principal challenges to the polls, 156 b *
Where a peer of the realm ought to be challenged, and if neither party will challenge him, he may challenge himself, 156 b ¶

What shall be said a good challenge for want of freehold, and what not, 156 b ¶, 157 a †

Where an alien or villein may be challenged, 156 b ¶
What person may be challenged for an insufficient hundred, and what not, 157 a †

What shall be said a principal challenge to the polls by cause of affection, and what not, 157 a ¶, b per i. t. pag.

Where the plaintiff may alledge a principal cause of challenge to the array, and pray process to the coroners, and where he ought to have a venire facias to the sheriff, 157 b *

Where in outlawry of treason issue is joined upon a collateral point, yet the party may have such challenges, as if he had been arraigned upon the crime itself, 157 b ¶

What crime in a juror shall be a principal cause of challenge, and what not, 6 a † *, 158 a †

At what time each challenge ought to be taken, and where the party must shew the cause of his challenge presently, and where not, 158 a †, b †

How and by whom challenges shall be tried, and to whom process shall be awarded, 158 a * ¶, b †

Where a witness may be challenged, and where not, 6 b †

Where a man may be challenged to be a juror, that cannot be challenged to be a witness, et de converso, 6 b †

Where a nobleman being arraigned cannot challenge his peers, 156 b *, 294 a ¶

Where the four knights electors of the grand assise ought not to be challenged, 294 a ¶

Where and at what time the jurors in a writ of right may be challenged, and where not, ibid.

Champerty [Cambipartia]. See Maintenance.

The etymology and signification of the word, 368 b ¶

Charge and Discharge. See Abeyance, Annuity, Baron and Feme, Confirmation, Condition, Forfeiture, Heir, Jointenant, Parson, Rmitter, Rent, Reservation, Tail.

Where, and how a moveable inheritance in lands may be charged, 343 b *

Where a charge shall survive, and where not, 336 b *

Where the estate of the wife shall be bound by the charge of her husband, and where not, 148 b *

Where the acceptance of an estate against common right shall subject the party to charges accruing since his title, 32 b †, 33 a *, 273 a ¶

Where tenant in tail discontinues for life, and after grants a rent-charge, notwithstanding the death of the discontinuer the charge remains, 145 a † Charters. See Detinue, Dower.

Where they pass as incidents to the land, where not, 6 a †

Chafe. See Forest.

Chattels. See Baron and Feme, Executor, Freehold.

The several sorts of chattels, 118 b *

Where they shall descend or go in succession, and where not, 9 a †, 18 b *, 46 b ¶, 185 b ¶, 388 a *

What chattels are grantable without deed, and what not, 85 a per tot. pag.

In what respects tenant by statute-merchant, staple, &c. said to have a freehold, and in what but a chattel, and why, 42 a *, 43 b *

Where a freehold may be limited in a chattel, 147 b †

Chevage.

What chevage is, 140 a *

City. See Village.

The description of a city, 109 b †

For what purposes cities first instituted, 109 b *

The number of cities in England, ibid.

Every city a village, but not de converso, 115 b ¶

Citizen not capable of the performance of an honourable service, 107 b †

Claim. See Continual Claim.

Clergy. See Bishop, Dean and Chapter, Monk.

The several sorts of ecclesiastical persons, 93 b ¶

The state of the clergy in England at this day, 94 a *

How clergymen anciently excelled in the knowledge of the common law, and the names of divers that had principal offices of judicature, 304 b †

Coleberti.

Who are so called, 5 b *, 86 a †

Collusion. See Covin.

Combe.

What it is, 5 b ¶

Commote.

What a commote is, 5 a *

Commission.

Where a commissioner to examine witnesses may be challenged to be a juror in the same cause, and where not, 157 b †

Common. See Appendant, Apportionment.

Common, whence so called, 122 a *

The several kinds of commons, 122 a *

Where by purchase of parcel of the lands in which, &c. the whole common shall be extinct, and where not, 122 a *

Where a disseisee cannot take benefit of a common appendant before recontinuance of that to which, &c. secus of an advowson appendant, 122 b ¶

Prescription to have solum communiam, and to exclude the owner, void; secus to have solum vesturam, or pasturam, 122 a ¶, 165 a †

Where the lord claims common appendant to his manor, the escheat of a tenancy is no increaser of the common, 127 a ¶

Appendant belongs of common right to arable land for beasts of the plough, 12 per tot.

Appurtenant, for what beasts, and how it commences, 122 a per tot.

Pur cause de vicinage, how it commences, and for what beasts, 122 a *

In gross, what, and how it began, 122 a *

When it shall, and when it shall not be extinguished, 149 a Conclusion. See Estoppel.

Condition. See Acceptance, Apportionment, Assignee, Coverture, Deeds, Demand, Infant, Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 34. Tender and Refusal.

The divisions of conditions, 201 a ¶, b † *

The description of a condition in deed, 201 a *

What words shall make a condition, and what not, 230 a ¶, b, 204 a and b

Where the cause of a grant shall amount to a condition, and where not, 204 a *

Where a proviso shall amount to a condition, where to a limitation, and where to a covenant, 203 b *, 237 a *

What words shall amount to a condition in case of a lease for years, 204 a ¶

Where by entry for a condition broken the parties shall be in their former estates as to all purposes, and where not, 30 b *, 103 a ¶, 202 a ¶, b †, 238 b *

Where upon a condition of re-entry for not payment of a rent and retainer until satisfaction, the profits after entry shall be accounted as parcel of the satisfaction, and where not, 203 a *

What state the feoffor gaineth upon such re-entry, 203 a *

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where notwithstanding such condition to retain, the feoffee upon tender of the rent may oust the feoffor, 202 b ¶, 203 a †

Where a condition subsequent is against law, or impossible at first, or becometh after impossible by the act of God, the estate of the feoffee shall be absolute, 206 a, b † *, 219 a †

Where the condition of an obligation or recognizance, &c. becometh impossible by the act of God, the obligation, &c. is saved, 206 a ¶

Where the condition of a bond being against law, the bond itself shall be void, and where not, 206 b *

Where a man shall never take advantage of a condition where the not performance cometh by his own act or default, 206 b †, 209 a †

Where a lease and release shall be a good performance of a condition to make a feoffment, 207 a ¶

Where an assignee, or the feoffee himself after assignment, may tender money in performance of a condition, 207 b * ¶, 208 a †

Where no time is limited for performance of a condition, where the party shall have time during his life, and where it ought to be performed in convenient time, 208 a * ¶, b per tot pag. 219 a † *, b †

Where a condition is to be performed to a stranger, a tender and refusal shall give the feoffor or obligee a title of entry or forfeiture, and where not. Vide tit. Tender and Refusal.

Where a condition is broken for not payment of a rent, the bringing of an assise, distress, or acceptance at a day after shall be a good dispensation, 211 b * ¶

Where a condition shall be said performed albeit the words be not pursued, and where not, 213 a *, 218 a *, 219 b * ¶

What persons may take advantage of a condition, and what not, 214 a * ¶, b, 215 a and b, 379 a †

Where the heir may take advantage of a condition which his ancestor could not by possibility, 214 b ¶

Where a condition which createth an estate shall be good without deed, 216 a ¶

Where upon a grant for years conditionally to have fee, the fee shall be said to be in the grantee before performance of the condition, and where not, 216 b, 217 a and b, 218 a †

A lease to a man and a woman, upon condition which of them first marry shall have fee, and they intermarry, no fee shall accrue, 218 a *

Where a lease is made with condition to have fee upon payment of money, the attainder and execution of the lessor before the day shall hinder the accrue, 218 a *

Where notwithstanding the devising of the freehold or fee by condition subsequent, the former interest of the party shall remain in him and where not, 218 b † *

Where a man may take advantage of a condition without entry or claim, and where not, 218 a * ¶, b †, 216 b ¶, 237 a *, 379 a †

Where a condition is to make a gift in frankmarriage to one with the cousin of the feoffor, a gift to him for life shall be a good performance, 219 b *

Where a condition is to make a gift in frankalmoign to a layman, a gift to him for life shall be a good performance, 219 b *

Where a condition is to make a lease for life to a woman without impeachment of waste, a lease to her and her husband without such clause shall be a good performance, 219 b ¶, 220 a †

Where a condition to enfeoff the feoffor and his heirs, a feoffment to the heir of the feoffor to have to him and his heirs shall be no performance, 220 b †

Where a feoffment is made upon condition of re-feoffment, what act by the feoffee shall be said a breach of such condition, and what not, 221 a, b, 222 a, b *

Where the feoffee is once disabled, no possibility after can enable his performance; secus of a disability of the part of the feoffor, 221 b * †, 222 a †

Where a tenant of the king by licence makes a feoffment upon a condition of re-feoffment, a feoffment to his heir after his death shall be no performance, 222 a ¶, b †

Where an advowson is granted upon condition of re-grant, a re-grant after the church is void, is no performance, 222 b †

Where the restriction of alienation by the condition of a gift or conveyance shall be good, and where repugnant, 223 a per tot pag. b †

To what intent a condition that restrains the donee in tail to alien shall be good, and to what not, 223 b * ¶, 224 a † ¶, b †, 379 a *

Where a condition restraining an infant, baron and feme, or an ecclesiastical corporation, to alien, shall be good, and where not, 224 a *

Where a condition that tenant in tail may alien for the benefit of his issues shall be good, 224 b †

Where a condition to enter upon the alienation and death of tenant in tail without issue, shall be a good prevention of a discontinuance, 224 b * ¶, 225 a †

Where a condition consisteth of several parts in the conjunctive, disjunctive, or both, how it shall be construed, and when said to be performed, 225 a † *

How a man may be aided by a condition without a deed, 226 a ¶, b

The description of a condition in law, 233 b *

Where an entry or recovery by reason of a condition in law shall avoid precedent charges, and where not, 233 b ¶, 234 a †

What words in a last will shall make a condition, that cannot in a deed, 236 b †

What things may be done upon condition, and what not, 274 b †

Where and what assent to an act may be upon condition, and what not, 300 b ¶, 297 a

Where the heir shall enter for a condition broken, albeit no right in the land descend, 202 a *, 336 b *

Where upon a gift, &c. a condition is reserved to a stranger, the donor himself shall take advantage of it, and not the stranger, 379 a * ¶

Where a condition may stand good for part, and be void for other part, 379 a *

Where an alienation shall extinguish a condition or power of revocation, and where not, 265 b †, 379 a ¶, b †

Where a lease for life is made with condition to have fee upon alienation of the reversion, upon alienation by fine there shall be no accrue, 378 b *

Where in a gift in tail a condition upon alienation of the donee, that his estate shall cease and remain over, shall be void, 377 b, 378 a, b, 379 a Confirmation. See Attornment, Release.

The etymology and definition of a confirmation, 295 b *

The form of a confirmation, ibid.

The several kinds of confirmations, 295 b ¶

What shall be said good words of confirmation, and what conveyance shall amount to a confirmation, and what not, 301 b * ¶, 302 a per tot pag.

Where the same words shall amount to a grant and confirmation of one and the same thing, 302 a †

Where privity is requisite in a confirmation, and where not, 296 a †, 305 b †

Where a confirmation to the lessee for years of a tenant for life or disseisor shall be good; secus of a release, 296 a, b †, 308 a †

Where a lease is made to begin at a day to come, a confirmation to the lessee before the day shall be void, 296 b †

Where a confirmation of part of the estate shall be a good confirmation of the whole, and where only for that part, 296 b ¶, 297 a † *

Where a confirmation to him in the reversion or remainder shall enure to the particular estate in possession, but not converso, 297 a ¶, b †, 298 a †

Where tenant in tail hath reversion in fee expectant, a confirmation of the estate-tail shall not extend to the reversion, 297 a ¶

Where two leases for years are in being, determinable upon the death of tenant for life, and he in the reversion confirms the last, and after confirms the first lease, by death of tenant for life, the first shall determine, and the last continue, 296 a *

Where two jointenants be, one for life, and the other in fee a confirmation to the jointenant in fee for his life shall extend to his companion, and the whole fee simple also, 297 b †

Where one disseisor by the confirmation of his disseisee should hold out his companion, and where not, 298 a ¶, b † *

Where a confirmation to tenant for life to have his estate to him and his heirs shall make no enlargement; otherwise where it is to have the land to him, &c. 191 b ¶, 298 a †

Where a confirmation to the husband and wife seised in the right of his wife for life, shall enure to the husband in remainder for his life, 299 a ¶, b ¶

A confirmation to a baron and feme, seised for life in right of the feme, to have to them and their heirs, how it shall enure, 299 b †

A confirmation to baron and feme, tenants for life by several moieties, to have to them and their heirs, how it shall enure, ibid.

A confirmation to the tenant for life and him in the remainder for life, to have to them and their heirs, how it shall enure, 299 b *

Where after a gift to two men and the heirs of their bodies, the donor confirms to them and their heirs, how it shall enure, ibid.

Where a confirmation to baron and feme possessed of a term for years in right of the feme, shall enure to them for their lives in jointenancy, 300 a †

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where the re-entry or recovery of the disseisee shall not avoid the charge of the disseisor or his heir against his own confirmation, 300 a *

Where the feoffor by entry for a condition broken, shall not avoid the charge of the feoffee against his own confirmation, 300 a *, 301 a ¶

Where the licence of the patron and ordinary to the parson to grant a rent shall be a good confirmation of the same grant, 300 b *

Where the confirmation of the grant of a parson by the bishop sole without the dean and chapter, shall be good, and where not, 300 b *, 329 a ¶

Where the grant of a parson, with the confirmation of patron and ordinary, shall bind the successor during the continuance of the patron's estate, 300 b * ¶

Where the grant of a parson confirmed by another parson, his patron, shall bind only during his life without the confirmation of the patron paramount, 300 b *

Where tenant in tail being patron, confirms and after discontinues, the grant shall bind during the discontinuance, and if the tail be barred, for ever, 300 b ¶

Where a bishop having two chapters makes a grant, the confirmation of the one without the other shall not bind his successor, 301 a *

Where a disseisor makes a charter of feoffment, and a letter of attorney to make livery, the confirmation of the disseisee before livery is void; secus of such charter by a bishop, and confirmation by the dean and chapter, or of the grant of a reversion before attornment, 301 a †

Where a bishop at the common law granted land to the king, the confirmation of the dean and chapter before enrolment was good to bind the successor, albeit the confirmation was never enrolled, 301 a †

Where tenant for life grants a rent in fee, the confirmation of him in the reversion shall make the rent good for ever, 301 a *

Where the lease of tenant for life and him in the reversion shall be said the lease of the tenant and confirmation of him in the reversion, and where à converse, 45 a * ¶

Where the grant of the bargainor and bargainee before inrollment shall be said the grant of the bargainor and confirmation of the bargainee, but à converse after inrollment, 147 b *

Where the heir of the disseisor and the disseisee join in a feoffment, it shall be construed the feoffment of the heir and confirmation of the disseisee; but à converse, if the disseisor himself and the disseisee had joined, 302 b † ¶. Vide tit. Feoffment.

Where a tenure may be abridged by a confirmation; secus of a common or rent-charge, 305 a * ¶

Where the reservation of a new tenure upon a confirmation to the tenant shall be void, 305 a ¶, 306 a †

A confirmation or release by the lord paramount to the tenant to hold by lesser services void, 305 b † *

Where the lord releases or confirms to his tenant in chivalry to hold by knights service only for all services and demands, yet ward, marriage, &c. shall continue, 305 b ¶

Where a confirmation to an abbot, tenant to hold in frank-almoign, shall be good, 306 a * ¶, b †

Where a stranger seizes and detains a villain, a confirmation to him by the lord void, 306 b †

Where a confirmation to the grantee for life, of a rent, shall be good by way of enlargement, and where not, 308 a * ¶

Where a confirmation to lessee for life of his estate, the remainder over, shall be sufficient to pass the remainder, 317 a ¶

Consanguinity.

How the degrees are computed by the common, canon, and civil law, 23 and 24 per tot.

Constable. See Marshal.

The several acceptations in law of the word, 234 b †

Continual Claim. See Discontinuance, Entry, Fines, Livery of Seisin, Remitter, Stat. 32. H. 8. c. 33.

The description of a continual claim, and whence so called, 250 a ¶, b †

Where a continual claim by him that hath right and cannot enter shall avoid a descent, 250 b † *

Where the heir shall take benefit of a continual claim made by his ancestor to avoid a descent, and where not, 250 b ¶

Where the continual claim of him in the reversion or remainder shall avoid a descent in the absence of tenant for life, 251 a †

Where the claim by him in the remainder for life shall avail him in the remainder in fee, as to the avoidance of such descent, and where not, 251 a ¶, b, 252 a *

Where the surviving jointenant shall take benefit of a continual claim made by his companion, 252 a *

Where and to what purposes a continual claim shall amount to an entry and seisin, and where and to what not, 253 b per tot. pag. 254 a †, 263 a *

Where such claim out of the view of the land, and where within the view, shall be sufficient, and where not, 254 a ¶, b † *

Within what time a continual claim ought to be made at the common law, and within what at this day, 254 b ¶, 255 a, 256 a *

Where such claim at the common law shall avoid all manner of descents happening within the year and day, 255 b

Where such year and day to avoid a descent shall not be accounted from the disseisin but from the claim, 256 a † *

Where the continuance of possession after every such claim shall be a disseisin, for which the party may have trespass, or a forcible entry if it be with force, 256 b, 257 a

Where such claim made by the servant of him that right hath upon his commandment, shall be sufficient to avoid a descent, and where not, 257 b * ¶, 258 a and b, 259 a †

Where a claim of goods shall amount to a seizure, and where not, 111 b ¶

Where the bringing of an action shall amount to a claim, 263 a * ¶, 145 b †

What will be good to prevent the statute of limitations from barring, what not, 401 a ¶

Where the husband discontinues the land of his wife upon condition, by the entry of his heir for the condition broken, the state shall vest in the wife without entry or claim, 202 a *, 335 b *, 337 a †

Where an agreement to the entry of a stranger in the name of him that hath right within the five years, shall be a good claim to avoid a fine, 245 a *, 258 a †

Within what time claim ought to be made after judgment in a writ of right, or upon a fine levied at the common law, 254 b ¶, 262 a *

Nonclaim no prejudice to an infant at the common law; otherwise to a feme covert, 262 b †

Contract.

The derivation of the word, 47 b *

What shall be said a sufficient contract whereupon to ground an action of debt, and what not, 162 b ¶

Conusans of Pleas. See Quare Impedit, Stat. 33 H. 8. c. 3.

Of what matters the Ecclesiastical Court ought to have conusans, and of what not, 56 a ¶, b † *

Cope.

What it is, 4 b ¶, 5 b ¶

Copyhold and Copyholder. See Bailiff, Dower, Steward, Tenant at Will.

The signification of the word copias, 57 b ¶

The description of a tenancy by copy, 57 b ¶, 58 a †

Copyholder may make a lease for one year, 58 a *

May maintain an ejectment, ibid.

Whence so called, 60 a †

How copyholders in ancient times were called, 58 a †, 61 a *, 62 a ¶

By what things a copyhold custom ought to be supported, 58 b *

What things may be granted by copy, and what not, 58 b † ¶

By what persons admittances and voluntary grants by copy ought to be made, and by what not, 58 b †

Where a grant by copy shall be good by one who is not dominus pro tempore, 58 b *

By what means copyhold land or right may be transferred over, and by what not, and why not by deed, 58 b ¶, 59 a * †, 61 b *

The form of a copyhold surrender, 59 a *

Where such a surrender out of the court of the lord shall be good, and where not, 59 a ¶, 61 b *, 62 a †

What act, &c. by the tenant shall be said a forfeiture of his copyhold estate, and what not, 59 a *, 63 a †

To what purpose the lord shall be said in by the surrender of his copyhold tenant, and to what not, 59 b †

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where the interest of the copyhold estate shall be bound by the surrender, and the admittance of the lord shall have relation unto it, 59 b *, 12 a †
 Where the estate of copy que use shall ensue the limitation in the surrender, and not in the admittance of the lord, 59 b †, 61 b ¶
 Where the lord shall be compelled to make admittance according to the surrender to him which was dominus pro tempore before, 59 b *
 Where a custom to have fines of copyhold tenants upon the alteration of the lord or tenant, shall be good, and where not, 59 b ¶
 Where fines incertain are unreasonably exacted, the copyholder shall not be compelled to pay them, 59 b ¶, 60 a †
 How copyholders shall implead, and be impleaded, and the form of such plaint, 60 a *
 Where a copyhold may be intailed, and such intail also docted by surrender, 60 b †
 What remedy a copyholder hath against his lord for an ejectment without cause, 60 b * ¶, 61 a †, 62 b ¶, 63 a †
 What remedy a copyhold tenant hath for an erroneous recovery in the court of his lord, 60 a *
 The office and duty of the lord of a copyhold manor, 59 b *
 Where admittances by the lord out of the court or manor shall be good, 61 b *
 Where the wife of the copyholder shall be endowed, and where not, 33 b ¶ Tenants by the verge, why so called, and how they differ from tenants by copy, 61 a * Copyholds may be entailed, 398 a ¶
 How the intail thereof may be barred, 398 a ¶

Cornage.

What it is, 106
 Tenant by cornage paid no escheage, 69

Corody. See Appendants.

Where a house or land may be appendant to a corody, 49 a * Corporation. See Homage, Leases.

The description of a corporation, and why so called, 250 a *
 The division of corporations, 2 a ¶, 250 a *
 How many several ways a corporation may commence and be established, 250 a *
 What corporation shall take a fee simple without the word (successors) and what not, 94 b *
 Where a sole corporation shall take a fee simple without the word (successors) and where not, 9 b ¶, 94 b †
 Where the privileges belonging to a corporation by prescription shall determine by the change of the same corporation, and where not, 102 b ¶
 Where by the dissolution of a corporation their lands shall revert to the donor, and shall not escheat, 13 b *
 Where, and what corporation may maintain a writ of right, and where and what not, 341 b per tot. pag.
 Where a disclaimer, or other act by an abbot, bishop, &c. shall bind their successors, and where not, 103 a *
 The power which ecclesiastical corporations had to dispose of their lands, &c. at the common law, and how they are now restrained by statutes, 44 a †, 300 b ¶, 301 a *, 325 b ¶, 342 a †
 What leases at this day are good by a bishop, dean and chapter, &c. and what not, 44 a and b, 342 a †
 Where, and what corporation may do and receive homage, and where and what not, 65 b ¶, 66 b ¶, 67 a †, 341 b †
 Where a grant to a corporation aggregate, albeit the head of the corporation be wanting at the time, shall be good, and where not, 264 a † Corruption of Blood. See Attainder, Heir.

In what manner and degree the blood said to be corrupted by attainder, 391 b †
 By what means the blood corrupted by attainder may be restored, and by what not, 8 a *, 391 b * ¶, 392 a †
 Where corruption of blood in the father shall disable the issue to inherit to his mother, 12 a ¶
 Where corruption of blood in the father shall disable the son to inherit to his brother, and where not, 8 a *
 Where corruption of blood in the eldest son shall hinder a descent to the youngest, 13 a ¶, 392 a *

Judgment to be hanged by martial law no corruption of blood, 13 a ¶ Cofinage.

Where, and by whom a writ of cofinage lieth, 160 a ¶
 Where it lieth for a rent-charge or seck, ibid.

Costs. See Damages.

Cotterelli and Cottagium.

The meaning of the words, 5 b *, 56 *

Covenant. See Payment, Warranty.

Where an assignee shall take advantage of a covenant, without being named in the deed, and where not, 384 b ¶, 385 a *
 Where a man shall be bound by the covenants and conditions in an indenture, albeit he never sealed the deed, and where not, 230 b ¶, 231 a †
 Where a covenant in deed shall destroy the covenant in law, and where not, 384 a ¶
 A release of all actions and suits, no discharge of a covenant before it be broken; secus of a release of covenants, 292 b *
 Where upon a covenant to pay money at several days, after the first default an action of covenant lieth; otherwise of debt upon an obligation, 292 b
 How to plead performance of covenants, 303

Coverture. See Bastard, Baron and Feme, Banishment, Forfeiture, Infant.

The signification of the word, and whence so called, 112 a ¶
 Where a feme covert may be a purchaser, and where the estate shall be said to be in her before the agreement of her husband, 3 a †, 356 b *
 Where laches shall be adjudged in a feme covert, and where not, 246 b † *, 352 a †, 356 b ¶
 Where a feme covert may sue and be sued without her husband, 132 b ¶, 133 a per tot. pag.
 Where the breach of a condition in law shall be a forfeiture of the office or estate of a feme covert, and where not, 233 b ¶
 To what purposes a procurement, precedent, or agreement subsequent shall make a feme covert a disseisor, and to what not, 357 b *
 No privilege of nonclaim to a feme covert at the common law, 262 b *

Covin and Fraud. See Forfeiture, Remitter, Stat. 13 El. c. 15. 27 El. c. 4. 14 El. c. 8. 21 H. 8. c. 15. Stat. Merton, c. 6. Wardship, Warranty.

The description and derivation of the word, 257 a ¶, b †
 Where assignment of dower or other lawful act compassed by covin, shall be avoided, 35 a *, 357 b †
 Where upon a condition of payment of money, a covinous payment in shew shall be no performance, 209 b *
 Where, and how fraudulent conveyances, extortions, &c. shall be avoided at this day, and against what persons they shall be void, and against what not, 3 b ¶
 Where a recovery by covin against a tenant for life shall be a forfeiture of his estate, 362 a † *, 356 a ¶
 Where a collateral warranty after a disseisin by covin shall be no bar, 366 b ¶
 Where a termor for years, guardian, tenant by statute-merchant, elegit, &c. shall falsify a recovery by covin had against him in the reversion, and where not, 46 a † *

Count. See Pleadings, Writ.

The etymology and signification of the word, 17 a †
 The office and nature of a count, 17 a †, 303 b ¶
 Where the count varying from the words of the writ shall be good, and where not, 26 b ¶, 54 b †, 335 b †, 344 a †

Court. See Admiral, Marshal, Parliament.

The definition and derivation of the word, 58 a *
 The divers kinds of inferior courts, and the several judges of them, ibid.

T H E T A B L E.

Court-Baron, whence so called, who the judge, and in what place such court ought to be holden, and in what not, 58 a * ¶, 260 a ¶
 What courts are of record, and what not, 117 a ¶, 168 b *
 The antiquity and jurisdiction of the courts of king's-bench and common-pleas, 71 b *
 The county court, tourn of the sheriff, and court-leet, 68 a ¶, b *
 The ecclesiastical court and its jurisdiction, 96 a ¶, b *
 344 a ¶
 What the court shall judge of, 58 a * Court of record is the king's, 117 b ¶, 260 a *
 — of record, what they hold plea of, 260 a *
 — of record, how erected, 260 a *

Cui in Vita. See Quod ei de forceat, Resceit, Stat. W. 3. c. 3.

Where upon a recovery in an action of waste against the husband and wife by default, the wife shall have a cui in vita, 355 b *

Curtesy of England. See Attornment, Waste, Warranty.

The description of a tenant by the curtesy of England, and why so called, 29 a *, 30 a *
 Of what things the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy, and of what not, 29 a ¶, b *, 30 b *
 Of what estate of the wife the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy, and what not, 29 b *
 Of what seisin of the wife the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy and of what not, 29 a *, 40 a *
 Where the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy of an estate in fufpence, and where not, 29 b *
 Where a seisin shall be sufficient to make a tenancy by the curtesy, that shall not make a posfifio fratris, 15 b *
 Where the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy of a seisin of his wife had by intrusion upon the king, 30 b *
 What time of having issue sufficient to entitle the husband to be tenant by the curtesy, and what not, 29 b *, 30 a *
 What manner of issue sufficient to entitle him, and what not, 29 b ¶
 Where the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy without having issue, 30 a *
 Where the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy of an estate of the wife determined, and where not, 30 a *
 What things necessary to a tenancy by the curtesy, 30 a *
 To what purposes the estate of the husband after issue is respected during the life of the wife, 30 a *, 77 a *, 124 b *
 Where the husband after the death of the wife cannot waive his estate by the curtesy, and claim by devise, 30 a *
 Where the crying of the child is not necessary to entitle the husband by the curtesy, 30 a *
 Where the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy albeit the issue cannot by possibility inherit, and where not, 29 a *, 40 a *
 In what cases a man by having issue shall be tenant by the curtesy where a woman shall not be endowed, 30 a ¶, b *
 When and why the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy of a castle, of which the wife is not dowable, 30 b *
 Where a feoffment upon condition shall be extinct to a tenant by the curtesy, notwithstanding an entry for condition broken, 30 b *

Customs. See Devise, Gavelkind, Prescription, Relief, Surrender, Wardship.

The derivation and several acceptations in law of the word (consuetudo) 58 b ¶
 What things necessary to the essence of a custom, 110 b *, 113 b ¶
 The difference between a custom and a prescription, 113 b
 In what places a custom may be alledged, and what customs may be alledged in upland towns, and what in boroughs, 33 b ¶, 110 b *
 Why they may alter the common law, 113 a ¶
 Customs against reason void, 59 b ¶, 69 a *, 140 a *, 141 a
 Where a custom within a manor to have a fine of every tenant for marrying of his daughter without the lord's licence, shall be good, and where not, 139 b ¶, 140 a *
 In what customs a prescription ought to be alledged, and in what not, 175 b *
 Custom of Borough English, what, 110 b *, 240 b *
 Custom that the youngest son shall inherit if he be not of the half blood, good, 140 b ¶
 Custom that the eldest daughter or sister only shall inherit, good, ibid.

Usage, and not usage, a good argument in law for proof or disproof of any matter, 81 a *, b *

Damages. See Abettors, Averment, Dower, Quare Impedit, Stat. 8. H. 6. c. 9. of Glocester, c. 1. Waste.

The proper signification of the word, 257 a *
 Where upon a joint action and recovery by parceners, damages shall enure to them in severalty, 198 a ¶
 Where upon a recovery in waste by the aunt and niece, for waste done in the life of the other sister, the aunt only shall recover damages, ibid.
 Where upon a recovery in waste by the tenant for life, and him in the reversion, he in the reversion only shall recover damages, 42 a *
 Where in an action of trespass damages shall be recovered for the entry only, and where for all mean occupation, 257 a *
 Where in a writ of entry upon the stat. of R. 2. damages only shall be recovered for the entry, and not for the mean profits, 257 a *
 Where upon a feoffment by a disseisor to divers persons, the survivor not agreeing to the feoffment shall be excused of damages in a writ of entry, 269 b ¶
 Where the plaintiff may release damages, and have judgment of the principal, 355 b ¶

Day. See Debt, Payment, Time.

The legal acceptance of the word, 134 b *
 The common days between summons in real actions, and the return, ibid.
 The days anciently allotted to felons in trial of life to make their defence, and the course of proceeding in the king's-bench upon indictment at this day, ibid.
 What are said dies speciales, and what dies gratie, 134 b ¶, 135 a *
 In what cases such days are granted, and in what not, ibid.
 To what purpose the day of nisi prius and the day in bank are said all one, 135 a *
 What are said dies juridici, and dies non juridici, 135 a *
 What dies artificiales, and dies naturales, 135 a ¶
 At what time foreign nations begin to account the day, 135 a ¶
 What shall be said a year, half a year, a quarter of a year, and what a month, in legal computation, 135 b *
 Where the common law gave the disseisor a year and a day after his claim to enter, the day of his claim shall be taken inclusively, 255 a ¶
 Where in a protection of profection for one year, the day of the seile shall be taken inclusively, 130 b *
 An advice to students in spending the day, 64 b *

Dean and Chapter. See Bishop, Clergy, Corporation.

The etymology of the word dean, 95 a *
 The manner how deans come in and are installed at this day, and how formerly, 95 a * Chapter what, and the several sorts of chapters, ibid.

Debt. See Acceptance, Attornment, Contract, Execution, Infant.

Where an action of debt lieth for rent, and where not, 47 a *, b *, 57 *
 What shall be said a good plea in debt for rent, 47 b ¶
 Where an action of debt for relief, escuage, &c. and where not, 47 b *, 83 a ¶
 What shall be a sufficient contract whereupon to ground an action of debt, and what not, 162 b
 Where upon payment of money at several days an action of debt lieth not before the last day be past, 47 b *, 292 b ¶
 Where it lies on a judgment, 251 b ¶
 Where the executors shall have an action of debt for the arrearages of rent, which the testator himself could not, 146 b *
 Where an action of debt lieth against an infant upon a contract, and where not, 172 a *
 Where by a release of all debts an execution shall be discharged, 76 a *

Decies tantum.

Where it lies, 369 a *

Deeds.

T H E T A B L E.

Deeds. See Charters, Chattels, Defeasance, Dower, Estoppel, Exchange, Habendum, Inrollment, Livery, Obligation, Partition.

A deed, what, and what things incident thereunto, 45 b ¶, 171 b ¶
 The divers kinds of deeds, 35 b ¶, 36 a ¶
 The several parts of a deed, and the nature and office of each part, 6 a *, 229 a, b ¶
 Where a deed shall be good, albeit the formal and orderly parts thereof be wanting, 7 a ¶
 The difference between a deed and a charter, 9 a ¶
 What shall be said a good delivery of a deed, and what not, 36 a ¶, 49 b *
 Where a deed shall receive trial per pais, and where by the court, 35 b ¶
 Divers rules concerning the construction of deeds, 36 a *
 The antiquity of sealing deeds and charters, 7 a *
 How the dates of deeds were anciently omitted, 6 a ¶
 Where every deed ought to be in parchment or paper, 35 b ¶, 171 b ¶, 229 a * Deed to lead the uses, when good, 398 a ¶
 Whether it shall be delivered to the party that brought it into court, 401 b *
 Where a letter of attorney may be contained within a deed of feoffment, and where not, 52 b
 What inheritances shall pass without deed, and what not, 121 b ¶
 Where, and why a deed being pleaded ought to be shewed in court, 35 b ¶, 121 b ¶, 225 a ¶, b ¶
 What manner of deed is pleadable in court, and what not, 225 b *
 Where a stranger to a deed may take benefit thereby, without shewing the same in court, and where not, 207 b ¶, 317 b ¶
 Where, and by what persons a condition may be pleaded without shewing a deed in court, and where and by what persons not, 25 a ¶, b ¶, 226 a ¶, 393 a ¶
 Where the deed of condition ought to be shewed, albeit the condition be executed, and where not, 226 a ¶, 227 b *, 228 b ¶
 Where a deed remaining in one court may be pleaded in another court without shewing forth, 331 b *
 Where a deed shewed in court shall be said to remain in the custody of the court, and where in the custody of the party, 231 b ¶
 A deed-poll, what, and whence so called, 229 a ¶
 Where one person may take advantage of a deed poll made to another, and how, 231 a ¶, b ¶, 232 a b ¶
 The description of an indenture, and by what names it was called anciently, and by what at this day, 229 a ¶, 143 b *
 Where a deed beginning Hæc indentura, and without any actual indenting, shall be no indenture; secus if the parchment or paper be indented, though there be no such words, 143 b ¶, 229 a *
 The several kinds of indentures, and the forms of them, 229 b, 230 a
 Where upon a gift in tail by indenture, the part of the donee after his death without issue, shall belong to the donor, 229 a ¶
 Where an indenture shall be said the deed of the feoffee, albeit no mention be made of putting his seal to the deed, and where not, 230 b ¶
 Where a man shall take and be bound by an indenture, albeit he never sealed the deed, and where not, 230 b ¶, 231 b ¶

Default. See Disceit, Nonfuit, Quod Ei Deforceat, Retraxit, Recovery.

The legal acception of the word, 259 b *
 The several causes allowed by the law for saving a default, 259 b ¶
 Where sickness shall be no cause to save a default, ibid.
 Where judgment final shall be given in a writ of right upon default of the tenant, 295 b ¶

Defeasance. See Deeds, Execution.

The derivation of the word, 236 b ¶
 Where and what inheritances may be defeated by indentures of defeasance, and where and what not, 236 b ¶, 237 a ¶ Defence.

What, and the derivation of it, 127 b *
 When to be used, 127 b *
 Divided, ibid.
 How to be made, ibid.

Deforcement. See Abatement.

The signification and derivation of the word, 331 b ¶ *

Degrees. See Frankmarriage.

Gradus, unde dicitur, 24 a *
 The several sorts of degrees in a writ of entry, 238 b ¶
 What estate or change shall make a degree to have a writ of entry in the per, and what not, 239 a ¶, 318 a ¶
 Where albeit the degrees be once past, the writ may be brought within the degrees again, 239 a *
 Where two estates shall make but one degree in a writ of entry, ibid.

Demand. See Release, Request.

The several kinds of demands, 291 b ¶
 At what place and time a demand of a rent to enter for a condition broken, or to have an assize, ought to be made, and at what not, 144 a ¶, 153 a ¶, b ¶, 201 b ¶, 202 a ¶
 Where a distress is granted upon non payment and demand, yet the grantee may distrain after the day of payment, without any demand, 144 a ¶, 202 a * Demurrer. See Statute 27. El. 4 & 5 Annæ.

Demurrer what, and whence derived, 71 b *
 The form of a demurrer, 71 b ¶
 The several kinds of demurrers, 72 a *
 What things are admitted by a demurrer, and what not, 72 a ¶
 Where there is a demurrer for part, and issue for other part, which shall be first tried, 72 a ¶, 125 b ¶
 The course of the proceeding of the judges upon a demurrer, 72 a ¶
 Where the party shall alledge special matter, and conclude with a demurrer, 72 a *
 Where a demurrer may be upon aid prier, receipt, voucher, wager of law, &c. 72 a *
 Where the party shall be compelled to join in demurrer, and where not, 72 a *
 When it must be special, 398 a ¶

Dene, Denne.

The meaning of the words, 4 b ¶, 5 b ¶

Denizen. See Alien, Ligeance.

The etymology of the word, 129 a *
 The several acceptions of the word, 129 a ¶
 The difference between naturalization, and denization by the king's letters patents, 8 a ¶, 129 a * Denizen may purchase lands, 2 b ¶, 8 a ¶
 What issue of the denizen may inherit, 2 b ¶, 8 a ¶

Departure. See Action, Pleading, Retraxit.

Departure in pleading, 304 a ¶
 Where the rejoinder containing matter subsequent to the bar shall be a departure, and where not, 304 a ¶
 Where the defendant pleads performance of covenants, and the plaintiff replies that he did not such an act, &c. to say that he offered to do it, and the plaintiff refused, shall be a departure, 304 a *
 Where the party intireth himself by the common law, to make it good by a custom or act of parliament, shall be a departure, 304 a *
 Where the party pleads an estate generally, in his second plea to maintain it by a matter tantamount in law shall be a departure, 304 a *
 Where the plaintiff counts of a gift, and maintains in his replication by a recovery in value, this is no departure, ibid.
 Where in an action transitory the varying of the plaintiff in his replication from the time and place alledged in the count shall be no departure, 282 a ¶, b ¶

Deraignment. See Warranty.

The signification and derivation of the word, 136 b *

Detinue.

Where and for what things a writ of detinue lieth, and where and for what not, 286 b *
 Where the defendant shall wage his law in a detinue, and where not, ibid.

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where in a detinue of charters, summons and severance lieth, 286 b
Where a release of actions personal, shall be a good plea in detinue of charters, ibid.
Where a capias lieth in a detinue, and where not, ibid.
This action is now disused, and why, ibid.
In what cases 'tis better to bring an action of detinue, than an action of trover, ibid.

Devise. See Attornment, Condition, Entry, Stat. 32. H. 3. c. 1. 34 H. 8. c. 5. Testament, Uses.

The signification of the word (devise) 111 a +
Where devises ought to have construction according to the intent of the devisor, and where not, 25 a *, 322 b +
Where an inheritance shall pass by devise without the word (heirs) 9 b +, 322 a ¶, b *
Devise of lands, how to be, 399 a * Revocation thereof, 399 a ¶
Why in devises a greater latitude is allowed than in any conveyances, 9 b *
When a subsequent devise shall not be a revocation of the former, 112 b +
A devise to a man and his heirs males, a good estate-tail, 27 a ¶
Where by a devise to a man and his heirs males the son of his daughter shall not inherit, 25 a *
Where an estate may pass by devise, that cannot by act be executed in the life of the devisor, 42 a *
Where the devisee shall take the thing devised without the assent of the executors, and where not, 111 a ¶
Where upon a devise of lands the freehold shall be said in the devisee before entry, 111 a ¶
What remedy the devisee hath upon the intrusion of a stranger, and a descent cast before his entry, ibid.
Devise of lands by custom before the statutes, where good, and where not, 111 a, b +
Where by a custom to devise lands, a devise of a rent out of the same lands shall be good, 111 a *
Where devises of lands, &c. since the statutes of 32 and 34 H. 8. shall be good, and where not, and where such devises shall be good for the whole, and where but for part, 111 b per tot. pag.
Where the custom to devise lands holden by knight service, shall continue notwithstanding the making of those statutes, 111 b +, 115 a ¶
Where a devise by the husband to the wife shall be good, but not à contra, 112 a, b +
Where a devise of lands to be sold by executors shall be good, and where such sale by them shall be good, and where not, 112 b, 113 a, 236 a per tot. pag.
Where a feoffment being made to the use of a last will, or of such persons as shall be named in the last will, the estate shall be said to pass by the will, and where by the feoffment, 271 b ¶

Dilapidations.

May be sued for in the spiritual court, 53 b ¶
Whether an action on the case will lie for them at common law, ibid.

Disability. See Alien, Capacity, Excommunication, Outlawry, Profession.

The several disabilities in law in the person to bring any action, and who were anciently disabled, and who at this day, 128 a +, 135 b * ¶

Disceit. See Quod Ei Deformat.

Where upon a recovery by default in an action of waste a writ of disceit lieth, 355 b +
Where upon a recovery by default had against a person in prison, a writ of disceit lieth not, 259 b *

Discent. See Appeal, Attainder, Chattels, Corruption of Blood, Entry, Heir, Inheritance.

The signification and derivation of the word, 237 a ¶, 13 b, 163 b
Where the heir shall be in by discent, of an estate that by possibility could not be his ancestor's, 378 b +

Disclaimer.

The etymology and signification of the word, 102 a *

The several kinds of disclaimers, 102 a +
Where and what persons may disclaim in the feignory, and where and what not, 103 a, 101 b, 101 a +
What is wrought by such disclaimer in the feignory, 102 b *
Where upon the disclaimer of the tenant in real action, the demandant may enter before judgment, 362 a ¶, 363 a ¶

Discontinuance. See Condition, Corporation, Entry, Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. 1 H. 7. c. 20. 34 H. 8. c. 20.

The description of a discontinuance, 325 a *
The derivation and several acceptations of the word, 325 a * ¶
How many several ways a discontinuance may be wrought, and to the prejudice of how many several persons, 325 a ¶, b +
What inheritances may be discontinued, and what not, 327 b *, 331 b ¶, 332 a, b +, 325 b +
Where the divesting or displacing the estate of another by alienation shall work a discontinuance, and where not, 327 b *
Where the alienation of a corporation was a discontinuance to the successors at the common law, and where not, 325 b, 341 b ¶, 346 a and b, 347 a
Where and what act by the husband was a discontinuance of the lands, &c. of his wife at the common law, and what shall be a discontinuance at this day, and where, and what not, 326 a per tot. pag.
What act or conveyance by tenant in tail shall be a discontinuance of the estate tail, and what not, 326 b +, 327 a, b +, 328 a, 334 b *
Where the feoffment of the husband being jointly seized in special tail with his wife, shall be a discontinuance to the issue after the death of the wife, 326 b *
Where the alienation of one jointenant shall be no discontinuance to his companion surviving, 188 a +, 327 b ¶
Where a partition between parceners shall work no discontinuance, 173 a *
Where a warranty annexed to a release or confirmation shall work a discontinuance, and where not, 328 b, 329 a, 339 a *
Where the release of an abbot with warranty shall be no discontinuance to his successor, 329 a *
Where the grant of a rent in fee with warranty by tenant in tail shall be no discontinuance to his issue, but at his election, 332 b +
Where tenant in tail of a rent disseises the tertenant, a feoffment by him with warranty shall be no discontinuance of the rent, ibid.
Where a grant, release, or confirmation in fee to a lessee for years by tenant for life, or in tail, shall work no discontinuance, 329 b, 330 a, b +, 332 b ¶
Where the conveyance of an inheritance that lieth in livery, whereto no livery is requisite, shall work no discontinuance, 332 b +
Where a fine levied by tenant in tail of a reversion upon a lease for years shall be a discontinuance; secus of a reversion upon a lease for his own life, 323 b *
Where a lease by tenant in tail for the life of the lessee was a discontinuance at the common law during the particular estate, 333 a + *, 336 a *, 338 b +. Vide Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 28. where such lease shall be good at this day, and where not.
Where the freehold may be discontinued, and not the reversion, 333 a ¶
Where a reversion in fee upon a lease for life, or gift in tail being executed in the life of tenant in tail, who made the estates, shall be a discontinuance to his issue, and where not, 333 a, 334 a, 335 b ¶
Where a gift in tail by tenant in tail, and a release to the donee in fee, shall be no discontinuance after the death of the donee without issue; secus of a lease for life and such release, 333 b *
Where tenant in tail makes a gift in tail, a feoffment in fee by the donee shall be no discontinuance after his death without issue, 327 b ¶
Where tenant in tail makes a feoffment of a manor with an advowson appendant, and dies, his issue may present before recontinuance; secus if the feoffee had presented in the life of the tenant in tail, 333 b *
Where a fine sur grant and render by tenant in tail, not executed in his life, shall be no discontinuance to his issue, 333 b *
Where a reversion with warranty not executed in the life of tenant in tail shall be no discontinuance, ibid.
Where tenant in tail disseises his lessee for life, and makes a feoffment, and the lessee dies, this shall be no discontinuance, 333 b ¶
Where a feoffment by tenant in tail to him in the reversion or remainder shall be a discontinuance, and where not, 325 a + ¶

Where

Where a reversion may be revested, and yet the discontinuance remain, 335 a ¶
 Where the estate which wrought the discontinuance is defeated by entry for condition broken, &c. the discontinuance itself is avoided, 336 b ¶
 Where and by what means an estate tail may be discontinued by him that was never seised of the same estate, and where, and by what not, 338 b ¶, 339 a, b, 340 a, 347 a ¶, b ¶
 Where the estate of a reversion in the life of tenant in tail not executed in his grantee shall work no discontinuance to the issue, 340 b
 Where the alienation of a parson, prebend, &c. shall be no discontinuance to the successor, 341 a ¶, b *

Disparagement in Marriage. See Marriage, Wardship.

The etymology of the word (disparagement) 80 a *
 The several kinds of disparagements in marriage, and what shall be said a disparagement, and what not, 80 a ¶, b ¶, 82 a ¶
 The penalty incurred by the lord for such disparagement, 80 b * ¶
 Where a disparagement by one jointenant shall be a forfeiture of the wardship as to both, 80 b ¶
 Upon disparagement to the heir who shall enter and oust the guardian, and who not 81 a ¶
 Where the heir after disparagement shall be in ward again, and where not, 80 b ¶

Disseisee, Disseisor.

What he may and what he may not do before re-entry, 256 a *
 Disseisor, who, 461 a ¶

Disseisin. See Abatement, Assise, Coverture, Continual Claim, Jointenants, Judgment, Tenant at Sufferance.

The definition of a disseisin, and the signification of the word, 153 b *, 181 a ¶
 What shall be said a disseisin of a rent-seck to have an assise, and what not, 153 a, b *, 161 b * ¶
 What shall be said a disseisin of a rent-service, and what not, 160 b, 161 a, b ¶
 What shall be said a disseisin of a rent-charge, 161 b ¶
 Where a man shall have several assises for one disseisin of one and the same rent, 153 b ¶
 Where an assise lieth against a coadjutor, or counsellor to a disseisin, notwithstanding the death of the tenant, 18 b ¶
 Where the agreement of him in the reversion to a disseisin of the tenant for life to his use, shall make him a disseisor for life, 108 b ¶
 Where a disseisin of the tenant in a præcipe by the demandant to the use of others, shall not abate the writ, 108 b ¶
 Where the entry of a man into lands of his own wrong shall be a disseisin, notwithstanding his claim to hold at the will of the tenant, 27 a ¶
 Where a particular tenant holding over his estate shall be reputed a disseisor, abator, &c. and where a tenant at sufferance, 271 a ¶
 Where he in the remainder for life disseises the particular tenant, by the death of the tenant the disseisin shall be purged, 276 a *
 Where the confession of a disseisin shall be prejudicial to the tenant in a real action, and where not, 287 a *
 Where the payment of rents or services to a stranger by the tenant shall be a disseisin to the lord, and where not but at his election, 323 a and b, 324 a and b
 What acts by a disseisor shall be good to bind the disseisee, and what not, 35 a *, 357 b ¶, 58 b
 Where tenant for years, guardian, tenant by eleger, &c. by their feoffment shall be disseisors, 330 b *, 367 a *, b ¶

Distress. See Attornment, Rescous, Stat. 2. W. & M. 32. H. 8. c. 37.

The derivation of the word, 96 a ¶
 Of what things a distress may be taken, and of what not, 47 a ¶, b ¶
 How the distress ought to be demeaned, 47 b ¶
 What shall be said a sufficient pound to impound a distress, and what not, ibid.
 Where a distress in the night shall be good, and where not, 142 a *
 Distress inseparably incident to every service, 150 b ¶, 151 b ¶

For what service incertain the lord may distress, and for what not, 96 a ¶
 Where a distress lieth for a rent seck, 153 a ¶
 Where the lord may distress the cattle of his tenant out of his fee, and where not, 161 a *
 Where the owner may make rescous of a distress taken for damage-feasant out of the land in which, &c. ibid.
 How to be kept, 397 a ¶, 397 b *
 When, and in what manner to be sold, 397 a *
 If taken where no rent due, how to be punished, 397 a ¶
 Why the utensils of a trade may not be distrained, 397 a ¶
 For damage-feasant, where it must be taken, 161 a *

Divorce. See Bastard, Dower, Marriage.

The derivation of the word, 235 a ¶
 The several kinds of divorces, ibid.
 A vinculo matrimonii, what, 32 a, 235 a ¶
 A mensa et thoro, what, 32 a ¶
 Its several kinds and nature, 396 b *

Donatives.

How they are made, 344 a ¶

Double Plea. See Plea.

Where and why such plea not allowable in law by one tenant and defendant, 303 a ¶, 304 a *
 Where in pleas dilatory, duplicity of matter may be used, scilicet in pleas peremptory and perpetual, 34 a *
 By what means a man having divers distinct matters in excuse or bar of an action, may take advantage of them all, 304 a ¶ Dower. See Admeasurement, Attornment, Curtesy, Jointure, Waste, Warranty.

The definition and derivation of dower, 30 b ¶
 The divers kinds of dowers, 33 b *, 39 b ¶
 The description of dower at the common law, 30 b ¶, 33 a *, 33 b *
 What things requisite to the consummation of dower, 31 a *, 32 a ¶
 The wife of what person shall have dower of the lands of her husband, and of what not, 30 b ¶, 31 a *
 The privileges incident to dower, 31 a *
 Of what inheritances the wife shall have dower, and of what not, and in what manner they shall be assigned unto her, 30 b ¶, 32 a ¶, 37 b ¶, 164 b *, 165 a ¶, 307 a *
 Why the law made this provision for the wife, 31 a ¶
 Why dower may be ad osium ecclesie, not ad osium castri, 34 a *
 Of what castle or mansion-house the wife shall be endowed, and of what not, 30 b *, 36 b ¶, 31 b *, 165 a ¶
 Of what seisin of her husband the wife shall be endowed, 31 a ¶, 226 b *, 258 b ¶
 Where the wife shall not be endowed of the seisin of her husband had by intrusion upon the king's possessions, 30 b ¶
Dos de dote, where it shall be, and where not, 31 a ¶, b ¶, 40 b ¶
 Where the wife shall be endowed of an estate of her husband determined, 31 b *
 Where the wife shall not be endowed upon a remitter or alteration of the estate to the heir, 31 b ¶
 Where the wife shall not be endowed, albeit the issue by possibility may inherit, et de converso, 31 b ¶, 40 b ¶
 Where the wife being an alien or Jew shall be endowed, and where not, 31 b ¶
 Where the wife shall have dower of a thing suspended or extinct, and where not, 32 a *
 Where the wife shall be endowed according to the improvement or decay of the value of her husband's estate after his death, and where not, 32 a * ¶
 Where the wife divorced shall have dower, and where not, and why, 32 a ¶, 33 b ¶
 Where the wife shall lose her dower by elopement, and where not, 32 a ¶
 Where the wife shall be endowed in severalty by metes and bounds, and where not, 32 b ¶
 Where a charge shall be good against the wife made after her title to dower, and where not, 32 b ¶, 33 a *, 173 a ¶
 Where the wife shall lose her dower by the attainder of her husband, and where not, 31 a *, 37 a ¶, 41 a * ¶, 392 b *
 Where the wife shall recover damages in a writ of dower, and where not, 32 b ¶
 What shall be said a good plea in dower to bar the wife of damages, 33 a *

To what purposes the dower of the wife shall be said a continuance of the estate and possession of her husband, and to what not, 241 a †, 244 a ¶
 Of what age the wife ought to be to have dower, 33 a * ¶, 37 a *
 What shall be said a good marriage as to dower, and what not, 33 a * ¶, b †
 Where the disability of the wife during coverture, being removed before the death of her husband, she shall be endowed from the first seisin of her husband, and where not, 33 a ¶
 Where the wife shall have dower which cannot have an appeal of the death of her husband, & à converso, 33 b †
 Upon what death of the husband the wife shall be endowed, and upon what not, 33 b *, 133 b †
 Where by custom the wife shall be endowed of the whole, and where of the moiety, and where but of the fourth of the husband's estate, and in what place such custom is pleadable, 33 b ¶, 110 b ¶, 111 a †
 The description of dower ad ostium ecclesie, 34 a †
 Where such dower shall be good without deed, 34 a ¶
 At what age the husband may endow his wife ad ostium ecclesie, 34 a *, 38 a *
 Such endowment not good by tenant in tail, 38 a †
 Where the wife shall enter into her dower after the death of her husband without assignment, and where not, 34 b † *, 37 a ¶
 What things are requisite to assignment of dower, 34 b ¶, 35 a †
 By what persons such assignment may be made, 34 b ¶, 35 a *
 Where assignment of dower by a disseisor, &c. shall be good against the disseisee, and where not, 35 a *, 357 b †
 Where one tenant of the land shall take advantage of an assignment of dower made by another tenant, and where not, 35 a †
 Of what things assignment of dower may be made, 34 b ¶, 39 a *
 Where an assignment of dower shall work a degree to have a writ of entry in the per, and where not, 239 a †
 The description of dower ex assensu patris, and of what tenements such endowment may be made, 35 a ¶
 By what person such endowment shall be good, and by what not, 35 b † *, 37 a *
 At what age a man may endow his wife ex assensu patris, 35 b *, 38 a *
 Dower ex assensu matris, fratris, &c. where good, and where not, 35 b †
 Of what part of the land dower ex assensu patris and ad ostium ecclesie may be made, 34 b †, 36 a ¶
 Where the wife may disagree to dower ad ostium ecclesie, or ex assensu patris, and where agreement to one dower shall bar her of another, and where not, 36 a ¶ †
 What shall be said a sufficient act by the wife to determine her election to dower, and what not, 145 a ¶
 The description of dower de la plus beale, 38 a ¶
 Where the wife shall retain for part, and recover against the guardian in chivalry for part, 39 a †
 Where a writ of dower lieth against the guardian, and where against the heir, 38 b †
 What shall be a good plea by the guardian in bar of dower, and what not, 39 a *
 What shall be the surest provision for the wife for her dower, 34 b *, 36 b ¶, 37 a †
 Where a protection may be cast in a writ of dower, and where not, 131 a †
 Why the law gives it to the wife, 396 b *

Drenchs.

Who are so called, 5 b *

Dunum, Duna, Dun.

What they are, 4 b ¶

Dum fuit infra Ætatem. See Entry, Infant, Jointenant.

Where, and by whom such writ lieth, 247 b ¶
 Where baron and feme infants join in a feoffment by indenture, the feme after the death of her husband may have a dum fuit infra ætatem; secus where herself was of full age at the time of the feoffment, 337 a *
 Where an infant tenant per auter vie makes a feoffment, and cestuy que vie dies, dum fuit infra ætatem lieth not, 336 b ¶
 Where upon a feoffment by two jointenants within age, a dum fuit infra ætatem lieth by them severally, 337 a
 Where two jointenants, one within age, and the other of full age, make a feoffment, the infant surviving shall have a dum fuit infra, &c. but for a moiety, 337 b †

Dum non Compos Mentis. See Attornment, Entry, Idiot.

The several sorts of non compos mentis, 247 a †

By what means a feoffment or other estate made by a non compos mentis may be avoided during his life, and by what not, 247 a ¶, b †
 Where a fine or recovery by a non compos mentis shall bar his heir, 247 a ¶
 Where a non compos mentis may be a purchaser, 2 b ¶
 By what person a writ of non compos mentis lieth, and by what not, 247 b ¶
 Where the act or wrong of a non compos mentis shall be imputed to him, and where not, 247 b †

Eire.

The signification of the word, 293 a ¶
 The authority and manner of proceeding of the justices in eire anciently, 293 b †

Election. See Annuity, Avowry, Dower, Warranty.

Where a man having several remedies for one thing, the election of one remedy shall conclude him as to the other, and where not, 146 a †
 Where an election is given to several persons, the election of which of them shall stand, 245 a †
 Where of two several things who shall have the election, 145 a *
 Where such election ought to be in the life of the parties, and where not, 145 a †
 Where a man by his act and wrong shall lose his election, 145 a *
 Where the privilege of election shall descend, or is transferable over, and where not, 46 b †, 166 b † *, 186 b ¶
 Where it shall be in the election of the tenant to vouch, &c. by reason of a warranty in deed, or in law, 384 b ¶
 Where the lord may elect to have the wardship of the heir of his tenant, or take himself to his feignory, 83 b ¶

Elegit. See Execution, Stat. West. 2. cap. 18.

Such writ, whence so called, and where it lieth, 289 b †
 What things the sheriff may deliver in execution upon such writ, and what not, 289 b †

Elopement. See Dower.

What elopement is, 32 a ¶, b †

Emblements.

Where a lessee at will shall have the emblements after his estate determined, and where not, 55 a ¶, b ¶
 Where a tenant for life, or his executors, shall have the emblements after his estate ended, and where not, 55 b † *
 Where the lessee for years of a tenant for life shall have the corn after the death of his lessor, 55 b †
 Where the husband sows the land of his wife, his executors shall have the corn, 55 b *
 Where the husband jointenant with his wife sows the ground, the wife surviving shall have the corn, ibid.
 Where lands descend to a daughter who sows the ground, the son born after shall not have the corn, ibid.
 Where the estate of the tenant is defeated by a right paramount, forfeiture, condition, &c. the tenant shall not have the corn, ibid.
 Where the disseisee by his regress shall have the emblements severed before the entry, ibid.
 Where tenant by statute-merchant sows the land, and after is satisfied by a casual profit, he shall have the emblements, ibid.
 The remedy which the tenant hath to come by the corn after his estate ended, 56 a †

Embracery.

The signification of the word, 369 a †

Entry, and Entry congeable. See Abeyance, Bastard, Condition, Continual Claim, Degrees, Discontinuance, Dum fuit infra Ætatem, Freehold, Jointenants, Statute of Marlbridge, Surrender.

The divers writs of entry, 239 a *
 The several writs of entry sur disseisin, and where each writ lieth, 238 b * ¶
 Where an entry generally into one acre shall be said an entry into others, and where an entry into part shall be said an entry into the whole, and where not, 15 a ¶, b †, 252 b ¶

 Where the entry of one parcener shall be accounted in law the entry of both, and where not, 243 b *, 373 b ¶, 374 a *
 Where the entry of a stranger to the use of him that hath right or title of entry shall vest the estate in him before agreement, and where not, 245 a ¶, 258 a †
 What act upon the land by him that hath a right of entry shall amount to an entry, and what not, 49 b ¶, 245 b *, 368 a *
 Where an entry into one acre in the name of other acres in the same county shall be sufficient for both, and where not, 252 b per tot. pag.
 Why anciently a long possession, and why at this day a discent, shall take away the entry of him that right hath, 237 b *
 The discent of what inheritances shall toll an entry, and of what not, 237 b ¶
 The discent of what estate shall toll an entry, and of what not, 239 a ¶
 Where the dying seised of a seisin in law shall toll an entry, 239 b †
 Where the dying seised of a reversion or remainder shall toll an entry, and where not, 239 b *
 Where the disseisor makes a lease for his own life, and dieth, this discent shall not toll the entry of a disseisee, 239 b *
 Where a collateral discent shall toll an entry, as well as a lineal, 239 b ¶
 Where a discent after a recovery and before execution, shall take away the entry of the recoveror, and where not, 238 a †
 Where a discent cast, the disseisee being in prison, shall not toll his entry; scilicet of a person recluse, or where the disseisin was before imprisonment, 258 b *, 259 a per tot. pag.
 Where a discent cast the disseisee being beyond sea shall not toll his entry, 260 a ¶, b †, 261 a, 262 b †
 Where a discent cast in time of vacation of an abbath or other sole corporation shall not toll the entry of the successor, 263 b, 264 a †
 Where a title of entry shall not be tolled by a discent, 240 a * ¶, b † *
 Where the entry of the disseisee shall be congeable upon the lord by escheat, and where not, 240 a †
 Where upon the discent the heir is remitted to another estate than his ancestor died seised of, the entry of the disseisee is congeable, 238 b †
 Where a disseisor made a gift in tail, and after divers discent the issue in tail dies without issue, the entry of the disseisee shall be congeable upon him in the reversion or remainder, 238 b †, 240 a *
 Where the entry of the disseisee shall be congeable upon the disseisor notwithstanding divers mean discent, or a purchase of the freehold from his father, upon whom the land descended, 238 b *, 242 a †, 248 a ¶
 Where an infant, lessee for life of a disseisor, is disseised, and a discent cast, the entry of the disseisee shall be congeable upon the infant after his re-entry, 238 b *, 248 a
 Where the entry of a patentee of the king, or a devisee of lands, shall be congeable notwithstanding a discent cast upon an intrusion, 111 a ¶, 240 b *
 Where the entry of the disseisee shall be congeable upon the wife of the disseisor after endowment, notwithstanding the discent, 240 b ¶, 241 a †
 Where upon the abatement of the disseisee the wife of the disseisor recovers in dower, the entry of the disseisee after shall not be congeable; scilicet if he had assigned her dower in pais, 241 a *
 Where the entry of the disseisee upon tenant for life, shall divest the reversion settled in the king, 241 a ¶
 Where a discent mediate to the dying seised of the ancestor shall not oust the disseisee of his entry, 241 b † *
 Where a discent cast upon the disseisin or abatement of the younger brother, shall toll the entry of the eldest, and where not, 242 a *, b ¶, 243 a †
 Where a discent cast upon the abatement of one parcener, shall toll the entry of her sister as to her moiety, and where not, 243 a ¶, b † *
 Where a man dies seised, his wife ensuing, a discent cast upon the abatement of a stranger shall toll the entry of the issue born after, 245 b ¶
 Where a discent shall take away the entry of an infant that right hath, and where not, 245 b ¶, 246 a *
 Where a discent cast during the coverture shall toll the entry of the feme, and where not, 246 a * ¶, b †, 353 b ¶
 Where the entry of the heir of a non compos mentis shall be congeable, notwithstanding a discent or alienation in the life of his ancestor, 247 a, b * ¶
 In what cases the entry of the heir shall be congeable, where the entry of his ancestor was not, 247 a †, b *
 Where the entry of an infant after his full age shall be congeable upon his alienee, 248 a *

Where an infant disseisor enters upon the heir of his alienee, the entry of the disseisee shall be congeable upon the infant, 248 a †
 Where a discent by reason of profession in religion shall not toll the entry of the disseisee, 248 b
 Where a discent shall not toll the entry of a lessee for years, tenant by eleger, &c. 249 a †
 Where a discent in time of war shall not toll an entry, 249 a ¶, b †
 Where a dying seised and a succession shall not toll an entry, 250 a †
 Where the husband within age discontinues the land of his wife, the entry of the feme after his death shall be congeable upon the discontinuance, 336 b ¶, 337 a †
 Where an infant tenant in general tail in the right of his wife discontinues in tail, and dies, the entry of his heir or feme shall be congeable upon the discontinuance, 337 a †
 Where an infant tenant in tail makes a feoffment, and after is attainted, and dies, the entry of his issue is not congeable upon the feoffee, 337 a *
 Where two infants jointenants make a feoffment, the entry of the survivor shall be congeable into the whole, 337 a ¶
 Where the baron discontinues the land of his feme for life by the surrender of the tenant, the entry of the heir of the feme is congeable upon the baron in the life of the tenant for life, 338 a †
 Where baron and feme and a third person are jointenants, and the baron makes a feoffment and dies, the entry of the third person surviving shall be congeable into the whole, and where but to a moiety, 327 b ¶
 Where a disseisor makes a lease for life, and levies a fine of the reversion, and five years pass, the entry of the disseisee is not congeable upon the tenant for life, 298 a †
 Where upon nontenure pleaded, or disclaimer in a formacion, the entry of the issue in tail shall be congeable upon the tenant before judgment, 362 a ¶
 Where two jointenants, one within age, and the other of full age be disseised, and a discent cast, and he of full age dies, the entry of the other shall be congeable into the whole, 364 b ¶

Error. See Release.

Where, and upon what judgment such writ lieth, and where, and upon what not, 168 a †, 288 b †
 Where a release in all actions shall be a good plea in a writ of error, and where not, 288 b ¶
 Where after recovery in a real action, a release by the tenant of all his right in the land shall bar him of a writ of error, 289 a †
 Where a recovery by default against a man out of the realm in the king's service shall not be avoided by error, 262 b *
 This writ lies on judgments in courts of record only, 117 b ¶
 On a recovery of a freehold, who may bring it, 251 b ¶

Escheat. See Acceptance, Attainder, Corruption of Blood, Entry, Heir, Rebutter, Relation, Warranty.

The etymology and signification of the word, 13 a * ¶, 92 b †
 How many ways an escheat may happen, 13 a ¶, 92 b *
 Where upon the dissolution of a corporation their lands shall revert to the donor, and shall not escheat, 13 b *
 Where the disseisor makes a feoffment, or dies seised, upon the death of the disseisee without heir, an escheat lieth not, 268 b †
 Where the father dieth, his son being attainted of treason, the lands of the father shall escheat, and not go to the king, 13 a ¶ Escheator.

His office and duty, 13 b †
 Why so called, ibid. 92 b †
 The number of them in ancient and modern times, ibid.

Escuage. See Debt.

The etymology of the word, 68 b * ¶
 The several kinds of escuage, 72 b ¶
 For what time such tenant is bound to attend upon the king in his war, 68 b ¶, 69 b ¶
 From what the time of attendance shall be computed, 70 a ¶, 71 a ¶
 Where the tenant may perform his attendance by deputy, 70 a †, b †, 83 a †
 Where attendance by tenant paravall shall excuse all the mesnes, 69 b ¶, 78 b ¶

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where attendance by one jointenant shall excuse his companions, 69 b ¶, 78 b ¶
 What persons are exempted from personal performance of this service, 70 b ¶
 Where escuage shall be assessed by parliament, and for what cause, and when it was last assessed, 72 a ¶, b ¶
 Where the tenant dying in the army, his heir shall be excused of escuage, 72 b ¶
 Where the tenant of the king by escuage, shall have escuage of his own inferior tenants, for their not attendance in the war, and where not, 72 b ¶, 73 a ¶, b ¶
 Where and what escuage shall be knight's service, and what socage, 72 b ¶, 87 a Esuage generally, which shall be intended, 73 a ¶
 What services incident to a tenure by escuage, 73 a
 The remedy which lords have to come by their escuage, 73 b ¶
 How it shall be tried, whether the tenant was with the king in his war, or not, 74 a
 What shall be said a voyage royal, wherein such tenant is bound to attend, 69 b *, 130 b * Esuage uncertain is knight's service, 73 a * ———— certain is socage, ibid.
 ———— is a service, not a tenure, 398 a ¶

Esplees.

In a writ of right of advowson shall be laid in the incumbent, 17 a ¶

Essoign. See Protection.

Estates. See Devise, Fee Simple, Freehold, Grant, Heir, Jointenants, Leases, Tail.

The signification of the word, 345 a *
Status unde dicitur, 9 a *
 Where two several estates of the same land may be simul et semel in the same person, and how, and when they shall be said to be executed, 54 b ¶, 182 b, 184 a *, ¶, b ¶, 338 b ¶
 Where the estate of a man for his own life shall be esteemed higher than for the life of another man, and where not, 41 b ¶, 42 a ¶
 Where several freeholds may be derived out of an estate for life, and where not, 42 a ¶
 Where a man shall have an estate for life determinable at will, 42 a ¶
 Where an incertain interest in lands shall be deemed in law an estate for life, and where but at will, 42 a *
 Where tenant for life having a fee expectant upon a remainder in tail, grants totum statum suum, both estates shall pass, 345 a ¶
 What can support another, and what not, 54 passim
 When the greater shall drown the less, when not, 28 a ¶, 54 b ¶
 Estate pur auter vie devisable, 396 b ¶

Estoppel. See Verdict.

The signification and derivation of the word, 352 a ¶
 The several kinds of estoppels, and by what matter or act an estoppel may be wrought, and by what not, 352 a * ¶
 Where estoppels ought to be reciprocal to bind both parties, 352 a ¶
 Where every estoppel ought to be precisely affirmative and certain to every intent, 303 a ¶, 352 b ¶
 Where matter neither traversable nor material shall be no estoppel, 352 b ¶
 Where acceptance before title accrued shall work no estoppel, ibid.
 Where an estoppel against an estoppel shall put the matter at large, 352 b ¶
 Where the adverse party shall not be estopped to take advantage of a truth apparent in the record, 352 b *
 Where the acceptance of an estate by the husband to him and his wife shall estop him to alledge a remitter to the wife, 352 a
 What persons shall be bound and take advantage of estoppels, and what not, 352 a ¶, b ¶
 Of what estoppels that go to the person a stranger shall take benefit, and of what not, 128 b ¶, 352 b *
 Where an estoppel of the part of the mother shall not bind the heir claiming from his father, 365 b *
 Where an estoppel to the son descending mediately upon his father, shall bind him, and where not, 12 a ¶
 Where a deed indented shall be an estoppel, and where not, 45 a *, 47 b ¶, 363 b ¶
 Where a man accepts a lease of his own land by indenture, how long the estoppel shall be said to continue, 47 b ¶

Where in a nuper obiit the defendant claims by purchase, the plaintiff may have a moridancefor against her for the whole, 146 b ¶, 164
 A conclusion, what, and whence derived, 37 * ¶, b ¶
 To whom estoppels extend, 353 a ¶
 Where a thing alledged by way of supposal in account is an estoppel, and where not, 352 a *
 Who may take advantage of estoppels, 352 a ¶
 Why allowed, 402 a ¶

Estovers.

The derivation of the word, 41 b ¶
 What Estovers of common right belong to a tenant for life, years, &c. ibid.

Etymologies.

The use and benefit of etymologies, 68 b *, 86 a ¶, 87 a ¶, 106 b ¶, 109 a ¶, 137 a ¶, 177 a ¶, &c.

Evidence. See Pleading, Trial, Verdict.

The derivation of the word, 283 a ¶
 The extent of the word, and what matters shall be said good evidence to an enquest, ibid.
 Where a thing done beyond the seas may be given in evidence, 261 b *

Examples.

Illustrant, non restringunt legem, 24 a ¶

Exception.

How it differs from a reservation, 47 a ¶ *

Exchange. See Partition.

The description of an exchange, 50 a ¶
 Of what things an exchange may be made, and of what not, 50 b * ¶
 What things requisite to the perfection of an exchange, 51 b ¶
 Where an exchange shall be good without deed, and where not, 50 a ¶, b *
 Where an exchange shall be good, albeit there be no transmutation of possession, 50 b ¶
 What equality ought to be observed in exchanges, and what not, 51 a per tot. pag.
 Where an exchange of lands with the king shall be good, 51 a
 Where an exchange by an infant shall be good, and where voidable, 51 b *
 Exchange implies a warranty, 174 a *, 384 b *
 ———— must be executed in the life of both the parties, 51 b *

Excommunication.

Excommunicatio, quid. Et quotuplex, 133 b ¶
 The condition of a person excommunicated, 133 b * ¶
 What persons are disabled thereby to bring an action, and what not, 134 a ¶
 Where an excommunication certified by a bishop, shall not disable the plaintiff in an action against the same bishop, ibid.
 By whom excommunication ought to be certified, and what certificate shall be good, and what not, 134 a *
 Where an excommunication by the pope, or other foreign authority, shall not disable the party, ibid.

Execution. See Debt, Payment, Stat. of Acton Burnel. West. 2. c. 45. 23 H. 8. c. 6. 32 H. 8. c. 5.

The legal acception of the word, 154 a ¶
 Divers maxims in law concerning executions, 289 b ¶
 Where the demandant may enter, or distrain after judgment, and before execution, and where not, 34 b *
 Where upon a judgment in debt the plaintiff shall have execution of the lands which the defendant had at the time of the writ brought, and where not, 102 a ¶
 Where by descent of part of the lands in execution to the donee, the whole execution shall be avoided, 150 a ¶
 Where tenant in tail recovers in value, and dies without issue before execution, execution shall be sued by him in the reversion, 252 a *

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where after a perfect execution by extent returned, and of record, there shall be no re-extent upon any eviction, 290 a ¶

Where no execution by elegit, statute-merchant, &c. shall be sued against the heir, or his mother endowed by the heir during his minority, 290 a ¶

Where a copias ad satisfaciendum lay at the common law, and where at this day, 290 b †

Within what time writs of execution ought to be sued forth, and where, being commenced within the time, they may be continued after, 290 b *

Where to a writ of execution no plea can be admitted, but for matter since the judgment, the party is to put his audita querela, 290 b *

Where a release of all debts, duties, demands, executions, shall discharge an execution; secus of a release of all actions, 76 a †, 289 a *, 291 a * ¶, b *

Where a release of all suits shall bar an execution, and where not, 291 a *

Where an execution upon a recognizance may be defeated by a deed of defeasance, 291 a ¶

Where a man may have execution upon a recognizance the first day, without staying till all the days incurred, 292 b ¶

Execution may be awarded for the king without suit, by the court or office, 291 a ¶

For a common person shall not be awarded without the party prays it, 291 a ¶

Is discharged by a release of a debt to the conusee, 291 a ¶

Where none can be made till a fiere facias is brought, 254 b ¶

Executors. See Account, Assets, Devise, Obligation, Testament.

Where a remainder for years limited to the executors of I. S. shall vest presently in I. S. 54 b ¶

Where the executor shall have remedy for the arrearages of rent which the testator in his life could not, 146 b †

Where executors shall be bound by the obligation of their testator without naming, 209 a ¶

In what respects the executor shall be said more to represent the person of the testator, than the heir the person of the ancestor, 209 a ¶, b ¶

Where an executor shall be reputed in law an assignee, and where not, 210 a *

Where an executor may release an action before probate of the testament, 292 b †

Where a man shall have an action of debt against his own executors, 133 b *

Where the executors of a bishop shall have a ward which fell in the life of a bishop; secus of a presentation to a church which voided in his life, 90 a * ¶, 388 a *

Where a church voided in the life of the testator, the executors shall present, and not the guardian in chivalry; secus where the tenant of the king in capite dies, &c. 388 a *

Where an infant makes his debtor his executor, the debt is extinct, 264 b ¶

Where a feme executrix takes the debtor to husband, notwithstanding the debt remains, ibid.

One may be an executor de son tort of a term, 401 a †

Exposition of Words. See Advowson, Confirmation, Grant, Words.

Where the word (ut) shall be taken positively, and where by way of similitude, 17 b *, 43 b *

Where the word (or) shall be taken in the conjunctive, where in the disjunctive, 99 b †, 383 a ¶

Where the legal termination in (agium) in composition signifies service or duty, 86 a †, 109 a *

The words (prochein amy) how taken in law, 88 a *

How many things the adjective (liber) distinguisheth in law, 94 a ¶

The exposition of the words (dedi & concessi) in grants, 301 b

Of the word (dimissi) 301 b ¶

Of the word (velo) 301 b ¶

Of the word (eadem), and how it shall have relation, 20 b †, 385 b *

Of the word (prædict), and the force of its relation, 20 b †

Of the word (hereditament) 6 a †, 16 a * ¶, 383 a ¶, b †

Of the words (proxima advocatio), 378 b ¶, 379 a †

Of the words (sans impeachment de waste), 220 a †

Of the words (demesne land), 17 a ¶

Of the words (à confectione), 46 b ¶

Of the words (from henceforth), ibid.

Of the words (from the date, or from the day of the date), ibid.

Quoties in verbis nulla est ambiguitas, ibi nulla expositio contra verba expressa fieri debet, 147 a *

Quæ dubitationis tollendæ gratia inferuntur, non ledunt, 203 a †

Expressio eorum quæ tacite insunt, nihil operatur, 191 a *

A disjunctive in the latter end of a sentence disjoineth the whole, 225 a †

When the words of a deed, or of the parties without deed, may have a double intendment, one agreeable to law, the other against law, the intendment that standeth with law shall be always taken, 42 a ¶, b †

Extent. See Execution, Stat. W. 2. c. 18. Stat. de Aston Burnel, 23 H. 8. c. 6. 32 H. 8. c. 5. Stat. Merchant and Staple.

Extinguishment. See Apportionment, Common, Heriot, Mefnalty, Release, Suspension.

The signification and derivation of the word, 147 b *

Where by purchase of part of the land out of which, &c. the whole rent-charge shall be extinguished, 147 b ¶

Where by descent of part of the tenancy to the lord, an entire rent-service shall be extinct, and where not, 149 a †

Where by purchase of part of the tenancy by the lord, an entire rent-service shall be extinct, and where not, 149 a * ¶, b †

Where by the grant of the lord, of the services of his tenant by castleward, the feignory shall be extinct, 83 a *

Where and to what purpose an estate drowned or extinct shall be said to have continuance, and where, and to what not, 185 a *, 338 b † *

Where a grant of the services or rent to the tenant shall enure to him by way of extinguishment, 307 a ¶, b †, 313 b *

Where the remainder in fee of the tenancy escheats, the feignory, as to the whole, shall be extinct, 312 b †

Where a bishop is seised of a rent, and the tertenant in feeoff him and his successors, by the entry of the lord for mortmain the rent is not revived; secus where tenant for life grants a rent in fee, and in feeoff the grantee, upon whom the lessor enters for a forfeiture, 338 b *

Where the accession of a freehold in auter droit shall extinguish a term which a man hath in his own right; secus à converso, 338 b ¶

Where the release of the lord of all his right to the tenant, and a lessee for years of the feignory, shall extinguish the feignory and estate of the lessee also; secus of a release to them and their heirs, 180 a *

Where a lease for years may cease and revive again as to several persons, and where not, 46 a * ¶, b †

Where the re-entry of the lessee upon the feoffee of his lessor, shall revive the rent reserved upon the lease, 319 a *

Where the grantee of a rent disfeises the tertenant, the regrefs of the tenant shall not revive the rent, ibid.

Extortion. See Stat. W. 1. c. 26.

The derivation and several acceptions of the word, 368 b *

What shall be said extortion in sheriffs or other officers, and what not, 368 b † *

The odiousness of the crime, 368 b *

Ey.

What it is, 5 b ¶

Falsifying of Recoveries. See Covin, Forfeiture, Recovery, Stat. of Gloucester, cap. 11. 21 H. 8. c. 15. 14. El. c. 8.

The signification of the word (falsify), 104 b †

What persons may falsify a recovery at the common law, and what not, 146 a † *, 104 b †

Where and by what matter the issue in tail may falsify a recovery had against his ancestor, and where and by what not, 360 b ¶, 361 a † *

Fealty. See Acceptance, Allegiance, Seisin.

The etymology of the word, 67 b *

The manner of doing fealty, 67 b * ¶

The difference between the fealty of a freeholder, and of a villein, 68 a †

What person and tenant shall do fealty, and what not, 67 b ¶, 63 a *, 93 b †

How fealty differeth from homage, 68 a per tot. pag.

The benefits which accrue to lords by accepting fealty, 68 a ¶, 92 b

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where tenant by fealty shall swear to do all services due, when after fealty done no service is due, 92 a ¶
 To what tenures fealty is incident, and to what not, 23 a ¶,
 93 a, 95 b *, 96 b ¶, 150 b ¶
 Fealty incident to attornment, 104 a † Inseparably incident to every reversion, 143 a †

Fee Simple. See Devise, Heirs.

The signification and derivation of the word (fee), 1 b *,
 2 a *
 The several sorts of fee simples, 1 b *, 9 a ¶
 What words requisite to the passing of a fee simple, 8 b ¶
 How many several ways a fee simple may be purchased,
 10 a *
 The ampleness of such estate, 18 a *
 Where two fee simples may be of the same land at one time, and where not, 18 a ¶, 354 b *, 368
 Fee generally, what it shall be intended, 189 a *
 A feoffment to one and the heirs of his father, a good fee simple, 220 b † *
 Fee simple conditional, and the course of its descent at the common law, 19 a * ¶
 By the having of what issue such condition said to be performed, and of what not, 19 a *
 To what purposes the having of issue was a performance of the condition, and to what not, ibid.
 Where the sons only, and where the daughters only were inheritable to such estate, 19 a ¶
 Where the alienation of the donee after issue was a bar to his issue, or the donor, and where not, ibid.
 A grant to a man and his heirs tenants of the manor of D.
 a good fee simple, 27 a ¶
 A grant by the king of a barony to one, and his heirs lords of the manor of K. a good fee simple qualified in the dignity, ibid.

Fees. See Extortion, Office, Wager of Law.

Where notwithstanding the grantor oust his officer, his fee shall continue, and where not, 231 b †
 Where in an action by an attorney for his fees, the defendant shall not wage his law, 295 a ¶
 Where the receiving greater or other fees than are prescribed by the statutes, shall be extortion, and where not,
 368 b *

Felonv. See Attainder, Relation.

The signification and extent of the word, 391 a *
 By pardon of all felonies, what crimes anciently, and what at this day are pardoned, 391 a *
 What not, 391 a ¶
 The several sorts and degrees of felony, and what forfeiture is incurred by each of them, ibid.
 Where upon attainder of felony in an appeal, the defendant shall forfeit no lands but those he had at time of the outlawry pronounced; secus in an indictment, 390 b *
 The punishment of a felon implied in his judgment to be hanged, 392 b †
 Where a felon may be a purchaser, and to whose use, 2 b *

Feoffment. See Confirmation, Condition, Deeds, Livery of Seisin, Plea, Surrender.

The etymology and signification of the word, 9 a ¶
 The antiquity of a feoffment, ibid. 49 b
 What person may make a feoffment, and what not, 42 b * ¶,
 43 a †
 By the delivery of the deed of feoffment, what estate passeth before livery of seisin, 56 b ¶
 Where the feoffment of a moiety or third part of a man's land shall be good without deed, 190 b *
 A feoffment of the moiety of a manor to have with an advovson appendant, not good without deed, 190 b ¶
 Where a lease and release shall amount to a feoffment,
 207 a ¶
 Where a feoffment shall extinguish a condition or power of revocation, and where not, 237 a *
 Where cestuy que use and his feoffees after 1. R. 3. and before 27. H. 8. join in a feoffment, whose feoffment it shall be construed, 302 b †
 Where tenant for life, and he in the reversion or remainder in fee tail, or for life, join in a feoffment, how it shall be construed, 302 b
 The law will transpose the words rather than it shall not take effect, 217 b †
 Why it destroys all wrongful estates, 9 a *
 By lease for years, how it operates, 330 b *, 367 b *

Ferdwit.

What it is, 71 a †

Ferlingus. See Ferlingum Terra.

What Ferlingus is, 5 b †
 What passes by these words, ibid.

Fines to the King. See Alienation, Amerciament, Copyhold.

The several acceptations in law of the word (fine), 126 b *
 Fine to the king, what, ibid. 127 a *
 The difference between a fine and a ransom, and where they shall be said all one, 127 a

Fines of Land. See Continual Claim, Dum non Compos, Entry Congeable, Infant, Remitter, Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24.

The description of a fine, and whence so called, 120 b ¶, 121 a †, 162 a ¶
 What time was allowed by the common law to make claim after a fine levied, and what at this day, 262 a †, 254 b ¶, 326, 373
 What persons were barred by a fine at the common law that could not make claim, and what persons might make claim, and yet were not barred by such fines, 252 b † *
 Where a fine levied by tenant in tail shall be a bar to his issue, or them in the reversion or remainder, and where not, 372 a * ¶, b †
 Where a grant and render by fine to a stranger to the writ and consance, shall be good to pass a voidable estate to him in presenti, 353 a ¶ Where a feme-covert shall be concluded by a fine, and where not, 46, 381, 382, 353 b † *
 Where fines working wrong to third persons ought not to be accepted, 183 a † *
 Fines for alienation taken away, 369 b ¶

Firma.

The etymology of the word, 5 a *
 How called in several counties, ibid.
 What shall pass by this name, ibid.

Folkland.

The meaning of the word, 58 a †

Forcible Entry. See Damages.

Force, what and how taken in law, 161 b ¶
 Upon what statute the writ of forcible entry is grounded, and where it lieth, 257 b †
 Where divers persons go to make a forcible entry, the violence used by one shall make them all guilty of force, ibid.
 Where the master cometh with a greater number of servants than usually attend him, his entry shall be deemed forcible, 257 b †
 What number of persons may commit a force, 257 a ¶ Where an act shall be said in law to be done vi et armis, or forcibly, 162 a †

Forest, Park, Chase, Warren. See Waste.

The description of a forest, 233 a ¶
 The signification and derivation of the word (park), 233 a †
 What beasts properly belong to the forest, what to the chase and park, and what beasts and fowls to the warren,
 233 a *
 The difference between a chase and a forest, ibid.
 What act by a keeper of a park shall be a forfeiture of his office, 233 b *

Forfeiture. See Attainder, Conditions, Copyhold, Corruption of Blood, Office, Præmunire, Relation, Statute 14 El. c. 8. Surrender.

The signification and derivation of the word, 59 a *
 How many several ways a particular tenant may forfeit his estate by alienation, and what act by him shall be said a forfeiture of his estate, and what not, 251 a ¶, b ¶, per
reg. 252 a †

Where

Where the right of a particular estate may be forfeited, and he that hath but a right shall take advantage of it, 251 b †, 252 a †

Where by the forfeiture of a lessee for life, all mean charges and estates by him made, shall be avoided by the lessor, and where not, 233 b ¶, 234 a †

Where lessee for life forfeits his estate by alienation, the forfeiture shall continue notwithstanding the determination of the estate by limitation, or entry for condition broken, 202 b *, 252 a *

Where tenant for life and he in the remainder for life having the fee expectant upon a remainder in tail join in a feoffment, this shall be a forfeiture of both their estates to him in the remainder in tail, 302 b ¶

Where a recovery suffered by tenant for life, should be a forfeiture of his estate at the common law, and at this day, and where not, 356 a ¶, 362 a † *

Where a statute giveth a forfeiture generally against him that wrongeth the duty or interest of another, who shall have this forfeiture, 159 a *

A guardianship in socage or by nature, not forfeitable by outlawry or attainder, 84 b *, 88 b ¶

Where a man hanged by martial law shall not forfeit his land, 13 a ¶ Forejudger. See Mesne, Stat. West. 2. cap. 9.

The legal acception of the word, 100 b *

Where and for what cause the tenant shall forejudge his mesne, and where, and for what not, 100 a ¶, b †

The form of the judgment in a forejudger, 100 a ¶

What persons shall be bound by a forejudger, and what not, 100 a ¶, b †

Where in a writ of mesne by two jointenants, one is summoned and seivered, the other shall not forejudge the mesne, 100 a ¶

Where in a writ of mesne against two joint mesnes, one makes default, the tenant shall not forejudge the other, 100 a ¶ Formedon. See Assets, Copyhold, Fines, Tail, Warranty.

Formedon, whence so called, 326 b *

The several kinds of formedons, and where, and by whom each formedon lieth, 326 b ¶

Where a formedon lieth of a copyhold, 60 a ¶

Where the discontinuance of tenant in tail makes a lease for life, and grants the reversion to the issue in tail, the issue is for ever barred of his formedon, 297 b *

Frankalmoign. See Confirmation.

The description of a tenure by frankalmoign, 93 b *, 94 b †

How such tenure was created at first, and how it may be created at this day, 93 b ¶, 99 a *

Where a gift in freealmoign shall be good without deed, and where not, 94 b *

Where the reservation of a rent upon such gift shall be void, 97 a †

What services such tenant is bound to do, and what not, 95 a ¶, b †

What remedy the lord hath for such services, 95 b ¶, 96 a

Where the tenure in freealmoign shall continue, notwithstanding the alteration of divine services, and prayers, 95 b *

Where such tenure cannot be of lands in ancient demesne, 97 a †

Where such tenant shall not be charged with a corody, ibid.

Upon transferring the seignory or tenancy in frankalmoign, what service shall be due to the lord or grantee, 98 a, 99 b † *

Of what services the lord is bound to acquit his tenant in frankalmoign, and of what not, 99 b ¶, 100 a *

Where such lord shall not disclaim in a writ of mesne, 102 a *, 306 b †

Frankmarriage. See Consanguinity, Degrees.

The signification of the word, 21 b *

What things incident to an estate in frankmarriage, 21 b † *, 219 b *

The differences between a donee in frankmarriage and in special tail, 21 b ¶, 22 a †

What service due by such donee to his donor, 23 a ¶, 97 b

Where a rent may be given in frankmarriage, 21 b *

The necessity of the word (frankmarriage) to the creation of the estate, 21 b ¶

How the degrees in frankmarriage shall be computed, 23 b per tota pag.

Where a gift in frankmarriage to the parties already married shall be good, 176 a *

Where a remainder limited upon such gift shall impeach the estate in frankmarriage, and where not, 21 b *

A devise of lands in frankmarriage void, ibid.

A gift in liberum maritajum by cessuy que use before 27 H. 8. no frankmarriage, ibid.

Where a rent reserved upon a gift in frankmarriage shall not take effect till the fourth degree past, ibid.

Frassetum.

The meaning of it, 4 b *

Freebank.

The meaning of the word, 110 b ¶

Freehold. See Abeiance, Conditions, Estate, Jointenants.

The signification of the word, and whence so called, 43 b *

Where divers freeholds may be derived out of one, and where not, 42 a †

Where an uncertain interest in lands shall be deemed in law a freehold, and where not, 42 a *

Where a man may have a freehold in his own right, and a chattel in another's right simul & semel: but not conversis, 54 b ¶, 338 b ¶

Where the alteration of the freehold shall be an alteration of the reversion, 191 b, 192 a and b

Where the right of freehold shall drown in a chattel, 266 a †

The description of a freehold in law, 266 b †

Upon what conveyances the purchaser shall be said to have a freehold in law in him before entry, and upon what not, 266 b †

Where a stranger by the acknowledgment of the tenant in a præcipe to be his villein shall be actually seised of the freehold and inheritance without entry, 266 b *

What actions are maintainable by and against him that hath only a freehold in law, and what not, 358 a ¶, b †

Where a freehold in lands may be defeated, by a condition without entry or claim, and where not, 379 a †

To what purposes tenants by statute-merchant, elegit, &c. are said to have a freehold, and what not, 43 b *

Frith.

The meaning of it, 5 b ¶

Frustrum Terræ.

What it is, 5 b †

Gavelkind. See Curtesy.

Gavelkind, whence so called, and where such custom used, 140 a ¶, 175 b * ¶

Where one brother dying without issue, all the brothers shall equally inherit by this custom, as well as sons, 140 a ¶

Where by such custom the wife shall have dower of the moiety of her husband's lands, 111 a †

Where by the same custom the husband shall be tenant by the curtesy without issue, ibid.

A prescription in this custom is not good, 175 b *

Glebe. See Pastor.

How it may be charged, 342 a †, 348 b *

Glyn.

What glyn is, 5 b ¶

Grand Serjeanty. See Serjeanty.

Grange.

The meaning of the word, 5 a ¶

What passies by this name, ibid.

Grants.

T H E A T A B L E.

Grants. See Abeyance, Annuity, Assignment, Confirmation, Deed, Estates, Habendum, Intention of the Parties, Name, Parson, Possibility, Rents.

The description of a grant, 172 a +
 What things properly lie in grant, and what in livery, 9 b +, 48 a +, 85 a, 332 a *, 335 b *
 What things are grantable over, and what not, 89 a +, 214 a ¶, 232 b +, 266 a +
 Where a thing in suspense may be granted over, and where not, 314 a *
 Where grants shall receive construction according to the substance of the deed, and not according to grammatical sense, 146 b *
 Where the construction of grants ought to ensue the intention of the parties, 313 a ¶, b +
 Where the words of a grant shall be transposed in construction contrary to their order, 217 b +
 Where a grant being impossible to take effect according to the letter, the law shall make such construction, as by possibility may take effect, 183 b +
 Where a grant shall amount to a release, confirmation, surrender, &c. and where not, 301 b *, 302 a +, 307 a ¶, 313 a ¶, b +
 Where by the grant of a manor without (cum pertinentiis), a thing regardant and appendant will pass, 307 a +
 What shall pass by the grant of the services of tenant in tail, and what not, 150 b +, 152 a *
 Where a grant of a corody to two men and their heirs shall amount in law to several grants, 189 a *
 Where two tenants in common join in the grant of a rent-charge, it shall enure as several grants, 197 a +, 267 b *
 Where by the grant of a reversion, rents and services shall pass, 151 b ¶, 152 a +, 317 a *, 324 a ¶, b ¶
 By the grant of (hereditaments) what shall pass, 6 a +, 16 a *, ¶, 383 a ¶, b +
 Where by the grant of land a reversion shall pass, 324 b ¶
 Where tenant in tail grants totum statum, what shall pass, 331 a * ¶
 A man grants proximam advocat. to one, and before the church void, grants proximam advocat. to another, the second grant is void, 378 b ¶
 A man grants 3 praesentationem, and dies, his wife shall have the three, and the grantee the 4th, 379 a +
 A grant shall not enure contrary to the express words of it, 313 a ¶
 When it shall enure by way of extinguishment, 307 b +
 Grant of the king, how tested, 7 passim.

Grava.

What grava is, 4 b ¶

Guardian. See Admeasurement, Dower, Marriage, Socage, Wardship, Waste.

The several sorts of guardian, 85 a +
 Who shall be guardian of inheritances which lie not in tenure during the minority of the heir, 87 b * ¶
 To what purposes the guardian shall be said possessed of his ward before entry or seisure, and to what not, 38 a ¶, b +
 Guardian in chivalry, why he hath the custody of the infant heir's lands to his own use, 396 b ¶
 How many kinds of guardians, 87 b * ¶
 When the father, and not the lord, shall be guardian, 84 a *, 88 passim.
 Guardian, how to be, and by whom deviseable, 398 b +, 399 a +
 — by will, power and duty, 398 b *
 — by tenure, what he might, and what he might not do, 75 b per totam, 79 passim.
 — in chivalry, what profit he had, 81 and 82 passim.
 Who shall be guardian in socage, and why, 87 and 88 passim.
 Guardian in socage, how long he shall be so, 87 and 89 passim.
 — in socage, when, and in what manner he shall account, 89 passim.
 Guardianship of tenant by chivalry and tenant by socage, to whom they go on the guardian's death, 90 passim.

Gurges.

The meaning of it, 5 b +
 What passes by this name, ibid.

Habendum. See Deeds.

The office and force of the habendum in a deed, 183 a ¶

Where it shall be said repugnant in the grant of an estate tail, and where not, 21 a +
 Where one named after the habendum shall take by the gift, and where not, 7 a +, 21 a ¶, 26 b ¶, 378 b +
 Where the several limitations in the habendum shall destroy the joint implication of the premises, 183 b +, 190 b +
 Where an habendum may enlarge the premises, but cannot abridge them, 299 a +
 It may sever a joint estate, 184 a *

Haga.

The meaning of it, 5 b *, 56 b +

Hagb and Houghb.

What they mean, 5 b ¶

Heir. See Annuity, Appeal, Attainder, Chattels, Corruption of Blood, Discent, Entry, Reservation, Voucher, Warranty, Waste.

The etymology and legal acceptance of the word (heir) 7 b ¶, 237 b +
 What issue and person may be an heir, and what not, 7 b ¶, 8 a + ¶
Haeres apparent, quis, 8 a ¶
Haeres affirmatus, quis, 8 b +
 Where and what chattels the heir shall have after the death of his ancestor, and what not, 8 a ¶, 18 b *, 185 b ¶
 Where the word (heirs) shall be necessary to the creation of an estate of inheritance, and where not, 8 b ¶, 9 b, 10 a +, 20 a ¶, 21 b +, 22 a *, 47 a *, 193 b +, 322 b *, 385 b *
 Where the word heirs shall be good of it self, and where not without conjunction of the word (ses) 8 b *
 The extent and latitude of the word (heirs) 9 a * Heirs a good name of purchase, 26 b ¶
 Who shall be said the next heir to take by purchase, and who to take by descent, 10 b *
 Where the heir to take by purchase ought to be a complete right heir in judgment of law, 24 b ¶, 26 b ¶, 164 a +
 Where the ancestor may make his right heir a purchaser, and where not, 22 b ¶
 Where a remainder is limited to the right heirs of a particular tenant, the fee simple shall be said to vest in him presently, and where not, 22 b *, 319 b + *, 376 b ¶
 Where the heir conveying by descent ought to make himself heir to him which was last seised, 11 b *, 15 a +, 239 b +
 Where by the birth of an heir more near, the descent to another shall be defeated, 11 b ¶
 Where the heir of the part of the father shall inherit before the heir of the part of the mother, Es & converso, 12 a and b, 13 a + *
 The difference between an heir in the civil law, and an heir at the common law, 237 b +
 Where the sons of an alien born within the ligeance of the king shall not be heirs either to other. The same of the sons of a person attainted; secus if born before the attainder, 8 a *
 Where and what attainder shall disable the party attainted to inherit, or to have heir, and where, and what not, 8 a *
 Where the heir shall not be bound by the obligation or warranty of his ancestor without naming, 209 a ¶, 383 b *, 384 b *, 386 a +
 Where a man binds his heirs to warranty, or to pay a sum of money without naming himself, such lien shall be void, 386 a +
 Where an action of debt shall lie against the special heir, without naming the heir at the common law; secus of a voucher by reason of a warranty, 376 b *, 386 b *
 A gift to a man, his heirs and successors, how it shall enure, 9 a +
 When the heir shall have an action for defacing his ancestor's monument, 18 b *

Heirloom.

What heirloom is, 18 b *
 Cannot be devised, 183 b ¶

Herbage. See Jointenant.

What shall pass by the grant of the herbage of land, 4 b +, 1
 Where the owner's acceptance of a lease of the herbage of his land by indenture shall be no estoppel as to the land, 47 b *
 Where a reservation of rent out of the herbage of land shall be good, 142 a *

Herefy.

T H E T A B L E.

Herefy.

Attainder of it doth not forfeit land or corrupt the blood, 391 a ¶

Heriot. See Extinguishment.

How called in the Saxon tongue, 185 b ¶
From what antiquity due to lords, ibid.
Where a devise by the tenant of all his goods shall not defeat the lord of his heriot, 185 b ¶
Where by purchase of part of the tenancy by the lord, a heriot shall be extinct, and where not, 149 b †
Where a heriot shall be paid before a mortuary, 185 b ¶

Hida Terræ.

What bida terræ is, 69 a *

Hirst and Hurst.

The meaning of them, 5 b ¶

Holm and Hulmus.

What they mean, 5 a *

Holt.

The signification of it, 4 b ¶

Homage. See Fealty.

The etymology of the word, 64 b *
The division of homage, 65 b †
The manner of doing homage, 64 a ¶
In what respect it is said to be the most honourable and humble service, 65 a †
The league between such lord and tenant, 65 a *, 100 b ¶
Where in doing homage, homage due to the king ought to be excepted, and the penalty for omitting it, 64 b †, 65 a ¶, b †
What person may do and take homage, and what not, 65 b *, 66 b ¶, 67 a and b, 68 a †, 341 b †
The form of homage by an abbot, or other ecclesiastical person, 65 b ¶
The form of homage by husband and wife jointly, 66 a * ¶
Where and what corporation may do and take homage, and where, and what not, 65 b ¶, 66 b ¶, 67 a †, 341 b †
Where the husband shall do and take homage alone, and where jointly with his wife, 30 a *, 67 a † *
Where there are divers tenants of the same land, where all, and where but one shall do homage, 67 a ¶, b †
Where and why the tenant shall not be sworn in doing homage, 68 a †
Where homage done to one joint lord shall excuse against the other, 67 b *
The benefit which accrues to lords by receiving homage, 68 a ¶, 92 b
Where the tenant notwithstanding homage once done to the lord, shall be compelled to do homage again to his heir, and where not, 103 b * ¶
Where the tenant, upon translation of the feignory to another shall be compelled to do homage again, and where not, 104 a and b
Where after refusal the lord shall not distrain his tenant for homage until request, 105 a
By what means fealty shall be separated from homage, and by what not, 150 b ¶, 151 a ¶
The writ of homagio capiendo, and where it lieth, 101

Homage Auncestrel. See Attornment, Per quæ Servitia, Recovery, Warranty.

The description of tenure by homage auncestrel, 100 b *
Blood on the lord's side not always requisite to such tenure, 100 b ¶, 102 b *
Where such tenure draweth to it warranty and acquittal, 101 a † *, 384 a ¶
What shall be a good counterplea to a warranty by cause of homage auncestrel, 101 a *
What lands the tenant shall recover in value upon such warranty, 102 a *
The reciprocity of reverence and protection between such lord and tenant, 100 b ¶
Where such tenant shall be compelled to attorn to the grantee of his lord, and where not, 101 a *
Where the lord by homage auncestrel may disclaim in the feignory, and where not, 101 b, 102 a *

Where a man may hold by homage auncestrel of a body politically, but not comitally, 102 b ¶
Where such tenure shall remain notwithstanding the alteration of the name and nature of the corporation, and where not, 102 b ¶

Where an abbot, bishop, &c. shall not disclaim in a feignory by homage auncestrel, 102 b *, 103 a †

After alteration by the tenant by homage auncestrel, what service shall be due to the lord, 102 a *

What act by the tenant shall be an interruption of the privacy between him and his lord, and what not, 103 a ¶, 102 b †

Where such tenure may belong to knight service, 105 a ¶

Hope.

What it is, 5 b ¶

Horngeld.

The meaning of it, 187 a †

Hors de son Fée.

Where such plea shall be good by the tenant upon a distress and avowry by a stranger who claims the feignory, and where not, 1 b ¶

Hospital.

The divers kinds of hospitals, 342 a *
What hospitals were given to the crown by the statute of 27. H. 8. 31. H. 8. 37. H. 8. and 1. E. 6. and what not, 342 a * Hotchpot.

What it is, 176, 177, passim.

How and Hoo.

The signification of the words, 4 b †

Jampna.

The meaning of jampna, 5 a †

Ideot. See Condition, Dum non Compos, Entry, Heir, Mortgage.

Who properly said to be an ideot, 247 a †
Where an ideot shall be bound by a discent, 247 a †
By what means a feoffment, &c. by an ideot, may be avoided during his life, and by what not, 247 ¶, b †
Where a stranger may tender money in performance of a condition to save the estate of an ideot without his consent, 206 b ¶
Where an ideot ought to sue in proper person, and not by guardian or attorney, 135 b ¶

Imprisonment. See Entry.

Imprisonment a good cause to reverse an outlawry, 297 b †, 259
Where it shall save a default, 259 b *
Where and how a man in prison may be proceeded against by suits and process of law, 260 a *
How a man in prison ought to be ordered and used, 260 a *
A precedent where after judgment in an appeal against a woman, her imprisonment was respited by reason of pregnancy, 289 a ¶
A precedent where after judgment in a trespass quare mi, &c. against an infant, he was excused of imprisonment by reason of his age, ibid.

Incident. See Appendant.

Incumbent. See Parson, Quare Impedit.

The etymology of the word, 119 b ¶

Indenture.

What it is, and that it may be in the first or third person, and forms of both; and that all the parts make but one deed, 229 and 230 per tot. pag.
When it is an estoppel, when not, 45 a ¶, 47 b ¶ Indictment.

T H E T A B L E.

Indictment. See Appeal, Felony, Pleading.

The signification and derivation of the word, 126 b *
 What certainty requisite in an indictment, 303 a *
 Where the indictment shall say (felonice), albeit the offence be no felony, 127 a *
 The difference between an appeal and an indictment, 126 b *

Infant. See Accompt, Bastardy, Coverture, Dower, Entry, Exchange, Execution, Stat. of Merton, c. 5. Warranty.

Where an infant may be a purchaser, 2 b ¶
 Where assignment of dower by the heir being an infant, shall be good, and where not, 35 a *
 Where by custom at sixteen, he may make a lease, 45 b †
 Where and for what things the deed or obligation of an infant shall bind him, and where and for what not, 171 b ¶, 172 a *
 Where and within what time a fine levied by an infant may be avoided, and where it may be reversed by his heir after his death, and where not, 131 a *, 380 b *
 Where the breach of a condition in law shall be a forfeiture of the office or estate of an infant, and where not, 233 b ¶
 Where laches in an infant shall be prejudicial to him, and where not, 246 a †, b † *, 380 b ¶
 Where a feme covert shall be prejudiced by laches, where an infant shall not, 146 b *
 Where and at what age the act or wrong of an infant in criminal matters shall be imputed to him, and where and at what not, 247 b †
 Where a lease for years made by an infant shall be good, 308 a *
 Where the release of a debt by an infant shall be good, and where not, 264 b ¶
 What things are avoidable by an infant after his full age, and what only during his nonage, 380 a *, b *
 Where an action of waste or cessavit lieth against an infant, 380 b ¶, 381 a †
 Where an infant shall be compelled to attorn in a quid juris clamat, or per quæ servitia, 315 a ¶
 An infant can contract only for necessities, 35 b *
 Where an usurpation upon an infant shall put him out of possession of the advowson, 344 b †
 By what acts an infant in ventre sa mere shall be bound, and by what not, 100 b †, 244 a *, 245 b ¶
 An infant not capable of the stewardship of a court, 3 b *
 Not capable to perform grand serjeanty at the coronation, 107 b ¶
 Not capable to be of an enquest, 157 a ¶, 172 b †
 Where an infant shall not be amerced for a nonsuit or default, 127 a †
 Where upon a judgment against him quod capiatur, he shall not be imprisoned, 289 a ¶
 Where an infant shall not be charged in an accompt, 171 b ¶
 Where an infant may do homage, but not fealty, 65 b *
 Where an infant ought to sue by prochein amy, and defend by guardian, 135 b ¶
 Where a stranger, and where the special heir shall take advantage of the infancy of his ancestor, 336 b ¶, 337 b †
 How they may suffer common recoveries, 402 a ¶

Infranchisement. See Manumission.

The derivation and several acceptions of the word, 37 b †

Inheritance. See Charge, Fee simple, Heirs.

The extent and signification of the word, and what shall pass by the grant of inheritances, 6 a †, 16 a * ¶, 383 a ¶, b †
 The several sorts of inheritances, 1 b ¶, 9 a ¶, 49 a †, 164 b *
 Where a man may have an inheritance moveable in lands, and how such inheritance may be aliened and charged, 4 a *, 48 b †
 Where an inheritance shall ascend, and where not, 11 a *
 New inheritances rejected in law, 13 a †, 27 a ¶, 337 b ¶, 379 b †
 The ancient course of inheritances not alterable but by parliament, 37 a ¶
 Where a man shall inherit, where he by whom he conveyeth cannot by possibility, & à converso, 25 a * ¶
 The blood only of the first purchaser inheritable to lands, 12 a * Inrollments. See Deeds.

Where inrollments ought always to be in parchment, 35 b ¶

Where an inrollment shall not be pleadable without shewing the original deed, 225 b *

Instant. See Remainder.

The definition of an instant, 185 b †
 Where the law alloweth priority of time in an instant, 185 b †
 Where a fee shall be divested, and vest in one person in an instant, 297 b ¶

Institution. See Parson, Plenarty.

The meaning of the word institution, 344 a ¶

Intention of the Parties. See Grants.

Where the construction of acts shall ensue the intention of the parties, and where not, 214 b †
 Where the intention of the parties shall operate in the raising and direction of uses, 49 a †
 Where the entry of him that right hath into land, shall be guided by his intent, 49 b ¶
 Where a man hath two ways to pass lands, and he intendeth to pass them by one of the ways, yet it shall pass by the other, and where not, 49 a †

Interesse Termini.

What it is, 47 b †
 How it may or may not pass, 47 b †, 338 b *
 To whom it shall go, 47 b *
 Is not lost by the lessor's death, 51 b ¶
 Cannot be confirmed, 296 a *
 Cannot be enlarged by release, 270 a *

Interest.

The extent and signification of the word, 345 b ¶
 What passeth by the grant of totum interesse, ibid.

Intrusion.

What properly said to be an intrusion, and how it differeth from abatement, disseisin, &c. 277 a ¶, b †

Jointenants. See Account, Attornment, Charge, Dum fuit infra Aetatem, Election, Entry Con-geable, Judgment, Presentation, Release, Remitter, Reservation, Stat. West. 2. c. 23. and 32 H. 8. c. 32. Surrender, Waste, Warranty.

Jointenants, whence so called, and how they differ from parceners, 180 b †
 What things may stand in jointure one with the other, and what not, 188 a per tot. pag. 192 b ¶
 Where the parties shall be jointenants, notwithstanding the several and indifferent limitations to each of them, 180 b †
 Where there may be a jointenancy albeit no survivorship, 181 a ¶, b †
 Where chattels or debts in jointenancy shall survive, and where not, 181 b ¶, 182 a †
 Where jointenants may be albeit the estates vest in them at several times, and where not, 188 a ¶
 Where two may have joint estates for their lives, and several inheritances, or the inheritance to one of them, 182 a ¶, b, 183 a *, 184 a † *, 189 b *
 To what purposes such inheritance shall be said to be executed in the life of the parties, and to what not, 182 b *, 183 a *, 184 a * ¶, b †
 Where and by what acts an estate in jointure may be severed, and where and by what not, 182 a per tot. pag. 183 a †, 190 a ¶
 Where two may be jointenants of the freehold and fee simple, and tenants in common of an estate-tail in the same land, 183 b ¶
 Where the jointenant surviving shall be liable to the charges of his companion, and where not, 184 b per tot. pag. 185 a †
 Where the charges of one jointenant, avoidable by his companion, shall be good against himself surviving, 184 b *
 Where upon a recovery against one jointenant, execution shall be sued against his companion, 185 a †
 Where an estoppel to one jointenant shall not bind his companion surviving, ibid.

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where a devise by one jointenant shall be void against his companion, 185 a ¶, b †
 Where by the death of the wife jointenant with a stranger for years, the term shall survive to the other jointenant, and not to the husband, 185 b *
 Where a disparagement of the heir by one jointenant shall be a forfeiture of the ward as to both, 80 b ¶
 Where one jointenant of a ward shall be liable to the waste done by his companion, 51 a †
 Where an assignment of dower by one jointenant shall be good against his companion, 35 a †
 Where upon grant of a rent to two, the election of one to have it as an annuity or rent shall bind his companion, 146 a †
 Where a rescous by one jointenant shall make his companion a disseisor, 161 b †
 Where each jointenant shall be said to be seised per my & per tout, and to what purposes either hath right but to a moiety, 186 a †, 350 a ¶
 Where a lease for years by one jointenant for life or in fee, to begin after his death shall be good against the survivor, and where not, 184 b ¶, 185 b †, 186 a ¶, b †
 Where a grant of the herbage or vesture of the land by one jointenant shall bind the survivor, 186 b †
 Where a presentation to a church by one jointenant shall not put his companion out of possession, 186 b *
 Where a partition between jointenants shall be good without deed, and where not, 169 a *, 187 a †
 Where by partition between jointenants, a warranty shall be destroyed, and where not, 187 a *
 Where husband and wife shall be jointenants, and where by enteries, and where by moieties, 187 a ¶, b per tot. pag.
 Where baron and feme and a stranger are jointenants, the sole alienation of the baron shall bar the stranger surviving as to a moiety, and where not, 187 b ¶, 188 a †, 327 b ¶
 Where one jointenant or parcener enters or recovers the whole estate being put to a right, the other shall enter and occupy with him, and where not, 188 a ¶, 364 b †
 Where a lease of part of the term by one jointenant for years, shall be a severance of the jointure as to the whole, 192 a *, 199 a †
 Where a severance of the jointure of the freehold shall be a severance of the reversion, 191 b, 192 a, b
 Where a reservation of the reversion to one jointenant by deed indented upon a lease by both shall not clog the other, 192 a ¶
 Where a lease is made by two jointenants, the remainder in fee to one of them, this shall be a good remainder for a moiety, 192 b †
 Where one jointenant makes a lease for his own life, and dieth, no survivor, quere, 193 a *
 Where the feoffment of one jointenant to his companion and a stranger, shall be good only to the stranger, 335 a *
 Where two infants jointenants make a feoffment, by the death of one his right shall survive; scilicet of a feoffment by one solely, 337 a ¶, b †
 Where the father, jointenant with the son and a stranger, makes a feoffment of the whole with warranty, the stranger surviving shall avoid the whole, 367 a †

Jointure. See Dower, Stat. 11 H. 7. cap. 20.

What shall be a good jointure within the statute of 27 H. 8. and what not, 36 b †
 Where the wife may waive her jointure, and where not, 36 b ¶
 May be made determinable by the party's own act, 36 *

Ireland.

How, and when the laws of England were first established in Ireland, and how afterwards confirmed, and by whom, 141 a ¶, b † *

Issue. See Pleadings, Verdict.

An issue, and the several kinds of issues, 126 a †
 Where an issue generally taken shall refer to the count, and not to the writ, 126 a *
 Issue upon a negative pregnant not good, 126 a *
 Where two affirmatives shall make an issue, and where not, 126 a *
 Where an issue shall be good upon a matter affirmative and negative, albeit it be not in express words, ibid.
 The form of the entries of issues of the part of the plaintiff, and on the part of the defendant, ibid.
 What pleas are issues themselves, whereto the plaintiff or defendant cannot reply, 126 a *

Where modo & forma shall be of the substance of the issue, and where but matter of form, 281 b per tot. pag.
 Where the substance of the issue being found, the verd & shall be sufficient notwithstanding omission of circumstances, 227 a ¶, 282 a †
 Where the plea of the party amounts to a general issue, the general issue shall be entered, 303 b *
 Issue shall be joined on a traverse when well taken, 126 a * Judgment. See Error, Partition.

The signification and derivation of the word, 39 a ¶, 168 a †
 The several sorts of judgments, ibid.
 Where in a real action by one jointenant or parcener against another, judgment shall not be given in severalty, 167 b *, 187 a *
 In what actions judgment final shall be given, 294 b †
 The form of the judgment, when it is for the tenant or defendant in plea in bar or to the writ, 363 a †
 How and by what means every case judicially depending shall receive end, 71 b ¶, 72 a †

Jugum Terra.

What it is, 5 a ¶

Juncaria, Foncaria.

What it is, 5 a ¶
 What passes by this name, ibid.

Juris utrum. See Parson.

Juror, Jury. See Challenge, Statute, Verdict, IV. 2. c. 38. Artic. sup. Chart. c. 9. 2. H. 5. c. 3.

The properties of a juror, 155 a ¶, b †
 What person may be a juror, and what not, 156 b ¶, 157 a ¶, 172 b †
 How they shall be treated if they do not agree, 227 b *, 401 a *
 Where a cessus que use shall be a sufficient juror within the stat. of 2 H. 5. c. 3. 272 b †
 Where tenant pur. aut. vie. or the husband seised in his wife's right, is returned on a jury after the death of the wife or cessus que vie. they may be challenged, ibid.
 Where a witness shall be had in equal respect with a juror, and where not, 6 a †
 The jury must give a verdict though no evidence be given, 296 b *

Justices. See Court, Eyre.

By what names anciently called, 168 b *
 Justices of assize, whence so called, 263 a *
 Their office and jurisdiction, ibid.
 In what cases anciently justices of nisi prius might give judgment, and in what not, 263 a *
 The names of divers bishops and clergymen that were anciently justices of the king's courts, 304 b †

King. See Prerogative.

The etymology of the word (king), and how called in other languages, 65 b †
 The style of every king of England since the Conquest, 7 a and b
 The several appellations of divers kings of England, 7 a *
 The several councils of the king, 110 a *
 The king may take a fee simple without the word (heirs), 15 b ¶ — may reserve rent out of incorporeal inheritances, 47 a † — may licence to alien in mortmain, 399 a †
 — cannot be nonfuit, 139 b †

Knight.

The derivation of the word, and how called in other languages, 74 b *
 The dignity of a knight, 107 b *
 What shall be said a knights fee, or cenfus militaris, 69 a †, b †

Knights Service. See Guardian, Marriage, Relief, Wardship.

The description of a knights service, 74 b †

T H E T A B L E.

By what names such service is distinguished in law, 74 b ¶, 75 a + *, b +, 108 a +
To what end this service was created, 75 b + ¶
The respect which the law hath to the supportation of this service, 39 a ¶, b ¶
The privileges of tenants by knights service, 75 a +
At what age the tenant shall be intendable to perform this service, 74 b +, 75 b +, 78 b +
What things incident to this tenure, and from what antiquity, 76 a +, b +, 305 b ¶
For what cause the law gave the ward and marriage of the heir of such tenant to his lord, 75 b + *, 76 a + Where the tenure ceasing the wardship and all other incidents shall also cease, 76 a +, b + ¶, 248 a ¶ Where the fruits of knights service being suspended, the tenancy being in a corporation, shall be revived again in the hands of a natural person, 70 b +, 99 a +
Where a tenure may be knights service and no escuage,
82 b ¶
Where tenure by castleguard shall be knights service, and where not, 82 b ¶, 83 a ¶, 87 a ¶
Where the tenure shall remain albeit the castle be ruined, 83 a +

Knol.

What it is, 5 b ¶

Laches. See Baron and Feme, Coverture,
Dum non fuit Compos, Entry Congeable, Ideot, Infant, Fines, Prerogative.

The signification of the word, 246 b +, 380 b ¶
Where laches shall be imputed to a man beyond sea, and where not, 260 b +

Lagaman.

What it is, 58 a ¶

Lannemanni.

The meaning of it, 5 a +

Lapse. See Quare impedit.

Law.

The several laws used within this kingdom, 11 b + *
The division of the law of England, 110 b +, 115 b +,
344 a +
The several names whereby the common law of England is called, 142 a ¶
How the common law and the law of the crown differ,
15 b + ¶
The law spiritual, what, 344 a ¶
Intendment of law, what, 78 b +
No proof to be admitted against the presumption of law,
373 a ¶, b +
What things the law most favoureth, 124 b ¶
How the law respects the order of nature, 92 a +, 197 b +
The ancient rules and course of the law not to be innovated,
282 b +
The commendation of the law of England, 97 b ¶
The delight and facility of the study of the law, 71 a ¶ Admonitions and directions concerning the study and practice of the law, 70 a ¶, b +, 249 b ¶

Lea and Ley.

What they are, 4 b ¶

Leases, Lessor, Lessee. See Confirmation, Release, Rent, Reservation, Stat. 32 H. 8.
c. 28.

The derivation of the word (lease) 43 b ¶
The several kinds of leases, 45 a ¶, b +
What shall be sufficient words of lease, 45 b +, 301 b ¶
What persons may make leases at this day, which could not by the common law, & de converso, 44 b +
What things requisite to the perfection of a lease within the Stat. 32 H. 8. 44 a ¶, b + *
What leases shall be good within the statutes of 1 and 13
Eliz. and what not, 44 b ¶
Where a concurrent lease shall be good within those statutes, and where not, 45 a +

What shall be said a sufficient certainty whereupon a lease for years may depend, and what not, 42 b ¶ Where a lease for years may cease and revive again, as to several persons, and where not, 46 a + *
To what purposes the party shall be said a lessee for years before entry, and to what not, 46 b +, 51 b ¶, 270 a +,
b +

Where a lease is made to have from the date, or day of the date, or from the making, or from henceforth, &c.
where it shall be said to have beginning, 46 b ¶
Where the deed hath no date, or beareth an impossible date, when the lease shall be said to have commencement, ibid.
Where the deed referreth to a void lease, or misrecite a lease in esse, to have from the ending of that lease, when it shall begin, ibid.

The signification of the word (term), and the difference inter terminum annorum, & tempus annorum, 45 b +

Where a lease to the party generally, shall be construed to be for the life of the lessor, and where for the life of the lessee, 42 a ¶, 183 a ¶, b +

Where divers persons join in a lease, whose lease it shall be construed, 45 a + *
Where a lease for years by tenant in tail shall be void by his death without issue, 45 b +

Where a lease by parson, vicar, &c. before the statute, was void by his death, and where but voidable, 45 b +

A lease to aliens, when void, 396 a +
Leases by parol, how they shall operate, 397 b +

What lease is not good by parol, 397 b +
Lessor may enter to view waste, 398 a +

When he may maintain an action, when he may not, 398 a + Lessee at will, when he may determine his will, 398 a +

Lease for a year, no forfeiture of a copyhold, 398 a ¶
— by a simoniack, when good, 400 a +

Lessee, when subject to two distresses, 400 b ¶

Lectures.

The qualities of lectures anciently, and how they differ from our readings at this day, 280 a ¶, b + *

Leper.

May be heir, 8 a +

May sue, tho' removed by writ, 135 b ¶

Leswes & Lesfues.

The meaning of the words, 4 b ¶

Librata Terra.

What it is, 5 b ¶

What passes by this name, ibid.

Licence. See Authority.

Ligeance. See Alien, Denizen.

The definition of ligeance, 129 a ¶

The division and several sorts of ligeance, 129 a ¶

Limitation. See Time, Statute.

What shall be said good words of limitation in grants, &c.
and the several sorts of them, 234 b ¶, 255 a +

Livery out of the Hands of the King. See Primer Seisin.

Where the heir of the tenant of the king shall sue livery, and where an ouster le main, 77 a +

Where the king shall have the mean profits until livery, or ouster le main sued by the heir, and where not, ibid.

The several kinds of livery, and which shall be the best and most safe for the heir, 77 a ¶

Where by the livery of a manor an advowson appendant shall pass from the king, without special mention, 77 a ¶

Livery and Seisin. See Authority, Feoffment, Grant.

The description of livery of seisin, 48 a +

The several kinds of livery, ibid.

The antiquity of livery, 49 b +

To the passing what estates livery requisite, and of what not, 48 a +, 216 a

What

T H E T A B L E.

What act or words by the lessor or feoffor shall be said a good livery in deed, and what not, 48 a * ¶, 49 b *, 56 b ¶, 57 a †

Where a livery expressing one estate referreth to a charter expressing another, or which is void, how it shall be construed, 48 a ¶, b †, 222 b ¶

Where livery referreth to two several charters of different limitations, how it shall be construed, 21 a *

Where livery of the one parcel shall be a livery of the other, and where to one feoffee good to the other, and where not, 48 a ¶, 50 a †, 253 a †, 290 a ¶

How livery shall be made to pass a moveable inheritance, 48 b †

Livery in law, or within the view, what, 48 b *

Where such livery shall be good, and where not, ibid. 253 a ¶

Such livery by an attorney, void, 52 b *

Such livery not good but to him which takes the freehold, 49 b *

Where a claim shall amount to an entry to perfect a livery within view, and where not, 48 b *

Where livery shall be made of an upper chamber, ibid.

What things properly lie in grant, and what in livery, 49 a †

Where a freehold in lands shall pass at the common law without livery, and where not, 49 a *, 50 a ¶, b †

Where livery made, another being in possession, shall be good, and where not, 48 b ¶, 369 b *

In what respects a conveyance by livery said to exceed all others, 49 a *

Where a charter of feoffment by a disseisee, and a letter of attorney to enter and make livery shall be a good feoffment after livery made; scilicet of a lease for years by deed, and an entry after, 48 b ¶

Where livery shall be made to a lessee for years, 49 a ¶

Where livery to one feoffee in the name of the other shall be good to both, and where not, 49 b †, 359 a ¶

Where livery to one jointenant, lessee for years, shall be sufficient to pass the freehold to him in the remainder, 49 b †

What person may be an attorney to deliver seisin, 52 a † *

Where and when the authority of an attorney shall be said to be pursued, and where, and when not, 52 a * ¶, 253 a ¶

Where the making of livery shall prejudice the title or interest of the attorney as to the land, and where not, 52 a ¶

Where a letter of attorney may be contained in a deed of feoffment, and where not, and why, 52 b *

Where livery made after the death of the feoffor shall be good, and where not, and why, 52 a †, b * ¶

Livery not good to expect in futuro, 217 a ¶

Where the charter is absolute, and livery upon condition, upon which the estate shall operate, 222 b *

Where after an agreement of a feoffment is made upon condition, livery is made absolute, how it shall be construed, 222 b ¶

Where livery relateth to a deed made and dated in a foreign kingdom, what shall operate thereby, 228 a † Maihem.

The signification and derivation of the word, 126 a ¶, b †, 288 a ¶

The nature and degree of the offence, 127 a ¶

Where the writ shall lay (felonice), albeit the offence be no felony, 127 a *

The punishment anciently in an appeal of maihem, and at this day, 127 a *

A release of actions personal a good plea in maihem, 288 a ¶

Where a man was indicted for maiming himself, 127 b †

When felony, 400 b *

Machicollare and Machecouare.

The meaning of the words, 5 a *

Maintenance. See Stat. 1. R. 2. c. 9. 32. H. 8. c. 9.

The signification and derivation of the word, 368 b ¶

The several kinds of maintenance, and how punishable, 368 b ¶, 369 a †

Where an action of maintenance lieth for labouring the jury, albeit they give no verdict, or pass against the plaintiff, 369 a †

Manor. See Grants, Prerogative, Steward, Trial.

The description of a manor, and whence so called, 58 a ¶

How manors began at first, 58 b †

Of what things a manor may consist, 58 a ¶

The office and duty of the lord of a manor, 59 b *

Where a court-baron holden out of the limits of the manor shall be good, and where void, 58 a *

Where and what things shall pass by the grant of a manor without (cum pertinentiis), and where and what not, 121 b †

Where a rent-sock may be parcel of a manor; scilicet of a rent-charge, 150 b *, 153 a *

Where a reversion upon an estate-tail shall be parcel of a manor, and pass by the grant of the manor, 324 b ¶

Where upon a lease of a manor, except parcel, the part excepted shall continue parcel of the manor, and where not, 324 b ¶, 325 a †

Where upon trial of a fact supposed within a manor the verdict shall come out of the manor, and where out of the town, 125 b †

Manumission. See Villein.

The signification and derivation of the word, 137 a ¶

The several kinds of manumission, 137 b †

By the manumission of a villein cum tota sequela, what persons are enfranchised, 3 a ¶

Where and what actions brought by the lord against his villein, shall be an enfranchisement to the villein, and where and what not, 127 b ¶, 138 a ¶, b, 136 b *

Where the answer of the lord to the action of the villein shall be an enfranchisement to the villein, and where not, 125 a, 138 b *

The solemnity of manumissions anciently, 137 b *

What estate or gift from the lord to his villein shall be an enfranchisement to him, and what not, 137 b ¶, 138 a

Where a void release, or an attornment by the lord to his villein, shall be no enfranchisement, 138 a *

Where the appeal of the lord against his villein for felony being found against him shall be an enfranchisement to the villein, and wherein not, 138 b, 139 b *

Where a wife marrying a freeman shall be enfranchised, and for what times, 132 a *, 136 b †, 137 b *

Marches.

What it is, 106 b ¶

Marchet.

The meaning of the word, 117 b †, 140 a *

Maremmium.

The signification and derivation of it, 58 a ¶

Mariscus and Mora.

What mariscus and mora are, 5 a †

Marriage. See Baron and Feme, Coverture, Disparagement, Divorce, Stat. 32. H. 8. c. 38. Wardship.

Maritagium, quid, et quetuplex, 21 b * 76 a *

Of what respect in the law, 9 b ¶

Where the marriage of ecclesiastical persons formerly was void, and where but voidable, 136 a *

Where the father shall have the custody, and marriage of his son or daughter, and where not, 84 a * ¶, b *, 88 b ¶

Wherefore the law gave the marriages of heirs females to the lord by knights service, 78 b *

Where the lord shall have two years to make a tender of marriage to the heir female of his tenant after her age of fourteen, and where not, 75 a and b, 78 b ¶

Where the lord shall have the double value or forfeiture of the marriage, and where not, 79 a †, b ¶, 82 b † *

Where the executors or administrators of the lord shall have such two years to make a tender, 79 a *

Where the tender of marriage to an heir female before her age of fourteen, shall be good, and where not, 79 a *

Where the lord may tender marriage to the heir already married, and where not, 79 b ¶

Where the lord shall have the custody of the heir married in the life of his ancestor, and where not, 80 a †

At what age each party married may agree or disagree to the marriage, and at what not, 79 b, 80 a †

Where the lord shall have the single value of the marriage without tender, 82 a *

What remedy the lord hath for the single value or forfeiture of the marriage, 79 a *, 82 b † *

Marshall.

T H E T A B L E.

Marshall.

The derivation of the word, 74 a †
 The office of marshall of the king's host, 74 a *
 Who first earl marshall, 106 a †
 The jurisdiction of the court of the constable and marshall, and according to what law they proceed, 391 b †

Maxim.

What, and whence so called, 11 a †, 343 a †
 Not to be disputed, 11 a †, 67 a †, 343 a †
Quod semel est meum, amplius meum esse non potest, 49 b ¶
Affectio tua imponit nomen operi tuo, 49 b ¶
Cessante ratione legis cessat lex, 70 b *
Omne magis dignum trahit ad se minus dignum, 355 b ¶

Mayor and Commonalty. See Corporation.

Meafon.

What, and how favoured in law, 4 b †, 54 b *, 56 b †,
 200 b †

Merchants.

How favoured in law, 2 b †
 Where the joint debts, &c. of merchants by the death of one shall not survive to the other, 182 a Where one joint merchant shall have allowance of his ex-pences and charges in an accompt against him by his companion, as receiver, 172 a ¶

Mefne. See Acceptance, Forejudger, Stat.
W. 2. c. 9.

Whence such writ so called, and where it lieth, 100 a † *
 The several judgments in a writ of mefne, 100 a *
 The process in such a writ, ibid.
 Where by purchase of the tenancy by the lord paramount, the mefnalty shall be extinct, 152 b *
 Where the lord paramount releases or confirms to the tenant to hold in frankalmoign, or by lesser services, the mefnalty shall be extinct, 152 b *
 What remedy the mefne hath for the surplufage of his rent, upon such extinguishment, 153 a †
 Where the wife shall have a writ of mefne on an acquittal granted to her husband, 141 a *

Meffuagium.

What meffuagium is, 5 a, 15 b

Minera.

The meaning of the word, 6 a †
 What paffes by it, ibid.

Miscontinuance.

The meaning of it, 325 b *

Mife. See Right.

The derivation and several acceptations of the word,
 294 b †

Monasteries. See Statute.

How many there were in England, and by whom founded, 97 per tot. pag.
 Some held per baroniam, 97 per tot. pag.

Money.

The derivation of the word, 207 b †
 Its synonyma, and their etymologies, ibid.
 What shall be said lawful money of England, and what not, 207 a ¶, 208 a †
 The value of a mark, pound, shilling, &c. anciently,
 294 b †

Monk.

In what cases a monk may maintain an action at the common law, and in what not, 132 b *

The several orders of monks and friars formerly in this realm, 132 a *

Monfter.

What issue reputed in law a monfter, and what not, 7 b ¶,
 29 b ¶

Mortdanceftor. See Estoppel.

Where such writ lieth, 159 a ¶
 Where it lieth not against privies in blood, 242 a ¶
 Where it lieth not against a bastard eigne, 244 b †

Mortgage. See Acceptance, Condition, Notice, Payment, Tender.

The fignification and derivation of the word, 205 a † ¶ Where a day of payment being limited, a tender by the heir of the mortgagor after his death shall be a good performance of the condition, 205 b * ¶, 208 b *
 What perfons may tender money in performance of a condition in mortgage, and what not, 206 a †, b ¶, 208
 b *, 209 a †
 Where payment by a stranger shall be a good performance, and where not, 206 b ¶, 207 a †
 Where no place is expreffed for the payment of money upon the mortgage, where the tender shall be made,
 210 a ¶
 Where no time being expreffed, notice of payment shall be given to the mortgagee, 211 a ¶ Where acceptance of a collateral thing by the mortgagee in fatisfaction shall bind him, and where not, 122 b *

Mortmain. See Appropriation.

The derivation of the word, 2 b * ¶
 What person shall enter for alienation in mortmain, and within what time, 2 b *

Mulier. See Bastard.

The several fignifications of the word, and how taken in the law of England, 243 b ¶

Murder. See Felony.

The etymology and fignification of the word, 287 b ¶
 How it differeth from homicide, and chance-medley, 287 b ¶

Mute. See Treafon.

Name. See Nobility, Purchase.

Where the misprifion or alteration of the name shall vitiate a grant, and where not, 3 a † Where a grant without mention of furname or christian name, or both, shall be good to the grantee, and where not, 3 a *
 Where a man is baptized by one name, and after confirmed by another, which he shall use, 3 a ¶
 Where the privileges, &c. of a corporation shall remain notwithstanding the alteration of the name, 102 b ¶

Nief. See Villein.

Nief de cu & treme, 25 b †

Nobility. See Barony, Valuation.

The several limitations of nobility, and what estate of nobility the king may grant, and what not, 16 b * †
 When the title and degree of duke, marquis and viscount began in England, 69 b * Earls, barons, &c. how created by a writ in ancient times, and when creations by patents first began, 9 b *,
 16 b † *
 What shall be said the relief of a nobleman of each degree, 69 b †
 Where a noblewoman by marrying one inferior to her degree shall lose her nobility, and where not, 16 b *
 Where a dignity or name of nobility, or office of honour, descends upon divers daughters, how it shall be divided,
 and which shall have the dignity and execute the office, 165 a *

Issue

T H E T A B L E.

Issue of duke, earl, &c. or no duke, &c. how triable, 16 b *
Beauchampe, king of Wight, 83 b *

Nonage. See Infant.

Non Compos Mentis. See Dum non Compos, &c.

Nonfuit. See Retraxit, Stat. 2 H. 4. c. 7.

When the plaintiff said to be nonfuit, 138 b ¶
 The several kinds of nonfuit, ibid.
 In what actions nonfuit after appearance shall be peremptory, and in what not, 239 a *
 Where the nonsuit of one demandant or plaintiff shall be the nonsuit of both, and where not, 139 a ¶,
 What person may be nonsuit, and what not, 139 a ¶, 227 b *
 At what time the plaintiff may be nonsuited, and at what not, 139 a ¶

Notice.

The several kinds of notice, 309 b *
 Notice, an incident inseparable to attornment, ibid.
 Where the lord shall not be compelled to avow upon the seoffee of his tenant without notice, 269 b ¶
 Where the obligor or mortgagor hath time during his life to pay money, payment at the place without notice shall be no performance, 211 a * ¶
 Where the grantee of a reversion shall not take advantage of a condition within 32 H. 8. without notice to the lessee, 215 b ¶
 Where a man is bound that J. S. shall infeof a stranger such a day, notice ought to be given by J. S. to the stranger, 211 a ¶ Nuisance.

Where a man may have a particular remedy by action for a publick nuisance, and where not, and why, 56 a ¶ *
 How publick nuisances are punishable, ibid.

Obligation. See Condition, Debt, Releases, Stat. 34. E. 3. c. 4. Trial.

The legal acception of the word, 172 a ¶
 Where obligations made in the third person shall be good, and where not, 229 b ¶, 230 a ¶
 Where an obligation made and dated beyond sea shall be good, and how triable, 261 b ¶
 Where the intermarriage of one feme obligee with the obligor shall extinct the debt as to both, 264 b ¶

Occupant.

Who said to be an occupant, 41 b ¶ *
 Of what inheritances occupancy may be, and of what not, 41 b *, 388 a ¶
 How occupancy may be prevented, 41 b *, 387 b
 Where an occupant shall be liable to waste and payment of rents, 41 b ¶
 No occupancy against the king, 41 b *

Occupation.

The several significations of the word, and to what properly applied, 249 b *
 The writ of occupavit, and where it lieth, ibid.

Office and Officers. See Appendant, Attorney, Stat. 12. R. 2. c. 2. Nobility. See the respective Names of each Officer.

Offices of justice, &c. granted to persons insufficient, void, 3 b *
 Such offices not grantable in reversion, ibid.
 Where non-user shall be a forfeiture of an office, and where not, 233 a ¶
 Where offices may be executed by deputy, and where not, 234 b ¶
 Where the grantor may oust his officer at his pleasure, and where not, 233 a ¶, b ¶
 What persons capable of offices of honour, and what not, 107 b per tot. pag.
 What persons capable of the stewardship of a manor, and what not, 3 b *, 61 b ¶
 Where the selling or contracting for an office of justice, &c. shall disable the party to be capable thereof, 234 a *

Where and what offices may be entailed, and where and what not, 20 a *

Where a man shall be tenant by the curtesy of an office, 29 b ¶

What things may be appendant to an office, and shall pass by grant of the office, 49 a *

The office of the king's almoner described, 94 a ¶

When he may and when he may not be discharged, 233 b ¶

Office or Inquisition. See Stat. 2. E. 6. c. 8.

Where the estates of particular tenants shall be saved, albeit they be not mentioned within the office, 77 b ¶
 What remedy for the heir where he is found by the office of fewer years than in truth he is, ibid.

What remedy for the true heir, where another is found heir by the office, and where one is found heir in one county, and another in another county, 77 b *, 243 a *

What remedy where one is untruly found by office lunatick or dead, &c. ibid.

Where upon office found that a person attainted is seised, the party having title may have a traverse or monstrans de droit, 77 b *

Where, upon an ignoramus found by office, it shall be taken to be a tenure in capite, and where not, ibid.

Where the heir within age shall have a traverse to an office, which fairly finds an immediate tenure of the king, 77 b ¶

Ordinary. See Confirmation, Parson.

The office and duty of the ordinary, and whence so called, 96 a *, 344 a *

Where a release of an action by the ordinary shall be good, 292 b ¶

Where a church donative shall be visited by the patron, and not by the ordinary, 344 a ¶

Where the king founds a church donative without any special exemption, his chancellor shall visit, and not the ordinary, 344 a * Ouster le Main. See Livery.

Outlawry. See Forfeiture, Juror.

The derivation of the word, 122 b ¶

Why a feme outlawed is called a waive, ibid.

Where outlawry in the plaintiff shall disable him to bring an action at the common law, and where not, 128 a * ¶

In what actions outlawry may be pleaded in disability of the person, and in what not, 128 a * ¶

At what age a man may be outlawed, and at what not, 122 b ¶, 128 a ¶

Where in a plea of outlawry the defendant ought presently to shew the record in court, and where he shall have a day over, 128 b ¶

Where outlawry in a foreign jurisdiction shall not disable the plaintiff at Westminster, 128 a ¶

Outlawry in the executor no disability to bring an action in right of his testator, 128 a *

Outlawry in the mayor no disability to the corporation to bring an action, ibid.

In what actions outlawry may be pleaded in bar, and in what not, 128 b ¶

Where process of outlawry lay at the common law, and in what actions it lieth this day, 128 b * ¶

How anciently persons outlawed might be put to death by any man, and when that was restrained, 128 b *

The several ways of reversing outlawries, 259 b ¶

What matters shall be said good causes to reverse an outlawry, and which of them are pleadable, and which not, 259 b ¶, 260 b ¶

Outlawry no prejudice to the party until return of the exigent, or removal by certiorari, 128 b ¶, 228 b *

Where a person outlawed may be a witness, and where not, 6 b ¶ *

The form of the judgment upon process of outlawry in the county court, and the form in London, and by whom given, 288 b *

When it may be avoided, and how, 128 b ¶

Oxgang.

What it is, 69 a *

Panel. See Array, Challenge.

The signification of the word, 158 b *

Papists.

Their disabilities, 396 a ¶
 h

Pardon

T H E T A B L E.

Pardon. See Corruption of Blood, Felony.

Pardon after attainder no restoration of blood, 391 b ¶, 392 a †
Where a pardon after the action brought, and before judgment, shall discharge the party of an amerciamment, 126 b ¶

Park. See Forest.

Parliament. See Statutes.

The derivation of the word, 110 a †
The court of parliament what, and of what members it consisteth, 109 b ¶
How called in ancient times, and how called this day in other countries, 110 a †
The antiquity and jurisdiction of this court, 110 a ¶
The number of sessions of parliament since the Conquest, ibid.

Parol Demur. See Age.

Where the parol shall demur for the nonage of one parcener, where her sister is of full age, 164 a †

Parson and Patron. See Aid, Confirmation, Discontinuance, Leafes, Presentation, Quare Impedit.

The legal acception of the word (parson), and why so called, 300 a ¶
Who said to be a parson imperfonce, 300 b †
To what intents a parson or vicar esteemed in law to have a fee simple, and to what but for life, 67 a *, 300 b ¶, 341 a
What actions a parson may maintain in his politick capacity, and what not, 341 a ¶, b † ¶, 342 a ¶
Where one church may have two parsons, and where two incumbents shall be said but one parson in a church, 18 a †
Where two parsons be in debate for tithes above the fourth part, one man being patron of both churches, no indicavit lieth, 243 a *
Where a rent granted by the patron and ordinary in time of vacation shall bind the succeeding parson, 343 b ¶
Where an annuity granted by the parson and ordinary shall bind the successors without assent of the patron, and where not, 343 b ¶, 344 a †
Where the patron and incumbent may charge a donative in perpetuity, 301 b †, 344 a †
The fee simple of the parsonage in abeiance, and in no person certain, 342 a, 343 a
Where by the death of the parson the freehold shall be in abeiance, 342 b ¶

Partition and Parceners. See Age, Damages, Entry Congeable, Estoppel, Jointenants, Judgment, Parol Demur, Release, Rents, Stat. Gloucester. c. 6. and 32. H. 8. c. 32.

Parceners, whence so called, 163 b †, 164 b †
The description and division of parceners, 163 a
Of what inheritances coparcenary may be, and of what not, and in what manner partition shall be made, 164 b * ¶, 165 a †
Where parceners shall be deemed in law as one heir, and where as several heirs, 163 b ¶, 164 a †, 196 b *
To what purposes parceners are said to have several freeholds, and to what but one, 164 a *
Where parceners in several degrees shall join in a real action, and where not, 164 a * ¶, 169 a ¶, b †
The several ways of making partition, and what partition shall bind, and by what persons, and what not, 165 b, 166 a and b, 167 a, 169 a ¶, 170 a ¶, b, 171 a, b †
What act by one parcener shall be deemed in law a division of the coparcenary, and what not, 167 b † *, 174 b ¶
The several judgments in a partition, and upon which a writ of error lieth, 167 b *, 168 a †
Where upon partition made, the eldest daughter shall have election, and where not, 166 a ¶, b †, 167 a †, 168 a †, b ¶, 186 b ¶
Where such partition shall be good without deed; secus between jointenants, 169 a †
Of an advowson, how to be, 402 a *
Where a rent, &c. granted for owelty of partition, shall be good without deed, and where not, 169 a ¶, b †
Where a rent is granted generally for owelty of partition, out of what land it shall be intended to issue, 169 b †

Where a rent is granted to two coparceners for owelty of partition, or where reserved upon a feoffment in fee, in what nature they shall be said seised of this rent, 169 b * ¶

Where a rent granted by the husband for owelty of partition shall bind the wife, 169 b ¶

Where partition made between the issue in tail, and her sister not inheritable to the tail, shall bind the issue; secus of a partition between issue and a stranger, 170 b †

Where a partition between bastard eigne and mulier puisne, shall bind the mulier and her heirs, 170 b *, 244 b †

Where a partition in chancery shall be avoided by an infant; secus where a writ of partition is brought and judgment had, 171 a

Where the issue of one parcener upon the not descent of assets shall enter into the moiety of lands in tail allotted to the other parcener, 172 b, 173 a †

Where by a partition against common right, the parcener shall be liable to charges made since the descent, 173 a ¶

Where by the eviction of part of the land allotted to one parcener, the whole partition shall be defeated, and where not, 173 b * ¶, 174 a * †

Where the privity between parceners being destroyed, the condition and warranty in law shall be extinct, 174 a *

What shall be said a sufficient continuance of the privity to take advantage of such warranty, &c. and what not, 174 a *, b †

Where the feoffee of one parcener shall have aid of the other parceners to deraign a warranty paramount, and where not, 174 a ¶, b †

Where, by whom, and against whom, a writ of partition lay at the common law, and where and by whom it lieth at this day, 175 a, b †

The difference between a partition and exchange, 51 a ¶, 172 b *, 176 a *

Parcener by the custom described, 175 b *

The manner of partition in hotchpot, and where such partition shall be made, and where not, 167 a, b, 177 a, 178 b, 179 a, b

Who ought to be first agent in such partition, and to whom the lands shall descend in the interim, 176 b †

Where after such partition the lands given in frankmarriage shall be of the nature of lands descendible, 177 b *

Where in such partition the value of the lands, &c. shall be accounted as at the time of the partition, and not as at the time of the gift, 179 a †

Upon whom the reversion of such estate in frankmarriage shall descend, 179 a *

Where a partition between three parceners, one to hold in severalty, and the other in parcenary, shall be good, and where not, 180 a † *

Where one daughter disseises the discontinuee of her father to the use of herself and her sister, and being ousted by the discontinuee recovers in an assise, by the agreement of the other sister after they shall be jointenants and not parceners, 374 a ¶

Where a tenancy by homage descends upon divers parceners, the eldest alone, and where all shall do homage, 67 a ¶, b †

Pascuum, Pastura.

The meaning of the words, 4.

Patents. See Grant, King.

Payment.

Where payment of money in shew and appearance and not really, shall be no performance of a condition, 209 b *

Where the mortgagee dying before the day, payment shall be made to his executors, and where to his heirs, 209 b * ¶, 210 a †

Where upon condition of payment to one, his heirs and assigns, payment to his executors shall be a good performance, and where not, 210 a *

Where upon payment of money at several days, an action lieth for not payment at each day, and where not before the last day be past, 47 b *, 292 b ¶

Per quæ Servitia. See Attornment, Quid Juris clamat.

Where tenant in tail shall be compelled to attorn in a per quæ servitia, 316 b †

Where in a per quæ servitia the tenant shall not be compelled to attorn until allowance of his privileges, 320 b * ¶

Where upon grant of a feignory for life, the remainder in fee, he in the remainder after the death of the tenant for life shall have a per quæ servitia, 252 a ¶

Few.

Pew.

What it is, 5 b ¶

Piracy. See Attainder, Felony.

Pleadings and Pleas. See Departure, Double Plea, Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 5. 7 J. 1. c. 5. 36 E. 3. c. 15.

Placitum, unde, 17 a *, 103 a +
The commendation of good pleading, and the means to attain to it, 17 a *, 168 a +, 303 a +
Pleading a good argument in law, 115 b *
Rules concerning the matter and order of good pleading, 303 a *
The several parts of pleading, and by what names distinguished, 303 b ¶
Where plea of every man shall be construed most strongly against himself, 303 b +
Things done beyond sea, how to be pleaded, 261 passim
When necessary circumstances implied by law need not be expressed, 303 b *, 316 b ¶
Double plea, when good, 401 b ¶
Of payment of bonds, how, 401 a +
Where a defective plea shall be made good by the plea of the adverse party, and where not, 303 b *
Where surplage shall vitiate a plea, and where not, ibid.
What pleas ought to be averred, and what not, 303 a ¶ Plea by argument or rehearal, not good, ibid.
What certainty is required in counts, bars, replications, estoppels, &c. 303 a *
Where an inducement to the matter generally alledged in the plea shall be sufficient; secus of the matter itself, 303 a ¶
Where a general allegation of proceedings in ecclesiastical courts, or a matter of record in pleading shall be sufficient, and where not, ibid.
What estates in pleading may generally be alledged, and where the commencement of particular estates must be shewed, and the life of the tenant averred, and where not, 303 b +
Where and in what kind of pleading the donee or lessee ought to alledge seisin in his donor or lessor, and where cum dimisit, or cum dedit, &c. 303 a *
Where the party may plead performance of all covenants generally, and where they ought to be specially pleaded, 303 b *
Where the conclusion of a plea (et issint & sic) shall be a waiver of a special matter, and where not, ibid.
Where a thing is done by force of a warranty or authority, it ought to be pleaded, 283 a *, 303 b +
Where a special cause of justification or excuse may be given in evidence, and where it ought to be pleaded, 282 b ¶, 283 a per tot. pag.
Where the tenant by his false plea shall lose a benefit or advantage given him by the law, 33 a +, 366 a *
How a feoffment in fee, and a lease for years ought to be pleaded, 200 b ¶, 201 a +
Where in pleading an estate of freehold, the party shall not plead an entry; secus of an estate for years, 201 a +
Where in pleading the party shall be said seisitus in domino vel de feodo, and of what things ut de feodo & jure, 17 a ¶, b *
The necessity of making a defence in every plea, 127 b * ¶
The form of a defence in a personal action, 127 b *
The effect and consequence of such defence, 127 b * ¶
Where at this day after demurrer, judgment shall be given according to the matter in law, without respect to the imperfection of the pleading, 304 b * ¶
The course and estimation of pleading in the time of E. 1. E. 2. E. 3. H. 6. &c. 334 a ¶, b *

Plenary. See Advowson, Parson, Quare Impedit.

Where and against what persons plenary shall be by institution, and against whom not until induction, 119 b ¶, 344 a ¶
Where and against whom plenary was a good plea in a quare impedit, or darrein presentment at the common law, and where not, 133 a ¶, 134 a +, 344 b +
Where trial of plenary shall be by the common law, and where by certificate of the bishop, 344 a ¶

Plough-Land.

What it is, 69 a ¶, 86 b *

Possession. See Curtesy of England, Guardian, Presentation, Quare Impedit, Right.

Continuance of possession, a violent presumption of title, 6 b ¶
Where a long possession anciently took away a right of entry, 237 b *
Where a possession of a parcel of the land demised shall be a possession of the whole, and where not, 48 b ¶
Where the possession of a lessee for years shall be the possession of him in the reversion, 15 a *, 243 a +
Of what things a man cannot be put out of possession, and of what only at his own election, 306 b *, 307 a +
Where divers persons being upon the land, the law shall adjudge the possession in him that right hath, and where not, 368 a + *
Where the seizure of the king without cause shall be adjudged the possession of him for whose cause he seized, 245 b +
What shall be a sufficient possession to make the sister or uncle, &c. to inherit, and what not, 11 b * ¶, 14 b, 15 a, 281 a ¶
Of what things and estate a possessio fratris may be, and of what not, 14 b * ¶, 15 b + *
Where there shall be possessio fratris without entry, et e converso, 15 a * ¶ Possibility. See Grants.

A gift to a man and woman not married, or where one or both of them are married elsewhere, and to the heirs of their bodies, a good tail for the possibility, 20 b ¶, 25 b ¶
Possibility upon a possibility rejected in law, 25 b ¶, 184 a + Pound. See Distress.

The writ of parco fracto, whence so called, and where it lieth, 47 b *
Where the defendant may justify in that writ, and where not, ibid.

Præcipe.

The several writs of præcipe, 101 b +, 139 b *
What words are proper, what not, and how to be ranged in a præcipe, 40 a +

Præmunire. See Attainder.

Whence such writ so called, 129 b * ¶
The judgment in a præmunire, 129 b ¶
The nature and quality of the offence, 130 a +
What lands, &c. forfeitable by attainder in præmunire, and what not, 130 a +, 391 a ¶
Where such attainder shall be a good plea in disability of the person to bring an action, 129 b *

Præsumptio.

Quid et quotuplex, 6 b ¶
Where the presumption shall stand till the contrary is proved, 67, 373
Where it shall be presumed that the interlineation of a deed was at the making of it till the contrary is proved, 401 a * Prerogative. See Entry, Grants, Queen, Remitter, Wardship, Warranty.

The etymology and signification of the word (prerogative), and by what names called anciently, 90 b *
Where the grant of a reversion to or by the king, shall be good without attornment, 109 b *, 314 b *
Where the title of the king and a common person concur, the king's title shall be preferred, 30 b +
Where a man being indebted to the king and to a common person, the common person shall be satisfied before the king, and where not, 131 b *
Where the king after seizure of the temporalities shall present to a church which voided in the life of the bishop, 90 a ¶
Where the king gave land with his cousin in frankmarriage, by the death of the feme without issue, the estate of the husband shall determine; secus of a gift by a common person, 21 b ¶
Where a quare impedit lay by the king at the common law upon an usurpation, but not by a common person, 344 b +
Plenary in a quare impedit no plea against the king, 133 a ¶, 344 b +
Where the king may revoke his presentation after institution, and before induction, 344 b *

In

T H E T A B L E.

In what cases the king's grant with a non obstante shall dispense with the penalty of a statute, and in what not, and where it shall be good without a non obstante, 99 a †, 120 a *, 234 a *

What shall be said a good plea against the letters patent of the king, and what not, 260 a *

By what act an estate settled in the king shall be devested without petition, or monstrans de droit, and by what not, 354 b *

Where an advowson shall pass from the king within the words (cum pertinentiis) without express mention, and where not, 77 a ¶

Where an act of parliament shall bind the king without being named, and where not, 43 b *, 98 b ¶, 99 a *, 120 a *

Where an act done by the king during his nonage shall bind him, 43 a ¶

Where a gift to the king, without the words (heirs or successors) shall pass a fee simple, 9 b ¶

Upon such purchase by the king, in what capacity he shall be said seized, 16 a †, 190 a ¶

Where the person of the king shall alter the nature of a descent, 15 b ¶

Where the grant of the king, wherein he is deceived, shall be void, 27 a *

No laches imputed to the king, 41 b *, 57 b *, 90 b *, 118 a ¶, 119 a †, 294 b †, 344 b †

Where upon a gift to the king, and the heirs of his body, before stat. W. 2. an alienation by him before issue, was no bar of the reversion, 19 b †

Prescription. See Custom, Que Estate.

The definition of a prescription, 113 a ¶

How it differeth from a custom, 113 b

The incidents inseparable to a prescription, 113 b ¶

To what things a man may make title by prescription without charter, and to what not, 114 a ¶, b †, 144 a ¶

Where a title to lands by prescription shall be good, 195 a ¶

By what means a title by prescription or custom may be lost by interruption, and by what not, 114 b *

Where a prescription or custom may be alleged against an act of parliament, and where not, 111 b †, 115 a * ¶, b †

How a man ought to prescribe in things which lie in grant, and how in things which lie in livery, 121 a

What shall be a sufficient continuance to make a title of prescription, and what not, 113 b, 114 a

Prescription for common, exclusive of the lord, is void, 122 a ¶

— for solum vesturam terræ, exclusive of the lord, is good, ibid.

Presentation. See Baron and Feme, Prerogative.

The description and derivation of the word, 120 a †

How many several ways a church presentative may become void, ibid.

Where a presentation by parol shall be sufficient, 120 a *

Where one jointenant or tenant in common presents, or both present severally, the ordinary may admit or refuse such presentee at his pleasure, 186 b ¶

Where two parceners present one clerk, and the other two another, the ordinary may refuse both, ibid.

Where the presentation of one parcerer in the turn of another after partition shall not put the other out of possession, 243 a *

Where the several presentations of parceners shall not make the church litigious, ibid.

Presentation in time of war, and admission and institution in time of peace, shall not put the patron out of possession, 249 b ¶

Where a presentation to a church in time of vacation of an abbath shall not put the successor out of possession, 263 b *

Where by presentation to a church donative, and admission and institution, the church is for ever become presentative, and where not, 344 a †

How donatives first began, and how they may be created at this day, 344 a *

Where the husband shall present to a church, which voided in the life of his wife, 120 a ¶

Where upon descent of an advowson to divers parceners, the eldest and her assignee shall have the first presentment, 166 b *, 186 b ¶

Primer Seisin. See Livery out of the Hands of the King.

Where it shall be due to the king upon the death of his tenant, and where not, 77 a *

What value shall be paid to the king upon livery or primer seisin, 77 a *

At what age the king shall have primer seisin of the heir of his tenant in socage, 91 b †

Privies and Privity. See Attornment, Homage Auncestrel, Parceners, Releases.

The several sorts of privies, 271 a *

What privity between jointenants, what between tenants in common, and what between parceners, 169 a *, 200 b *

Where a privity once discontinued, shall for ever be extinct, 103 a * ¶, b †

Profession. See Monk.

When a man shall be said to be professed in religion, 132 a †, 136 a †

At what age a man may be professed in religion, 137 a †

To what purposes a profession hath the effects of a natural death, and to what not, 132 a ¶, b † *

Where and what profession in religion shall disable the party to bring an action, and where, and what not, 132 b *

Where the husband and wife may be professed in religion without either's consent, and where not, ibid.

Property. See Bailiff, Replevin.

The several kinds of property, 145 b *

Where in a replevin, the claim of property by the defendant, shall hinder the delivery of the goods by the sheriff, ibid.

Such claim of property by the bailiff or servant of the defendant not available, ibid.

How altered, 400 b ¶

Proprietary Probanda.

When this writ is to be sued, 145

Protections. See Quare Impedit, Stat. 13. R. 2. c. 16.

The several sorts of protections, 130 a *

Protections cum clausula volum, why so called, and the several kinds of them, ibid.

Protections quia profecturus, and quia moraturus, what, and why so called, ibid.

For what causes such protections are grantable, and for what not, 130 a ¶

For what persons such protections are allowable, and for what not, 130 a ¶, b †

In what action or plea a protection cast for one defendant, shall put the plea without day for all, and in what not, 10 a †

Where and what protection may be purchased pendente placito, and where, and what not, 130 b *

At what time a protection may be cast, and at what not, ibid.

Where a protection cast at the nisi prius, and repealed before the day in bank, shall notwithstanding save the default of the party, and where not, ibid.

For what continuance of time such protections ought to be, 130 b *, 254 b ¶

To what places such protections ought to be directed, and to what not, 130 b ¶

In what actions protections are allowable, and in what not, 131 a † *

Under what seal, and to whom they are directed, 131 a *

What persons ought to allow or disallow of them, 131 a ¶

By whom they may be cast, and in what manner, ibid.

By what means they may be avoided, and by what not, 131 a ¶, b †

Where upon a repeal of the protection, a resumption or reattachment may be had within the year, 131 b †

Protection quia indebitatus nobis existit what, and where it lieth, 131 b *

Protection cum clausula volumus, why so called, and where it lieth, 130 a *, 131 b *

Where a protection shall be allowed against the queen; secus against the king, 131 a †, 133 b †

Protestation. See Per quæ Servitia, Pleading, Quid Juris clamat.

The description of a protestation, 124 b †

Where a protestation shall avail the party, albeit the issue be found against him, and where not, 125 a ¶, 126 a ¶

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where the tenant shall not be compelled to attorn without entry of his protestation and allowance of his privileges, 320 b

Pudzeld.

The signification of the word, 233 a ¶

Purchase. See Baron and Feme, Estates, Fee, Freehold, Infants.

The description and derivation of purchase, 3 b *, 18 a ¶, b †

What persons are of capacity to purchase, and what not, and who to their own use, and who only to the use of others, 2 a b. 3 a and b

What shall be said a good name of purchase, and what not, 3 a, 22, 24, 27, 163

The several conveyances of purchase, 10 a *

Purpresture. See Abatement.

The etymology and signification of the word, 277 b †

Quare Impedit. See Advowson, Nonsuit, Plenary, Presentation, Release, Stat. W. 2. c. 5.

What remedy against an usurpation and plenary at the common law, and what at this day, 344 a ¶, b †

Where and why at the common law, a quare impedit lay of a church in Wales in the county next adjoining, 134 b †

Damages at the common law not recoverable in a quare impedit, 17 b *, 344 b † *

Where a quare impedit lay at the common law by a common person, and where not, 344 b *

Where, and by what means a common person might remove an incumbent at the common law by quare impedit, and where; and by what not, ibid.

Where an usurpation by collation shall not put the patron out of possession; secus of him that hath a right of collation, ibid.

Where the patron by presenting as procurator to another, shall put himself out of possession, 52 a ¶

Where an usurpation after judgment and before execution, shall put the recoveror out of possession, 238 a †

Where upon a grant of the three next avoidances, the usurpation of the grantor at the first avoidance, shall not put his grantee out of possession, as to the other two, 249 a *

Where a presentation by one jointenant shall serve for a title in a quare impedit brought by the survivor, 186 b *

Where in a quare impedit by two tenants in common, the death of one shall not abate the writ, 198 a ¶

Where a quare impedit lieth of a church donative, and the writ shall say, quod permittat ipsum presentare, &c. 344 a †

Where in a quare impedit brought within the six months, the incumbent ought to be named, or otherwise he shall not be removed, 344 b *

Where the clerk of the rightful patron being instituted pendente lite in a quare impedit, between the bishop and a stranger, he shall not be removed; secus of an usurpation, 344 b ¶

Where the bishop being named in a quare impedit, shall not present by lapis pendente lite, ibid.

Where in such case time devolving to the metropolitan, or the king, they shall collate, albeit they be not named in the quare impedit, ibid.

Where the church of the wife becomes void during the coverture, the husband shall maintain a quare impedit in his own name, 351 a ¶

Where the patron being outlawed, a stranger usurps, and six months pass, the recovery of the king in a quare impedit shall be a continuance of the advowson to the patron, 363 b *

Consuance not grantable in a quare impedit, 134 b †

A release of actions real or personal, a good bar in a quare impedit, 285 a ¶, b †

A protection not grantable in a quare impedit, 131 a †

Quarentena.

The meaning of the word, 5 b †

Where the wife shall, and where she shall not have it, 32 b *, 34 b †

Queen.

An exempt person from the king, and where she may grant and purchase, sue and be sued without him, 3 a †, 133 a ¶

Her several prerogatives agreeing with those of the king, 133 a ¶, b †, 127 a †

Where she partaketh of the condition of common persons, 131 a †, 133 b †

Where the queen, albeit she be an alien, or Jew, shall be endowed, 31 b †

Que Estate.

In what things a prescription by a que estate shall be good, and in what not, 121 a † *

Where a man may plead a que estate of a thing that lieth in grant, and where not, 121 a *

By whom, and of what estate such plea shall be good, and by whom, and of what not, 121 a ¶

In what person a que estate ought to be alledged, and in what not, 121 b †

Quid Juris clamat. See Attornment, Infant, Per que Servitia.

Where the particular tenant shall be compelled to attorn in a quid juris clamat upon grant of the reversion, and where not, 318 a ¶

Where the lessee shall not be compelled to attorn in a quid juris, &c. until allowance of his privileges, 320 b †

Where in a quid juris clamat, by baron and feme, the privileges of the lessee shall be entered of record notwithstanding the coverture; secus in case of an infant, 320 b *

Tenant in tail not compellable to attorn in a quid juris clamat; secus in a per que servitia, or quem redditum reddit, 316 b †

Where one parcener grants her estate in a reversion by fine, the consuee shall have a quid juris clamat for a moiety, 310 b †

Where the reversion of a rent-charge upon a grant for life is granted over, a quid juris clamat lieth against the grantee for life, and not against the tertenant, 311 b ¶

Where the nonsuit of one plaintiff in a quid juris clamat shall be the nonsuit of both, 139 a ¶

Quod Ei deforceat. See Stat. W. 2. c. 4.

Where and against whom such writ lieth, 331 b *, 354 b ¶

The form of the writ, 355 a †

Where upon a recovery by default in an action of waste, a quod ei deforceat lieth, 355 a and b

Where it lieth upon a recovery by default in an assise, 355 b *

Where notwithstanding he in the reversion is received upon the default of tenant for life, and a verdict found against him, a quod ei deforceat lieth by the tenant, 355 b *

Where it lieth upon a recovery against baron and feme, albeit the stat. W. 2. saith against tenant in dower, or for life, 356 a †

Where it lieth not by the wife upon such recovery after the death of the husband, 356 a * Radmans and Radchemisters.

Who they are, 5 b *, 86 a †

Ransome. See Fines.

What, and whence derived, 127 a *

Rape.

The signification of the word, 123 b ¶

What offence accounted in ancient time, and how punished, and what at this day, ibid.

Rationabili Parte Bonorum.

Where and by whom such writ lieth, and where, and by whom not, 176 b ¶

Ravishment of Ward. See Marriage, Stat. W. 2. c. 35. Wardship.

Where and by whom it lieth, 98 b *

Where it lieth against the sovereign of a house of religion, for admitting the heir to be there professed, 137 a †

Rebutter. See Voucher, Warranty.

The signification and derivation of the word, 303 b ¶, 365 a *

Where an assignee shall rebut by reason of a warranty in law, and where not, 384 b

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where a disseisor, &c. or other tenant not privy in estate, or to the deed, shall rebut, and where not, 389 a * ¶

Recluse. See Entry Congeable.

The signification and derivation of the word, 258 b *
Where the entry of a person recluse shall be tolled by a discent without claim, ibid.
Where such person shall appear by attorney, where others must in proper person, 258 b *

Record. See Court, Outlawry.

Record, what, and whence derived, 117 b ¶, 260 a †
How triable, 117 b ¶, 260 a †
When a record is alterable, and when not, 260 a * Nul tiel record, no plea against the king's letters patent, ibid.
Outlawry, no prejudice until it be of record, 128 b †, 288 b *

Recovery. See Error, Executor, Falsifying of Recovery, Forfeiture, Remitter, Statutes W. 2. c. 3. 14. El. c. 8. 21. H. 8. c. 15.

The etymology and signification of the word, 154 a ¶
What remedy at the common law he in the remainder or reversion had upon a feigned recovery suffered by tenant for life, and what at this day, 356 a, 362 a
Where upon a recovery against tenant in tail execution may be sued against his issue, and where not, 361 b ¶
Where a recovery by default against one out of the realm in the king's service shall not be avoided by error, 260 b *
Where the recoveror shall have waste, or distrain for a rent, for which the recoveree could not, and where not, 104 b

Recovery in Value. See Execution, Voucher, Warranty.

Where lands by purchase shall be liable to execution in value in case of a warranty by discent, and where not, 102 a ¶
Where the lands which the vouchee had at the time of the voucher, or varrantia chartae brought, shall be liable to execution in value, notwithstanding alienation before judgment, ibid.
Where a recovery being had against tenant in tail, and his wife who had nothing, upon a recovery over the recompence shall enure to the husband only, 376 b ¶

Redisseisin.

Where it lieth not upon a recovery in a writ of right close in nature of an assise in ancient demesne, or in an assise of fresh force by bill, 154 a ¶
When given, and in what case, 154 a *
Where it lieth against one disseisor above, albeit the recovery in assise was against two; scilicet where one disseisor and a stranger redisseise the plaintiff, 154 b †
Where it lieth not against the husband and wife upon a recovery in assise against the wife, but where the wife was plaintiff in the assise, she and her husband may join in the redisseisin, ibid.
Where two several redisseisins may lie upon one recovery in assise, ibid.
Where it lieth against the disseisor, and his feelee after the second disseisin, ibid.
Where it lieth not against the tenant in the first assise, being no disseisor, albeit he disseise the plaintiff after, 154 b *
Where it lieth upon a redisseisin of parcel of the tenements formerly recovered, ibid.
Where it lieth of a rent-sock by surplussage formerly recovered by the mesne as a rent service, 154 b *
Where it lieth by tenant in tail after possibility, &c. upon a recovery by him being tenant in special tail, ibid.
Where it lieth upon a redisseisin of a common after a recovery of the land out of which, &c. ibid.

Register of Writs.

What, and its antiquities, 16 b ¶, 37 b ¶, 159 a * Relation. See Alien, Attornment, Bargain and Sale, Conditions, Felony, Grants, Leases, Releases.
How the word (prædicti) in grants shall have relation, 20 b †

How the word (eadem) shall have relation where two things are mentioned before, 20 b †
The relation and force of the word (inde) 82 b *, 203 a *
Where a feoffment relating to the estate of another, shall pass a fee-simple without the word (heirs) 9 b ¶
Where and to what intents an escheat or forfeiture shall relate to the time of the felony committed, and where and to what not, 13 a ¶, 390 b *
Where a relation shall not work a wrong or charge to a third person, 150 a *
Where the relation of an estate gained by wrong shall not defeat an estate subsequent gained by right, 277 b ¶

Releases. See Action, Conditions, Confirmation, Execution, Grants, Relation, Reservation, Waste.

The form of a release, 264 b †
The several sorts of releases, 264 a ¶, b *
The proper words of releases, and what words shall be said to amount to a release, and what not, 264 b *, 306 a *
What act by him that right hath shall be said a release in law of his right or action, and what not, and how it differeth from a release in deed, 164 b * ¶
How many several ways a release may enure, 193 b *, 273 b ¶
Where a release of right to one that hath neither freehold in deed or in law shall be good, and where not, 265 b ¶, 266 a †, b ¶, 267 a †, 284 a ¶, b † *
Where a release of an annuity to the patron in time of vacation shall be good; scilicet to the ordinary, 266 a †
Where privity shall be requisite to the release of a right, and where not, 266 a †, 268 a *, 275 a †
Where and by what means a disseisee may release his right for life only, and where and by not, 264 b ¶
Where by a release of all right in the land, a power or authority shall be determined, and where not, 265 b †
Where such release shall not extinct a future right or possibility, 264 a †, b *
Where a release of dower to him in the reversion upon an estate for life shall be good, 264 a *
Where a release to the tenant for life shall enure to him in the reversion or remainder, & à converso, and where not, 267 b per tot. pag. 275 a ¶, b † *, 279 b †, 285 b ¶, 297 b ¶
Where and to what purposes a release to him that hath but a bare right shall be good and available, and where and to what not, 267 a ¶, 268 a † *, b ¶, 269 a *
How many ways a feignory, rent or right may be released; 268 a *
Where a release to him that hath no estate or right shall be good, 265 b ¶, 268 a *, 269 a †
Where a disseisor makes a release to one and his heirs pur auter vie, a release by the disseisee to the heir after the death of the lessee before entry shall extinct his right, 275 a *
Where a release to one disseisor shall enure to his companion, and where not, 194 a * ¶, 275 b ¶, 276 a per tot. pag. 378 a *
Where a release by the patron to one usurper shall enure to both, 194 a *, 276 a *
Where a release to one feoffee of the disseisor shall enure to both, 194 b *, 276 a ¶, 277 a †
Where a release to one trespassor shall be available to his companion, 232 a †
Where a release to the executors shall be a good bar in an action against the heir, 232 a *
Where and to what purposes after a feoffment in fee by the tenant, the release of the lord shall be good to the feoffor, and where and to what not, 269 a ¶, b *
Where such feoffor shall take advantage of a release by the lord to the feoffee, but not à converso, 269 b *
Where a release to the assignee of tenant for life shall be a good plea in an action against the tenant for waste done before the assignment, 269 b *
To what purposes a release to a lessee for years before entry, or to him that hath a future interest, shall be good; and to what not, 46 b †, 270 a * ¶
Where a release to one in reversion or remainder for years shall be good to enlarge his estate, 270 a *
Where the release by one joint lessee for years to his companion shall be good before entry, 270 b †
Two grantees of the next avoidance, a release by the one to the other before the church voids, good; scilicet after, 270 b †
Where a release to a tenant at will shall be good to enlarge his estate; scilicet to a tenant at sufferance, 270 b * ¶, 271 a †
Where, upon a feoffment in trust the feoffor occupies and takes the profits, a release to him by the feoffees shall be good, 271 a ¶, b, 272 a, b †
What

T H E T A B L E.

What shall be said a sufficient privity whereupon a release may enure by way of enlargement of the estate, and what not, 272 b ¶, 273 a per tot. pag.

In what release words of limitation are requisite to the passing of an inheritance, and in what not, 273 b ¶, 274 a ¶, b ¶, 275 a ¶, 280 a *

Where a feme covert is tenant for life a release to the husband and his heirs shall be good, 173 b *, 299 a ¶

Where a release to tenant by statute-merchant, &c. or guardian, which hold over for the value, shall be good to enlarge their estates, 273 b *

Lessee for ten years, the remainder for twenty years, by the release of him in the remainder to the lessee he shall have for thirty years, 273 b *

What privity requisite to a release which enures by way of mitter lessee, 273 b ¶

Where and to what purposes the release of one jointenant to his companion shall enure by way of mitter lessee, and where and to what not, 273 b ¶

Where the release of one coparcener of a rent shall enure to the other by way of mitter lessee, altho her moiety be in suspense, Et sic e converso, 275 b ¶

Where one coparcener of a rent marries the tertenant, and the other releases to the husband and wife, how it shall enure, quere, ibid.

Where a release of a right upon condition shall be good; fecus of a condition upon condition, 274 b ¶

Where lessee for years is ousted, and he in the reversion disseised, by the release of the lessee to the disseisor the disseisee may enter; fecus in case of a lease for life, 175 b ¶, 276 a ¶

Where a release by one whose entry is lawful to him that is in by wrong, shall purge and take away all mean estates and titles; fecus where his entry is not lawful, 266 b ¶, 277 a ¶, b ¶, 278 a ¶

Where a release to the feoffee of lessee for life of the disseisor shall exclude the disseisor of his entry, 276 b ¶

Where a release to one feoffee of such lessee shall bar the disseisor as to both, 277 a ¶

Where the feoffee of a disseisor upon condition makes a feoffment over, a release by the disseisee to the second feoffee shall extinct the condition; fecus of a release to the first feoffee, 277 b *

Where the release of the disseisee to a disseisor to the use of another, shall take away the agreement of cessuy que use, 277 b ¶

Where two disseisors release to their disseisor, and after disseise him, the release of the disseisee to one or both of them, shall not exclude the second disseisor to re-enter, 278 a *

To what purposes the release of the disseisee to one disseisor shall be said to enure by way of entry and feoffment, and to what not, 194 b ¶, 278 a ¶, b ¶

Where acts done to or by the disseisor shall not be avoided by the alteration of his estate, by the release of the disseisee, 278 a ¶, b ¶

Where an alien disseisor is endenized, by the release of the disseisee to him, the king shall not have the land; fecus if he were the feoffee of a disseisor, 278 b ¶

Where the lord disseises his tenant and is disseised, the release of the tenant to the second disseisor shall not revive the feignory; fecus if the lord and a stranger had disseised the tenant, and the disseisee released to the stranger, 278 b *

Where a release shall be said to enure totally by way of extinguishment, and where only as to some purposes, 279 b *, 280 a ¶, 313 b *

Where a release to one jointenant shall enure to his companion, and where not, 194 a, b *

Where a release by one jointenant or parcener to his companion shall be good, and where not, and how such release shall enure, 193 a ¶ per tot. pag. 318 a ¶

Where the feme mesne and the tenant intermarry, and the lord paramount releases to the husband and wife, how it shall enure, quere, 208 a *

Where a release which enures by way of extinguishment may admit of a limitation, and where not, 280 a *

Where by the release of the lord to his tenant of all his right in the land, the feignory shall be extinct without words of inheritance, 280 a *

Where one release shall enure to extinguish several rights in one and the same land, 280 a *

Where the release of the lord of all his right to the tenant, and a lease for years of the feignory shall extinguish the feignory and estate of the lessee also; fecus of a release to them and their heirs, 280 a *

Where in mixt actions a release of all actions real or personal shall be a good bar, 285 a ¶, b ¶

Where in an assise by three jointenants, a release of actions personal by one to the disseisor shall not bar his companion, 285 a ¶

Where in a writ of ward by two, a release by one to the defendant shall enure to the benefit of his companion for the whole, 285 a ¶

Where a release of actions personal shall be a good bar in actions real where damages are to be recovered, and where not, 285 a ¶, b ¶

Where a release of all actions to the disseisor or his tenant for life shall not extend to his feoffee, or him in the remainder, 275 b *, 285 b ¶, 286 a ¶

Where such release shall not prejudice the heir of the disseisee of his action after the death of his ancestor, 285 b ¶

Where a release of actions real shall be available only to the tenant, 285 b *, 286 a ¶

Where a release of all actions shall bar a right, and where not, but the party notwithstanding may enter or seize, 268 a *, b ¶

Where a release of actions real before the statute of uses was a good plea by the pernor of the profits, 287 a ¶

Where a release of all actions, appeals or demands, shall be a good bar in an appeal of death; fecus of a release of all actions real and personal, 287 b ¶, 288 a ¶, 291 b ¶

Where a release of actions personal shall be a good bar in an appeal of mayhem, 288 a *

Where a release of all actions shall be a good plea in a writ of error or attain, and where not, 288 b ¶, 289 a ¶

By a release of demands what things are released; 291 a, 292 a ¶, 392 b ¶

Where by a release of quarrels all actions and causes of actions are released, 292 a *

Where a release of all actions shall discharge an obligation before it be broken; fecus of a covenant, 292 b ¶

Where by a release of all actions a rent at a day after, or an annuity not behind is not released, 292 b *

Where he in the remainder in tail releases to the tenant for life in possession all his right, what shall pass, 345 b ¶

What a release can, what it cannot operate on, 401 b ¶

A release to bargainee, why good, 401 b ¶

Relief. See Debt, Serjeanty, Stat. of Magna Charta, c. 2.

Relief what, and whence derived, 76 a *, 83 a ¶, b ¶

What the relief of a knight and each nobleman was by the common law, and what now by the statute, 76 a *, 69 b ¶, 83 b ¶, 106 a

The relief of the tenant who holdeth by the entire fee of a knight's moiety or third part, 83 a ¶, b ¶, 106 a ¶

The remedy which the lord hath for his relief, and where an action of debt lieth for relief, and where not, 83 a ¶

Where the lord by knight service shall have both wardship and relief of the same heir, and where neither, 83 b ¶

Where the heir within age shall pay relief, and where not, ibid.

Where the successor of an abbot or bishop shall pay relief, and where not, 84 a ¶, 99 a ¶

Where the lord shall have relief of the heir enfeoffed by collusion, 84 a ¶

The relief of a tenant in socage, 90 b ¶, 91 a ¶

Where the rent is ten shillings or a pair of spurs, what relief shall be paid, and who shall have the election, 90 b ¶, 91 a ¶

Where the rent is not annual, what relief shall be paid, 91 a ¶

At what time the relief of such tenant shall be due to the lord, and where the lord shall not distrain till a certain time, 91 a ¶, 92 a ¶

Where the heir of cessuy que use shall pay relief, 91 a *

Of what service a relief shall be due, and of what not, 91 b ¶, 93 a *

Remainder. See Entry Congeable, Heir, Instant, Prerogative, Releases, Remitter, Reversion, Waste.

Remainder what, and whence derived, 49 a ¶, 143 a *

Where it shall pass without deed, 49 a ¶, 143 a ¶

Where a remainder may depend without a particular estate, 298 a *

Where the defeating of the particular estate shall defeat the remainder, and where not, ibid.

A rent granted to the tertenant for life, the remainder in fee, a good remainder, 298 a ¶

Where a rent is granted pur auter vie, the remainder in tail to cessuy que vie, a good remainder, 298 a *

Where by the grant of a remainder a reversion shall pass, 299 b *

Where the execution of a particular estate upon a fine per grant

T H E T A B L E

grant et render, shall be an execution of the remainder, 354 b *
 Where a remainder not vesting at the time of the particular estate created by livery shall be good, and where not, 264 a †, 377 b *, 378 a
 When it falls if the particular estate determine before the contingency happen, when not, 401 b *

Remitter. See Appendant, Charge, Entry Congeable, Fines, Jointenant, Warranty.

The etymology and description of a remitter, 347 b *
 The incidents to a remitter, 348 a †
 Where a remitter shall operate upon a freehold in law descended before entry, 348 a ¶
 Where tenant in tail disseises his discontinuee, his issue shall be remitted, notwithstanding the infancy or coverture of the discontinuee, 348 a ¶
 Where tenant in tail in seoff his issue within age, he is remitted; fecus of a use remitted to him upon a seoffment, 348 b †, 350 b †, 351 b ¶
 What charges by the issue shall be avoided by a remitter, and what not, 349 a *
 Where an usurpation shall work a remitter, 194 a
 Where the issue in tail within age enters, or intermarries with the discontinuee, he is remitted; fecus if of full age, 202 b †, 350 b * ¶
 Where a right without an action, or an action without a right, shall work no remitter, 348 a † *, 349 b †, 356 a †
 Where tenant in tail suffers an erroneous recovery, and disseises the recoveror, and dies, his issue is not remitted, 349 b *
 Where a stranger usurps upon a purchaser of an advowson, and grants to him in fee, who dies, his issue is not remitted, 349 b *
 Where a moiety of the lands discontinued descending upon the issue in tail shall be a remitter only for the same moiety, 350 a † *
 Where tenant in tail enfeoffs his issue within age and a stranger, no remitter to the issue, but for a moiety, 350 a ¶
 Where the husband discontinues, and retakes to himself and his wife during his life, the feme is remitted, 350 b ¶, 351 b * ¶
 Where an infant or feme covert shall be remitted against their deed indented, or acceptance by fine, 353 a *
 Where upon a discontinuance by the husband by fine, a grant and render to the wife shall be a remitter to her, albeit she be no party to the writ, or consens, 353 a ¶
 Where baron and feme tenants in special tail levy a fine at the common law, and retake in fee, the feme is not remitted, but her issue upon the discent shall, 353 a *
 Where the issue in tail of full age takes husband, a lease to her and her husband by the discontinuee shall be a remitter, 353 b ¶
 Where a man shall be remitted against his own discontinuance and reprisal, 354 a † *
 Where a remitter to the particular estate shall be a remitter to all in the reversion or remainder, 354 b † *
 Where a remitter to the particular estate shall be a remitter to the reversion, notwithstanding a mean remainder be barred during the discontinuance, 354 b *
 Where a remitter to the particular estate shall devise a remainder or reversion settled in the king during the discontinuance, ibid.
 Where after a recovery by default against a feme, a lease to her and her husband shall be a remitter to the feme, 355 a †, 356 a † *
 Where the discontinuee of the husband enfeoffs the husband and wife, and a stranger, the wife is remitted to a moiety, 356 b †
 Where the discontinuee of the husband makes a lease to the wife, the disagreement of the husband shall not oust the feme of her remitter, 356 b ¶, 357 a †
 Where the wife being remitted during the coverture, may after the death of her husband waive her remitter, and where not, 357 a †
 Where tenant in tail to him and his heirs females discontinues, and retakes in fee, and dies, having a daughter, the son born after shall not devise the remitter, 357 a *
 Where covin in the husband and wife to disseise the discontinuee, and in seoff them, shall hinder the remitter to the wife, 357 a ¶
 Where tenant in tail and his issue disseise the discontinuee to the use of the father, who dies, the issue is not remitted against the discontinuee, albeit he be against all others, 357 b †
 Where one jointenant is of covin to disseise the heir of their disseisor, and enfeoff them, the other being not privy to the covin is remitted for his part, 357 b *
 Where the husband discontinues and retakes for life the remainder to his wife, by the death of the husband the wife is remitted before entry, and cannot waive, 358 a *, b *

 Where a freehold in law accruing to the issue in tail or disseisee by survivorship, or by reason of a remainder, shall work a remitter, and where not, 358 b ¶, 359 a and b †
 Where an abbot or bishop discontinues, and retakes in fee by licence, the successor shall be remitted and defeat the mean charges, 360 a * ¶, b †
 Where a remitter shall be wrought by a matter in pais albeit the discontinuance groweth by matter of record, 355 a †, 356 a ¶, 361 b † *
 Where in a formedon or writ of entry the tenant pleads non-tenure or disclaims, by the entry of the issue in tail or disseisee, they are remitted before judgment, 362 a ¶, 363 a
 Where a claim in pais shall not hinder a remitter; fecus of an indenture, or a claim of record, 363 b ¶, 364 a ¶
 Where a man of full age having a right of entry takes an estate he is remitted; fecus of a right of action, 363 b †, 364 a † *
 Where a remitter to one jointenant shall be a remitter to his companion, and where not, 364 b *

Rents. See Annuity, Appendant, Apportionment, Confirmation, Discontinuance, Disseisin, Distress, Extinguishment, Fealty, Grants, Manor, Reservation, Seisin, Stat. 32. H. 8. c. 37. Suspension.

The derivation of the word, 141 b ¶
 The division of rents, ibid.
 Rent-service what, 87 b †, 141 b ¶, 142 b †
 Such rent distrainable of common right, 142 a †, b †
 How such rent may become seck, 150 a ¶, b † ¶, 151 a †
 To what purposes such rent, become seck, shall be said to participate of the nature of a rent service, and to what not, 150 b *, 153 a † *, 154 b *, 309 b ¶
 Out of what things a rent may be granted or reserved, and out of what not, 47 a †, 142 a *, 144 a * ¶
 Where a tenure being by homage, fealty, and rent, by a recovery or grant of the rent the homage and fealty shall pass, and where not, 151 a * Rent-charge, what, 243 b *, 144 a *
 Where a grant to distrain shall amount to a rent-charge 146 b ¶, 148 a †, 308 a ¶, b ¶
 Where words in a grant shall amount to a rent-charge, albeit there be no express words of charge or distress, 147 a †
 Where in a grant of a rent a proviso not to charge the person of the grantor shall be good, and where not, 146 a per tot. pag.
 Where in such a grant a proviso not to charge the land shall be void, 146 a ¶
 Where the person of the grantor shall be charged with a rent-charge, notwithstanding a proviso to discharge his person, 146 b †
 Rent-seck, what, and whence so called, 143 b ¶, 144 a ¶
 Where a rent is granted out of one manor with a clause of distress in another, what rent it shall be, and how construed, 147 a per tot. pag.
 Where a rent is granted out of two acres, with a clause of distress in one, or to two persons with a distress to one, what rent it shall be construed, 147 b †
 Rent reserved to the lessor and his executors, to whom it shall go, 396 b ¶
 When it shall go to the heir, when to the executor, 200 a *
 How to be levied if an execution on the tenant's goods, 397 b
 Where the same rent may be both charge and seck diversis temporibus, 147 b †
 Where a rent in fee is granted out of lands in fee and a term for years, or solely out of a term for years, how it shall be construed, ibid.
 Where a man seised of twenty acres grants a rent of 20s. percipiend' de quolibet acra, how it shall be construed, 147 b *, 267 b *
 Where the bargainor and bargainee join in the grant of a rent, how it shall be construed before, and how after enrollment, 147 b *
 Where a rent granted for owelty of partition shall be good without deed; fecus of a rent of owelty of exchange, 169 a ¶
 What real actions lie for the recovery of a rent-charge, or seck after seisin, 160 a ¶
 Where money given in seisin of a rent before the day, shall not be abated out of the rent, 315 a †
 After the expiration of the lease, how to be recovered, 397 b *
 How 'tis, how 'tis not discharged, 402 a ¶
 When due, 402 a †

Replevin:

T H E T A B L E.

Replevin. See Property, Stat. Marlb. cap. 22.

The etymology of the word (replevin) 145 b †, 161 a *
 Where such writ lieth, ibid.
 How many ways goods may be replevied, 145 b †
 Where a replevin brought by him that had no property in the goods at the time of the taking shall be good, and where not, ibid.
 Where a man may have a replevin of goods not distrained, 145 b *
 The several pledges the sheriff ought to take in a replevin, 145 b †
 Where a replevin lieth notwithstanding a grant to keep the goods distrained against gages and pledges, 145 b †
 Where a replevin lieth notwithstanding the property once tried and found for the defendant, 145 b *
 Where the beasts of several men are taken, they shall not join in a replevin, 145 b †
 In a replevin property to the plaintiff and a stranger, or where there be two plaintiffs, property to one of them, a good plea, ibid.

Report.

What, and whence derived, 293 a †

Request. See Condition, Demand, Dower.

What shall be a sufficient request by the wife to entitle her to damages in a writ of dower, and what not, 32 b †
 Where an estate is to be made upon request by force of a condition, by whom, when, and where such request ought to be made, 220 a * †

Resceit. See Stat. W. 2. c. 3. Gloucester, c. 11.

The etymology and signification of the word, 192 b *, 352 b †
 Where a feme being received shall plead, and advantage shall be taken against her as a feme sole, and where not, 353 a †
 Where in an action of waste against the husband and wife, upon the default of the husband the wife shall be received, 355 a †, b †
 Where he in the reversion shall be received upon the default of tenant for life, albeit the statute speaketh of a remainder, 356 a * Rescous.

The description and derivation of rescous, 160 b †
 Where the cattle distrained go into the house of the owner, the not delivery of them shall be esteemed in law a rescous, 161 a †
 Where the owner may make rescous of a distress taken without cause, and where not, 47 b †, 160 b †, 161 a † *
 Where rescous shall be a disseisin of a rent-service, and where not, 160 b †, 161 a †
 Where the lord distrains his tenant in the highway within his fee, the tenant may make rescous, 161 a †
 Where the tenant may make rescous upon a distress of the lord taken out of his fee, and where not, 161 a † *
 Where the party not guilty may make rescous upon an arrest of the sheriff for felony, and where not, 161 a *
 How to be punished, 397 a * Reservation. See Annuity, Condition, Confirmation, Jointenants, Rents.

The derivation of the word, 142 b †, 143 a
 What shall be said good words of reservation, 47 a †, 144 a †
 The difference between an exception and a reservation, 47 a *
 To what person the reservation ought to be made, and where it shall be good to a stranger to the land, and where not, 47 a *, 143 b †, 213 a and b
 Where a reservation to his heirs without any thing to the party himself shall be good, and where not, 99 b †, 213 b † †, 214 a †
 Reservation to a man, or his heirs, how it shall be construed, 214 a †
 Where a rent reserved to one jointenant shall be good also to his companion, and where not, 47 a *, 192 a *, 214 a †, 318 a *
 Where a rent is reserved generally, to what persons it shall extend, 47 a *
 Where the special reservation of the party shall destroy the general intendment of the law, 23 a *, 47 a *, 305 b †

What things the lord may reserve for rent, and what not, 91 b * †, 142 a *
 Upon what estate a rent service may be reserved at this day, and upon what not, 142 b, 143 a
 Where a rent reserved upon a bargain and sale shall be good, 144 a *
 Where a rent may be reserved upon a release, and where not, 193 b †
 Where a reservation shall amount to a grant, and where not, 170 a †, 143 b †, 144 a †
 Where an entry for condition broken cannot be reserved to a stranger, 214 b †
 Where tenant for life and he in the reversion join in a lease for life reserving a rent, how it shall enure, 214 a *
 Where the lord releases to his tenant by fealty and rent, saving or reserving to him his rent, what rent it shall be construed, 150 a †
 Reservation at Michaelmas and our Lady-day, upon a lease made in February, shall be construed at our Lady day and Michaelmas, 217 b †

Responsalis.

The signification of the word, 128

Resummons.

The nature of such writ, and where it lieth, 135 b †
 The several kinds of resummons, ibid.
 Where after judgment that the tenant shall go without day, the plaintiff may continue the cause by a resummons or re-attachment, and where not, 135 b †, 363 a †

Retraxit.

A retraxit, what, and how it differeth from a nonsuit and departure, 138 b †, 139 a †
 The several sorts of retraxit, and the form of entering them, 139 a †

Reve.

The signification and derivation of the word, 61 b †
 The office and duty of a reve, 62 a †

Reversion. See Appendant, Remainder.

The etymology of the word, 142 b *
 The description of a reversion, 22 b †
 Where an use after divers particular estates is limited to the right heirs of the feoffor, it shall be said in him as a reversion, 22 b *
 Where a man makes a gift in tail or lease for life, the remainder to his right heirs, it shall be in him as a reversion, 22 b †
 Where a feoffment is made to the use of the feoffor in tail, and after to the feoffee in fee, the feoffee hath no reversion, ibid.
 What reversion shall be accounted assets, and what not, 173 a †
 Where a reversion upon an estate-tail shall be a sufficient continuance of privity between parceners to take advantage of a warranty or condition in law, 175 b †

Reviver. See Extinguishment.

Revocation. See Prerogative, Uses.

By what acts a power to revoke uses shall be extinct and defeated, and by what not, 237 a *, 215, 237, 265 b †
 Where a power of revocation may be apportioned, and where not, 237 a * Right. See Corporation, Releases.

The signification and extent of the word (right) 158 b †, 265 a †, 345 a †, b †
 The several kinds of right, 266 a *, 345 b †
 Common right, what, and how taken, 142 a †
 Where the law more respecteth a less estate by right, than a greater by wrong, 42 b †
 A right cannot die, 279 b †
 The several natures of writs of right, 158 b †
 Where in such writ the demandant ought to allege seisin within time of limitation; secus in case of the king, 294 a †, b †
 The several times of limitation in a writ of right, 114 b †, 115 a †

T H E T A B L E.

By what means a future right may be barred, and by what not, 265 a ¶, b †
 Where a recontinuance of a right of possession out of the hands of him that hath the absolute right shall draw with it the meer right to the land, and where not, 266 a * ¶, 278 b ¶, 279 a † *, 283 b * ¶
 Where in a writ of right the meer right shall be preferred before the right of possession, 279 a †, b †, 283 b †, 284 a †
 Where a writ of right lieth for a rent, 160 a ¶
 What shall be said a sufficient seisin to maintain a writ of right, and what not, 210 b ¶, 281 a per tot. pag. 293 a † ¶
 Where judgment final shall be given in such writ, albeit the grand assise give not their verdict upon the meer right, 295 b †
 The form of the judgment in a writ of right, ibid.
 Within what time claim ought to be made for the avoidance of such judgment, 254 ¶, 262 a * Riot. See Forcible Entry.

How many persons may make one, 257 a ¶

Robbery. See Appeal.

The acceptation and derivation of the word, 288 a *

Ruscaria.

The meaning of ruscaria, 5 a †

Saliva.

What saliva is, 4 b *

What shall pass in a grant by that name, ibid.

Scire Facias. See Stat. W. 2. c. 35. 32 H 8. c. 5.

Such writ whence so called, and where it lieth, 290 b *

A release of actions, a good bar in a scire facias, 290 b ¶, 291 a

Where and upon what judgment the tenant having a warranty, and a recovery being had against him, shall have a scire facias upon assets descended after, and where not, 366 a *

Where in such writ the tenant shall recover the land lost, and where the assets descended, 366 a * Scutagium. See Escuage.

The meaning of the word, 68 b *, 75 a †

Seals. See Protection.

The antiquity of sealing charters, 7 a *

When sealing with arms began, ibid.

Inheritances passing under the great seal of England, shall be discendible according to the common law of England, 9 a * Seisin. See Bastard, Conditions, Curtesy, Dower, Possession, Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 2. Villenage.

The signification of the word, 153 a *

The several sorts of seisions, 29 a †

Where a seisin of parcel shall be a sufficient seisin in law to have an assise for the whole, 153 a *, 315 a *

What shall be said a sufficient seisin of a rent to have an assise, and what not, 159 b ¶, 160 a *, 314 b ¶, 315 a †

Where seisin of a rent by the lord before his feoffment of the manor, shall not enable him to bring an assise after entry for a condition broken, 202 b †

To what purposes the seisin of a rent shall be a seisin of the reversion, and to what not, 15 a *

Where seisin of a rent by the hands of one jointenant, shall be good for all, 315 a *

Where the seisin of homage or fealty shall be a seisin of all other services, 68 a ¶

Selda.

The signification of selda, 4 b *

Selo Terre.

What it means, 5 b ¶

Sequatur sub suo Periculo.

Whence so called, 101 b ¶
 Where the writ lieth, ibid.

Serjeanty.

The description of tenure by grand serjeanty, and why so called, 105 b †

How it differeth from escuage, 105 b ¶, 106 a ¶, and b

The special properties of this service, 105 b ¶

The holding by what offices shall be said grand serjeanty, 106 a † *

Where tenure by cornage shall be grand serjeanty, and where not, 107 a †

The relief of a tenant by grand serjeanty, 106 b †

Where such tenant may make a deputy, and where not, 107 a *

Tenure invenire hominem ad guerram infra 4 Mariæ, grand serjeanty, ibid.

What persons are capable to perform this service in person, and what not, 107 b per tot. pag.

The incidents and fruits of this service, 108 a †

Tenure by petit serjeanty described, 108 a *

Such tenure but socage, ibid.

Services. See Appendant, Apportionment, Extinguishment, Fealty, Grants, Homage, Knights Service, Rents, Seisin, Tenure.

Servitium, quid et quotuplex? 65 a †

What said to be foreign service, 68 b ¶, 69 b *, 74 b ¶

Where a corporal service may be performed by deputy, and where not, 70 a b, 83 a †, 107 a *, b † *

What corporal services may become seck, and what not, 151 a † ¶

Shaw.

What shaw is, 4 b ¶

Sheriff. See Elegit, Execution, Stat. W. 2. c. 19.

The etymology of the word, 109 b ¶, 168 a *

Whence called viscount, 168 a *

His office and duty, ibid.

The antiquity of this office, and how called anciently, 168 a ¶

Shire.

The derivation of the word, 50 a *, 168 a *

From what antiquity this kingdom divided into shires, 168 a ¶

County, whence so called, 50 a †

Simony. See Stat. 31 El. c. 6.

What it is, 400 a *

When to be given in evidence, 400 a *

How odious in law, 17 b *, 89 a †, 344 b *

Disables the clerk for ever, 120

Socage. See Escuage, Guardian, Relief, Stat. Marl. c. 17. 4 and 5 Annæ.

The etymology of the word, 86 a †, b †

Tenure in socage described, 85 b †

How such tenants were anciently called, 86 a †

What tenure which is not knights service shall be said a tenure in socage, and what not, 86 a * ¶, 87 a

What things incident of common right to such tenure, 91 a †

What person may be capable of a guardianship in socage, and what not, 88 b †

Where a guardian in socage shall have a ward by cause of ward, ibid.

Where the next chosen of part of the mother shall be guardian in socage before the next of part of the father, et è converso, 22 a †, 88 a ¶

Where two are in equal degree of affinity to the heir, which shall be guardian in socage, 88 a *

Where he shall be guardian, to whom there may be any possibility of descent, 88 b † *

The difference between the common and civil law in that point, 88 b *

Where such guardian cannot forfeit or dispose of his interest, 88 b ¶, 89 a †

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where he shall not present to the benefice of the heir, 17 b *, 89 a †

At what age the heir shall have an account against guardian in focage, 89 a †

For what things he shall be accomptable, 88 a, 89 b *

What allowances he ought to have upon his accompt, 89 a *

Where upon such accompt no capias lieth against the guardian, ibid.

Where a stranger shall be charged as guardian in focage, 89 b ¶

Where the guardian occupying after the heir accomplish his age of fourteen, shall be charged in an accompt as bailiff, 90 a *

Sokemans and Sokmanni.

The meaning of the words, 5 b *, 85 a †

Solinus & Solinum Terræ.

What they are, 5 a ¶

Stadium Terræ.

The signification thereof, 5 b †

Stagnum.

Quid, and what passes by it, 5 a ¶

Stanlaw.

The etymology of the word, 4 b ¶

Statutes.

Concerning Statutes in General. See Prerogative, Prescription.

Rules observable in the construction of statutes, 381 a ¶, b † *

The preamble, a good mean to find the meaning of a statute, 79 a *

The equity of a statute, what, 24 b †

Where cases within the same mischief shall be taken within the same remedy of a statute, 76 a ¶, 77 b †, 290 b †, 365 b * ¶

Where a penal statute shall be taken by equity, and where not, 46 b †, 154 a *, 236 a *, 268 b *, 54 b

What shall be said a statute or act of parliament, where the king only is mentioned, and where not, 98 a ¶, b *

Where the statute law and common law meet, which shall be preferred, 49 a †

Where a statute shall be extended by equity to other persons than are named therein, 290 a †

Where a statute speaking of a reversion, shall extend to a remainder, et de converso, 280 b *, 356 a *

Where a statute shall extend by equity to other actions than are mentioned, 54 b †, 365 b †

Where a statute shall extend by construction to another manner of title or conveyance than is mentioned, 326 a, 365 b *

Where the generality of the words of a statute shall be restrained by equity, and construction made against the letter, 272 a *, b †, 290 a † *, 360 a †, 365 b ¶, 366 a †, 381 b *

Where the recital of a statute in other words shall be good, and where not, 98 b *

Shall never be construed to prejudice an innocent person, 360 a †

What is one, what not, is to be determined by the judges, 98 b *

Is most naturally expounded by some other part of itself, 383 b †

Magna Charta, Edit. Anno 9 Regis H. 3.

The divers appellations in law of this statute, 81 a † *

The several times it hath been confirmed, 81 a ¶

No other but a confirmation of the common law, 81 a *, 115 b *

Judgment or statute against this charter, void, 81 a ¶

Why said to be made 10 H. 3. when in truth it was 9 H. 3. 43 a ¶

Magna Charta, c. 2. of reliefs, 36 a * ¶, 83 b † *, 106 a ¶

— c. 4. of waste, 53 b *

— c. 7. of quarentines, 32 b *

Magna Charta, c. 11. of common pleas, 71 b *

— c. 20. of castleguard, 70 a *

— c. 29. of wager of law. Who said to be ballivus within this statute, 168 b † *

— c. 32. of alienation of part of the tenancy, 43 a *

— c. 36. of mortmain, 2 b *

Merton, Edit. 20 Regis H. 3.

Merton, c. 1. of dower, 32 b *

— c. 3. of redisseisin, 154 a and b

— c. 5. of usury against an infant, 246 b *

— c. 9. of wards, 76 a ¶, 80 a, 81 a

— c. 8. of limitation, 114 b ¶, 115 a †

Marlbridge, Edit. 52 Regis H. 3.

Marlebridge, c. 17. of wards, what shall be said legitima ætas within this statute for the heir to have an account against the guardian in focage, 89 a †

— c. 22. of replevins, 145 b *

— c. ult. which giveth a writ of entry in the post, 238 b ¶, 239 a †

Westm. 1. Edit. Anno 3 Regis E. 1.

Westm. 1. c. 13. of rapes, 123 b ¶

— c. 21. of waste by guardians, 53 b *

— c. 26. of extortion, 368 b † *

— c. 36. of ayde pur file marier & faire ses chevalers, 162 b *

— c. 38. of limitation, 114 b ¶, 115 a †

— c. 40. of counterplea of voucher, 358 b ¶

Glocester, Edit. Anno 6 Reg. E. 1.

Glocester, c. 1. of damages, 359 b ¶, 360 a †

— c. 3. of collateral warranty, and the exposition of the several parts of this statute, 365 a ¶, b † *, 366 a, 381 a ¶ and b, 382 a and b, 383 a and b †

— c. 5. of waste, 53 b, 54 b, 200 b *, 247 b *, 355 b † ¶

— c. 6. of mortdance for given to the heirs of several degrees from the common ancestor, 164 a ¶

— c. 11. of rescet of tenant for years, &c. and its exposition, and to what persons it extendeth, 46 a † *

Vide Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 15.

De Religiosis, Edit. Anno 7 Regis E. 1.

De Rel. cap. 1. of mortmain, 2 b *

Aston Burnel, Edit. Anno 11 E. 1.

Aston Bur. cap. 1. of recognifance, 289 b *

Westm. 2. Anno 13 Reg. E. 1.

Westm. 2. cap. 1. De donis conditionalibus, and what alienations are restrained by this statute, and what not, 18 b ¶, 19 a, 24 a ¶, 223 b ¶, 224 a †, 262 a ¶, 327 b † *

The occasion of making this statute, and the commendation of the makers thereof, 19 a †, 392 b †

Westm. 2. cap. 3. of cui in vitâ, and the rescet of femes, 280 a, 352 b ¶, 353 a †, 355 a ¶, b *, 356 a *

— cap. 4. which giveth a quod ei de forceat, and the exposition of it, and to what persons and actions it extendeth, 331 b *, 354 b ¶, 355 a and b, 356 a †

— cap. 5. of quare impedit and darrein presentment, 344 b †

— cap. 9. of forejudger of mesnes, and to what persons this statute extendeth, and to what not, 100 a ¶, b †

— cap. 12. of auditors and account, 89 a *, 295 a ¶

— cap. 13. of appeals, 139 b *, 289 a ¶

— cap. 18. of ilegit and executions, and how the sheriff ought to demean himself therein, 289 b †

— cap. 21. of cessavit, 154 a †

— cap. 23. of waste by jointenants and tenants in common, 200 b *

— cap. 24. of a writ of entry in consimili carui, 54 b *

— cap. 26. of double damages in a redisseisin, 154 a *

— cap. 38. of jurors, 158 a †

— cap. 39. of ravishment of ward, 136 b ¶

— cap. 45. of execution by seire fieri after the year, 291 a †

T H E T A B L E.

De Mercatoribus, Edit. Anno 13 Reg. E. 1.

De Mercatoribus, cap. 1. of recognisance, and the exposition of the parts of this statute, 286 b *, 290 a * ¶
*Anno 18. E. 1. quia emptores terrarum, 43 b *, 98 b, 143 a  Anno 28. E. 1. artic. super chart. cap. 9. of jurors, 152 a †

Stat. Edit. Tempore Regis E. 3.

Anno 1 E. 3. cap. 12. of alienations without licence, 43 b †
Anno 25 E. 3. cap. 19. of protections, quia indebit, 131 b *
Anno 31 E. 3. cap. 11. of administrators, 133 b *
Anno 34 E. 3. cap. 15. of alienations without licence, 43 b †
Anno 34 E. 3. cap. 16. of nonclaim, 262 a † Anno 36 E. 3. cap. 15. of counts not abating for want of form, 304 b *. Vide title Pleadings.
Anno 38 E. 3. cap. 4. of obligations in the third person made void, and to what bonds construed to extend, and to what not, 229 b ¶, 230 a *

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis R. 2.

Anno 1 R. 2. cap. 9. of feoffments for maintenance, 369 a †
Anno 2 R. 2. cap. 10. of assises in confinio comitatū, 154 a †
Anno 9 R. 2. cap. 2. of villeins, 124 b ¶, 125 a Anno 12 R. 2. cap. 2. of placing officers of justice, 134 a ¶
Anno 16 R. 2. cap. 5. of præmunire, 130 a †

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis H. 4.

Anno 1 H. 4. cap. 6. concerning grants by the king, and what persons are restrained by this act, and what not, 133 a ¶
Anno 2 H. 4. cap. 7. of nonsuits, 139 b †
Anno 4 H. 4. cap. 17. of age to enter into religion, 157 a †

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis H. 5.

Anno 2 H. 5. cap. 3. of jurors, and how expounded by equity, 272 a * ¶, b †

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis H. 6.

Anno 8 H. 6. cap. 9. of forcible entry, 257 b †

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis H. 7.

Anno 4 H. 7. cap. 17. of the wardship of the heir of cestuy que use, 84 b ¶
Anno 4 H. 7. cap. 24. of fines, 262 a †, 326 a *, 372 a ¶, b †
Anno 11 H. 7. cap. 20. of discontinuance of women's jointures, and what shall be said an alienation of the wife within the statute, and what not, 326 b *, 365 b *, 366 a †, 381 a †
Anno 19 H. 7. cap. 15. of uses, 91 a *, 117 a ¶

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis H. 8.

Anno 7 H. 8. cap. 4. of avowries by recoverors, 104 b *
Anno 21 H. 8. cap. 4. of sale of lands by executors, 113 a *
Anno 21 H. 8. cap. 15. of falsifying recoveries by lessors for years, and of avowries by the recoverors, 46 a *, 104 b * ¶
Anno 21 H. 8. cap. 19. of avowries, and the exposition of several parts of the statutes, 268 b † *, 312 a †
Anno 23 H. 8. cap. 3. of attainments, 294 a * ¶ Anno 23 H. 8. cap. 5. of giving the special matter in evidence by an officer authorized by the commission of sewers, 213 a ¶ Anno 23 H. 8. cap. 9. of recognizance and statute-staple, and the exposition of the parts of this statute, 289 b *, 290 a *. Vide Stat. 32. H. 8. cap. 5.
Anno 26 H. 8. cap. 13. of forfeiture of lands for treason, 372 b †, 392 b *
Anno 27 H. 8. cap. 10. of uses, 187 b *, 237 a *, 272 a †, 287 a * Anno 27 H. 8. cap. eod. of women's jointures, and what shall be said a good jointure within this statute, and what not, 36 b per tot. pag. Vide tit. Dower.
Anno 28 H. 8. c. 15. of trial before commissioners, for piracy, robbery, &c. upon the sea, 391 a * ¶ Anno 31 H. 8. c. 1 and 34. H. 8. c. 5. of wills and wardships, and the exposition of the several parts of these statutes, 76 a ¶, 78 a per tot. pag. b †, 111 b per tot. pag.
Anno 32 H. 8. c. 2. of limitations, and what actions and services shall be said within the statute, and what not, 115 a †

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 5. of extents and executions, and the exposition of the several parts of this statute, 298 b ¶, b † *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 7. of tithes, and the remedy for them, 159 a † *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 9. of maintenance, 399 a *

What shall be said a pretended right or title within this statute, and what not, 369 a *

What persons may buy or sell a pretended right or title within this statute, and what not, 369 a ¶, b †

Of what estate such pretended right may be, ibid.

By what way or means such person may gain such pretended right or title, and by what not, 369 b *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 28. of leases by tenants in tail, husband and wife, and spiritual corporations, and what things requisite to the perfection of such leases, and what not, 44 a and b, 333 a *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. eod. of discontinuance of the wife's estate by the husband, and the exposition of the several clauses in this branch of the statute, 326 a per tot. pag.

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 31. of recoveries suffered by tenants for life, 362 a †. Vide Stat. 14. Eliz. c. 8.

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 32. of partition between jointenants and tenants in common, and the exposition of the parts of this statute, 169 a *, 173 a ¶, b †, 187 a *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 33. of discent which take away entries, and the exposition of the several parts of this statute, 238 a * ¶, 265 a *. Vide tit. Entry Congeable.

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 34. of conditions, and the exposition of the several parts of this statute, and what person shall take advantage of the condition within this statute, and what not, 215 a, b †

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 36. of fines, 372 b ¶. Vide Stat. 4. H. 7. c. 24.

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 37. of remedy for the arrearages of rents, and the exposition of all the parts of this statute, 162 a ¶, and b per tot. pag. 351 b †

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 16. of alien artificers, 396 a *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 38. of marriages, 235 a *

Anno 32 H. 8. c. 46. and 33 H. 8. c. 21. concerning the erection of the court of wards, 77 a ¶

Anno 34 H. 8. c. 5. of wills and wards. Vide Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 1.

Anno 34 H. 8. c. 20. of recoveries against tenant in tail, the reversion or remainder in the king, and the exposition of the several parts of this statute, 335 a *, 372 b * ¶, 373 a †

Anno 35 H. 8. c. 2. of trial of treason committed out of the realm, 261 b *

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis E. 6.

Anno 2 E. 6. c. 6. of remedies for subtraction of prædial tithes, 159 a *

Anno 2 E. 6. c. 8. concerning the finding of offices, and the several benefits arising by the same statute, 77 b per tot. pag. 245 a *

Anno 3 & 4 E. 6. c. 4. of pleading a conflat or inspeximus of the king's letters patents, 225 b *. Vide Stat. 13. Eliz. c. 6.

Stat. Edit. Temp. Reginae Eliz.

Anno 13. Eliz. c. 6. of pleading a conflat or inspeximus of the king's letters patents, 225 b *. Vide Stat. 3 & 4 E. 6. c. 4.

Anno 13. Eliz. c. 10. of leases by ecclesiastical corporations, and the exposition of the parts of this statute, and why made, 44 a and b. Vide Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28.

Anno 13. Eliz. c. 15. against fraudulent conveyances, &c. and how it shall be extended by equity, 76 a ¶, 290 b †

Anno 14. Eliz. c. 8. of feigned recoveries suffered by tenant for life, 203 b *, 356 a ¶, 362 a † *

Anno 18. Eliz. c. 10. of leases by spiritual persons, 44 a and b. Vide Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 28. and 13. Eliz. c. 10.

Anno 12. Eliz. c. 4. of fraudulent conveyances, &c. and who shall be said a purchaser within this statute, and who not, 5 b ¶, 290 b †

Anno 27. Eliz. c. 6. of jurors, 272 b *

Anno 31. Eliz. c. 6. of simony and the exposition of it, 120 a *

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis Jacobi.

Anno 1 Jac. c. 3. of estates made to the king by bishops, 44 a †. Vide Stat. 13. Eliz. c. 10. and 18. Eliz. c. 10.

Anno 7 Jac. c. 5. of giving a special matter in evidence by

T H E T A B L E.

by the king's officers, 283 a *. Vide Stat. 23 H. 8. c. 5.
Anno 10 Jac. 1. of limitations, 399 a ¶

Stat. Edit. Temp. Regis Car. 2.

Anno 12 Car. 2. c. 24. of fines for alienation, 396 b ¶
Anno 12 Car. 2. c. 24. of tenures, 398 a ¶, b †, 399 a *
Anno 12 Car. 2. of making mayhem felony, 400 b * Anno 29 Car. 2. of parol leases, 397 b ¶
 ——— of devising land, 396 b ¶

Stat. Edit. Temp. W. et M.

Anno 1 W. & M. Sess. 2. of dispensations, 400 a *

Stat. Edit. Temp. W. 3.

Anno 7 & 8 W. 3. c. 37. of granting licence to alien in mortmain, 399 a *
Anno 11 & 12 W. 3. of recusants, 396 a ¶

Stat. Edit. Temp. Annæ Reginae.

Anno 4 & 5 Annæ. of pleading double, 401 b ¶
 ——— of venire facias's, 400 b *
 ——— of pleading payment of bond, 401 a †
 ——— of attornment, 402 a †
 ——— of demurrers, 398 †
 ——— of pleading dilatory pleas, 400 b *
 ——— of writs of accompt against the executors of guardians, &c. 172 a ¶
Anno 6 Annæ, c. 18. of tenants at sufferance, 398 a * Anno 7 Annæ. of usurpations, 402 a *
 ——— of distresses, 397 a *

Statute-Merchant and Staple. See Execution,
Stat. Aston Burnel, Stat. De Mercatoribus,
Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 5.

Stetbe or Stede.

What it is, 4 b

Steward. See Courts.

The etymology and signification of the word (seneschal), 61 a ¶, b †
 The office and duty of a steward of a manor, 61 b †
 The retainer of a steward of a court, good without deed, ibid.
 In what courts the steward is judge, and in what not, 58 a *

Stowe.

What it is, 4 b ¶

Summons and Severance. See Detinue.

Summons, what and whence derived, 158 b *
 The several kinds of summons, and by what persons it ought to be made, ibid.
 Severance what, and the divers sorts of severance, 139 b †

Surrender. See Copyhold, Waste.

The description of a surrender, 337 b ¶
 The several kinds of surrenders, 338 a †
 Where and how a future interest may be surrendered, 338 a *
 Where and of what things a surrender shall be good without deed, and where and of what not, 338 a * ¶
 Where the acceptance of a void estate shall be a surrender, 218 b *
 Where the feoffment of a particular tenant to him in the reversion or remainder shall amount to a surrender, 42 a †, 252 a *
 Where tenant for life and he in the reversion join in a feoffment by parol, this shall be a surrender of the tenant, and the feoffment of him in the reversion, 302 b ¶
 Where tenant for life makes a lease for his own life to his lessor, the remainder to his lessor and a stranger in fee, this shall be a surrender for one moiety, and forfeiture for the other, 335 a *
 Where and to what respects a particular estate after surrender shall be said to have continuance, and where and to what not, 338 a ¶, b † *

 Where a surrender to one jointenant shall enure to both, 192 a ¶, 214 a †
 Where a surrender upon condition shall be good, 218 b *
 Where a freehold and inheritance may be conveyed by surrender in court, 59 b †

Suspence. See Curtesy, Discent, Extinguishment, Grants, Knight-Service, Warranty.

The signification and derivation of the word, 313 a *
 Where a feignory or rent-service may be suspended in part, and in esse for part, and where not, 148 b †
 To what purposes a feignory suspended in part of the estate shall be said to continue, and to what not, 314 a †
 Where a thing in suspence in the ancestor shall take effect by descent in his heirs, 314 a ¶, b †
 Where the debtor make the debtee his executor, the debt is in suspence, 264 b ¶
 Where by the intermarriage of a feme executrix with the debtor, the debt shall be in suspence, ibid.

Tail. See Attornment, Conditions, Devise, Discontinuance, Entry Congeable, Heirs, Leases, Præmunire, Quid Juris Clamat, Recovery, Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 24. 32 H. 8. c. 28. 32 H. 8. c. 36. 34 H. 8. c. 20. 26 H. 8. c. 23. Warranty.

The etymology and derivation of the word (tail), 18 b ¶, 22 a †
 The division of estates-tail, 19 b *
 The description of a tenant in general tail, 19 b ¶
 The description of a tenant in special tail, 20 b ¶
 What things may be intailed, and what not, 19 b ¶, 20 a † * ¶, 392 b ¶
 Where an estate-tail may be created without the word (heirs), 20 b †
 Where it may be created without the word (body), 20 b †
 Where without the word (engendred), 20 b *
 What things incident to an estate-tail, 224 a †
 Where by a gift in tail a reversion is settled in the donor, 22 a ¶, b †
 Where the will of the donor in estates-tail shall be observed, and where not, 20 b †, 21 a †, 24 b * ¶
 Where a man shall inherit per formam doni, who is not issue of the body of the donee, 20 b *, 26 b * ¶, 220 a *
 The tenure between such donor and donee, and where the tenant shall hold as his donor holds over, and where not, 23 a *
 A gift to a man and a woman not married, or where one or both are severally married and to the heirs of their bodies, a good tail, 20 b ¶, 25 b ¶
 Where a man may convey an estate to himself in tail, 22 b ¶
 A gift to a woman and two men, and the heirs of their bodies, how it shall enure, 25 b ¶, 184 a †
 A gift to two husbands and their wives, and the heirs of their bodies, how it shall enure, 25 b ¶
 A gift to one and his heirs, to have to him and the heirs of his body, &c. et converso, what estate, 21 a †
 A gift to a man and the heir of his body, et uni hæredi ipsius hæredis, a good tail, 22 a *
 Where the issue male inheritable per formam doni, ought to convey himself by males, and the female by females, 25 a * ¶, 377 a † *
 Where upon a gift the husband shall take in special tail, and the wife nothing, or but for life, &c. et contra, and where construction shall be made according to the inclination of the word (heirs), 26 a per tot. pag.
 A gift to the husband and wife, and the heirs of the body of the survivor, what estate, and when said to vest, 26 a ¶
 A gift to a man and his heirs of the body of such a feme a good tail, and they shall be intended to be gotten by the donee, 26 b †
 A gift to a man and the heirs of the body of his father, a good tail; secus of a gift to him and his heirs of the body, &c. 26 b *, 27 a †
 A gift to a man and his heirs males or females, a fee simple; secus of a devise, 27 a ¶
 A gift to one and the heirs males of his body, with condition to revert if he die without heirs females of his body a void condition, 164 a *
 A gift to a man to have to him and the heirs males of his body, and to him and the heirs females of his body, how it shall be construed, 377 a ¶
 Where and what leases by tenant in tail shall bind his issue at this day, and where and what not, 44 a, b

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where a charge in fee by tenant in tail upon the land, shall bind his issue, and where not, 343 b †
 What actions in the realty tenant in tail may have, and what not, 326 b ¶
 What act or conveyance was a bar to an estate-tail at the common law, and what at this day, 372 a ¶, b
 Where an estate-tail may be barred at this day, notwithstanding a reversion or remainder in the king, and where not, 372 b, 373 a, 375 a
 A recovery in a writ of right or cessavit, no bar, 373 a *
 A release by tenant in tail, no bar to his issue of a warranty intailed, attain, or writ of error, 20 a ¶, 392 b ¶, 393 a †

Tail after Possibility of Issue Extinct.

The description of a tenant in tail after possibility, and why so called, 27 b *, 28 a ¶
 The privileges which such tenant hath above those of a lessee for life, 27 b *, 28 b ¶, 316 a ¶
 The qualities of his estate agreeing with those of a lessee for life, 28 a †
 Where his assignee shall not have those privileges, 28 a *, 316 a ¶
 By what means such estate may be created and altered, and by what not, 28 a * ¶
 What persons may be tenants after possibility, and what not, 28 b *

Taini and Tainland.

What they are, 5 b *, 86 a †

Tallage.

What persons are freed by law from tallage, 31 a *, 75 a * ¶

Tenant.

Description of the word, 1
 Not to be prejudiced by payment of rent before notice of alienation, 402 a †
 Tenant in capite, who, 399 a *

Tenant at Will, and Sufferance. See Emblement, Release, Stat. 6 Annæ, c. 18.

The description of a tenant at will, 55 a †
 What shall be said a determination or countermand of the will of the lessor, and what not, 55 b ¶, 57 b †
 What shall be said a determination in law of the will of the lessee, and what not, and why, 55 b ¶, 57 a * ¶
 What profit such lessee shall have which comes by his own manurance after the will determined, and what not, 55 b, 56 a ¶
 Where he shall have the corn, and where not, and why, 55 a *, b † *
 The remedy which he hath to come by the corn or other goods after the will determined, 55 a *, 56 a †
 Where a tenant at will shall be punished for waste, and where not, 57 a † *
 When he shall be a trespassor, 398 a *
 Cannot determine his will before or after the day of payment, 55 b ¶
 What remedy the lessor hath for a rent reserved upon a lease at will, 57 b †
 The difference between a tenant at will by the common law, and by the custom, 62 b † *, 63 a † *, 93 b †
 Who properly said to be a tenant at sufferance, 57 b *, 271 a †
 Where the termor continuing in possession after his estate ended, shall be a tenant at sufferance, or a disseisor, at the election of his lessor, 57 b *
 The difference between a tenant at will and at sufferance, ibid.
 Where a guardian in chivalry holding over his estate, shall be an abator, 271 a *

Tenants in Common. See Accompt, Grants, Jointenants, Partition, Stat. West. 2. c. 23. 32 H. 8. c. 32. 4 and 5 Annæ, Quare Impedit, Waste.

Tenancy in common described, and whence so called, 188 b
 Where a gift to two in their politick capacities, or to one in his politick, and another in his natural capacity, shall enure to them in common, 189 b, 190 a

Where a man may be tenant in common with himself, and where with himself and another, 190 a ¶, 193 b †
 Where a verdict finds that a man hath duas partes maneriz in tres divisas, this shall not be intended in common; secus where it is dividenda, 190 b *
 Wheretenants in common may be by prescription, 195 a ¶, b †
 Where and in what actions tenants in common shall join, and where and in what they ought to sever, 195 b *, 196 a †, 197 a, b, 198 a, b
 Where in an action by two tenants in common, the release of one to the defendant shall go in benefit to his companion, 197 b ¶
 Where a joint action between tenants in common shall survive, and where not, 198 a † *
 Where tenants in common may make partition, and what partition between them shall be good, and what not, 190 b *
 Where tenants in common may be of chattels, 198 a *, b ¶, 199 a
 Where and what actions one tenant in common may have against his companion, and where and what not, 199 b, 200 a and b

Tender and Refusal. See Avowry, Condition, Homage, Marriage, Mortgage.

The signification of the word (tender) 211 a ¶
 Where upon tender of money, &c. a refusal by the party shall be a perpetual bar to him for the same money, and where not, 207 a per tot. pag. 209 a ¶, b †
 Where a tender and refusal without uncore prift shall be a good plea in debt upon an obligation, and where not, 207 a *
 Where a tender of money in bags without shewing or telling shall be sufficient, 208 a †
 Where a tender and refusal shall give a third person a title of entry, or forfeiture, and where not, 209 a † *
 Where no place is expressed in the condition for payment of money, or performance of other acts, where tender and performance ought to be made, 210 a ¶, b, 211 a †, b †, 212 a *
 What shall be a good tender with respect to the coin, 401 a †

Tenellare or Tanellare.

The signification of the words, 5 a *

Tenure. See Reservation, Stat. Magna Charta, cap. 23. and for each Tenure see its proper Title.

The several acceptions in law of the word (tenure), 1 a †
 By a grant of all tenements what shall pass, 6 a †, 19 b ¶, 154 a *
 Where the tenant might alien parcel of his tenancy before the statute of quia empt. terrarum, and where not, 43 a *
 The division of tenures, 95 a ¶
 The tenure between the donor and donee in tail since the statute of Westm. 2. and how construed, 23 a, 143 a †
 What said to be a tenure in capite, and whence so called, 108 a * ¶
 Where a tenure may be of the king as of his person, and no tenure in capite, 108 a ¶
 Tenure by cornage, what, 106 b ¶
 Tenure to be ventrarius regis donec usus fuerit pari solutarum pretii 44. 69 b ¶ Tenure to be a hangman, 86 a *
 Tenure of all lands was originally from the king, 65 a *
 Cannot be immediately of several lords, 83 a *, 150 b †
 Cannot be of one lord by doing service to another, 83 a *, 150 b †
 Taken away, 398 b †, 399 a †

Testament. See Devise, Executors.

The etymology of the word, 322 b †
Testamentum, quid & quotaplex, 111 a †
 The favourable exposition of testaments, 112 a ¶
 Where land shall pass by wills nuncupative, and where not, 111 a *
 Where a warranty may be created by a will, and where not, 368 a *
 At what age an infant may make a will, and at what not, 89 b *

Testimonies. See Challenge, Evidence, Juror.

What person capable to be a witness, and what not, 6 a ¶, b †

Wher-

T H E T A B L E.

Where the witnesses shall be joined to the enquest for the trial of a deed, 6 b *

In what cases a woman admitted to be a witness, and in what not, 6 b ¶, 25 a ¶

Where the party to the usurious contract shall not be a witness in an information against an usurer, 6 b ¶

Tillage.

The commendation of agriculture, and how respected in law, 85 b † *

How husbandmen anciently were called, 5 b *

The inconveniences which come to the commonwealth by converting tillage into pasture, 85 b †

Time. See Condition, Day, Stat. Merton, c. 8. West. 1. c. 38. 32 H. 8. c. 2. 1 Jac. 1.

What said to be time of limitation, and the several sorts of it to several purposes, 114 b ¶, 115 a †

The time of limitation in actions anciently, and at this day, 115 a †

What said to be time of memory, 113 b, 114 a, 115 a *

Where, and to what purposes the law hath limited a year and a day to be a legal and convenient time, 254 b ¶

Retainer of a servant generally, for what time it shall be construed, 42 b †

What time sufficient to gain a name by reputation, and what not, 3 b †

Tithes. See Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 7. 2 E. 6. c. 6.

How they became temporal inheritances, and the several remedies for them at this day in the temporal courts, 159 a † *

Title. See Right.

The derivation and description of a title, 345 b *

The generality of the word, and how every right is a title, but not contra, 345 b *, 347 b ¶

Where by the release of a right, a title is released, sic de converso, 345 b *

Town.

What it is, 115

Traverse. See Issue, Office, Pleading, Stat. 2 E. 6. c. 8.

Where a traverse shall be admitted on a traverse, and where not, 282 b *

Traverse of the place, how to be, ibid.

Treason. See Accessory, Attainder, Escheat, Felony, Stat. 26 H. 8. c. 13. 35 H. 8. c. 2.

Where the party arraigned for treason stands mute, he shall have judgment by attainder as if he were convicted, 391 a *

An intent to murder the queen, treason, 133 b †

Trespass. See Continual Claim, Release, Stat. 6 Anne, c. 15.

Transgressio, quid est unde, 57 a ¶

Trespass, quare contranguineum est heredem cepit, by whom it lies, and against whom, and against whom not, 84 a ¶

Where it lieth by the copyholder against his lord, 60 b ¶, 61 a †

Where the abbot and monk shall have trespass for beating the monk, 132 b ¶

Where the lessor shall have trespass against his lessee at will, or his assignee before entry, 57 a * ¶

No accessories in trespass, 57 a ¶

Trial. See Baron, Bastardy, Challenge, Demurrer, Juror, Nobility, Plenarty, Record, Stat. 35 H. 8. c. 3. Venire, Verdict.

Trial, quid est quotuplex, 124 b ¶, 125 a †

The antiquity of trial by twelve men, 155 b †

How the law delighteth in the number of twelve, 155 a *

Trials otherwise than by a jury of twelve men, 74 a ¶

In trials from what place the jury ought to come, and from what not, 125 a * ¶, b †

Where upon issue of heir or not heir, trial shall be where the birth is alledged, and not where the land lieth, Et de converso, 125 b *

Upon issue quod rex non concessit, &c. trial shall be where the land lieth, and not where the letter's patent bear date, ibid.

When the matter extendeth into a place at common law, and a place within a franchise, where it shall be tried, ibid.

Where one defendant pleads to the writ, and the other to the action, which shall be tried first, ibid.

Where the plea of one defendant being to part, and the plea of the other to the whole, that which goeth to the whole shall be tried first, and where not, 125 b ¶

Where a matter alledged out of the realm may receive trial, and how, 261 a * ¶, b

Where the original act is done within the realm, and part out of the realm, upon which issue is taken, how this shall be tried, and whence the jury shall come, 161 b * ¶

How murder done in a foreign country may be tried and punished here, 74 a ¶, 161 a *

Where one dies within the realm upon a wound given out of the realm, how it shall be tried, 74 b †

In what cases a certificate shall amount to a trial, 74 a *

How, and by whom the reasonableness of a thing shall be tried, 56 b *, 59 b ¶, 62 a *

Where a nobleman being arraigned shall be tried by his peers, 156 b †, 294 a ¶

Of things done beyond sea, how to be, 261

Twait.

What twait is, 5 b ¶

Vaccaria.

The signification of it, 5 b *

Valuation. See Dower, Livery, Primer Seisin, Marriage.

The estate, revenue, and valuation of a duke, earl, baron, &c. 69 a * ¶, 83 b †

The revenue and valuation of a knight, 69 a † *, 68 b †

The livelihood and valuation of a yeoman, 69 a ¶

Venire. See Trial.

From what places in civil cases anciently, and how now, 400 a ¶

From what places in criminal causes, 401 b †

Ventre Inspiciendo.

The form of such writ, and where it lieth, 8 b † *

Verdict. See Attaint, Issue, Trial.

The signification and derivation of the word, 226 a ¶

The several kinds of verdicts, 226 b †, 227 b *, 228 a *

The form of a general verdict, 226 b *

When a bar, 273 b ¶

Where a special verdict may be found upon a slight point in issue, 226 b ¶

A verdict finding a matter incertainly, not good, 227 a †

Where a verdict finds part of the issue, and nothing for the residue, it shall be insufficient for the whole; scilicet where it finds more than the issue, 227 a * ¶

Where an estoppel or a warranty may be found by verdict, 227 a ¶

Where the jury may vary from their verdict, and where not, 227 b *

Where a verdict found against the letter of the issue, shall be good, and where not, 114 b *

Where the delivery of a letter, or other writing of evidence to the jury after their departure from the bar, shall avoid the verdict, and where not, 227 b †

Where the jury may give a privy verdict, and where not, 227 b *

A jury sworn and charged in case of life and member cannot be discharged before verdict, ibid.

In what actions and upon what issues a special verdict may be given, 227 a †, b *

Where a general verdict in a matter in law shall be good, 228 a ¶

Vessura Terre.

What passes by it, 4 b ¶

Village.

T H E T A B L E.

Village. See City, Custom, Manor, Trial.

The description of village, and whence so called, 115 b ¶
Where the village or town shall be said in law to continue, notwithstanding the decay of the houses, 115 b ¶
The number of towns in England and Wales, 116 a ¶
Every village a borough, but not converso, 115 b ¶
Where multiel ville is pleaded, whence the jury shall come,
125 b †

Villénage and Villein. See Continual Claim, Freehold, Manumission, Prescription.

The etymology of the word, 116 a †
The description of a tenure in villénage, 116 a
How villeins were anciently called, 116 a †
How villénage first began, 116 b *
Where a freeman may hold in villénage, 116 a ¶, b †,
117 b †
The divers kinds of villeins, 117 b ¶, 120 a ¶, b *
What inheritances, or other things of a villein, his lord shall have, and what not, 117 a * Where a lease at will or for years, &c. shall have the per-quisite of his villein in fee, ibid. 124 a ¶, b †
In what right a bishop, &c. shall be said seised of the per-quisite of his villein, 117 a *, 124 b † Where by the entry of the lord upon his villein tenant in tail, his issue shall be barred for ever, 117 a * Where an alienation, escheat, or descent of the lands of a villein, shall bar the title of his lord, before entry, 118 a,
b †
Where a disseisin to the villein shall prejudice the lord of his entry, and where not, 118 b *
What shall be said a sufficient claim or seisure by the lord, to vest in him the property of his villein's goods, and what not, 118 b ¶, 145 b †, 263 a ¶ Where laches of entry or seisure shall not prejudice the king of the lands, or goods of his villein, 118 a *, 119 b †
Where the lord may justify his entry into land, to make claim to a reversion, or other profit of his villein, 119 a,
b †
What shall be said a sufficient claim by the lord, to vest in him the advowson of his villein, and what not, 119 b *, 120 a † *
Villein regardant described, and whence so called, 120 b †
Who said to be a villein in gross, 120 b *
How a man ought to prescribe in a villein regardant, and how in a villein in gross, 121 a What confession in a court of record shall make the party a villein, and what not, 122 b *
Where the father is a villein, and the mother free, &c. de contra, how their issues shall be reputed in law, 123 a † *
A bastard no villein, unless by his own confession, 123 a ¶ Where, and what actions a villein or nief shall maintain against their lord, and where, and what not, 123 b, 124 a,
126 b †
In what cases the villein shall be privileged against the seisure of his lord, albeit he is not intranchised, 136 a ¶, b †, 137 b *
Where an action lieth by the lord against the husband for marrying his nief, and where not, 136 a *, b *
Where, and what charges of the villein upon his land are avoidable by the lord after entry, and where and what not, 184 b ¶
Where, and by what means the lord may be disseised or dispossessed of his villein, and by what not, 306 b * ¶, 307 a †
Where the disseisee may seise his villein regardant before re-continuance of the manor, to which &c. and where not, 107 a †

Virgata Terræ.

What it is, 5 a ¶, 69 a *

Visitor.

What power he has, 96
Who he is, 345

Voucher. See Bastard, Recovery in Value,
Stat. W. 2. c. 40. Warranty.

The etymology and signification of the word, 101 b †
The several sorts of vouchers, 102 a †
The several process against the vouchee, and upon what default after process judgment shall be given against the tenant, and upon what not, 101 b ¶, 393 a * Where upon judgment given against the tenant, he shall have judgment over, against the vouchee, and where not,

101 b ¶, 393 a *
Where the tenant after he hath been impleaded, and judgment given, shall have a warrantia chartæ, or vouch again, and where not, 102 a †, 393 a *
Where the warranty descends upon the heir at common law, and the land to a special heir, the tenant may vouch both,
376 a ¶, b *
Where the special heir shall join with the heir at common law, to deraign a warranty paramount, and to whom the recompence in value shall enure, 376 b † *
Where, and how a man or his assignee may vouch, by reason of a warranty annexed to a release or confirmation where nothing passed, 385 a ¶, b †
Where a man may vouch himself by reason of a warranty,
390 a †, 384 b ¶
Where the wife being received shall vouch her husband, &c. de converso the husband himself and his wife, albeit the warranty be in suspense, 390 a *
Where, and how an infant in ventre sa mere may be vouched,
390 a ¶
Where the feoffee may vouch as of lands discharged of a rent-charge or feck; secus as of lands discharged of a rent-service, 388 b ¶, 380 a *
Where a purchaser shall vouch as heir, 384 b ¶

Uses. See Intentions, Revocations, Stat. 4 H. 7:
c. 17. 19 H. 7. c. 15. 27 H. 8. c. 10.

The definition of an use, 272 b *
The several ways whereby uses may be raised, 271 b ¶ Where there may be two uses in esse of the same land at the same time, and where not, 271 b ¶, 272 a † What persons may be seised to the use of others, and what only to their own use, 19 b *
What shall be said a sufficient consideration of blood to raise an use, and what not, 123 a ¶, 237 a †
Where uses shall ensue the nature of the land, 23 a † Where by the same conveyance an old use is revoked, a new may be created, 237 a *
Where a feoffment is made to the use of a last will, or of such persons as shall be named in a last will, in whom the use shall be said to repose in the interim, 111 b ¶, 112 a †, 271 a ¶, b
What is a sufficient consideration to raise an use, 270 b *
An unlimited use, when it remains in the feoffee, 272 a †
Gives cestuy que use neither ius in re nor ius ad rem 272 b *
Cestuy que use hath no remedy but in a court of equity,
272 b ¶

Usurpation. See Quare Impedit, Presentation.

The several acceptations of the word, and how it differeth from a disseisin, intrusion, &c. 277 a ¶, b †
Of an advowson, how it operates, 402 a *

Wager of Law.

Wager of law, what, and the manner of it, and whence so called, 294 b ¶, 295 a †
Where it lieth, and in what actions, and where and in what not, 172 b †, 295 a per tot. pag.
Where the husband and wife shall wage their law for the debt of the wife before coverture, 172 b †
What persons may wage their law, and what not, 172 b †,
295 a † *
Where a man shall wage his law of another man's deed, and where not, 295 a ¶

Wales.

The etymology of the word, 175 b ¶
The principality of Wales holden anciently of the crown of England, 97 a ¶

War. See Entry Congeable, Presentation.

What shall be the time of peace, and what the time of war, and how it shall be tried, 249 a ¶, b † *
The ancient manner of serving the king in his war, 71 a *
Natives more serviceable for the war than strangers, 69 a *
Rules and observations in art military, 71 a †

Wardship. See Guardian, Marriage, Relief,
Stat. 4 H. 7. c. 17. 32 H. 8. c. 1.

Where the heir of disseisee shall be in ward before reconti-nuance of his estate, 76 b ¶, 270 a †

Where

T H E T A B L E.

Where the heir shall be in ward, albeit his ancestor died not seized, nor without the homage of the lord, 76 + *

Where by the determination of the estate or tenure of the heir, the wardship shall cease, 76 a +, b * ¶, 248 a ¶

Where the heir being remitted, or recovers in a formedon or non compos mentis, &c. shall be in ward, 76 b + *

Where the lord shall have a double wardship for the same land, 76 b ¶

Where the heir of tenant in tail shall be in ward, notwithstanding a discontinuance, and to whom, 76 b ¶, 77 a +, 78 a +

Where the king, by reason of wardship, shall have the custody of lands holden of other lords, and inheritances which lie not in tenure, and where not, 77 a +

Where the heir at this day shall be in ward, notwithstanding a conveyance over by his father in his life, and where not, 78 a per tot. pag.

Where the heir shall be in ward upon a conveyance by his ancestor, for the advancement of his wife or children, or payment of his debts, and where not, 78 a per tot. pag.

Where a conveyance by the grandfather to the son, shall cause wardship, and where not, 78 a ¶

Where the son shall be in ward, albeit nothing descend, 78 b +

Where the lord shall have the wardship of the land, notwithstanding the marriage of the heir in the life of his ancestor, 75 a ¶, 79 a +

Where a man hath a double title to wardship, one as father, and the other as guardian in chivalry, or socage, in which he shall be said to be in, 84 b +, 88 b *

Where the heir of a tenant in socage shall be in ward, 176 a *

Where wardship may be granted without deed, and where not, 85 a per tot. pag.

Wardwit.

What it is, 83 a ¶

Warranty. See Affets, Discontinuance, Estoppel, Rebutter, Recovery in Value, Release, Scire Facias, Stat. Gloucester. c. 3. 11 H. 7. c. 20. Voucher.

The description of a warranty, 365 a +

The several kinds of warranties, 364 b ¶, 363 a *

To what things a warranty may extend or be annexed, and to what not, 101 b * +, 366 a ¶, b +, 389 a + *

Upon what conveyances a warranty may be created, and upon what not, 371 a ¶, b +, 386 a *

What words are requisite to the creation of a warranty in deed, 383 b, 384 a +

Where the word (heir) is requisite to the creation of a warranty of inheritance, and where not, 47 a *, 378 a ¶, 383 b *, 384 b * ¶, 385 b *

Where no person is mentioned in the clause of warranty, to whom it shall be intended, 383 b *

What words shall amount to a warranty in law of a freehold or chattel, and to what estate a warranty in law is said to be annexed, and to what not, 384 a * ¶, b +

Where the word (dedi) implied a warranty of inheritance at common law, and where only for the life of the donor, 384 a *

When it shall not bar the king, 19

Where a warranty express shall not take away a warranty in law, 384 a ¶

The description of a warranty which commences by disseisin, and why so called, 366 b +

Where a warranty, albeit the disseisin be mediate or to another person, shall be said to commence by disseisin, and shall not bar the heir, 366 b ¶, 367 a +

Where a warranty annexed to a feoffment many years after the disseisin shall be said to commence by disseisin, and where not, 367 a *, 369 b ¶, 371 a *

Where a warranty upon a feoffment to barretors or extortioners, whereby the tenant waives the possession, shall be said to commence by disseisin, 368 a ¶, 369 b *

Where a third person shall take advantage of a warranty commenced by disseisin to another, 367 a +

A warranty commencing by intrusion, abatement, &c. no bar, 367 a ¶

Where a warranty annexed to a feoffment de facto shall bind the parties, and be good against all but him that right hath, 367 a *, b +

The description of a lineal warranty, and why so called, 370 a * ¶, 371 a *, 375 a ¶

Where a warranty lineally descending shall be collateral, 370 b ¶, 371 a +, 374 b ¶, 376 a +, 379 b ¶

Where a warranty collaterally descending shall be lineal, 370 a ¶, 371 b + ¶

Where the same warranty shall be collateral in respect of some persons, and lineal in respect of others, 371 b ¶, 372 a +, 373 b

Where a warranty shall be lineal to the heir, albeit he conveyeth not his descent from him that made the warranty, 371 a ¶, b ¶

Where a lineal warranty shall be a bar to a fee simple, but not to an estate tail without assents, 374 a + *, b *, 393 b *

Where baron and feme tenants in special tail discontinue, the warranty of either shall be lineal to the issue and no bar, 373 a + *

Where and why a collateral warranty shall be a bar to an estate-tail, and the reversion of the donor, 373 a ¶, 374 b + *

Where a warranty shall bar a future right, 365 a ¶, 388

Where a warranty descending in one right, shall bar the heir claiming in another; secus of an estoppel, 365 b *

Where a collateral warranty shall not bar a right by succession, 370 a ¶, b +

No bar to a title of entry, 379 b +, 389 a *

Where a warranty descending upon an infant or feme covert shall be a bar, and where not, 380 a ¶, b +

Where the warranty of tenant by the curtesy shall be a bar to the issue at this day, and where not, and what remedy the heir or his issue hath against the alienor, 379 b * ¶, 365 a, b, 366 a, 381 a, b, 382 a, b, 383 a, b

Where the warranty of the husband, being not tenant by the curtesy, shall be a bar to the issue of the wife, and where not, 366 a *

Where the warranty of tenant in dower was a bar at the common law, and how restrained at this day, 365 b * ¶, 374 b ¶, 380 a +, 381 a +

Where the king shall be barred of a right of possibility of reverter by the collateral warranty of a subject, and where not, 19 b +, 370 b +

Where a warranty descending upon the wife, shall hinder her disagreement to an estate made during the coverture, 388 b *

Where a collateral warranty descending upon the issue in tail before the descent of the right shall be a bar to him, and where not, 388 a ¶, b +

Where a warranty shall bar, albeit the estate was not put to a right at the time of the warranty made, and where not, 388 b * ¶, 389 a +

A collateral warranty is no bar in a writ of dower, or causa matrimonii prælocuti, 389 a *

Where tenant in tail to him and his heirs males, the remainder to him and his heirs females, discontinues with warranty, such warranty is lineal to both, and shall bar neither, 377 a

Where after a discontinuance, a warranty descending upon two daughters, where one only is inheritable to the estate, shall be a bar to the daughter inheritable for the whole, 373 b *

Where tenant in tail dies having two daughters, and one enters and makes a feoffment with warranty, this shall bar the other sister, as to her part, but not as to the part of the feoffor, 373 b, 374 a

Where a warranty shall descend only to the heir at the common law, 376 a * ¶, 386 a ¶, b, 387 a +

Where two brothers being by divers venters, the eldest leaves with warranty to the disseisor of the uncle, and dies without issue, after the death of the uncle, the entry of the younger is congeable, notwithstanding the warranty, 387 a *

Where the father upon a mediate descent shall not be bound, or take advantage of a warranty made by or to the son, 11 b ¶, 12 a +

Where the heir shall be bound to a warranty, to which his ancestor never was, and where not, 385 b ¶, 386 a + *

Where the special heir shall join with the heir at the common law to deraign a warranty paramount, and how the recompence in value shall enure, ibid.

Where by warranting the land, all rents, &c. suspended or discharged at the time, are also warranted, and where not, 366 b +, 388 b ¶, 389 a +

Where notwithstanding lands especially bound to warranty, the person also of the feoffor shall be bound, 102 b +

Where the condition of an obligation is to defend the lands of the obligee, by an ouster of a stranger the condition is broken; secus of a condition to warrant the lands, &c. 384 a +

Where a warranty may be defeated in part, and stand good for other part, 367 b *, 393 a ¶

Where a warranty made by an infant and one of full age,

T H E T A B L E.

shall be void against the infant, and good for the whole against him of full age, 367 b ¶
 Where a lease for life is made upon condition to have fee with a warranty in forma prædicta, by the increaser of the estate the warranty shall increase; secus of a lease for years upon such condition, 378 a ¶
 A lease for years, the remainder in fee with warranty in forma prædicta, such warranty void to both, 378 b ¶
 A lease to two, the remainder to him that first dies with a warranty in forma prædicta, by the death of one, his heir shall have the warranty, 378 b ¶
 Where lands by purchase shall be liable to execution in value, in case of warranty by descent, and where not, 102 a ¶
 Where upon a warranty for life the recovery in value shall be in fee, and where but for life, 383 b *, 387 a ¶
 Where an assignee shall take advantage of a warranty in law, and where not, and where by way of voucher, and where only by rebutter, 384 a ¶, b ¶
 Where a warranty in law and assets shall be a good bar in a form-don, 384 b *
 What person shall take advantage of a warranty in deed, as assignee by way of voucher, and what not, 384 b * ¶, 385 a *, b ¶, 390 a ¶
 Where an assignee of part of the land or estate shall vouch as assignee, and where not, and by what means he may take advantage of the warranty, 385 a *
 Where a gift in tail is made with warranty to the donee, his heirs and assigns, who makes a feoffment and dies without issue, the feoffee shall not vouch or rebut; secus of such a gift before the statute of donis, &c., 385 a ¶
 Where a warranty may be raised upon a release or confirmation where nothing passes, and where the party shall take advantage of such warranty by way of voucher, and where not, 371 b ¶, 385 a ¶, b ¶, 387 a *
 Where a warranty shall not amend or enlarge an estate, 385 b ¶
 Where the estate being avoided before or after the warranty descended, the warranty annexed is defeated also, 366 a ¶, 367 b ¶, 388 a *, 389 a *, and b ¶
 Where by a re-feoffment of the feoffor, a warranty to the feoffee, his heirs and assigns is defeated; secus of a feoffment to the feoffor, and his wife, 380 b ¶, 390 a ¶
 Where such feoffee infeoffs one of his feoffors, the warranty continues, 390 a ¶
 Where a lease for life or gift in tail to the feoffor shall be a suspension of the warranty during the estates, 390 a ¶
 Where a suspended warranty and assets descending upon the issue in tail, together with the lands discontinued, shall hinder a remitter, 390 a ¶, b ¶
 Where by attainder of felony or treason, a warranty shall be defeated, 390 b *, 391 b ¶
 Where tenant in tail releases to his disseisor with warranty, and after is attainted and pardoned, the warranty shall be void as to his issue before the pardon, but a bar to his issue born after, 391 b ¶, 392 a *
 Where a feignory is granted with warranty, by the escheat of the tenancy, the warranty is defeated, 392 b *
 Where a collateral ancestor releases with warranty, and enters into religion, by his deraignment after the warranty is defeated, 392 b *
 What words in a release shall extinguish a warranty, and what not, 391 b *, 392 b ¶
 Where after a release of the warranty to one feoffor, the feoffee shall vouch the other for a moiety; the same where one jointenant releases, his companion may vouch, 393 a ¶
 Where there shall be two recoveries in value upon one warranty, and where not, 393 a * ¶
 Where a warranty lineal and assets descending upon the issue in tail, shall be no bar to his issue after alienation of the assets; secus if the issue had been barred in a form-don, by reason of such warranty, and assets, 393 b *
 What warranty is void, 402 a ¶

Warreccum or Warrestum Terra.

The signification of them, 5 b ¶

Warren. See Forest.

Waste. See Attaint, Parson, Quod Ei Deserveat, Release, Stat. W. 2. c. 23. Writs.

The etymology of the word, 52 b ¶
 The divers kinds of waste, 53 a * ¶, b *
 The several writs of waste, 54 a ¶

Against what persons an action of waste lieth, and against what not, 53 a ¶, b ¶, 54 a
 What shall be said waste in houses, 53 a *, b *
 Where destruction of fruit-trees shall be waste, and where not, 53 a *
 What shall be said waste in a park, dovehouse, &c., 54 a ¶
 What shall be said waste in trees, and in what trees waste may be done, ibid.
 Where digging of gravel, mine, &c. shall be waste, and where not, 53 b ¶, 54 b *
 The suffering of land to be surrounded, waste, 53 b ¶
 Conversion of arable land into wood, &c. contra, waste, ibid.
 What shall be said waste in fences, ibid.
 What waste in hominibus, 53 b *
 How waste, destruction, and exile differ, 53 a ¶, b *
 By what persons an action of waste lieth, 53 b ¶
 Where the heir shall have an action for waste done in the life of his ancestor, and where not, 53 b ¶, 198 a ¶
 What shall be said a good plea in an action of waste, and what not, 53 a *, b ¶, 54 b *, 285 a ¶
 Where by the alteration of the reversion, waste committed before shall be dispensable, 53 b ¶
 Against what persons a prohibition of waste lay at the common law, and against what not, ibid. 316 a *
 Where waste lies against tenant by the curtesy, or in dower after assignment, and where not, 54 a ¶, 316 a *
 Where an action lieth against the assignee for waste done before the assignment, and where not, 54 a ¶
 Where the tenant shall be punished for waste done by a stranger, and where not, ibid.
 Where the wife shall be punished for waste done in the life of her husband, &c. converso, 54 a *
 Where an occupant shall be punished for waste, ibid.
 Where a mean remainder or reversion shall be an impediment to bring an action of waste, and where not, 54 a *, 273 a ¶, 290 b ¶, 333 b *
 Where waste lieth against a guardian in chivalry, and the penalty in such action, 54 a ¶ Destruction to what value shall be said waste, 54 a ¶
 For waste parson, all the land shall be recovered, ibid.
 Where tenant for life shall join in an action of waste, 42 a *, 53 b ¶
 Where one jointenant, or tenant in common, for life or in fee, shall have an action of waste against his companion, and where not, 200 b *
 What interest is given to the lessee by the clause (without impeachment of waste), 220 a ¶
 Where the lessor recovering in an action of waste, shall avoid all mean estates and charges made by the lessee, and where not, 233 b ¶, 234 a ¶
 Where the heir shall have an action for waste done in the life of his ancestor, which the ancestor himself could not, 247 b *
 Where the acceptance of a surrender by the lessor after waste done, shall conclude him of his action of waste, 285 a *
 Where in an action of waste by tenants in special tail, the death of one without issue shall abate the writ, 285 a ¶
 Where a parson, vicar, &c. shall have an action of waste, 341 a ¶
 Where by the release of him in the remainder in tail to tenant for life of all his right, he shall not have an action of waste; secus where he in the reversion in fee makes such release, 345 b ¶
 Where tenant in tail leases for his own life, an action of waste lieth against the lessee, 345 b ¶
 In waste the place wasted the principal, and not damages, 98 a ¶, 355 b * ¶
 Where in an action of waste by two, the release of one shall bar the other, and where not, 355 b ¶
 Where in an action of waste summons and severance lieth, and where not, 355 b ¶
 Where an action of waste lieth, albeit the lessor had nothing in the reversion at the time of the waste committed, 356 a ¶
 Where riens en le reversion shall be a good plea by the lessee in an action of waste, and where not, 356 a * Way.

The several kinds of ways, 56 a *
 What remedy for a disturbance in a public or private way, and what not, 56 a ¶

Wera and Were.

The meaning of the words, 127 a *, 287 b ¶

T H E T A B L E.

Wit or Wita.
 The signification of the words, 187 a † Witnefs. See Evidence, Testimony.
Woodgeld.
 What it is, 234 a ¶
 Words. See Exposition of Words.
Worfcot.
 What it is, 71 a †
Worth.
 What it is, 56 ¶
 Writs. See Action, Annuity, Amerciament, Diffeifin, Quare Impedit, and each Writ under its proper Title.
 Brief, unde? 73 b †
 The description of a writ, 73 b *

The feveral forts of writs, 73 b * ¶
 Where writs may be maintained quia timet, before any moleftation, 100 a *
 Where the writ fhall be general and the count fpecial, 26 b ¶, 53 a †, 54 b †, 344 a †
 Upon what plea to the difability of the perfon the writ fhall abate, and upon what not, 133 b ¶, 134 a †, 135 b *
 Where an action well begun determineth in part by the act of law, the writ as to the whole fhall abate, and where not, 285 a * ¶
 Where the profeffion of the tenant or defendant in religion pendente placito fhall not abate the writ, 248 b ¶
 Where the deprivation of the defendant fhall abate the writ; fecus of a refignation, ibid.
 Where feveral writs of customs and fervices lie for the difcontinuance of one and the fame fervice, 154 a †
 Writ de ingreffu fine affenfu capituli, whence fo called, and where it lieth, 325 b *
 The writ ex gravi querelâ, where it lieth, 111 a ¶
De domo reparandâ, where it lieth, 56 b †, 200 b †
 Of error, &c. attain, &c. follow the nature of the original writ, 139 a ¶
 Of error on a ftatute, how to be, 54 b †

Year and a Day. See Day, Time.

How they are to be computed, 254 b * ¶
 In what cafes this time is prefcribed by law, 254 b ¶

Dedit Deus his quoque finem.

A N

I N D E X

T O T H E

N O T E S.

Abeyance.

ON the maxim that the freehold cannot, but the inheritance may be in abeyance, n. 2, 216 a Abjuration.

N. 2, 92 b

Action.

The question in Atby and White, whether an action on the case would lie against a returning officer, for refusing a vote at the election of a member of parliament, n. 2, 81 b

What remedy the law furnishes for the injury of being harassed by vexatious actions, n. 4, 161 a

Actions of account by one jointenant or tenant in common against the other, n. 1, 199 b

The different degrees of title which a person dispossessing another of his lands acquires in them in the eye of the law, and the different modes and actions by which the possession may be recovered, n. 1, 239 a

On writs of error, n. 1, 259 b

Alien.

On the capacity of an alien to take and hold, &c. See n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 2 b

On the effect of alienage with respect to the descent of land, n. 1, 2, 3, 8 a

Sometimes a man can only have immediate inheritable blood from one parent, n. 7, 12 a Alienations.

On alienations before Magna Charta, n. 2, 3, and 4, 43 a

Fines for alienations, n. 2, 43 b

Allegiance.

Old oath of allegiance differs from the oath of fealty, n. 1, 68 b

Allodial.

On allodial lands in England and foreign countries, n. 1, 65 a

Annuity.

Annuity of inheritance, n. 1, 2 a

When the grant of an annuity binds the heirs, n. 2, 144 b

Appendant, Appurtenant.

Grant of a manor by the crown, whether it passes the advowson, n. 2, 121 b

Apprentices.

N. 1, 117 a

Argumentum ab Inconvenienti.

N. 1, 66 a

Arms.

N. 3, 27 a

Assignment.

Formerly doubted whether an annuity was assignable, n. 1, 144 b

Power to A. and his assigns to make leases, extended not only to the first, but to all the subsequent assignees of A. n. 1, 210 a

Assignment of things in action, n. 2, 232 b

Assisa Armorum.

N. 1, 71 a

Magna

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

Magna Affsā Eligendā.

On the number of knights to be returned to the sheriff,
n. 2, 159 a

Attainder.

Conveyances made by felons against the statutes of præmunire between indictment and attainder, n. 3, 42 b

Attornment.

Observations upon the general doctrine of attornment,
n. 1, 309 a

Attorney.

Infants and feme-coverts, n. 2, 52 a

Authors and Works particularly noticed.

Struvius, Bibliotheca Juris Selecta, n. 1, 7 a Menochius de Præsumptionibus, ibid.
Mascardus de Probationibus, ibid.
Everardus de Testibus et Fide Instrumentorum, ibid.
Farinacius de Testibus, ibid.
Gatzert Commentatio Juris Exotici Historico-Litteraria de Jure communi Angliæ, ibid.
Viner's Abridgement, n. 3, 9 a
Robinson on Gavelkind, n. 3, 10 a Robinson's Discourse concerning the Law of Inheritance, n. 1, 10 b
Lord Bacon's Reading on the Statute of Uses, n. 2, 13 a, n. 1, 271 b
Waterhouse's Commentary on Fortescue, n. 2, 17 a English Edition of Mr. Plowden's Commentaries, n. 1, 23 a
Mr. Fearn's Essay on Contingent Remainders, n. 8, 28 a, n. 1, 376 b
Mr. Justice Blackstone's Edition of the Great Charters, n. 4, 43 a ----- Considerations on the Question, Whether Tenants by Copy of Court Roll according to the Custom of the Manor, though not at the Will of the Lord, are Freeholders qualified to Vote in Elections for Knights of the Shire, n. 1, 59 b Noy's Reports, n. 10, 54 a Ockam, n. 2, 28 a, n. 7, 68 b
Black Book, Red Book, and Dialogue of the Exchequer, ibid.
Sullivan's Lectures, n. 3, 68 a Modus tenendi Parliamentum, n. 2, 69 b
A Discourse on the Bock land and Folk land, n. 2, 86 a Madox's Baronia Anglica, n. 4, 5, 108 b
Eunomus, or Dialogues concerning the Law and Constitution of England, n. 1, 155 b
Mr. Cruise's Essays on Fines and Common Recoveries, n. 1, 224 a, n. 1, 262 a
Sir John Dalrymple's History of the Feudal law, n. 1, 224 a
The Works of the Chancellor D'Aguesseau n. 1, 271 b, n. 2, 325 b
Questions concernant les Substitutions, avec les Réponses de tous les Parlemens du Royaume, et les Observations de Monsieur le Chancelier D'Aguesseau sur les dits Réponses. Toulouse. 1770. ibid. n. 1, 290 b Commentaire de l'Ordonnance de Louis 15. sur les Substitutions, par Monf. Furgole. Paris, 1767. ibid.
Rapin's Dissertation on the Salic Law, n. 2, 325 b Le Brun, Traité des Successions, ibid.
Droit Public de la France, par Monf. Bouquet, ibid.
Pothier, Traité des Fiefs, ibid.
----- Traité des Contrats de Vente, n. 1, 365 a
----- Pandectæ Justinianæ, n. 1, 368 b
Traité des Révisions & de la Garantie Formelle, par Monf. Berthelot, ibid.
J. P. Rosental Tractatus et Synopsis totius Juris Feudalis. Coll. Allob. ibid.
Petri Schulzii Dissertatio de Feudo-Gratiâ, ibid.
Jenichen Thesaurus Juris Feudalis. Francofurti ad Menum, ibid.
Ordonnances de St. Louis, ibid.
Abregé Chronologique des Grands Fiefs de la France, ibid.
Dissertatio de Subfeudis Imperii. Mich. Hen. Gribnerii, ibid.
Dissertatio Wenceslai Xaverii Newman de Pucholtz, Quid transeat in Vassallum per Concessionem Feudi, vel Subfeudi, ibid.
Bochmer de Dominio Litis, n. 1, 368 a Basnage Commentaire de la Coutume de Normandie
Nouveau Traité de Diplomatique, n. 1, 219 a

Bailment.

N. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 89 a, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 89 b

Baron and Feme.

How the woman can take the gift of her husband, n. 1, 3 a Instances of grants by the husband to his wife, n. 10, 32 a
On promises, bonds, or covenants of a baron to or with his wife before marriage, n. 6, 224
Husband possessed jure uxoris, grants part of a term on condition, the condition is gone by his death, query, n. 4, 46 b
On the latest time of a woman's going with child, n. 1, 123 b
On the estate which the husband has in his wife's freehold lands, n. 1, 325 b
On the estate which the husband has in his wife's chattels real and things in action, n. 1, 314

Bastard.

Effect of a limitation, &c. to a bastard not in esse, n. 1, 3 b, n. 8, 123 a
The presumption of the husband being the father of every child his wife conceives, may be repelled, n. 1, 2, 123 b, n. 2, 244 a Observation on the situation of bastards by the laws of England, and those of foreign countries, n. 2, 243 b
On the legitimization of children by the subsequent marriage of their parents, n. 1, 245 a Bigamy.

N. 1, 80 b

Bishops.

Lord Hale's opinion, that the bishops hold their possessions per baroniam, and sit in the house of peers by custom, and not as terms by tenure, n. 2, 70 b, n. 1, 134 b
Mr. Wathia-ton insists, that in Saxon times bishopricks were conferred in parliament, and that the king's investiture was subsequent to such election, n. 1, 134 a
On the congé d'elire, n. 4, 134

Bockland, and Folkland.

N. 6, 6 a

Borough.

Whether a borough not corporate can be a city, n. 2, 109 b Borough English.

May be extended and restrained by special custom, n. 5, 110 b

Burgage Tenures.

How affected by the 12 C. 2. c. 24.

Charters.

N. 2, 112 b
Whether the feoffee, or cessuy que use is to have them in the case of conveyances to uses, n. 4, 6 a Reference to authors on the subject of ancient deeds and charters, n. 5, 6 a Churchwardens.

May purchase a workhouse for the poor, and by custom, they and the parson are a corporation to purchase lands, n. 4, 3 a Commissions of Partition.

N. 3, 167 b

Tenants in Common.

With or of remainders, n. 1, 195 b

Con.

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

Condition.

Outline of the doctrine of conditions, n. 1, 201 a
 Effect of entry for a condition broken, n. 2, 202 b Distinction between, 1. A general condition that the lessor shall re-enter. 2. A special power to enter and hold until satisfaction. 3. A power of entry limited by way of use, n. 3, 203 a Distinction between a condition, a remainder, and a conditional limitation, n. 1, 203 b Conditions impossible, n. 1, 206 a Conditions against law, n. 1, 206 b
 The performance of the condition, when excused, n. 1, 207 a
 On the performance of a condition, by a thing collateral, n. 213 a
 If the condition of the obligation be on the disjunctive, and one of things becomes impossible, the condition of the obligation will in some cases be saved, n. 1, 225 a
 Some observations on the doctrine of conditions precedent, or conditions subsequent, particularly as applied to the vesting of portions, n. 1, 237 a

Confirmation.

Outline of the doctrine of confirmation, n. 1, 295 b
 Confirmation on the estate of tenant for years, n. 1, 297 b

Continual Claim.

Outlines of this doctrine, n. 1, 230 b

Coparceners.

How they shall present to an advowson, n. 2, 166 b

Copyhold.

Taking surrender out of court, n. 2, 58 a Steward of a copyhold manor, n. 4, 5, 58 a
 Who may grant copyholds, n. 3, 4, 5, 6, 58 b
 What things destroy the custom of granting copyholds, n. 7, 58 b
 Parceners of copyhold cannot make partition without the lord's licence, n. 1, 59 a
 Whether feoffment without livery is a forfeiture, n. 3, 59 a
 As to forfeiture by lease or alienation, n. 4, 59 b
 Whether fine for admittance becomes due on change of the tenant or change of the estate, n. 8, 59 b
 What shall be a reasonable fine, n. 1, 60 a
 When the surrenderee's estate commences, n. 1, 62 a

Where custom does not prescribe any particular mode of barring the entail of a copyhold, a surrender, though only to the use of the will, will be sufficient for that purpose without a custom. Carr v. Singer, 2 Vez. 603. Moore v. Moore, 2 Vez. 596. But a custom to bar by surrender may be concurrent with a custom to bar by recovery. Everall v. Smalley, 1 Wils. 26. et 2 Sira. 1197. Doe v. Truby, 2 Black. Rep. 944. See Mr. Cox's Edlt. of Peere William's Reports, n. 1 to page 13. Acceptance by a copyholder tenant in tail of a trust estate, of a surrender of the legal estate from the trustees, held a good bar of the entail and remainders over. Grayne v. Grayne, in Chancery, 1776.

Corporation.

Corporation sole regularly could not take in succession chattels real or personal, in possession or action, though a corporation aggregate may, n. 1, 9 a
 Grants of offices by ecclesiastical persons, n. 1, 44 a
 In general a corporation aggregate cannot take or pass away an interest in land or do any act of importance without deed, n. 3, 94 b

Corrody.

Whether grantable to more than one, n. 1, 190 a

Costs and Damages.

N. 1, 355 b

Courts.

Though the kings did actually sit in the king's bench, and the law still intends the king is there, yet the judicature belongs to the judges only, n. 1, 71 b

 When the common pleas became a distinct court, n. 2, 71 b
 Adjournings into the exchequer chamber to have the opinion of the judges, n. 1, 72 a Creation-Money.

Given to enable the donee to support a dignity conferred on him, n. 5, 83 b

Curtesy.

N. 1, 2, 3, 4, 29 b
 In gavelkind estates, n. 1, 30 a
 Of a rent de novo, n. 2, 30 a Custom.

N. 1, 3, 110 b

Customary Freeholds.

N. 6, 49 a
 Estates held by copy of court roll not at the will of the lord, and called customary freeholds, have been deemed freehold estates.
 Such tenants claimed a right of voting at elections, n. 1, 59 b

Day of the Date.

N. 8, 9, 46 b
 Charter of feoffment habendum à die datus, n. 1, 49 b

Deaneries.

On the various kinds of deans, n. 1, 95 a

Debt.

Whether it will lie for rent against a copyholder, n. 1, 57 b

Deeds.

On the delivery of deeds, n. 5, 6, 7, 8, 36 a Difference between deeds of feme covert and infants, n. 4, 42 b

Deforcement.

N. 1, 331 b

Degrees.

On the mode of computing consanguinity by the civil and canon law, n. 3, 23 b, n. 1, 2, 24 a Devise.

Formerly controverted whether a rent de novo was within the custom of devising, n. 4, 111 a History of the testamentary power over land, n. 1, 3, 4, 111 b
 Over personalty, n. 5, 6, 176 b
 Inconsistent devises in the same will, n. 1, 112 b
 Devise that executors should sell, n. 2, 113 a
 The custom of York respecting filial portions, n. 5, 176 b

Dignity.

Earldom of Arundel mentioned as an instance of an earldom by prescription, n. 1, 16 b
 Doctrine of extinguishing a barony by writ, by acceptance of a patent barony is questionable, n. 2, 16 b
 When the barony is by writ, the person summoned is not ennobled till he takes his seat in parliament; but in the creation of nobility by letters patent, the blood is ennobled without sitting, n. 3, 16 b
 Precedence of foreign nobility, and precedency in general, n. 4, 16 b
 In some books it is said, that if a woman noble by birth marries one of inferior nobility, she shall be styled by the dignity of her second husband, n. 6, 16 b
 Supposed that a man may be noble during the life of another, n. 7, 16 b
 The degree of a baronet is parcel of the name, n. 8, 16 b
 The king cannot create a dignity with a mesne between barony and baronet, n. 8, 16 b

Limitation

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

Limitation to one and his heirs males, being by act of parliament, raised a fee simple disendible, n. 5, 27 a
Whether a title of honor admits of curtesy, n. 1, 29 b
Baronies by tenure are merely titular, and a titular barony cannot have caput baroniae, n. 6, 31 b
Whether daughters may be coparceners of a dignity, n. 1, 4, 8, 165 a Abeyance of titles of honor, n. 6, 165 a
On female dignities in England and France, n. 2, 325 b
On the title of Duke D'Aubigay, ibid.

Discent.

On the exclusion of lineal ascent, n. 1, 11 a
Whether lineal ascent was excluded by the Roman law, n. 2, 11 a Exclusion of half blood, n. 3, 6, 14 a
Where the heir takes by discent and where by purchase, n. 4, 22 b
Where the heir claims by purchase, he must be the very heir in judgment of law, n. 3, 24 b, n. 2, 164 a Discents que Tollent Entries.

Outlines of the doctrine, n. 1, 238 a Discontinuance.

Outline of the doctrine of discontinuance, n. 1, 325
Discontinuance by ecclesiastical persons, n. 1, 325 b
— by persons seized jure uxoris, n. 2, 325 b
— by tenants in tail with respect to their issue, n. 1, 326 b
— by tenants in tail with respect to the reversioner, n. 1, 327 a
— by tenants in tail with respect to those in remainder, n. 2, 327 a
On the modes of conveyance which work a discontinuance, n. 1, 330 a
That nothing which lies in grant can be said to be discontinued, n. 1, 332 a
To effect a discontinuance by tenant in tail, the conveyance must be of such an estate as may by possibility endure beyond the life of tenant in tail, n. 1, 333 a
On discontinuances made to, or with the concurrence of the remainder-man or reversioner, n. 2, 335 a Disseisin.

Distinction between actual disseisin, and disseisin by election, n. 7, 153 b, n. 1, 330 b, n. 1, 367 a
Tenant for years surrenders, and still continues possession, he is tenant at sufferance or disseisin at election, n. 5, 57 b
Commandment before or agreement after is not sufficient to make infants and feme coverts disseisors, but it must be by their actual entry, n. 4, 180 b
Lord Hobart's reason why disseisin of tenant for life makes fee in the disseisor, n. 7, 180 b Distress.

Of deer on a private inclosure, n. 11, 47 a
Of horses, n. 12, 47 a
Of ferrets and nets, n. 13, 47 a Yarn brought to be weighed, n. 14, 47 a
Other things the property of strangers, ibid.
Sheaves or corn, by 2 W. & M. 25. n. 16, 47 a Sheep, n. 17, 47 a
Beasts of the plow for the poor rate under 43 El. n. 18, 47 a, and see n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 47 b

Dower.

In case of an interposed estate between the freehold and inheritance, n. 7, 28 a
The reason why the law gave dower, n. 8, 30 b
The woman shall be attendant to the heir for a third part of the services for which he is attendant over, n. 2, 31
How the wife shall be endowed, in case of eviction by title paramount, n. 6, 31 a
A whole manor resealed because it was caput baroniae, though assigned by the husband, n. 6, 31 b Antiently women aliens were not dowable, but now, if married by licence from the king, they are dowable by special act of parliament not printed. Rot. Pa. 8 H. 5. n. 15, n. 9, 31 b
On damages in dower, n. 4, 5, 32 b
Touts temps prift in dower, n. 1, 33 a

If the husband has two distinct feifus, the wife may in some cases elect out of which she will be endowed, n. 5, 33 a
Where the wife shall have dower of lands purchased and aliened by her husband while she was not dowable, n. 8, 33 a
By the custom of some places the wife shall have the whole of her husband's lands in dower, n. 11, 33 b
As to dower by custom in general, n. 5, 33 b
Whether dower ad ostium must be made immediately after the marriage, n. 3, 34 a
Assignment of a third or half part in common, n. 1, 34 b, n. 5, 35 b
Acceptance of collateral satisfaction a good bar of dower, in equity, n. 1, 5, 36 b
Equity in some special circumstances considers devises in satisfaction of dower, n. 6, 36 b
The freehold, though assigned, not in the wife till entry, n. 1, 37 a
Who may assign dower, n. 1, 38 b
For voucher of wardship in dower, n. 2, 38 b
Where the judgment shall be against the heir, and where against the vouchee, n. 6, 39 a Dower de la plus beale virtually abolished by 12 C. 2. c. 24. n. 3, 39 b
As to the loss of dower by the husband's offences, n. 1, 40 b
Where the husband is attainted of treason, n. 3, 4, 5, 41 a
Whether if an estate be limited to such uses as the husband shall appoint, and in default of appointment to him in fee, the wife is entitled to dower against his appointee, n. 2, 216 a Tenant for life, with the reversion in fee, after intermediate uses, whether, upon his decease, his wife will in any and what cases be entitled to her dower, n. 3, 239 b
The dowress holds of the heir, but by institution of law she is in of the estate of her husband, n. 1, 241 a Observations on the cases, where the wife claims dower after the estate charged with it is determined, n. 4, 241 a Observations on the methods used to prevent dower, n. 1, 379 b

In this note it is suggested, as a mode to prevent dower, that the estate should be limited to such uses as the purchaser shall appoint, and for want of appointment, to a trustee, his heirs and assigns, during the life of the purchaser, &c. To keep the estate of the trustee from vesting in an infant heir, feme covert, &c. it may be limited to the trustee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the life of the purchaser. This will not prevent its being an estate of freehold in the hands of the executor or administrator. See note 1, page 41 b, Cartwright 376. It is worthy of consideration, whether in marriage settlements, the powers of selling and exchanging, and the other powers given to the releasees, and the survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor, should not be given to them and the survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivor. This will prevent the mischief of either becoming vested in an infant heir, &c. It is observable, that even in the most approved precedents of settlements, the powers both of the cestuys que use and the releasees, are so far inaccurately penned, that they appear to be framed on a notion, that the persons exercising them act as grantors, or lessors, or otherwise as owners of the fee; when, in fact, they only design the person in whom, or the event upon which, the use is to vest or arise; or, to use a more technical expression, their acts appear to be executions of a power derived from an interest, not the executions of a power specially reserved. See n. 1, p. 112 a Emblements.

N. 5, 55 a, n. 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, 55 b
Whether disseisor is to have them, if disseesee's entry is after severance, n. 11, 55 b

Escuage.

N. 2, 69 b, n. 1, 3, 4, 5, 72 b, n. 2, 73 a, n. 1, 74, n. 2, 100 b, and in other notes upon the chapter of escuage.

Estates.

What are freehold, n. 1, 6, 7, 9, 11, 42 a
At will, n. 3, 55 a
Whether lessor's granting a rent charge determines estate of tenant at will, n. 13, 55 b
What determines estate at will, n. 14, 15, 16, 55 b
Estate at sufferance, n. 1, 270 b

Estoppel

I N D E X T O T H E N O T E S.

Estoppell.

Disseisee leases to the disseisor by indenture, shall not have assise during the lease, n. 12, 13, 47 b

Etymologies and Explanations of Words.

Observations on lord Coke's inquiries about the names by which things will pass in conveyances, n. 3, 6 a

Of the word seccagium, n. 1, 86 a

Of the words sterling and guinea, n. 1, 207 b

Seisin, disseisin, discontinuance, and freehold, n. 1, 266 a

Of the words parliamentum and testamentum, n. 1, 110 a

Exchange.

Whether in a strict legal sense it can be had between more than two, n. 1, 50 b

Writing necessary, since 29 C. 2. n. 2, 50 b

If the king exchanges it must be by writing recorded, n. 2, 51 a Executor.

Creditor making the debtor his executor, or vice versa, n. 1, 264 b

Fealty.

Homage and fealty, how blended, n. 1, 68 a Difference in the expressions used in them, n. 2, 68 a

By attorney, n. 5, 68 a

Seisin of fealty does not estop the tenant from traversing the seisin of other services, n. 6, 68 a

Not affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24.

Fee.

Littleton's explanation of fee defended against sir Thomas Smith and doctor Cowell, n. 1, 1 a Fee-farm.

N. 5, 144 a

Feoffment.

On feoffments of tenants for years and others having no estate of freehold, n. 1, 330 b

On the form and operation of feoffments, n. 1, 271 b

Fine.

Effect of fine levied by tenant in tail guilty of murder before conviction, n. 10, 2 b

History of fines, and why by them a married woman may alienate her real rights, n. 1, 121 a

Fines of lunatics, n. 2, 247 a

Entry for avoiding fines, n. 1, 252 b

Observations on the expression, that a fine has no operation upon any estate or interest, which is not previously divested or turned to a right, n. 1, 332 b

Fire.

The law as to the burning of houses, so far as regards landlord and tenant, n. 1, 57 a Foldcourse.

N. 1, 6 a

Fishery.

N. 2, 4 b, n. 7, 122 a

Forcible Entry.

N. 1, 257 a

Forfeiture.

Of tenant for life, n. 1, 233 b

Formedon.

Whether formedon in descender lay at common law, n. 3, 19 a, n. 1, 326

Formedon in descender not included in 32 H. 8. n. 2, 115 a Frankalmoigne.

How affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24. n. 1, 100 b

Frankmarriage.

N. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 23 a

Frankpledge.

Distinguished in Magna Charta from the tourns or leets of sheriffs, and on holding these courts, n. 10, 11, 12, 115 a Gavellet.

N. 2, 142 b

Gavelkind.

N. 3, 4, 10 a, n. 4, 140 a, n. 1, 2, 3, 140 b

The gavelkind descent of lands in Ireland was an incident to the custom of tanistry, n. 1, 176 a

In the reign of queen Anne, lands of papists in Ireland were made descendible in gavelkind unless the heir confirmed within a limited time; but by 17 & 18 G. 3. c. 49. s. 1. the descent of the lands of papists is again reduced to the course of common law, n. 1, 176 a Gens & Gents.

Explanation of these words, n. 3, 66 a

Guardian.

See n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 88 b, n. 1, 2, 3, 89 a, n. 4, 90 a, n. 1, 2, 3, 90 b, n. 1, 135 b

Heir.

What is such a purchase as breaks the descent, so as to entitle the paternal to a preference over the maternal heir, n. 2, 12 b

Heir and Executor.

Tenant for life pays off an incumbrance, his executor, in some cases, admitted to stand in place of the incumbrancer, n. 3, 239 b

Habendum.

On the operation of the habendum, n. 3, 26 b, n. 1, 180 b

Hariot.

N. 1, 83 a

Heir-looms.

Whether they can be alienated by devise, n. 6, 18 b
Personal property may be settled so as to be transmissible, like heir-looms, to a certain extent, n. 7, 18 b

Holding-over.

N. 2, 57 b

Homage.

Special act of parliament to excuse the kissing in the case of homage made to the king by reason of pestilence, n. 3, 64 b

Homage by the king of England to the king of France for his foreign possession, n. 3, 65 a Difference between homagium ligeum and homagium not ligeum, ibid.

On the express saving of the faith due to the king, n. 1, 66 b
Effect of 12 C. 2. c. 24. on homage, n. 1, 67 b

Punishment

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

Punishment inflicted on the bishop for receiving homage without the exception of faith to the king, n. 3, 68 a
Homage aunccestrell, how affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24. n. 1, 105 a Homines.

In ancient times by homines, homagers, now called freeholders, were intended, n. 1, 64 b Dispute between doctor Brady and others on the sense of the words homines and libera tenentes, ibid.

Hotchpot.

N. 8, 9, 10, 176 b

Indenture.

N. 3, 4, 143 b, n. 1, 229 a

Infant.

Acts void or voidable, n. 3, 51 b, n. 1, 246 a
In what cases to be sworn as a witness, n. 1, 172 b

Joyntenant.

Though for some purposes the estate for life of the jointenant having the fee is distinct from his greater estate, yet for granting it is not so, but both estates are in that respect consolidated, n. 2, 184 b
On the operation of the words, "equally to be divided," n. 4, 190 b
On the operation of the words, "to two and the survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor," n. 1, 191 a

Ireland.

Some think the laws of England were introduced into Ireland by king Henry the 2d, n. 1, 141 b
Lord Coke's opinion that English statutes do not bind Ireland unless specially named, n. 2, 141 b

Judges.

On the king's consulting them extrajudicially, n. 5, 110 a Judgment.

Difference between an interlocutory judgment and award and final judgment, n. 2, 168 a Jury.

In some special cases the jury to try an issue may be less than twelve, n. 3, 155 a
Ad questionem facti non respondent iudices, ad questionem juris non respondent juratores, n. 5, 155 b
Challenges, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 156 a, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 156 b, n. 8, 157 b, n. 2, 3, 4, 158 b
When the jury must be taken from the body of the county, n. 4, 157 a
Whether outlawry in a personal action disqualifies from being a juror, n. 1, 158 a

The Stile of the King of England.

N. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 b

Knight's-fee.

What was the amount of it, n. 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 69 a, n. 1, 69 b

Knight's service.

How affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24. n. 1, 85 a Castle-guard a species of knight's-service, n. 1, 87 a

Laws of Edward the Confessor.

N. 3, 4, 68 b, n. 4, 5, 168 a

Salic Law.

N. 2, 326 b

Lawyers.

How the functions of the bar were divided at Rome, n. 2, 295
Fees of lawyers honorary, ibid.

Leases.

Difference when leases begin from the day of making and from the making, n. 4, 44 a
Leases of tythes, n. 3, 44 b
Lease by the king during the vacancy of the bishoprick, n. 4, 44 b
Leases by ecclesiastical persons, n. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 44 b, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 45 a Leases by tenant in tail, n. 5, 45 a Leases by infants, n. 1, 45 b
The law against leases for more than forty years, if it ever existed, was soon antiquated, n. 1, 46 a
Commencement of leases and misrecitals in that respect, n. 10, 46 b Difference between an underlease and an assignment, n. 1, 308

Livery of Seisin.

Superfeded by conveyances to uses and upon trusts, since 27 H. 8. n. 3, 48 a
Absence of feoffee or feoffor, n. 2, 48 b
Consent of lessee, he being on the land, n. 8, 48 b
If lease for years with the remainder over be made by deed, the deed ought not to be delivered till livery made, n. 5, 49 b
Whether livery in that part of a manor which is in one county, passes that which is in another county, n. 2, 50 a
By attorney, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 52 b
On livery secundum formam chartæ, n. 1, 331 a

Maintenance.

Whether an attorney's laying out money for his client be maintenance, n. 1, 368 b

Marriage.

Affiance and marriage used promiscuously for the same thing, n. 2, 34 a Scottish marriage, n. 1, 79 b
Where one of the parties is under the age of discretion, n. 2, 79 b
Precontract, n. 4, 79 b
Whether a man may marry the daughter of the sister of his first wife, n. 1, 235 a Marshal.

On the offices of high constable and earl marshal, n. 1, 74 b Mergers.

N. 4, 338 b

Messuage.

N. 1, 5 b

Mesne Profits.

When an estate vested is devested by the birth of a posthumous child, n. 4, 11 b Distinction as to mesne profits between real estate and personalty, n. 8, 55 b

Monk.

No longer any legal establishment for professed persons in England, and our law never took notice of foreign professions, n. 7, 3 b

Mortmain.

On the king's power of granting licences to alien in mortmain, n. 1, 99 a Mortgages.

N. 1, 205 a

Right

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

Right of redemption, n. 1, 208 a Mortgage-money to be paid not to the heir but the executor, n. 1, 208 b Naturalization.

N. 1, 129 a

Non Compos.

Whether he can plead his disability to avoid his own acts, N. 12, 2 b

Nullus Tempus occurrit Regi.

N. 1, 119 a

Occupancy.

N. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 41 b

Outlawry.

Against crimes being merely constructive breaches of the peace, n. 1, 128 b

Parliament.

How often to be held, n. 7, 110 b

Partition.

N. 2, 169 a, n. 2, 171 a Place.

Where payment must be demanded, n. 1, 210 b
Where a marriage portion should be paid, 211 b

Pleading.

Tenant in fee in remainder expectant on a term of years, in pleading, shall not be said to be seised in demesne, n. 3, 15 a, and see n. 4, 17 b
In case of a rectory, no diversity in pleading ad medietatem rectorie, or rectoriam medietatis, n. 5, 17 b, and see n. 1, 18 a
The estate of the husband in the wife's land n. 1, 26 a
Where a deed ought to be shewn, n. 6, 35 b
Non est factum, n. 7, 35 b
In pleading a lease one ought to say that the lessor was seised and demised, but in count in debt for rent there is no necessity to allege seisin, n. 9, 47 b
In copyholds, if the words ad voluntatem domini be omitted in pleading, it shall be intended that the estate is a customary freehold, n. 1, 58 a
Extension of borough English to the collateral line must be specially pleaded, n. 4, 114 b
Alleging of issuable facts, n. 2, 123 b
The customs incident to gavelkind and borough English except the special descent must be specially pleaded, n. 4, 175 b
Whether lease and release may be pleaded as a feoffment, n. 3, 207 a
Where a declaration in ejectment is delivered, though the defendant appears to it, and confesses lease, entry, and ouster to avoid a fine, there must be an actual entry. The distinction is, where entry is necessary to complete the landlord's title, the confession of lease, entry, and ouster is sufficient; but where it is requisite in order to refute the defendant's title, actual entry must be made, n. 1, 254 b

Possessio Fratris.

Of dignities and honors, n. 3, 15 b

Posthumous Children.

As to the right to the mesne profits from the death of the father, n. 4, 11 b

Power.

How an act shall operate when it may take effect in two ways, as an execution of a power derived from an interest, or as a power specially reserved, n. 1, 112 a

Feoffment to the use of a last will, or to such uses as the feoffor shall appoint by will, n. 2, 112 a Exercise of a power by wife without her husband, n. 6, 112 a
On the suspension and extinguishment of powers, n. 1, 342 b

Prerogative.

In what capacity the king's purchaser vests in him, n. 4, 15 b
A lease of land of the Duchy of Lancaster not avoidable by nonage of the king, n. 2, 16 a
A remainder to the king and the heirs of his body, an estate tail within the statute de donis, ibid.
Power claimed by the king before and in the reign of C. 1. to compel persons to take the order of knighthood, n. 7, 69 b
The king has not power to dispense with a disability created by statute, n. 5, 120 a
On the king's dispensing power, n. 4, 120
His majesty's prerogative respecting the coin of the kingdom, n. 1, 207 b

Prescription.

To cut wood in a forest without view of the forester, n. 15, 115 a Puer.

Comprehends children of both sexes, n. 3, 175 b

Purchase.

Estates by wrong not said to be by purchase, n. 3, 2 a
Remarks on the common division of estates into estates by purchase, and estates by descent, n. 2, 18 b
On the necessity of being heir as well as female, to take by purchase, n. 3, 24 b

Recovery.

Grantee of rent-charge for years might falsify recovery against terre-tenant, n. 4, 46 a Common recovery good, if the freehold be in the tenant at any time before judgment, n. 1, 203 b Intent and operation of the clause sometimes inserted in deeds by which the tenant to the procipe is made, that on non-payment of 100,000l. the deed shall be void, ibid.

Record.

Public records of the kingdom, n. 1, 250 a Registration of Deeds.

N. 1, 290 a

Release.

Outline of the doctrine of releases, n. 1, 264 a Marriage, whether a release of a bond executed, or covenant entered into by the husband with the feme, n. 2, 264 b
Creditor making debtor his executor, whether a release of the debt, n. 1, 264 b
How a right or title to the freehold may be released, n. 1, 265 a
How releases enure, n. 1, 267 a
A release which enures by enlargement does not require an actual estate in possession to work upon, a vested interest being sufficient, n. 3, 270 a Observations on releases which enure by enlargement, n. 1, 273 a Observations on releases which enure by mitter Pestate, n. 2, 273 b Observations on releases which enure by mitter le droit, n. 1, 274 a, n. 1, 274 b, n. 1, 275 a, n. 1, 277 a
Observations on releases which enure by extinguishment, n. 1, 268 a, n. 1, 279 b
Difference between those cases where an estate for life is enlarged to an estate in fee by the release or confirmation of the remainder-man, or reversioner, and those cases where a person being seised of an estate for life, the inheritance is afterwards conveyed or devolved to his right heir, n. 1, 299 b

Relief

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

Relief.

N. 1, 83 a, n. 1, 91 b

On the differences between the several kinds of relief payable by socage tenures, n. 2, 93 a

Remainder.

Difference between subjoining the inheritance to the particular estate by the same conveyance as limits the intermediate contingent remainder, and an accession of one to the other by a distinct and subsequent act or conveyance, n. 8, 28 a

On the grant of a remainder or reversion by one having a previous and present life estate, n. 2, 184 b

On the nature of the estate of trustees for preserving contingent remainders, n. 1, 265 a Remitter.

Outline of the doctrine of remitter, n. 1, 347 b

When the right and defeasible estate come together, n. 1, 348 a

When the right comes after the defeasible estate, n. 1, 349 a

No remitter to a bare title, to an immediate right, to a bare right of action, or in those cases where the freehold does not accrue to the right, n. 1, 349 b

The remitter shall hold, though the estate which made the remitter is voidable, n. 1, 353 b

Defeats the wrongful estate without entry, n. 1, 357 a

Defeats the wrongful estate, and every thing annexed to it, n. 1, 358 a Rent.

The king may reserve rent out of an incorporeal hereditament, n. 1, 47 a

Action of debt for rent on freehold leases, n. 4, 47 a

Rent reserved to lessor, without saying his heirs during the term, n. 8, 47 a

How affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24.

Difference between a reservation of a rent payable on a particular day, or within a certain time after, and a reservation of a rent payable at a certain day, with a condition, that if it be behind by any given time the lessor shall enter, n. 3, 202 a

Reserved to the heir where the ancestor is not named, n. 1, 213 b

Rent is considered as a retribution for the land, and is therefore payable to those who otherwise would have had the land, n. 1, 214 a

On fine and recoveries of rents, n. 2, 298 a Conveyance to A. and his heirs, to the intent that B. may receive a rent, is a rent executed by the statute, ibid.

Reversion.

What is a reversion, and what a remainder, n. 3, 22 b

Riot.

N. 3, 257 b

Sea.

Observations on the phrase infra quatuor maria, n. 6, 107 a, n. 1, 261 a

Seck.

In one sense signifies want of remedy by distress; in another, want of present trust or profit, n. 5, 151 b, n. 1, 153 a Serjeants at Law.

See n. 2, 17 a

Grand Serjeanty.

How affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24. n. 1, 108 a

Shelley's Case.

Observations on the rule in Shelley's case, n. 1, 276 b

Slavery.

Case of Sommerfett the negro, n. 3, 117 b

Socage.

How affected by 12 C. 2. c. 24. n. 3, 93 b

Suffragan Bishops.

N. 3, 94 a

Statutes.

Construing statutes by equity, n. 1, 24 b

23 E. 3. c. 1. asserted to be a supposed statute, because the intervention of the commons is not mentioned, n. 1, 42 b

Where land shall pass by one way or the other at the common law, n. 1, 49 a

Where one shall have election to take by statute or common law, ibid.

What is called 17 E. 2. §. 2. is not a statute, but only a precedent of the form of doing homage, n. 2, 67 a

What is called 1 E. 2. de militibus, though called a statute, was only a writ granted by the king in time of parliament and therefore entered of record, n. 6, 69 a

On the preamble of acts of parliament, n. 2, 79 a

On the difference between public and private acts, n. 1, 98 b

Rule concerning affirmative statutes, n. 8, 115 a

Declaratory statutes, n. 9, 115 b

Difference between an ordinance and a statute, n. 2, 159 b

7 Anne, c. 17. for enabling infant trustees to convey, does not extend to constructive trusts, n. 5, 171 b

Sir William Blackstone expressly says, that the right of the subject to petition, as declared by the bill of rights, is under the regulations of the 13 Car. 2. But a question may be made, whether the declaration contained in the bill of rights, was not in this respect a repeal of 13 Car. 2. n. 3, 237 a Steward.

Patent necessary to the making of stewards of the king's manors, n. 1, 61 b

Subinfeudation.

N. 1, 365 a

Surrender.

Outline of the doctrine of surrender, n. 1, 337 b

Lease for years is not surrendered by cancelling the indenture, a. by 29 C. 2. c. 3. §. 3. no lease either of freehold or term of years shall be surrendered unless it be by deed or note in writing, n. 1, 338 a

Tail.

Earldom intailable within the statute de donis, n. 2, 2

If the king make a gift in tail, and the donee is attainted, the king shall be said to be in, in point of reversion, and avoid the leases by tenant in tail; Jecus, if the king's estate was a remainder, n. 4, 18 a

A. and B. his wife, tenants in tail special, remainder to the right heirs of A. have issue a son and a daughter: the son makes a lease for forty years, to commence after his mother's death, the father being dead; the son dies without issue; the daughter levies a fine; the mother dies; and although the lease is derived partly out of the fee-simple, and by the fine the donee had a consolidated fee, yet because the daughter was not liable to the lease, the donee shall not be liable to the lease, so long as the tail continues, n. 4, 18 a, cites M. 6. Jac. B. R. n. 22, Nedham's case.

But, 2. if the doctrine of the donee's not being liable during the continuance of the issue in tail, is not affirmed by the decisions in Symonds v. Cuamore, 1 Show. 371. 1 Sal. 338. 4 Mod. 1. Earl of Shelburne v. Biddulph, 4 Bro. Parl. Ca. 594. Kingston v. Clark, 2 Atk. 204.

On the doctrine of estates in fee-simple conditional at common-law, n. 2, 3, 4, 19 a, n. 1, 326 b, n. 2, 327 a

Whether the alienation with warranty, of tenant in fee-simple conditional before issue had, bound the king's reversion if the warranty descended on him, n. 1, 19 b

Dignities and titles of honour having relation to some place are intailable, but the intail cannot be barred by fine, recovery, or other means:—and see more of intailing dignities, n. 1 and 3, 20 a

An annuity in fee granted out of the Barbadoes duties, not intailable, n. 4, 20 a

INDEX TO THE NOTES.

On the intail of estates pur autre vie, terms of years, and personal chattels, n. 5, 20 a
 What words create an intail, n. 2, 3, 20 b, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 21 a, n. 4, 25 b, n. 3, 26 a, n. 1, 2, 26 b, n. 1, 6, 27 a Lands given to the father and the heirs of his body, remainder to his son in tail, the son may elect to claim by descent or purchase. Or is the remainder void because included in the first estate? n. 4, 21 a Tail female unusual but allowed, n. 1, 25 a Husband and wife tenants in special tail, if divorced, are only tenants for life, n. 2, 25 b
 Tenant in tail leases for forty years, the issue before entry levies a fine, and accepts the rent, the conveyee shall not afterwards avoid the lease, for the lease was only voidable, and the land passes in degree of reversion, n. 2, 46 b
 Power of levying a fine within the statutes, and suffering a common recovery inseparable from an estate tail. But the doctrine does not extend to a fine at common law, a feoffment, or any other alienation which works a discontinuance, n. 1, 223 b
 Scottish entail, n. 1, 221 a Tenant in tail conveying by lease and release, &c. passes a fee determinable by the entry or action of the issue or remainder man, n. 1, 331 a Observations on the attempts made at different times to prevent the exercise of that right of alienation which is inseparable from an estate tail, n. 379 b

Tallage.

Tallages in Wales on change of the lord, n. 7, 59 b

Tenures.

Origin of tenures, n. 1, 64 a
 On calling any tenure of the king a tenure ut de personâ, by way of distinction, and not allowing a tenure ut de honore to be a tenure in capite, n. 1, 77 a, n. 2, 3, 108 b

Testimonies.

According to modern cases, it is the infamy of the crime, not of the punishment, which disqualifies from being a witness, n. 1, 6 b
 Now settled that all persons believing in a God may be witnesses, n. 2, 6 b
 Exceptions to the rule that the wife may not be witness against the husband, n. 6, 6 b
 On the testimony of debtor in case of usury, n. 7, 6 b

Terms of Years.

On assignment of terms of years attendant on the inheritance, n. 1, 290 b

Tithes.

Remedy for tithes, n. 4, 159 a

Trusts.

Application of purchase money, n. 1, 290 b

Ventre Inspeciendo.

N. 1, 2, 3, 8 b

Vesture of Land.

N. 1, 4 b, n. 6, 122 a

Villenage.

Case of Somnerfett, a negro, n. 3, 117 b
 Marriages of villeins, n. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 123 a

Use.

How it ensues the nature of the land, n. 2, 13 a
 Whether tenant in tail can be seised to an use, n. 3, 19 b
 On conveyances by way of use contrasted with conveyances at common law, n. 1, 271 b
 Methods used by the legislature to remedy the mischief arising from the secret transfer of property to which conveyances by lease and release have given rise, n. 1, 290 b
 On clauses for shifting the second estate on the accession of the family estate, n. 2, 327 a
 On clauses for enjoining persons to whom estates are limited in strict settlement to take the name, and use the arms of the settler, ibid.

Usury.

N. 1, 4 a

War.

Expleas, or taking of profits, are laid tempore pacis; for if they were laid tempore belli, they are not accounted of in law, n. 1, 249 b

Warranty.

Whether the benefit of a warranty shall go to the special heir upon whom the land descends, or to the heir general only, n. 1, 12 a
 Outline of the doctrine, and history of warranty, n. 1, 365 a Warranty commencing by disseisin, n. 1, 366 b
 Observations on the distinction between lineal warranty and collateral warranty, n. 2, 373 b
 The word grant, when used in the conveyance of an estate of inheritance, does not imply a warranty; in a lease for years it is a covenant in law, unless qualified by special covenants; and it is unsafe to take a conveyance without it, n. 1, 384

By the 6 Ann. c. 35. and 8 G. 2. c. 6. in deeds of bargain and sale inrolled of lands in the East and North Ridings of the county of York, whereby an estate of inheritance in fee simple is limited to the bargainee, his heirs, and assigns; the words grant, bargain, and sell, shall amount to express covenants that the bargainor is seised in fee simple, free from incumbrances, for quiet enjoyment, and farther assurance, unless the same shall be restrained and limited by express particular words.

On the determination of a warranty, n. 1, 388 b

Waste.

By or against tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct, n. 2, 27 b
 What is waste, n. 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 11, 53 a, n. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 10, 53 b
 Whether waste lay at the common law against tenancy by the curtesy, n. 11, 53 b, n. 1, 54 b
 Waste of copyhold estates, n. 1, 2, 63 a
 Who is entitled to an action of waste; and on the other remedies for waste, n. 2, 218 b
 The privilege given by the words without impeachment of waste, is annexed to the privity of estate, n. 1, 220 a

Will.

At what age a will may be made of a personal estate, n. 6, 89 b

Wood.

When it includes the soil, n. 6, 4 b

END OF INDEX TO THE NOTES.

E R A T A

E R R A T A.

In Mr. HARGRAVE'S ADDRESS, for Mecklinia, read Macblinia.

In the COKE upon LITTLETON, and the NOTES.

- Fol. 2. b. at the end of note 6, for 3. Ro. Rep. read 2. Ro. Rep.
 3. a. first line of note 1, for 1. Vern. an. Atk. read 2. Vern. and 3. Atk.
 b. line 18, after deformed, dele not.
 6. b. line 22, for banished, read vanished.
 36, after ibat, for by, read up.
 7. a. in the notes, line 5, for Menochius, read Menochius.
 9. b. line 27, after (beirs) add 3.
 10. a. in the notes, line 7, for Dy. 178 b. read Dy. 179. b.
 13. a. in the side references, line 5, for Ro. Abr. read 2 Ro. Abr.
 line 43, for nisi, read cui; and in line 44, for quæ de rege tenent, read qui de rege tenent. Both of these are also errors in the second edition.
 line 19 of the notes, for Pym's, read Pimb's.
 14. a. line 11 of lord Coke's commentary, for genitum, read nitum line 18, for hereafter, read hereafter in. line 1 of note 2, after see, add in.
 18. a. line 8, dele of writ.
 19. a. line 5 of the notes, for and Trafford, read Trafford and Trafford.
 20. a. line 22 of the notes, for Accordingly, read According.
 21. a. line 11 of the notes, for were held adjudged, read were adjudged.
 26. a. line 20 of lord Coke's commentary, after wife insert (3). line 2 of the notes, for must, by a special heir, read, must be a special heir.
 b. line 5 of the notes, for be read she should have taken.
 28. a. in the first side references to Sect. 33, for Bowie's case 13, read case 11.
 b. line 10 of the notes, for was read seems to have been agreed.
 29. b. line 14 ibid. read of the former claim, at the beginning of the line.
 line 18 ibid. for leaves undecided, read leave undecided.
 31. a. line 7 ibid. for 30. b. n. 3. read 30. b. n. 2.
 line 7 ibid. from the bottom, for covenantor's son for life, read covenantor for life.
 33. a. line 9 of the notes, for residus, read residue.
 b. line 17 from the bottom, for 1641. read 1741.
 34. a. line 10 of lord Coke's commentary, for lecto mortali, query, if it should not be lecto mortali.
 line 2 in the side references, for cap. 318. read cap. 39.
 line 8 of the notes, from the bottom, for to as take heir, read to take as heir.
 36. b. line 11 of the notes, for Vifett, read Vifett; and line 15, for B. 6. read B. 5.
 37. a. line 13 ibid. for Lays, read Seys.
 53. a. line 8 ibid. after wainscot, add, if put up by himself.
 54. a. line 15 ibid. for Sizer, read Si-c.
 60. b. line 9 ibid. from the bottom, for contrary, because; read contrary; because
 65. a. line 2 ibid. for adscripti, read adscripti.
 line 3 ibid. from the bottom, for services, after, read services, and after.
 b. line 20 ibid. for Hominum, read Hominium.
 66. a. line 7 ibid. for perfection of which, read perfection which.
 67. b. line 8 ibid. insert a comma between sue and antequam.
 68. a. line 2 ibid. from the bottom, for adapt, read adopt.
 75. b. line 8 ibid. for Rushw. vol. 3. read Rushw. vol. 2.
 line 4 from bottom, after the word following, insert addition.
 78. a. line 28, for seifon, read seifin.
 84. a. line 16 of lord Coke's commentary, from the bottom, for heredum, read heredem.
 85. a. line 5 of the notes, from the bottom, after subject to a rent, insert, unless by special custom, or express reservation.
 86. a. line 7 of lord Coke's commentary, for terra regis, read tempore regis: though in the second edition it is printed terra regis.
 91. b. line 2 of the notes, for on reversion, read or reversion.
 line 5 ibid. from the bottom, for Inde? read Pandect.
 94. a. line 6 ibid. between socage. In, insert 3.
 100. a. line 10 of lord Coke's commentary, for about the mesne, read above the mesne.
 101. a. line 9 of the notes, after Elizabeth, insert c. 4. f. 1.
 105. a. line 1 ibid. for so far it relates, read so far as it relates.
 106. a. line 11 ibid. for seems to point, read seem to point.
 line the last ibid. for statutory, read statutory.
 108. a. line 17 ibid. after the word found, dele the words after the note.
 109. b. line 1 ibid. for Deucalidian, read Deucalidian.
 110. b. line 14 of Lord Coke's commentary, from the bottom, for puisna, read puisne.
 line 5 of the notes, from the bottom, after (1), add (2).
 111. b. line 4, ibid. for dividing land, read devising land.
 112. a. line 3 of lord Coke's commentary, from the bottom, after mente, insert (7); and in the line immediately above it, for (7), read (6).
 114. a. line 21 of the notes, for Mar. of Eq. read Max. of Eq.
 26 ibid. after see 114 b. dele the rest of the line.
 b. line 4, ibid. after indiscriminately, insert, For the remainder of the note to 113 a, see 116 b.
 118. a. line 6 ibid. for statute against cutting, read statutes against cutting.
 119. b. line the last ibid. for constitution, read construction of this statute.
 120. a. line 11 ibid. for 2. H. 7. 11. a. read 2 H. 7. 6 b.
 121. a. line the last ibid. for 1. P. Wms. read 2. P. Wms.
 b. line 3 and 5 in the notes, for 24. Ed. 3. read 34 Ed. 3.
 122. b. line 1 ibid. dele a. after fol. 122.
 123. a. line 29 and 30 ibid. for good in the first instance, and bad in the second, read, bad in the first instance, and good in the second; and in the last line, for from, read before.
 124. a. line 2 ibid. from the bottom, after guardian of his child, add, and there is no mother.
 126. b. line 8 ibid. from the bottom, for 2. Leon. read 2. Lev.
 and also in the same line, 2. Saund. 324.
 127. b. line 9 ibid. for ex in, read ex vi.
 128. b. line 6 ibid. from the bottom, after the word wanting? dele the remainder of this and the next line, as far as 198 a.
 187. b. last line but one of the text, for 32. H. 8. c. 1. read 32. H. 8. c. 28 n. 6.
 188. a. in the side references, for 32. H. 8. 2. read 32. H. 8. 28.
 191. b. line 4 in the notes, for en, read or.
 202. b. line 7 note 2, dele case.
 203. a. line 10 note 3, for estate to B. read estate to G.
 line 14 note 3, for conusor, read conusee.
 b. line 12 note 1, for be, read B.
 204. b. line 8 note, dele and.
 209. b. line 1 note, between Price and in, insert Price.
 232. a. line 10 note 1, for Croke, read Coke.
 239. b. line 4 note 2, for no, read a.
 241. a. line 8 note 4, for grantor, read grantee.
 244. b. line 27 note 2, for en, read in.
 246. b. line 3 note 1, for anonus, read animus.
 250. a. the reference (1) should be removed from the place where it is, to after the words continual claim.
 257. a. line 1 note 1, for now, read not.
 266. b. line 22 note 1, between of and feudatory, insert the.
 270. a. line 2 note 2, for 71, read 271.
 271. a. line 26 of lord Coke's commentary, at the end, add (2).
 293. a. line 9 note, for mortgagor, read mortgagee.
 295. a. dele (2) at the beginning of the third line of the note.
 302. b. line 59 of lord Coke's commentary, after himself, insert (1).
 309. b. note, for conusor, read conusee.
 325. a. line 4 note 1, after title read, It was the same originally if the disseisor aliened; the alienee came
 326. b. line 21 note, for 296, read 29, b.
 327. a. line 22 note 1, for 196, read 19, b.
 329. a. line 6 note, between be and or, insert party.
 line 18 note, dele or any of her daughters.
 line 23 note, after issue, insert inheritable under such entail.
 line 28 note, between purjuance and herein after, insert of the power.
 336. a. line 12, for omnia, read omnino.
 b. line 9, for E. read D.
 339. b. line 7, for seoffee, read seoffor.
 368. b. line 46 of lord Coke's commentary, after like, insert (3).
 373. b. line 11, dele intail.
 379. b. line 17 of the note commencing 376 b, dele from language, to This, line 18.
 381. a. line 8 note, for ascertained, read restrained.

*. The former part of this work having been reprinted since the original publication, the greater part of the errata above pointed out, have been corrected in such reprinted copies.

DIRECTIONS to the BINDER.

Cancel the Title-Page, M, DCC, LXXV.

The remaining half-sheet, containing the Editor's Address, to follow the Dedication,

Next follow signature [A] [B]

Then place Prooemium, signature [a] [b]

Next place Sheets *, containing the Analysis, immediately preceding the body of the work.

Table of Titles contained in the Table, to follow the last sheet of the body of the work.

Next place the Table to the First Part of the Institutes, &c. signature a, &c.

And at the end place, Index to the Notes.

In some copies the signatures T t t, U u u, X x x, Y y y, are wrong printed; but in these instances the paging will be a proper direction.

THROUGH the obliging interference of JOHN HOLLIDAY, Esq; of Lincoln's Inn, with the Executors of the Will of the late Sir THOMAS PARKER, the Continuator of Mr. HARGRAVE's Edition of COKE UPON LITTLETON has been favoured with a Copy of the Notes of Lord Chancellor NOTTINGHAM and Lord HALE, upon that Work. The following Account is given of them in a Note in Sir THOMAS PARKER's own Hand-writing.

" The Notes to this Book, in my Hand-writing, (except one Note in fo. 26. b. and some modern Cases), were transcribed from a Copy of the Lord Chancellor NOTTINGHAM's Manuscript Notes, in the Margin of his Lord COKE's COMMENTARY UPON LITTLETON, which Copy was made for the use of his Son HENEAGE FINCH, Esq; Solicitor-general, afterwards Earl of AYLESFORD, and is now in the Possession of the Honourable Mr. Baron LEGGE, to whose Favour I am indebted for these Notes.

" The Notes in a different Hand-writing were transcribed from a Copy of Lord-chief Justice HALE's MSS. Notes, in the Margin of COKE UPON LITTLETON, presented by Lord HALE to the Father of PHILLIP GYBBON, Esq; which Copy was made for the Use of the Honourable CHARLES YORKE, Esq; His Majesty's Solicitor-general. The Book, in which the Notes are in the Hand-writing of Lord HALE, is now in the Possession of Mr. GYBBON; and the Book from which those Notes were transcribed, by the Favour of Mr. YORKE, is now in his Possession.

" T. PARKER. 1758."

ALL Lord HALE's Annotations, and all Lord NOTTINGHAM's, with a very few Exceptions, will be inserted in the Places to which they refer.

It may be proper to acquaint the Reader, that the following Work is continued on the PLAN adopted by Mr. HARGRAVE, and will be completed in Four other Parts, one of which, till the Work is finished, will be given in every ensuing Term.

TRINITY TERM, 1785.

Erratum. In 195, b. 1a st Line, dele under the title Conditions.

